For our starting point we select the first and second verses of the 5th chapter of Romans:—"Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." This is the conclusion of an elaborate argument on justification in the previous chapters; at the 21st and 22nd verses of which we have positive evidence as to the principle upon which Abraham was justified. What was imputed to him? Was it the righteousness of God? Was it the prospective righteousness of Christ? No! It was Abraham's living, active faith. Not a mere passive faith, or assent to what God said. What did he do? He believed in hope against hope. He considered not his own and Sarah's bodies dead. He staggered not in unbelief- did not discredit God; was strong in faith and gave glory to him, and was fully persuaded that God would do what he promised. Abraham did this. God did not do it for him. Abraham was justified by faith. His faith was imputed to him for righteousness, and he became an example for both Jews and Gentiles of every age and clime to imitate. And the 23rd verse shows, that, as this account was written for us, we must understand that justification by faith is the one divine and unchanging principle of justification: we too must be justified by a living, active faith.

Underlying all this is the solemn truths that Jews and Gentiles were under sentence of death; that the great object of the birth, life, death, resurrection, ascension and mediation of Christ was, and is, the justification of men, so that they may have eternal life. It says he was delivered for our offenses, and raised again for our justification. He was given to accomplish this gracious and glorious work, but HOW? The almost universal answer would be: "By the vicarious suffering of Christ." By this it is meant that his death appeased the wrath of God by paying the price to him—paying an equivalent for all the offenses of sinning and sinful mortals. We hold this to be wide- very wide of the truth. How, then, does the gift and the death and resurrection accomplish this work? We will let the Word of that Son answer: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever BELIEVETH in him might not perish, but might be justified by having their faith in him imputed to them for righteousness and have everlasting life." Clearly God has not two methods of justification.

We come now to our text. "Being justified by faith we have peace with God,"—not by vicarious sufferings of Christ, nor as the catechism says, by the imputation of the righteousness of Christ; justified by faith is the language of the Spirit; justified by faith, not by the works of the law. The fact that tens of thousands are blind to this fundamental principle rests upon me like a mighty incubus. The Jews sought justification by their own works, and the Gentiles seek it on the score of Christ's righteousness, but neither Jews nor Gentiles attain to the righteousness of God in that way. The Divine way has been quoted from the first verse of the 5th of Romans: "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ." In the face of this declaration who will dare say that only a part of the justifying principle is stated? Is not the statement made for our benefit? Would it not be unkind and unfeeling to have kept back part of the justifying principle? So it seems to us. Hundreds of sermons have been delivered and hundreds of volumes have been written on the atonement to no purpose, just because this divine exposition of it is ignored. Paul shows us how Abraham was justified and then explains that the story was written for our sake, to whom it (faith) shall be imputed, if we believe on Him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead, and raised again for our justification.

What says the text? "Being justified by faith we have peace with God." Is there any difference between being at peace with God and "at-one" with God? We see no difference; and think all the trouble about the atonement, or at-one-ment grows out of the fact that we have been raised in the theological fog of the apostacy, and many find it difficult to rid themselves of the substitutionary dogma entirely, after they have found the key to many grand truths. We think this is largely due to the fact that the purpose of Christ's death has been sadly neglected by our teachers.

With the Popelars there are three deaths in the one penalty pronounced on man in the garden: and for the benefit of any who may think Christ died as our substitute, we propose to see whether or not Christ died for all three of those deaths, or only one or two of them: that is from the popular point of view. The deaths referred to have been named "Death Temporal," that, the death of the body, we suppose. Second, "Death Spiritual," said to be "the displeasure of God, and the soul that suffers that penalty is cut off from the source of spiritual life and happiness." I quote this from "Landis" standard, and highly commended work, which on another page says the Blessed Redeemer suffered the penalty of the law. 3rdly, "Death Eternal" is explained to mean a death that never dies—forever dying but never dead,—a life of torment,—an eternal life of misery. All these deaths are said to be in the one penalty, and Christ suffered that penalty.

We hold that if the cross, the nails, and spear-thrust were not all a myth, it was his natural life that he gave up for our natural life, if he died instead of us. The Lord willing we will show in our next that Christ died no spiritual or eternal death, and if the penalty contained such deaths, those portions have not been paid, and still hang over us.

Michigan Brethren Attention.

The quarterly conference which has been called near Mendon, Oct. 5th, has had to be changed to Oct. 12th, as the house of worship could not be procured until that time. The ladies of the evangelical aid society of course will remember the part we are carrying in the work. Let as many as possible be present with their quarterly dues, remembering though the units be small it all counts in the final summing up. Let us go with less to satisfy pride and do more for the cause. Those who cannot be present, send their offering to Emma Jackman, Grand Rapids, Mich., box 284, or to the secretary Mary A. Woodward, Dutton, Mich.

Egyptian Funeral Procession.

From along the banks of the Mahmoudiyeh Canal one day I saw a sad but interesting sight, says the Newcastle (Eng.) Chronicle. Away in the distance, on the opposite side, a large number of people were coming along, and upon their nearer approach I saw that they formed a funeral procession. Two sheikhs, with long blue tunics and white turbans, led the way; and immediately behind them were the men, to the number of twenty-six, chanting in a dismal way: "La Illah illa Allah, wa Mohammed rasul Allah!" (There is no God but God, and Mohammed is the Apostle of God.")

The funeral costumes were their every day dresses, showing wide contrasts of color, some being blue, others being black, yellow, white, and brown. Then followed the bier, a young Moslem lad being carried to his long home. It was covered with large native rugs and was supported by four men, relieved in turns by others. The women and children came next, about sixty in all, the women weeping and wailing and waving handkerchiefs in front of them, now and again filling the still air with fearful shrieks. The women were dressed in the usual somber blue covers, their faces being closely veiled. They halted opposite to the spot where I stood, and the men got on board of one of the tiny ferries that ply backward and forward over the canal, taking the bier with them, and were rowed safely to the other side, the women, meanwhile, waiting and wailing for the dead youth.

The boat, which was about 20 feet long and 4 feet in beam, having returned, the women and children then got on board, most of them sitting, and they were pushed across, and landed; the procession then reformed and the wailing continued. The procession wended its way for a considerable distance along the banks of the canal under a grove of sycamore trees. The sight left a painful impression upon my mind. The day was beautiful, the birds piping out their joys overhead. Everything seemed happy except these poor Arabs, without a hope to cheer the dark tomb.

One of the curiosities of railroad building is the construction of a road running from Ismid, a harbor about sixty miles from Constantinople, to Angora, about 300 miles. The bridges, sleepers, stringpieces, and telegraph poles, as well as the rails, are of iron, nine-tenths of which are of German manufacture. The bridges average about four to the mile, there being 1,200 of them, the longest having a stretch of 500 feet. In addition to these there are sixteen tunnels, the longest measuring 1,430 feet. This is the only railroad which penetrates the interior of Asiatic Turkey, the Smyrna lines being near the coast.

During the Protectorate, a certain knight in the country of Surry had a law-suit with the minister of his parish; and while the dispute was pending, Sir John imagined that the sermons which were delivered at the church were preached at him. He therefore complained against the minister to Oliver Cromwell, who inquired of the preacher concerning it, and having found that he merely reprove common sins, he dismissed the complaining knight, saying, "Go home, Sir John, and hereafter live in good friendship with your minister; the Word of the Lord is a searching word, and it seems as if it had found you out."

OBITUARY.

Bro. Christopher Boyd died at the home of his son-in-law, near Colfax, Ind., on the 4th day of July, 1894, aged 69 years and 29 days. He was born in Tippecanoe County, Indiana, on June 5, 1824. He leaves two daughters and five grand children, and three brothers and two sisters.

Bro Boyd had been an earnest worker and member of the Church of God for over twenty-five years. On Sunday Sept. 16, the writer preached the funeral sermon of the departed brother to a large and attentive audience in the town of Colfax, and spoke words of consolation to relatives and friends.

Spiritual Gifts.

With the exception of two occasions, one on the day of Pentecost, the other in the house of Cornelius, the Apostles appear to have been the only constituted medium by which the miraculous gifts were imparted; that by prayer and laying on of hands these gifts were bestowed; but those who received them, could not impart them to a third person; consequently, when the Apostles, and those to whom the gifts were imparted, were removed by death, these extraordinary manifestations must cease. Our convictions are that not one exception to this rule can be found in the New Testament. In this respect the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, "the Lord hath made known them that are his" (Apostles), in contradistinction to all false apostles and deceitful workers; "therefore, let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from all iniquity." 2 Tim. ii. 19. We are not anticipating the revival of these supernatural manifestations until the return of our Lord, to take possession of his kingdom and glory; death shall then be swallowed up in victory; and a glorious, incorruptible, and splendid congregation, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, shall be presented to Jehovah, as exhibiting his manifold wisdom and power, to an admiring and astonished universe. What the laws, customs, and manners of that age will be, the facts alone must develop. May the disciples of Jesus so conduct themselves here as to be counted worthy of a portion of that inheritance yet to be revealed. 2 Pet. i. 16; Rev. xxii. 14, 15.

MARRIED

Two zealous members of the church Flora B. Truesdell, of Schell's Ferry, Ore. and John Ernst McBrrin of Portland, Ore., were united in marriage at the home of the bride by W. L. Skeels on the 30th of Aug., 1894.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Announcement.

The quarterly meeting of the Church of the Abrahamic faith known as Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin Conference will be held at the Union Church 15 miles northwest of Lanark, Ill., commencing Friday evening Oct. 12th, 1894, and continue as long as is profitable for the cause of truth. We extend a cordial invitation to all, and as we want a good meeting we do urge on all lovers of the truth to make an extra effort to come and help us. Gentile times will soon be in the past, and the time for the saints to take the kingdom is near at hand, perhaps nearer than we think, therefore, it behooves us to do all we can. The friends in the vicinity of the meeting are amply able and willing to take care of all that will attend. Those coming by rail stop off at Lanark, Ill., where conveyances will be in waiting for all that will come. Those coming from the East must get to Lanark Thursday evening, and those coming from the West can get here on Friday evening.

J. D. RENNER, Sec.

I will be at Ripley, Ill., Oct. 4, and hold a meeting for one week. At Blue Mound, Mo. Oct. 13, and through the week following. At Bosworth, Mo. Oct. 20, and week following. At Big Creek Church, Neosho Co. Kan Oct. 27, and over Sunday. Brethren in the different localities take notice.

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 12.

1. And during that period Herodes the king laid his hands upon some of those from the church to afflict them.

2. And he removed Jacobos the brother of Joannes with the sword.

3. And when he saw that it was pleasing to the Joudaians, he seized Petros also: and it was the days of the unleavened;

4. And laying hold of him he put him in prison committing him to four quarternions of soldiers to watch to keep him, intending after the pasha to lead him up before (or arraign before) to the laity.

5. Petros accordingly was being kept guarded in the prison; and votive prayer was constantly being offered) by the church unto God for him.

6. And when Herodes was about to have him led (or arraign him) Petros that night was lying asleep between two soldiers, bound with two chains, and guards before the door were watching to keep the prison.

7. And lo, an angel of the Lord stood by and a light shown in the building; and he smote Petros on the side and awoke him saying, Arise quickly, and the chains fell from off his hands;

8. And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself and put on thy sandals: and he did so; and he saith unto him, Put on thy outer-garment, and follow me.

9. And going out he followed and did not know that what had occurred through the angel was true: but thought he was seeing a vision.

10. And passing through the first and second prison, they came to the iron gateway that leadeth into the city, which opened automatically to them; and going out they went forward one narrow street, and straightway the angel stood away from him. and Petros coming to himself said, now I know of a truth that the Lord hath sent his angel and delivered me out of the hand of Herodes and all the expectation of the laity of the Joudaians.

12. And becoming conscious he went to the house of Maria the mother of Joannes, called also Markos, where a considerable number were assembled and engaged in votive-prayer.

13. And when he had knocked at the door of the gateway, a house-maid, Rode by name, came to listen,

14. And recognizing the voice of Petros, for joy she did not open the gateway, but running in announced that Petros was standing before the gateway.

15. And they said unto her, Thou art distraught: but she insisted that it was so; and they said, It is his angel.

16. And Petros continued knocking; and when they had opened they saw him and were astounded.

17. And beckoning to them to keep silence, he discoursed to them how the Lord had led him out of the prison; and said, Tell Jacobos and the brethren these things; and going out he went away to another place.

18. And when it had become day there was not a little disturbance as to what forsooth had become of Petros.

19. And Herodes having sought and not found him gave the guards a preliminary examination and directed them to be led away; and he went down from Joudaia Kaisarein and passed some time.

20. And he was having a hot fight with the Tyrians and Sidonians and they came unto him of their own accord and persuading Blastos the king's chamberlain asked for peace because their province was being supported from the royal domain.

21. And on a set day Herodes clothed in royal under-apparel and seated upon the bema was haranguing them.

22. And the demo responded, It is the voice of God and not of a man.

23. And straightway an angel of the Lord smote him, because he had not given the glory to God. And becoming eaten of worms he expired.

24. But the Word of God increased and multiplied.

25. And Barnabas and Saulos returned from Hierousalem having fulfilled their deacon-ship commission, taking along with them Ioannes the one also called Markos.

REMARKS.

"And during that period" instead of "about that time" R. V.

"Removed" instead of "killed" R. V.

"To lead him up to the laity" instead of "To bring him forth to the people" R. V.

"And votive-prayer was being constantly offered by the church" instead of "but prayer was made earnestly of the church" R. V.

"And guards before the door were watching to (tesdoric-wal h) the prison" instead of "And guards before the door kept the prison" R. V. In fact they didn't keep it.

"Building" instead of "cell" R. V.

"Outer-garment" instead of "garment" R. V.

"Occurred through" instead of "done by" R. V.

"Prison" instead of "ward" R. V.

"Narrow-street" instead of "street" R. V.

"Stood away" instead of "departed" R. V.

"And becoming conscious" (Unt is recovering his natural state of mind) instead of "And when he had considered the thing" R. V.

"Gateway" instead of "gate" R. V.

"Rode" a rose.

"Led away" here probably means "led away to death."

"And he was having a hot fight with" instead of "now he was highly displeased with" R. V.

"Their friend" not in the text R. V.

"Bema" or "judgment-seat" instead of "throne" R. V.

"Demo" instead of "people" R. V. We get "democracy" from this and another word meaning "control."

"Expired" instead of "gave up the ghost" R. V.

"Deaconship commission" instead of "ministration" R. V.

The royal-robe here referred to that Herodes wore was an under-garment, not an outer-garment.

Editor Restitution:

Dear brothers scattered abroad, where are we drifting to, and what are we doing? Watchman what of the night? The watchman said, "The morning cometh, and also the night," Isa. xxi. 21. The Savior said, "Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come," Matt. xxiv. 42, 43. "But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. Therefore be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh. Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord has made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods. But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, my Lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellow servants, and to eat with the drunken, the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, Matt. 24-51.

Who is to watch?

God's servants.

Who are God's servants?

All baptized believers, or that are in the race for the prize of the high calling, as Paul says in Phil. iii. 13, 14, "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended, but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus."

Heb. xii. 1, 2, "Wherefore seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despised the shame and is set down at the right hand of God."

But, stop. None but the watchful overcomers will be permitted to wear that crown, Rev. iii. 21. "He that overcometh."

When do we get that crown?

2 Tim. iv. 7, 8, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the Righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them that have loved his appearing.

Now we have learned who are the servants, next, when were we made to be his, Christ's servants?

Rom. vi. 17 23. "But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness, for when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness, but now being made free from sin, and become the servants of God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Can we serve two Masters?

Matt. vi. 24. "No man can serve two Masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

We are impressed with the fact that the injunction to watch is not held and observed as it should be. Many professed Christian people pretend to be watching, some for one thing, and some for another. Some that I know of, once zealous brethren, today deep in politics, making stump speeches, nominated for one office or another, serving sin with their whole heart, hollowing their throats raw for the upholstering of the kingdoms of this world, every day praying thy kingdom come, thy will be done, and with the world say by their actions we will not have this man to reign over us. Luke xix. 27.

Oh, consistency, thou art a jewel even in an error. But few are watching for what they are told to watch for.

Well, will watching pay or not? No it will not unless we watch for what we are instructed to watch for. We might watch for opportunities to make money or for fame or popularity, or for other selfish motives, without any motive whatever to glorify God, or benefit ourselves in the divine life. Therefore it might be profitable for us to examine the subject to see what is required of us. Before we do this, let us first see the force of the command to watch. Turn back to the first of this article and read careful from Matt. xxiv. 42 to 51 inclusive, and in Mark xiii. 32, we have this language. "Take heed, watch and pray," and in the 35th verse "Watch ye therefore."

Luke xxi. 36, "Watch ye therefore, and pray always."

1 Thess. 5, 6. "Let us watch and be sober."

We have other Scriptures that we might give but these are enough at present to show that it is an imperative command. In fact there is nothing in the Bible that is of more importance than this—to watch.

Our brethren make a great talk about other commands and entirely ignore this one.

In the signs that are given us we see in Matt. xxiv. 39, where Christ was speaking of his second coming into the world, that it was to be as it was in the days of Noah, and no one knows the day and hour no more than they knew the day and hour when the flood should come. Therefore it is important that we watch for that particular event. Christ certainly must have thought it important or he would not have made it so emphatic.

In the xxv. of Matt. we have the parable of the ten virgins, illustrating his coming, and here again we are told to watch. This is a very significant parable and teaches a very good lesson to us, and well worthy of our attention.

In Mark xiii. the subject of Christ's second coming is again alluded to, and because we do not know the day and hour, we are to take heed, watch and pray, for we know not when the time is. Here Christ illustrates his coming by a man taking a far journey, and commands his porter to watch for he cannot know when the Master of the house cometh, but lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping; "Therefore, what I say unto you I say unto all, watch. This indeed is to all of the servants that have been legally adopted into God's royal family, and is very forcibly illustrated.

In Luke xxi. 25, we are instructed not to have our heart overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, so that day cometh upon you unawares, for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.

In 1 Thess. v. Paul says, "But of the times and season brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you, for yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night, but ye brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief."

These Scriptures prove that the watching relates to the coming of the blessed Lord and Master.

After the Lord has commanded us to watch he says, "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you that he shall make him ruler over all his goods."

Matt. xxiv. 46, 47. "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing, (watching) of a truth I say unto you that he will make him ruler over all that he hath."

Luke xxi. 36. "Watch ye therefore and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and stand before the Son of Man."

These Scriptures prove that the man that watches will be blessed. This is what we are all of us striving for, God's divine blessing, and it seems this blessing all depends on our watching and praying and being ready when the Lord comes.

The servant that is active and watching for his Master merits the favor of his Master and is made ruler over his Master's possessions. These are the ones that shall reign with Christ a thousand years. To such will be given power over the nations. Rev. ii. 25, 26. And they shall sit with Christ on his throne.

"Watching and praying makes us worthy to escape all these (evil) things that shall come to pass. It qualifies us to stand before the Son of Man when he comes. These are very important, too important to be neglected. We all want or wish to be accounted worthy to escape the evils that are coming upon the careless church and on the unbelievers and professed Christians and to stand before the Son of Man our Lord Jesus Christ when he comes. But, if we are found sleeping with our lamp empty and gone out, without light, we will not be accounted worthy to stand in his presence and receive his blessings. Those that are not found watching will be cast out.

1. Christ compares those not watching with or like the ante-deluvians, who knew not until the flood came and took them all away. So also shall the coming of the Son of Man be. Those who are not watching shall have the same fate, be destroyed.

2. To those that are not watching the Lord will come in a day when they are not looking for him and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites. Do you my dear brother want your portion with the hypocrites? If you do dont care how you live, but if you do not, wake up, the time is at hand, only a few more days to get ready in. Neighbors, come and be begotten adopted into God's family, become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. Become Abraham's seed and an heir according to God's promise.

Dear brothers and sisters, if you are not watching now it is your own fault, not the Lord's fault.

3. In speaking of the servant who concluded that his Lord will not come, and therefore fails to watch, and begins to eat and drink and to be drunken, the Lord says, "The Lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him asunder and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers. Luke xxi. 46.

Brethren, do you hear, this is addressed to the church, not to the world. These are all servants that were told to watch, not sinners.

But if we are not watching for Christ's coming for his bride we will be left behind, while those that are ready will be taken, and the one not ready will be with the hypocrites and unbelievers. Why is this so? Because you do not heed the injuction to watch, therefore, you are no better than the unbelievers, and will be allotted your portion with theirs. This may seem rather severe, but it is the teaching of Divine truth. It is not a pleasing thought that those who have professed to have done many things or wonderful works in the name of the Lord Jesus, shall finally be turned away with the hypocrites and unbelievers, but the Scriptures are very explicit.

The greater portion of professed Christians, entirely ignore the coming of Christ, and this notion has been born of the fact that some over zealous persons have set the time for the second coming of the Lord, and have been mistaken, and others teach that every time a good man, woman, or child, dies, the Lord has come, and with all of this confusion, people have given up the notion of the Lord's coming.

So you can see that will bring all class of unbelievers and many good meaning men and women in that class.

Again, there is a wide spread notion that there is no particular use to watch for they say, "if we live right, all will be well with us if Christ does come." This is the notion that leads people to ignore the command to watch, and at once puts them in rank with the hypocrites and unbelievers and brings the consequent penalty.

The parable of the ten virgins, in Matt. xxv., as well as a number of other parallels all go to illustrate the one thing, the coming of the Lord, and the importance of watching for the event, cannot be better expressed, than by the language of our Savior, "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights be burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord when he will return from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching. Verily I say unto you, that (the Lord) shall gird himself and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them, and if he shall come in the second watch or come in the third watch and find them so watching, blessed are those servants." Luke xii. 35-38, also, Luke xix. 16-18. The 19th verse reads "Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds." Verse 17, "Well then, good servant rule ten cities." Verse 18, "And the second came, saying, Lord, 19th verse, "and he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities. Here is the unwatchful, verse 20. Where is his portion? With the hypocrite and unbelievers in outer darkness.

Read Luke xxii. 28; xii. 35-38, and notice the points in these Scriptures:

1. Having your loins girded.
2. Your lights burning.
3. Like men waiting for their Lord.
4. So they may open immediately at his knocking.
5. Blessed are the servants that the Lord shall find watching when he comes.
6. He shall gird himself and make them sit at meat while the Lord serves. Blessed thought. But the promise is only to the overcomers, waiting and watching ones. In short, those that are ready to enter in when the Master calls for them.

Reader, may you and I be ready to hail that glad day, is my prayer, Amen.

JOHN FOUR

[Read at Kansas Conference.]

The Rightful King, and his Kingdom.

Jesus having been born to be King, yet has never exercised that office. We as a people, look forward to see that prophecy fulfilled in the near future.

That he has made his first advent into the world, none would deny, as we hear him talking in the world of truth, teaching those who would be taught, and reproving others who rejected him, yet not rejecting over any nation or people.

His life, while on earth was like that of a servant, administering to the wants of the people, in humility and meekness, always in obedience to the will of the Father. He came as a Lamb. Surely "he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; he was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquity, he was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before his shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth." Thus far we see that he has not reigned, yet, he says to Pilate, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world." But he suffered death, his blood was shed upon Calvary for you my dear friends, and for me; he has bought us; he has conquered death; he has made the sacrifice, and has gone into the most holy place once for all. Yes, our High-priest, and is now seated upon the Father's throne pleading your case and mine, if we come in his name. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne."

His second advent will be with power, yea, he shall come as a Lion, King of kings, and Lord of lords, and his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east, and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley, and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north and half of it toward the south, and the Lord shall be King over all the earth. In that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one, and he shall establish that peaceful kingdom on the earth of which we have so many promises in this Book of all books, God's own will to man, and will crush the nations of the earth into submission when the kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and against his Anointed; then in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and it shall stand forever.

The Psalmist says, "Thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel," and "that he should then rule in the midst of his enemies." "The Son of Man shall send forth his angels and gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." Yes, when Jesus reigns this will be a peaceful place, but not so now, for this is the time of the adversary to do his work, therefore we have misery, sorrow, death, and destruction on every hand which is caused by the disobedience in the garden of Eden. From thence the curse is on the world, and will be until Jesus comes and wipes it out. Then shall the kingdom and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Yes, the saints are heirs of that peaceful kingdom, those who are his when he comes. "Then shall the King say to them on his right hand, come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Yes, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ.

Dear members of that saintly body, shall we not cry unto the Father, unworthy, unworthy?

"Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of that kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him, he that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my Son," saith the Father.

Oh, dear hearers, might there not one more be persuaded to be adopted into God's family to inherit all these things, and be ready when the angels announce the coming of the Bridegroom. Let us rejoice and give honor to God, for the marriage of the Lamb is come and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.

"And he saith unto me, write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb, these are the true sayings of God."

"Jesus is worthy, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God, kings and priests and we shall reign on the earth."

"And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven prepared as a bride adorned for her husband, and I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God, and shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. And this city was pure gold like unto clear glass, and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass, and the city had no need of the sun, neither of moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof."

Oh why not pray for this King and kingdom to come, that God's will might be done on earth as it is in heaven. "Even so come, Lord Jesus."

ELIZA A. RABE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in conference assembled in Kansas, Greeting in the Lord:

As you meet in conference, may the kind Father lead and guide you in your meeting. Let no bitterness spring up, and let each one try during the meeting to do all the good you can.

If you have a pet theory keep it to yourself and be ashamed to let any one know it, but if you have the love of God tell it to every one you see.

Try in your conference to so organize the state that all may help to keep an evangeliat at work. Local churches can help besides their home work. Every church if they have a live Elder can get along if they can only occasionally have preaching. Every member of the Body of Christ should be a worker. We have no use for drones in the Christ bee-hive.

Put away tobacco and those things that are a hindrance to the Divine life and use the money they cost in sending out the truth. You are better off without them in every way.

For your encouragement we will say,—we have just closed our Tent Work at Alden, where we baptized 13 and organized a body of believers of about 20. Praise the Lord.

May heaven's richest blessing rest upon all, and your meeting be a success.

Your brother in Christ.

A. J. EYCHANER.

As Jesus died for us, what shall we do for him? "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John xv 13. "Herein is love, not that we loved God but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." 1 John iv. 10.

Brothers and sisters, Jesus died for us, that our sins might be forgiven. Let us try to so live that we may have eternal life, and live with Christ, our Blessed Savior. If Christ gave his life for us, would it be any more than our reasonable service to give him the affections of our hearts.

My young friends let us try to so live that we may find a friend in Jesus and be acknowledged worthy when he comes, and let us all do all we can for so good a friend.

Yours, looking for our Master,

ROSA HUBBARD.

[illegible] and the brotherhood [illegible]
[illegible] and the proof revive.
[illegible] it sit—this yearning dream—
[illegible] late shines with holy beam.

Grieve it sit—the hope and the fear,
The struggle for right when wrongly near,
The kind intent, tho' the words be cold,
The prayer for patience and love sweet bold,
Over it all his Justice lies
Unchanged by sudden or dark surprise.

Over it all—the day and the Night—
The house of dark, the evening of light,
Mistakes and blunders and faults and all
The pitiful cries from those we call
His brethren waits to help and bless
With a Father's touch of tenderness.

And he sees it all, and ready aid
As we ran do with tiniest spade;
And we can see Him—and see each to where all [illegible]
We see in part we know not in fear,
The human touch and the human tear;
And He will be [illegible]
The open judgment—[illegible]
And give him thanks [illegible]
He never neglects [illegible]

Work but do not Worry.

It is not easy to measure the amount of work a man can do if he will keep cool and calm, and keep double at it. But the petty, fretful, worrying work that kills men. One might lift and a man is dead. He might have exerted ten thousand times as much, had he taken time and used moderation and no. Caesar. Vanity but tries to imitate some bragging fo[illegible] or compels wine, or outdo some one who is [illegible] stronger or wiser than he. He beats' but he is beaten; and the rest of his life he is a cripple or an invalid, and has plenty of leisure to consider his folly. Anger, emulation, or any human passion which stimulates to intense exertion may bring a prolonged feebleness and infirmity or instant death. A fit of rage has cost many a man his life. So all intense emotions, all envies, jealousies, and wrong feelings, ruin digestion, injure the appetite, and break down the human constitution.

"It is not intellectual work that injures the brain," says the London Hospital, "but emotional excitement. Most men can stand the severest thought and study of which their brains are capable, and be none the worse for it; but neither thought nor study interferes with the recuperative influence of sleep. It is anxiety, anxiety and disappointment, the hopes and fears, the loves and hates of our lives, that wear out our nervous system and endanger the balance of the brain."

"Let your moderation be known unto all men, the Lord is at hand." —Safeguard.

Editor Restitution:

I enjoy reading your columns so much I cannot think of having you stop, so inclosed you will find $1.50 for the present year, many thanks for the past favors. I am still striving in my weak way to serve the Master. O how I long for others that they may see the way of life. O that their minds may be enlightened by the Word of truth which is the Word of God. There are some here that are interested in the truth, my prayer is that they may continue to enquire till they search it out in the Book of life. O that they would trust in the Lord and cry unto him. He has said in his Word he would not forsake his saints. How excellent is thy loving kindness, O God. The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cries. Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous, for praise is comely for the upright. The eyes of the Lord are upon them that fear him to deliver their soul from death. Dear household of faith, pray for me and mine that we may be kept from the power of Satan. A sister in Christ.

A Business Question.

Business of all kinds reported dull. Money hard to get. This has been the cry, and we have tried to be patient with our friends who have asked for a "little time" in which to pay their dues. We are almost to the "end of our string," and now we ask you who have been favored by us in granting time to make long due payments, to now send us the money. We must have what you owe us right away. Will you make arrangements and send us our dues? This is "a Business Question." Please consider it in the light of "our side" and see what you would like us to do if we were in your place.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at the Harper School House, six miles southeast of Vicksburg, Kalamazoo Co., Friday evening, Oct. 5th, and continue over the following Sunday. The purpose of this meeting is two-fold. 1. To help each other; and 2. To help the unbeliever. To realize the best results in either, requires the presence of all at the meeting. It is not often that we are permitted to assemble in such a body to smile glad hands together, encourage, and exhort; so let us lay aside all worldly cares for a few days and attend the meeting. In so doing all in our power, both [illegible] and each individual for the accomplishment of the same.

The brethren and sisters of that place have not been expected to do the meeting might be held there, for we know that is not situated so, but some good might be done. Come and all try to be there. Don't say you can't. If you have to use any such expressions, throw them at the wooden-headed Cubes, and then start off for the conference. Take your friends with you. Go with hearts full of love to God and to men. Take only you all the [illegible] you can conveniently, and possess the with the exception of clothing every face you meet, then a smile in [illegible] a comforting [illegible] and a kind act yonder. Let us throw out such an influence as will soften the hardest heart and convict the vilest sinner. Those going by rail will get off at Vicksburg where teams will be waiting for you Friday and Saturday.

F. L. W. [illegible], Sec.

The Seventh Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Iowa will convene at Enid Brook at the New Church. This meeting will last four days, commencing Oct. 4th and continuing until Oct. 7th, inclusive. All of like precious faith are cordially invited. Brethren, all that possibly can come. The Enid Brook people have a fine share of worship and extend a hearty invitation to all, and we can be assured of a good meeting. Let us also [illegible] a providence of their invitation by our presence. Enid Brook is situated at the junction of the Chicago and Northwestern and Chicago and Great Western Railways, 20 miles northeast of Mason City, and is very easy of access by rail. All desiring to attend this meeting will please confer with Bro. G. P. or Albert Allard so that arrangements can be made to take care of you. Brethren, let us be up and doing, and make this meeting a memorable one. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh, are we ready?"

O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska, and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles southeast of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Oct. 5th, 1894, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from above! Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So, let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

WM. H. DENSON, Sec'y.

The annual conference of the Church of God in the Northwest, will convene in the new church at Scholls Ferry, Oregon, commencing Friday, Oct. 12, 1894, and hold over the following Sunday.

Ample provision will be made for visiting brethren. Teams will be in waiting at the National Hotel, Portland, for those wishing, if they will inform Bro. W. W. Jaquith to that effect. Be sure to write in time.

Dear brothers and sisters, another call has been made. Will all that can come up to the help of the Lord and work for the Master? The signs of the times show to us who are waiting and watching the near coming of our Savior. As time is short we should improve it. Besides all this such a reunion always helps us. We feel that we have a foretaste of what is to come. Yours in the Truth.

ADAMS BROOKS, Sec.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls or emergencies happening be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to Eva B. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the Good Word [illegible] may be requested, for action in behalf of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1894, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "important notice" published on page 1 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through. No one believes it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and act safely.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

An exceptionally favorable opportunity for visiting the richest and most productive sections of the west and north-west will be afforded by the Home-Seekers' low rate excursions which have been arranged by the North-Western Line. Keep us Sweet.

We are fighting in the battle,
But we cannot all command;
Most of us must march at orders,
Forward like a soldier band;
Fame is not the hero's blessing,
But the sense of duty done;
Life and treasure all are ventured
Ere the victory is won.
We are workers all together
In the battle's flash and heat;
Let us pray our great Commander,
Make us loving, keep us sweet.
— Dwight Williams.

Original.

[Read at Kansas Conference.]

Jesus gave his Life for us: What should we do for Him?

Jesus gave his life for us: and herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. And, by Christ's willing obedience to the Father, we, by the same submission to his will, may be partakers in the blissful joys, beauties, glory and grandeur of the Edenic home, when the earth is renewed, cleansed and every vestige of sin shall have been blotted out. It is then, she will with voice rightly tuned, sing harmoniously with sister spheres in the great orchestra of worlds. And every creature in heaven and in earth shall render praise unto their Maker. Is it any wonder that all the sons of God shall shout for joy as at the beginning! Will not the morning stars sing together at the new creation? Oh, how each one of us should earnestly strive to gain an inheritance in those mansions that Christ has gone to prepare for all who love his appearing. And when we see the manifestation of his love, in the suffering he bore for us, as we follow him to the garden of Gethsemane, and there hear his agonizing prayers, thence onward to his place of crucifixion, and see him suffering on the rugged cross until he sweat great drops of blood, and died to redeem the world of sinners lost, we can but exclaim, "Behold what love!" And should we not reciprocate that love to such an extent, that we will be pleasing in his sight; and as an obedient child obeys its parents, so may we use our best endeavor to please our Master in every thing; so that we may stand approved at his appearing and judgment. "For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one shall give account of himself to God." How careful we should be, therefore, to guide our lives into channels of good; and let everything be done with an eye single to his service; walking uprightly before him who is the Creator of all good. Let us humble ourselves therefore, under the mighty hand of God, casting all our care upon him, and he will exalt us in due time." When we see the goodness of God, his long suffering, his tender mercy to us, our hearts beat within us as we listen to the living words of truth that fall from his lips, and we cannot refrain from telling the beautiful, old, old story of Jesus and his love. The spirit of meekness and a desire to do good as our Savior did while here on earth should invade our being, and, "If we live in the Spirit, we must also walk in the Spirit." And in order to do this, we must know something of its nature. The apostle tells us in Gal. v. 22, 23, "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." And if we put into practice these attributes, we cannot fail to be well bred. It is the kind, loving disposition that wins the hearts of those about us, and we cannot do good without it, by which we must work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, doing good in every way that we can; not waiting for opportunities, but make them. "Redeeming the time, because the days are evil." We can please the Lord in no other way, more, than by doing good to those about us, and especially to those who are of the household of faith: but remember while we are doing good to them, we are doing it for Christ, for he says, when he is seated upon the throne of his glory, and all nations are gathered before him, then shall he say unto them on his right hand, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was hungered, and ye gave meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when we saw thee a hungered, and feed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." So we learn from this lesson a great problem of duty. And as we are hurried on down through the age by the wheels of time, we can plainly see what the great regret is going to be presently—that we have done so little for him who has done so much for us; died for us; washed us in his own precious blood; rose from the dead; and is now interceding for us; and is soon coming again to blot out all imperfections. Oh, may we ever be watchful, prayerful, faithful, so that we may hail his advent with joy. Then let us scatter seeds of kindness along our pathway, for our reaping by and by, but remember it is not in great deeds of kindness only, that the blessing is found, but in little deeds of kindness repeated every day we find true happiness: the poet has very beautifully illustrated this thought in saying,

"Such is life in all its phases,
Little things make up the great,
'Tis a fact, search facts out, but make them
Stepping-stones to heaven's gate."

Then let each one of us place at least one or two little stones in the shining pathway that leads to the city of the great King, that coming generations may walk thereon, and be led through the pearly gates into those "beautiful mansions of rest." Oh, it is a blessed privilege to work and live for the Lord, "For in his presence is fulness of joy, and at his right hand there are pleasures forevermore." Then with happy hearts and glowing faces, let us fix our eyes on Jesus, and run with patience the race that is set before us; and in the sweet by and by God will wipe away all tears, and earth's night of sorrow will be ended, and her morning of joy will dawn, then will be fulfilled the precious promise of God,—"As truly as I live, saith the Lord, the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Then the wilderness shall blossom as the rose, and sparkling streams flow through the desert; and all nations shall rejoice, saying, the "Lord God omnipotent reigneth." What is it we would not do to gain an inheritance in that sweet Eden home? If we could fully realize the position in which we are placed, and what we are loosing by not obeying the Master, we surely would strive harder to do his will. Then let us walk in the light of truth and life, and study the Scriptures, whereby we may know the way wherein we should walk, thus perfecting holiness in the fear of God. The beauty of a Christian's life is, that it shines from the heart, and illuminates the whole countenance, scattering clouds and dispersing gloom from those around us. It is where the gospel is best lived we find the noblest lives, and it is the life we find in Christ, which is the life indeed: "For he came that we might have life and have it more abundantly." And when we follow him in his lonely walks along the winding pathways of Mount Olivet, down among the picturesque hills of Judea, and along the beautiful valleys by the shores of sweet, blue Galilee, we can but wish for the same humble and loving disposition of our Savior, prompting us to do good in every way that we can. Oh, the fulness of God's love to men! Let us so live that the deep fountain of his love may spring up in our hearts; and the sweet refreshing dews of his mercy fall on us, and his loving hand guide us into paths of peace and righteousness.

"While 'mid our pilgrimage, lo, an ope eyes,
Visions of beauty and glory arise.

There is the city in splendor sublime,
O, how its turrets and battlement shine!
Pearls are the ports a surpassingly bright,
Jasper its walls, and the Lamb is its light.
Pathways of gold that fair city adorn,
Glorifying with glory far brighter than morn;
Angels stand beck'ning us onward to share
Glory unfading—we long to be there.

Rivers are gliding 'mid unfading trees,
Homes of the blessed ask borne on the breeze;
Glory-gilt mountains resplendent are seen,
Valleys and hills clad in Eden-like green:
There shall the glory of God ever be,
Filling the earth as the waters the sea;
There shall the ransomed, immortal and fair,
Evermore dwell,—O, we long to be there!"

Then let each one who wants to share in these blessings, cease to do evil and learn to do well, that when the Arbiter of human destiny shall come in judgment, and the books of life are open before him, he will find our record clear.

CLEMENTINE OVERMAN.

The theme of our beautiful lesson we have for our consideration is one that should touch the sympathetic nature of every one present, and not only us, but the whole world; it is one that through obedience would bring him as it were near the feet of our blessed Master.

The life of Jesus is the only perfect guide and it was one continual flow of heavenly mission—his Father's holy will.

Come with the youthful Jesus and let us visit the temple and here learn the grandest and noblest lesson of duty. There we find our Savior lad asking and answering questions that were to the astonishment of the good and wise men of that noble court. But, let us not forget the sad and aching heart of Jesus' mother, who in company with others had visited that grand city to be present at their yearly feast, and had taken the youth with them, and the time had arrived for them to depart and return to their homes, and they traveled some three days and the mother became no doubt very anxious about her boy for he was not with her and an inquiry was made, and to her sorrow he was not in the company. No doubt with streaming eyes and an almost breaking heart she returned to Jerusalem in search for her idol. The almost hopeless task in that great crowded city was begun. No doubt many a by path was trodden of no avail, and at last in despair they visit that magnificent temple to see if they could learn any thing of her dear lost boy, and to their joy and astonishment she found him within, in all his innocence, love and beauty, and no doubt the mother folded him to her over-joyed breast when she asked him why he had tarried? and he made reply, "I must be about my Father's business." This, dear young people is the grandest lesson to us, and taught by one in the summer of youth—The Child Jesus.

Let us draw the veil over this scene and visit the Man Jesus, who was so kind and gentle, whose love was so great, and whose life burdens so heavy. He was oftimes seen to weep bitter tears. How lightly my dear friends we think and pass over the burdens and sorrows of others but this dear heavenly friend of ours—yours and mine, heareth the ravens when they cry for food, and marks the fall of the sparrows. He is the one seated today at the right hand of the Great Majesty, interceding for you and me.

Come, let us hold sweet communion with our blessed Savior.

See him as he is surrounded by the vast multitude of people eagerly listening to the words of our Savior, and it was on this occasion that he delivered that memorable Sermon on the Mount, which includes the beatitudes:

"Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted.

Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth.

Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled.

Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God.

Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

No doubt, dear friends, that vast throng was held spell-bound as they looked up in wonder and astonishment into the Savior's face, and heard him speak those beautiful and blessed words which brought joy to their hearts, as it has to thousands of humble followers of Jesus during the past eighteen hundred years.

Please let us look at Jesus, see the deep sorrow manifested, as he returns to the three disciples the third time and finds them fast asleep in the garden of Gethsemane and he talks them to "Sleep on now and take your rest: the hour is at hand, and the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. "Yes, my dear young people, Jesus was betrayed, and I can see as it were, our blessed Savior standing with the crown of thorns upon his head, surrounded by the rude and boisterous Roman soldiers just as they were ready to thrust him forth from the judgment hall to carry the heavy cross to Mt. Calvary. What an agonizing hour! He who never sinned, who never harmed a human being is now jeered, mocked and insulted by a low rabble. Recognizing the fact that it was a part of the plan of redemption to be worked out by his living and dying for suffering humanity, he patiently and uncomplainingly lived while on earth a life of hardship and trial, and willingly died the most ignominious and shameful death that was possible for any man to die. What wondrous love is thus exemplified in his living and dying for sinners as you and I are. Ye who have drunken deepest of sorrow's cup, have only tasted of its much pain, that he suffered. Could we but hear his sad, piercing wail when he cried, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me!" surely we would have wept bitter tears. But that same sad cry reaches us today, sweetly pleading, "Come unto Me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Well now may we ask as Jesus died for us what should we do for him? and the only true answer is all. We should be willing to trust him at any and all times, and if needful lay down our life for his service. We shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that we can do, or any kindness that we can show to any human being, let us do it now. Let us not defer it or neglect it, for we shall not pass this way again. Our blessed Savior went about doing good. He did not wait for a chance for doing good to come to him. He sought the chance to do it, went about after it. My dear young friends let us remember the lesson of our youthful Jesus and as soon as we have finished one kind act, seek another and ask, "As Jesus died for me, what should I do for him?"

LLOYD J. DAVIS.

To those of like precious faith in Christ Jesus, greeting:

Dear brethren, with a sincere desire of adding some interest to your meeting, and if possible aid you in your efforts to get the truth before the people, I write you this letter. I write you as believers in the covenants of promise brought to view in Eph. ii. 12, where the apostle plainly teaches that all who are unacquainted with them, are without hope and without God in the world. Paul tells us in Acts xxvi. 6, that his hope was based on the promises made to the fathers, and by reference to Gen. xiii., we may learn the nature of those promises, and the parties to whom they were made,—Abraham and his seed, which the same apostle tells us in Gal. iii. 16, is Christ. Also in the same chapter he tells us how we may become heirs with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob to those same promises, namely by faith and obedience, for he says, "ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." What is it to have faith in Christ? How can we have faith in him in whom we have not heard? asked the same apostle. Have you heard of the covenants of promise? Remember, we are positively told in the Bible that, if we are unacquainted with the covenants of promise, we are without hope and without God in the world, and that ignorance will alienate us from the life of God, while on the other hand, if the eye of our understanding is enlightened, we may know what is the hope of our calling and the riches of the inheritance, even the inheritance of the earth. Matt. v. 5. Abraham we are told was an heir of the world, called by the Savior, "The World to come," alluded to by the apostle Peter as, "Third world." also Paul "Third heaven or paradise."

Now, the Bible says we are to walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, see Rom. iv. 12-13.

What did the Lord promise him?

The land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and that through his seed Christ, and all that are Christ's, all the nations of the earth should be blessed, see Gal iii. 3: iii. 20. In this last citation it says, "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

Now please listen, every one that hears this letter read,—do you belong to Christ? Does your hope rest in him? If so, then remember it says, "If ye are Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. The promises that we are heirs to who have believed the gospel and obeyed it, are called by the apostle Peter, "Exceeding great and precious promises, and that when we shall have attained to these promises, we shall then possess the Divine nature, or as the Savior expresses the same great truth, "Those which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and a resurrection from the dead, will be the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. Equal unto the angels and cannot die any more."

He who enters the kingdom of God must be immortal, born of the Spirit, and therefore a spiritual being. Remember, the Savior says, "that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit."

To sum up the promises briefly, stated thus,—endless life, an inheritance that is undefiled, the kingdom of God that is to be under the whole heavens. Dan. vii. 27.

Dear brethren, of the one precious faith and hope, let me in conclusion admonish you in the name of Jesus, to fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on everlasting life. O let us so run that we may obtain the promises not only by faith, but in fact, in reality,—obtain the kingdom which Jesus has promised the little flock, which we are now heir to if rich in faith.

May we be among the Redeemed that are to return to Zion with songs and everlasting joy. Our songs and our joys here are good in this present life, but they are like our life, fleeting, appear for a moment and are gone. O may we all be among the number of that great gathering spoken of by our blessed Savior, when they shall come from the east, west, north, and south, and sit down in the kingdom with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. "For what is our crown of rejoicing, are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming and kingdom." Amen.

Your brother, waiting for the consolation of Israel.

J. T. PRIME.

Editor Restitution:

I believe the Bible is true, and there is but one God, the Father of us all. I also believe this gospel of repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and a holy life as essential to final salvation.

I believe the Lord, more than 2000 years ago gave through the Prophet Daniel, a clear description of the times of which we are now living. In referring to the present time as "the times of the end" does not signify the destruction of the earth, but the end of the present dispensation after which a new age will be introduced, "The Millennium." "The earth abideth forever," Eccl. i. 4.

That the blessings of the millennial age are the themes of all the holy prophets. It was preached about by the apostles as "the day of Christ," "The kingdom of God," and that it was the earnest faith of the early church.

Peter says in Acts iii. 19-21, when he calls it "The times of restitution of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets," that he declares that the time of blessing will not precede, but will follow the second coming of our Lord Jesus. That age is for the very purpose of causing the knowledge of the Lord to fill the whole earth as the waters cover the sea, and to open the eyes of men's understanding, and to unstop their ears, and hear God's message of mercy, and see the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. That the time is short in which the consecrated may make their calling and election sure, and so run to obtain that great prize,—joint-heirship with Christ in his kingdom.

Yours in hope of immortality.

GEO. W. HAYNES.

A Rare Ceremony.

A little Jewish temple in Brooklyn was the scene last week of the unique religious ceremony called the Chalitza, which recalls the story of Boaz and Ruth and the questionings of Christ by the scribes. It will be remembered that according to the Mosaic law, when a married man died without issue, his widow was expected to marry one of his brothers, if there were any, and could marry no one else without their special permission. This permission they were in duty bound to give if no one of them was prepared to marry her himself. During the centuries that have followed the dispersion, the custom with many others has been pretty generally disregarded. Some families, however, holding very closely to the tradition, have been very strenuous about it, and a few instances of its observance have occurred. This, we believe, is the only one that has taken place in this country. The story is told at length in the Sun of this city.

Some years ago two brothers, Abraham and Hillel Silberstein, lived in Mishnitz, a Russian town near Warsaw. Three years ago Hillel came to this country with his family, and settled in the portion of Brooklyn formerly known as Brownsville, which is very largely occupied by Russian Jews, cloakmakers and workers in sweat shops. The only synagogue is that of Ohab Shalom, erected four years ago through the efforts of two Jews. A year after Hillel came to this country his brother died, but the widow remained in Mishnitz, where she formed the acquaintance of and an attachment for a wealthy contractor. Her family being an extremely orthodox one, with several rabbis among its members, she was unwilling to fail at all in carrying out the original custom, and would not marry without first obtaining her release from her husband's brother. He could not go to Russia and she came to America, arriving here two months ago. It was agreed that the ceremony should take place in this little synagogue, and notices were scattered throughout the colony.

On Sunday morning the building, which seats about 700, was filled to overflowing with a crowd intensely interested in the ceremony, which lasted over an hour. At the appointed time, Rabbi Wistinetsky, one of the few Maskilim in this country, who cultivate Hebrew as a literary language, entered with a copy of the Talmud and a scroll, on which were the questions to be asked. Behind him came four deacons of the congregation, followed by Hillel and his sister-in-law, and two witnesses who were to testify to the death of Abraham Silberstein. Three large black candles burned on the rail of the platform, and on one side a large board covered with a black cloth, such as is used in burial ceremonies, was placed.

The rabbi arose and read the portion describing the ceremony to be performed. The shoe and sock were removed from the foot of Hillel Silberstein, and a shoe was produced especially provided for the occasion, made of soft leather and laced up in front. This was placed upon Silberstein's foot by the rabbi, who laced it up, binding the thongs and knotting them securely in eleven places. The rabbi then asked the woman in Hebrew whether she were a widow and without children. After her assent was corroborated by the witnesses, he turned to the man and asked him whether he wished to marry her. On his negative reply he was asked why not, and he said: "The law of the country forbids that I should take two wives." Then came the inquiries whether he would give her release, to which he assented; and whether she wished to take it; to which she replied she did, for she wished to marry again. The woman then knelt, and with the thumb and forefinger of her right hand began untying the knots in the thong. Some were difficult, but she resolutely refrained from using the other hand, and, after several minutes' work, loosened the last one. Unlacing the shoe and taking it off the foot she threw it twice upon the floor of the platform. Silberstein sat down, and the woman spat on the place where he had stood. Then came first from herself, then from her brother-in-law, the two ministers, the four deacons and the rabbi the statement of her freedom, and the whole congregation broke the silence, which had been strictly observed up to this moment, with the cry, "You are free." The rabbi pronounced a blessing, and this closed the ceremony.—Independent.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

THE symptoms of the disease now causing such fatality and consternation in China are said to be almost identical with those of the "Black Death" that destroyed seventeen millions in Europe in the seventeenth century.

IT has been computed that the death rate of the globe is 68 per minute, 97,760 per day, or 35,717,400 per year. The birth-rate is 70 per minute, 100,800 per day, or 36,817,200 per year, reckoning the year to be 365¼ days in length.

IT is generally supposed that when a man's heart pulsations go down to 40 a minute death will follow unless restoratives are administered, but we see by the Scientific American that the Parisian doctors are not a little puzzled over a man in one of their hospitals, whose pulsations have sunk as low as 18 a minute, although, to all appearances, he is well and strong.

THERE are at present, nearly, if not quite, 400,000 miles of railroads in the world; and it almost makes our head swim when we think of the vast amount of work this involved, and that the great bulk of it has been done within our lifetime. Surely this must be in preparation for the day when the "all-power" given to Christ will be exerted uplifting and blessing the human family. Centralization is only dangerous under human administration. We know in advance that when the Lord is King over the whole earth, the righteous shall flourish, and there shall be an abundance of peace as long as the moon endures—always.

"THAT which is born of the flesh is flesh; that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." On this Dr. E. W. Forster in "The Faith" remarks:—"That is to say, according to all experience and scientific fact, that as every vegetable and animal seed contains, enfolded within itself, its own distinct nature and character, so the human exception, but being derived by natural generation, in accordance with the physical laws, can only develop and evolve a merely natural and mortal constitution. That, moreover, and consequently, man as such is a concrete personality, living within his own specific and natural environment, and governed therein by Natural Law only, must die in toto as soon as all his natural correspondences cease."

We call the attention of prophetic students to the translation of Rev. W. B. Galloway, M. A. in his "Shadow on the Sundial," from the Hebrew, analyzed with the help of the Septuagint and comparison of the other Scriptures."

"By weeks it is decreed upon thy people and thy whole city to finish the guilt and to fill up iniquities, and to expiate sin, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to fulfil vision and prophet, and to anoint the Most Holy. And thou shalt know and calculate from the going forth of the commandment to cause to return and build Jerusalem, unto Messiah Prince, weeks seventeen and seventy. Sixty and two shall it be built again as regards its breadth and intrenchment. And in the narrow pass of the times, and posterior to the sixty and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off; and not for him shall it be, neither city nor sanctuary. The people shall destroy the prince that shall come; and his end shall be with an overwhelming outburst. And war shall be to the uttermost, a decree of desolations. And he shall confirm a covenant for the multitude (of mankind) a week; and in half the week he shall cause sacrifice and offering to cease. And upon an invading flight of abominations he shall make it desolate, even unto wasting, and the decree shall have been poured out upon the desolate." Mr. Galloway gives the Hebrew text from the words: weeks seven and seventy, to "an overwhelming outburst," and says "not a letter is altered, and only the punctuation of one word, and of the clauses." It will be seen that this rendering gives but one prince—Messiah—and he is to be cut off, and but one commandment, that of God, see verse 1, in connection with the 23rd verse. Is it possible that this is the key to the passage on which schools of prophetic interpretations are founded? Prove all things.

We copy the above translation from an article by H. G. E. De St. Dalmas, in "The Faith," who calls attention to the fact that the date of this vision is the first year of Darius (v. 1) and the year B. C. 538 is found in the margin of our English Bible against the chapter. And that the expression weeks seven and seventy indicates 77 multiplied by 7, that is 539, which corresponds with the B. C. 538 date of the prophecy,—that Messiah was born in the 539th year after the date of Daniel's supplication, and that the area of the city and wall had been built 62 hebdomads (62 weeks) or 434 years, see date at the end of Nehemiah B. C. 434.

Justification by Faith. No. 2.

We promised to show in this article that Christ died no spiritual, or eternal death. As regards the spiritual, we mean that Christ did not incur the displeasure of God instead of us; was not cut off from the source of spiritual life and happiness instead of us, as orthodoxically taught. Had he thus died we would unconditionally escape the displeasure of God and the cutting off from the source of spiritual life and happiness. As to the death that never dies, is he dying that death now? Will he be undergoing eternity dying it instead of us? If that be the penalty, and he suffered it instead of us, we escape it. But is he suffering it? No! By the Word of the Eternal, No! a thousand times. No! He is seated at the right hand of God on the throne of the universe. He speaks from heaven to tell us that he was dead, but is alive again, and is alive forever more, so that whatever death he died he has recovered from it. If one part of the penalty that he undertook he suffer for us was eternal misery, he has changed his mind about it, and gotten out of it in some way, for he is now in a position of glory and exaltation and power unspeakable. He is not suffering anything instead of us. That being the case the same old doom must still hang over us, or at least, the worst third of it. No one has paid, what is called the worst part of the penalty for sin for us. So, from the theological point of view, we say, if eternal misery was part of the penalty,—and if it was satisfaction, or the payment of that penalty that God required, he has not received it.

It seems little short of blasphemy to say that the Son of God's love incurred the displeasure of God. Did he of whom the Father testified, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased," afterward incur his displeasure? If so, when and how? Was it when he refused the liberal offer of the adversary? When he drove the merchants and extortioners out of the temple, or when he scored the Pharisees and hypocrites, or when he proclaimed the glad tidings of the kingdom of God to the poor, or healed the sick or cleansed the lepers, or gave sight to the blind, or life to the dead? Surely it did not displease him when he faithfully reported his Father's words, nor when he proved by words of ineffable love and compassion that God had sent him to manifest himself to the world in flesh, nor when after the contradiction of sinners all day, cold mountains and the midnight air witnessed the fervor of his prayer? Was it displeasing to the Father when he breathed out his life on the cross in our behalf? Let us away with such religious nonsense as that he incurred the displeasure of God, when we have infallible proof in his resurrection from the dead that God was well pleased with him.

If substitution, or vicarious suffering be true, and there were three deaths in the penalty, then of necessity the substitute must die three deaths. We claim to have proven that Jesus never died what is called spiritual death nor eternal death. It is popularly held that the body only does the abiding of the soul; that being the case, as only the body of Jesus died, only the bodies of men have a Savior. Clearly the other two alleged deaths did not take place instead of the guilty parts of man: man will have to die those deaths himself, if such deaths there be. But there are no such deaths in the penalty. God is too good to inflict more than he threatened, and so this three death-theory is as baseless as the fabric of a vision.

We now propose to show that Jesus did not even pay the debt of nature for every man. We say it reverently—he paid the debt of nature only for himself. He was made lower than the angels for the suffering of death, so that he could suffer death. Having paid that death, there was no charge against him, because he knew no sin. He lived in our nature without sin, and by perfect obedience earned a resurrection to a divine, ever-living nature of existence. The HEAD of the body was not justified by faith. Faith was not imputed to him for righteousness. He was righteous altogether. He knew no sin; he was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners. He was obedient unto death, and that is the reason death could not hold him. He was raised again for our justification. How or why was he raised for our justification? Why could we not have been justified without his resurrection? In other words, why did Paul say those who had fallen asleep in Christ would have perished, if Christ had not been raised? We think the most comprehensive answer is found in the words of our text, "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." That is the whole truth about it. We are not just, and we cannot earn a justified standing before God, and can only be considered or reckoned as righteous on account of our faith. This shows the necessity of an object for faith to take hold of. We need the central figure of Jehovah's purpose. We want to see some one in whom all God's promises center, and around whom all his purposes revolve. We want to see the beginning of the new creation—want to see a specimen of what we are invited to become. We want to see life beyond the grave demonstrated,—want to see the head of the corporate body we are invited to become members of, and who in his own case has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light for us. In a word we want to see him whom God gave "that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." And oh, dear readers, we must see him or perish. We must know that he lives again and is the object that justifying faith must take hold of. Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. But how through him? He has been raised again for our justification. But how is our justification connected with his resurrection? Why, a dead Christ could not help us. He has been raised so that we may exercise justifying faith in him—raised so that our faith in him might be imputed to us for righteousness or justification—considered as just as if we had never been unjust—thank God. Substitution or vicarious suffering goes hand in hand with the doctrine of inherent immortality. It fits with no one truth which makes us a peculiar people. It cannot be harmonized with the doctrine of justification by faith; one nullifies the other.

In resuming our studies on this great subject where we left off, we now enquire what it is to believe on the Son? This takes us back to the starting point, Rom. i. 16, where we find that to believe on the Son of God is to believe the gospel he preached, because the same results are shown to come of believing the gospel of Christ as result from believing in the Son. And when we look to see what gospel he preached, we see it was the kingdom of God. Mark i. 15; and when we turn to Matt. xxiv. 14, we discover that this was the gospel he commissioned his apostles to preach to all the world. He once said, "My Word shall judge you at the last day." If his Word is to judge, it is indubitable evidence that his Word is the law. And so we have his Word that the gospel of the kingdom is a competent witness, and is produced as a witness. The names of those who believe it are entered in the Lamb's Book of Life. The Lamb's name is in it, and never had; it could not give life. We have made one argument for gospel as God's saving power, and therefore one against the law.

Here some may be saying to themselves, "Why was this great change—let? Did the Great God make a mistake? Did he devise a scheme that proved a failure? Did he have to abandon it and experiment with another?" No, dear readers:—He saw the end from the beginning. He determined from eternity to people the earth with a race of holy and immortal race. In order to the development of such righteous character they must be morally organized—organized capable of believing, loving, and obeying God. This implied the ability to disobey him, disbelieve him, not love him. These governing attributes were put to the test. God knew that only faith and obedience springing out of love would constitute man, and therefore did not arbitrarily command him: he was left to do as he pleased; treated him as an intelligent Creator capable of being influenced by motives. He could choose life or death. Unbelief crucified love and obedience out, and the result was death. Here the principle of faith and obedience was in full operation—unlimited wisdom, unbounded love, and Almighty energy, how could it fail? It could not. As certain as that an infinite and unchangeable God sits upon the throne of the universe, the principle of faith has never for a moment been suspended from that day to this, and therefore we can only be saved by gospel—we cannot be saved by law.

But this puzzles the querist still more. He says, "If another system was not introduced later, and if the two were in operation at the same time?" He is thinking of the law from Sinai. He cannot see what necessity there was for any law, if the principle of faith and obedience fully answered the purpose for which it was instituted? There was no necessity for anything to supplement the principle of faith and obedience. Faith and obedience were the terms on which life was offered man in the first place, but life having been forfeited by disobedience, another object of faith was set before him, even a promised one who could redeem him from the death that had come by sin. Faith in him, also, had to be followed by a life of obedience,—both before and after the fall faith and obedience were the saving principle.

This reference to a redeemer will enable the simplest mind to understand why a law of commandments was afterwards given. In the purpose of God this Redeemer was not to appear for 4000 years after man sinned. About midway, or two thousand years after he selected a man after severely testing his faith and obedience, and pledged him that he should be the Father of the Redeemer promised. It can be seen at a glance that Abraham's descendants must not mix with other people or else God's promise to Abraham that in him and his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed could not be fulfilled. How shall they be held together? Will they live separate from all nations for two thousand years on account of God's promise to Abraham being believed by them. Do they love God enough to enable them to do this? Alas, no! Slavery had kept them separate for more than 400 years. On being set at liberty they proved to be a wayward, disobedient and ungrateful people. How, then, could so faithless a people be made to further God's sworn purpose? The God who by wonders had delivered them from bondage and brought them through the Red Sea, and overthrew Pharaoh and miraculously fed them in the desert, awed them by the thunders of Sinai and proposes to organize them into a kingdom, he to be their King, and they his special and peculiar nation and people before all others on earth. The matter was put to the vote and carried unanimously. Now came the laws and regulations to govern them. God was their lawgiver. Moses was in the Mount 40 days and received two tables of stone containing ten laws, which was but the beginning of their holy law. Even these ten laws were not complete, no penalties were yet attached to them. The penalties were written in the book of the laws of the Lord among hundreds of other laws, ordinances and statutes.

After the creation of the law is seen it is natural to expect it to expire when it has served the purpose of its enactment—expire by statute of limitation, as the lawyers say of laws enacted to operate for a given time. In the 3d of Gal. Paul distinctly says "the law was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made." That Seed did come, and we ask how it comes that there are thousands of Abraham's children in Cleveland, thousands in Buffalo and Chicago, and Rochester, and Albany, and tens of thousands in New York and Brooklyn, thousands in Cincinnati, New Orleans, San Francisco, and millions in Russia, and but comparatively few in their own land? What does it mean? Why do we find them in every corner of the earth and but few where they belong? It means that the law from Sinai, their national constitution, half civil, half religious held them together till the promised seed came, and then they killed him instead of believing in him, and the law that up to that time fenced them in from other people expired. It lingered on for 40 years and then died out completely, and the city and temple were destroyed and the nation died both politically and religiously. They were slain by thousands upon thousands, and the rest were scattered through every country under heaven. This explains the presence of the Jew every where. In concluding this article, we may say we expect to prove in our next that that Law—those parts on tables of stone and all others,—was not given for salvation purposes at all. The strictest obedience to it when in force only procured blessings in this life—they lived long, had peace and plenty and protection.

Editor Restitution:

I see so many good things in THE RESTITUTION of late concerning the one faith and hope of the gospel, that it rejoices my heart greatly, and makes me long to meet with my brothers and sisters in Christ and participate with them in their meetings they are having in different parts of the country. But since my health nor my means will permit me to do so, may I not take the liberty to set forth in brief what I believe concerning the name of Jesus Christ and the kingdom of God.

1. I believe that Jesus is Christ, the Son of God that should come into the world, Matt. xvi. 16.

That he is the seed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's head, Gen. iii. 15.

That he is the seed of Abraham, by whom all the nations of the earth will be blessed, Gen. xii. 18.

That he took upon himself the nature of man and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, and for the joy set before him endured the cross, despised the shame and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. Heb. xii. 2.

That he has become a High-priest of good things to come, Heb. ix. 11.

That he is the Mediator between God and man, the Man, Christ Jesus, 1 Tim. ii. 5.

That he now sets on his Father's throne, Rev. iii. 21.

That when he comes again he will set upon his own throne given unto him by the great and glorious Lord God, the throne of his Father David, and he shall rule over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 32-33.

2. I believe in the one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all, and in you all. Eph. iv. 6.

That knows unto God are all his works from the foundation of the world, Acts xv. 18.

That he worketh all things after the counsel of his own will, Eph. i. 11.

That he is a God that can answer by fire, 1 Kings xviii. 38.

That can shut the lion's mouths, Dan. vi. 22.

That can quench the burning fiery furnace, Dan. iii. 27.

That can break the prisoners chains, open prison doors and city gates and set the captives free. Acts xii. 7, 8, 9, 10.

That he will give his Holy Spirit to those who ask him in faith, believing that he is a rewarder of all those who diligently seek him. Luke xi. 13.

3. I believe in the one faith and one baptism.

The faith is that that receives out and grasps the substance of things hoped for, or things that are spiritually discerned. We look forward by faith to the time when the Lord Jesus will descend from heaven and change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto his own glorious body. Phil. iii. 21, when he will invite us to inherit that kingdom prepared for us from the foundation of the world. Matt. xxv. 34, and have power with him over the nations, Rev. ii. 26, then will we possess the substance of things hoped for.

4. I believe that to inherit these promises we must die to sin, be buried with Christ in baptism into death and raised up to walk in newness of life, Rom. vi. 4.

That we must walk in the Spirit that sin may not reign in our mortal body.

That we must keep our body under and bring our will in subjection to the will of Christ.

That we must mortify the deeds of the flesh that we may live.

That we must walk in the footsteps of him who spake as never man spake, who went about doing good, healing the sick, binding up the broken hearted, preaching the gospel to the poor, and proclaiming the acceptable year of the Lord, when he was reviled not again, when he was persecuted he threatened not, but submitted himself unto him that judgeth righteously, and though he could have twelve legion of angels and delivered himself from wicked men, yet he gave his back to the smiter and became obedient unto death even the death of the cross, and said, "Father, not my will, but thine be done."

And now dear brothers and sisters remember me in your prayers when you set together in heavenly places in Christ, that I may be accounted worthy to stand before the Son of Man, and meet you all in the kingdom of God.

Your unworthy brother in Christ.

C. M. MITCHELL.

Dear Restitution:

With a joyful heart I can say that my husband and I have made a start in the glorious cause that leads to eternal life, having been buried with Christ in baptism, some few weeks ago. We are so situated as to seldom hear the truth preached or to have the pleasure of conversing with one of the precious faith. We ask an interest in the prayers of all the faithful, and hope we may all meet where sorrow and weeping will be no more, and joy and gladness will fill the whole earth, and righteousness will be the girdle of our loins.

Your brother and sister in the love of Christ and hope of the coming King.

MR. & MRS. WM. NEFF.

Dear Restitution:

In the midst of our rejoicing over the many that are giving themselves to the Master through faith and obedience, and a holy life, the present year, yet we are called upon to drink the bitter dregs of sorrow through bereavement of our friends and loved ones. One year ago I came on this work. Shortly after coming on this work, I formed the acquaintance of Bro. Charles E. Renner, a young man. Our friendship became sincere more especially as brothers of the same common faith, and hope, he was ever ready to meet me at the station and convey me from place to place. We had many pleasant moments talking of the coming kingdom and its unfading joys, in hope of which he rejoiced.

The hour came when the last battle must be fought. Brother Renner was taken sick in May last, and was confined most of the time to his bed until his death. I visited him a number of times during his sickness. He was always patient and bore his affliction with Christian grace and fortitude, and to the last moments of life gave to all his confidence and faith in the resurrection and coming kingdom, and immortality through Jesus the Christ.

He was a son of S. P. and Lissy Renner, and was born July 31st, 1865, and died August 31st, 1891. He was baptized by Brother T. J. Whitsitt nine years ago. He leaves a father, mother, one brother and friends to mourn his loss.

The writer preached the Word from Rev. xxi. 1-4, on this solemn occasion.

D. M. HUDLER.

Dear Restitution:

I formed the acquaintance of Brother Noah W. Kitts since coming to this place. He has been afflicted for five years.

I met him a number of times, previous to last June conference, and on my return from home in July last, he sent for me. I called on him and had a conversation with him concerning the gospel of the kingdom, and found that he received and understood the precious truths. I with a number of friends went with him and wife to the water and both were baptized. I met him several times afterwards and before his death he gave evidence of his hope until the last.

He was born Sept. 5, 1862, and died Sept. 2, 1891.

He leaves a wife, three children, father, mother, two brothers, and five sisters to mourn his death.

The writer spoke on this occasion from Rom. v. 12.

D. M. HUDLER.

Dear Brothers and sisters:

I thought I would write and give you a little history of our church here at St. Paul. Until a year ago last June, most of us had never heard the gospel of the kingdom preached. At that time Bro. Bartlett had Elder Almus Adams of Arapahoe come and hold a series of meetings. Brother Adams is thoroughly posted in the truths of God's Word, and he has the faculty of presenting his thoughts so clearly that we could not help understanding them. Since that time he has baptized fifty here. Of these, two sisters have removed from our town to make their home in Missouri. We miss their pleasant faces and their helpful words from among us; but we trust that it is all for the best; and if we are not permitted to meet them again in this life, we hope that when Christ comes we may meet them in his kingdom where there will be no more sad partings.

We have Sunday school, social meetings, and preaching services here. We are raising up preachers from our own congregation. There is one among us now who is qualified to spread the glad tidings of the kingdom, if his circumstances would permit. We think that God is blessing us, and although we have not as many members as the popular denominations around us, we can rejoice in the thought that it is to the little flock that the kingdom is promised. Hoping to meet you one and all in God's kingdom, I remain your sister in hope of life through Christ.

Evening Hymn.

The day is ended. He drink to me by
My weary spirit seeks repose in thine
Father, forgive my trespasses, and keep
This little life of mine.

With loving kindness o'ershade me, Lord,
And rest the rest my burning relation feel;
The pardon be thy token for my bed,
So shall my sleep be sweet.

All peace with all the world, dear Lord, and thee,
No fear, no soul or watching kitchen-bake,
And well, whichever side the grave for me
The morning light may break.

Man is a Mortal Being.

Man is a creature. He is made a little higher in intelligence than the beast, and "hath dominion over them," but he is a creature still. He is made from the dust of the earth; so also is the beast. He receives the breath of life and becomes a living soul; so also does the beast. Psa. xlix. 12, 14, says: "Nevertheless man being in honor abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish. Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them," etc. There is no difference between them; as one is created, so is the other; as one dieth, so dieth the other. Man, however, is given a different brain than the beast. He receives five organs of the brain that the beast does not, in order that he may be able to know God, and to hope, and to read and reason of God's great plan of salvation for the human race; and finally, if he believes and obeys the record, he will be an heir to everlasting life.

Paul in Rom. viii. 18, 20, 21 says: "For the earnest expectation of the 'creature' waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the 'creature' was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the 'creature' itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption unto the glorious liberty of the children of God." Paul here refers to man. He believed himself to be a creature, perishable as any beast of the field, but expected to be delivered from the bondage of corruption into everlasting life at the resurrection of the just.

Unless alive at Christ's second coming, man must pass through the same experience that the Savior did. He must go down into the water and be born of water, and have his sins washed away by the cleansing blood of Christ. (Christ was baptized by John in the Jordan). Then is the old man crucified and a new man born in him. He must pass into the death state and be buried in the grave, there to sleep until the resurrection morning. (Christ died and rose again the third day). He is then a dead soul and not a living soul. But if a just man he shall be raised to newness of life at the sounding of the last trumpet, and, like Christ, be quickened by the Spirit and made immortal. Christ said to Nicodemus (John iii. 5) "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Jesus was a creature of flesh and bones when he ascended into heaven, and instead of being quickened by mortal blood, he was quickened by the Spirit of God. He was a literal, tangible being; and doubting Thomas, when he had handled him, doubted no longer, but exclaimed fervently, "My Lord and my God." Therefore we believe in a literal, tangible God and Father of all, and not something without body or parts. Job. xix. 26, says: "And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." David said "he would be satisfied when he awoke with his likeness." (Mark xvi. 10), for Christ is now sitting on his right hand; he has feet, for he will make the enemy his footstool (Psa. cx. 1); he has ears, for he heareth the prayers of those who do his will, but he heareth not sinners (John ix. 31). Christ arose in his likeness, and so also shall we who are overcomers, when he is revealed.

We also believe that Christ's throne on earth will be a literal one, and his reign a literal one. He is the seed promised to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David. If he simply reigns in our hearts, as the great majority believe, how can he reign upon the throne of his father David? Luke i. 32. "And the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Zech. xiv. 9 says, "the Lord shall reign over all the earth." Rev. xv. 4 says, "all nations shall come and worship before thee;" and chap. xi. 15 says, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ: and he shall reign forever and ever." David says (Psa. lxxii. 8), "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth," (also Zech. ix. 10.) Job says (chap. xix. 25): "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." Zech. xiv. 5, says: "And the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee" (this, original).

Believing that Christ will reign upon the earth with all the saints, and not in heaven, then we are in harmony with Acts ii. 34: "David is not ascended into the heavens." We are in harmony with John iii. 13: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven." We are in harmony with Prov. xi. 31: "Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth," and chap. ii. 21: "For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it." We are in harmony with Matt. v. 5: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." We are in harmony with John xiii. 33: "Whither I go ye cannot come." and chap. vii. 33, 34: "Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me, and where I am, thither ye cannot come."

If we believe that man receives immortality at the resurrection, only upon condition of repentance, obedience and baptism into Christ, then we are in harmony with 1 Tim. i. 17: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God," and we are in harmony with chap. vi. 15, 16. which, speaking of Christ, says he is "the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality," for he is the only fleshly being who has obtained immortality. We are in harmony with Paul (Rom. ii. 7): "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life," and with 1 Cor. xv. 52-54, telling us that we shall "put on immortality at the resurrection."

If we believe that the soul as well as the body sleeps in the dust of the earth, then we are in harmony with David, in Psa. vi. 5: "For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" and chap. xxii. 29: "and none can keep alive his own soul;" and chap. xxxi. 12: "I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind;" and chap. cxlvi. 4: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." We are in harmony with Eccl. ix. 10: "For there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." We are in harmony with Ezek. xviii. 4: "the soul that sinneth it shall die." We are in harmony with Matt. x. 28: "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

If we believe in all the foregoing, then we are in harmony with Rev. xxii. 12: "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be." We are therefore looking for the blessed appearance of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ at all times, and ever praying, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Amen.

Let us be watching, therefore, for we know not what hour the Savior will come. Your brother in Christ.

Editor Restitution:

Thinking that the brethren might be pleased to hear from Antioch again I will write a few words that those who once lived here, but who are now scattered abroad might know that we have not laid the armor by, nor forsaken the faith. For nearly thirteen years there has been no preaching in our house where once we had such excellent meetings. Where Bros. Reed, Stephenson, Eychaner and others preached the Gospel of the Kingdom and other kindred subjects to large and attentive audiences.

The principal reason that the meetings were not continued was because most of the brethren have moved away, and those remaining felt unable to defray the necessary expenses and so the interest ceased; but after years of weary waiting the people began to enquire into the matter and desired to know the reason why no more meetings were held here, and a number expressed a willingness to help financially in reviving the interest in this locality. After a few of the brethren and sisters learned that Bro. D. M. Huddler of Musentine, Iowa, (who had been preaching at Dixon, Lamark, East Plum River, Union Grove, Adeline, and many other places) expressed a desire to come and preach, arrangements were made for him to visit us in May, which he did. While here he delivered three discourses. The weather being damp and cold but few attended. However, an increasing interest was manifested by some to learn more of the "Glad News" of the coming King and "the restitution of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began." He returned Sept. 9, preached Friday evening, and on Saturday was called to East Plum River to attend Bro. Renner's funeral. Preached two funeral discourses while gone, and did not return till Wednesday. This and rainy weather made quite a break in the meetings. He gave seven discourses, and Monday immersed six into the name of Christ. There are others who expect to obey the gospel when he returns, which we expect will be in about two months. We believe him "to be workman that needeth not to be ashamed," and should be kept constantly in the field. We rejoice to know that he has done good in our midst and hope that he may return and lead others to see the beauties, the richness and the fulness of the reward which the Lord has in reserve for all who love and serve him.

Gospel Preaching.

The pulpit is not the place for the presentation of human speculations. It is not the business of the preacher to give his opinions, but to present the message God has given him. It is an insult to God who intrusts the message for the preacher to criticise or pass his opinion upon it, or substitute his opinion for the message. The preacher who after a few days has arrived at the depth of his profound (?) opinions and announces it is "my opinion" has missed his calling. Every preacher should arm himself with a "Thus saith the Lord." When he gives his speculation or opinion, his congregation can meet it with their own opinions to which they have as good a right as himself, but when he clinches his convictions with God's own Word, it becomes as "a nail in a sure place," fastened by the master of assemblies. Then let men oppose, the opposition is not against him but against God who gave the Word. Every preacher has the Word of God as his shield; when men oppose the truth he can retreat behind that.

There is a great dearth of Scriptural preaching, but an abundance of speculative and metaphysical effort at preaching. The people are tired of speculation and starving on rhetoric. The masses care nothing for this kind of talk, but the Word of God is always attractive. A Scriptural preacher will always have an audience. Strange that this fact is not more appreciated. God has said that his "Word should not return unto him void, but should prosper in the thing whereunto he has sent it." This prosperity is not just exactly what some people suppose. It means that where God's Word is really preached. It will force a decision from those that hear it. Men are compelled by its representation to choose life or death. It does not mean that every one will heed and obey, but they must decide one way or the other. Therefore the Scriptural preacher has a mighty power in his hands that compels a man's choice.

The apostle says "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." It is only Bible preaching that will bring Bible conviction. Men say today that the times have changed and we cannot expect to see the old-time conviction. This is a mistake. Bible preaching will produce Bible results, and the reason we do not see more of such results, is because the Bible is not preached. How seldom is heard a straight, plain sermon on repentance, such as makes wrong doers writhe and squirm! How seldom is the fact alluded to, that God's people live without committing sin, as the Word of God plainly declares. This, far from being preached is considered heresy. And as for the Bible teaching on future endless banishment and entire annihilation, these unpalatable truths have been virtually surrendered by the majority of the pulpits to the enemy. Oh, for a generation of Bible preachers! Francis Wayland says, "When ministers shall read the Bible a great deal more, and read it with more humble reliance on the teaching of the Spirit, I think we shall have a greatly improved interpretation of the Word of God from all pulpits." Says Dr. L. T. Townsend, "A subject of such superlative moment should need no urging, or hardly allusion; yet with mortification we confess there is too great apathy." It is to be feared there are those in the pew who are silently advancing in Biblical knowledge beyond those in the pulpit.

We believe that God has given many of the laity the discernment to recognize the gospel when they hear it, and many a pious servant of God is tempted to remain away from the trifling, sensational speculations of a Scriptureless pulpit, to feed on his Bible at home. These things ought not to be. If we felt the call of God to preach and had no opportunity to gain a liberal education, we would with a burning soul for the salvation of men, commit whole chapters, and give them broadcast and by the wholesale and mix our own experience with it, to the people. This latter kind of preaching has led more people to immediate decision than any other. Anything is better than sensationalism or speculation in the pulpit.—Christian Witness.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. v. 5.

Up to the present time the very reverse has been the fact. He who was emphatically the meek and lowly One, had not where to lay his head: and the testimony in the epistle to the Hebrews, concerning multitudes of the saints, is, that clad "in sheep skins and goat skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented, they wandered in deserts and mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth."

Equally does the experience of all time show us, that so far from inheriting the earth, the faithful children of God have only been as strangers and pilgrims therein, liable to innumerable sorrows, persecutions, and death. Will the Word of the Lord fail them? Will our Father not bless his children as he has promised? Oh yes! let but our faith look towards the right spot on the horizon, and we shall behold a ray which will animate our hope, strengthen our confidence, and give us blessed assurance for the future. "The meek shall inherit the earth." No matter that it has been the theater of Messiah's suffering; that upon its bosom has fallen the tears and blood of millions of holy martyrs; that they have been hunted upon its mountains, or that earth's caverns have echoed with their cries; say the worst, and then add, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth," "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."

Is it asked, When? Let inspiration answer. "And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations;" when "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall given to the people of the saints of the Most High," and they shall reign on the earth with Jesus, at the time of the restitution of all things; when that sweet voice shall have been responded to, "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust!" and the crown of righteousness shall have been given to our brother Paul; and not to him only, but to all those who love the appearing of our blessed King, even Jesus, the "King of the Jews."

"Foxes have Holes."

Read the whole story in Luke ninth. The significance of the passage is that it puts discouragement upon every one who would engage in the service of Christ, for what he can make out of it. There must be honesty and unselfishness in the heart of a believer. There is a glorious reward in the coming kingdom, and no one will obtain it who does not forget it. The kingdom of heaven is not a bread and butter kingdom. It is a kingdom whose subjects give, rather than receive. Here alone is found the luxury of self-sacrifice. To lose life is the highest virtue and brings the supreme reward. The self-seeker belongs to another realm. He has no part or lot with Christ. Those who are "clothed in purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day" may possibly be saints, but yet how hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of heaven? When religion becomes popular it has lost its power. When men and women join the church because it is the thing to do, woe be to the church.

Saul of Tarsus was a persecutor of the despised Christians up to the very moment of his conversion. The grace of God brought him into sympathy with the Nazarenes and from thenceforth he had not where to lay his head. "Even unto this present hour we both hunger and thirst and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place; and labor working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it; being defamed, we entreat; we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day." How can we read such words and study the character and life of Christ and his apostles and not be convinced that the service of Christ involves sacrifice and self-denial?—Christian Witness.

Spiritualizing Process.

We are so accustomed to hear ministers read God's Word and then explain it away by a spiritualizing process, that we scarcely wonder now at anything they say. The most literal subjects are interpreted spiritually, and farfetched meanings are given to Scriptures that a child may understand. In fact it seems to be the province of some to cover up as far as possible the evident meaning of the writer. As a sample we subjoin an outline of a sermon on the subject of "Paul's shipwreck." In explaining the spiritual meaning of this event he said:

1. That the ship was the gospel, and exhibited its essential doctrines.

2. The escape of the mariners and prisoners denoted the following particulars:

1. The three masts denoted the three persons in one Divinity, because the three masts made but one ship.

2. The prow denoted the Divinity of the Savior, and the stern his humanity—their union, the union of the two natures.

3. The two seas meeting the ship, denoted the wrath of God and the malice of the devil, concentrating upon the Savior in his last scene.

4. The hinder part of the ship breaking, represented the weakness and death of the humanity of the Savior.

5. Their throwing overboard the tackling of the ship, denoted saints renouncing all their own works.

In the demonstration of the second head, he showed:

1. That the saints by taking hold of Christ, as the sailors and prisoners took hold of the plank and broken pieces of the ship, to keep themselves from sinking under trials.

2. Their swimming safe to land, denoted the sure and certain perseverance of all the saints.

3. Their all getting safe to shore, proves the ultimate salvation of all the elect.

Witnesses to the Savior.

The heavens gave witness. A new star passed through the sky at his incarnation; and at his crucifixion, for three hours, the sun was darkened.

The winds and seas gave witness, when at his word the tempest was hushed and rough billows smoothed into a calm. At the same word the inhabitants of the waters crowded round the ship, and filled the net of the astonished and worshiping disciples.

The earth gave witness. At his death and at his resurrection it trembled to its center.

Disease gave witness. Fevers were rebuked: the blind saw their Deliverer: the dumb publish'd his glory: the sick of the palsy were made whole; and the lepers were cleansed at his bidding.

The grave gave witness, when Lazarus came forth, and many bodies of the saints which slept, arose.

The invisible world gave witness. Devils acknowledged his divinity, and fled from his presence. Angels ministered to him in the desert, the garden, and the tomb. A multitude sang an anthem in the air, at the hearing of the shepherds; and as our risen Lord ascended up to glory they accompanied him.

Christ the Typical Man.

Our Lord was the typical man. He our Savior: he was also our brother. In him we see not only God in manifestation, but also man in perfection. Looking on the human side what are we taught? That Jesus was the type of the race. In Him was revealed what the race was intended to be, and what it will be when creation is complete. The church has thought so much of the divine Christ that it has not grasped the full and glorious significance of the human Christ. He is the goal toward which humanity is tending. He is the crowning race. In him is seen the divine plan for each individual. What he was, humanity is to be. In him what is seen? A being with the animal in subservience to the spiritual; a being who had all knowledge, and the wealth of the universe, whose supreme ideal was the service of humanity. A harlot went to draw water: the Son of Man sat by her side and told her of the living water. A poor woman crept up behind to touch his coat, and his sympathy healed her. He was in the wilderness where there were many people without food, and he fed them, although he would not work a miracle to save himself. He was lied about, persecuted, followed from town to town, but he never spoke an unkind or an ungenerous word. He was the friend of publicans and sinners—their friend to uplift, not the companion of their sins. He never thought or planned for self.

When he found that men were thinking too much of him he told them it was time for him to go away. He never had an enemy, and never resented an insult. He never turned from people because they were poor or disagreeable. He laid himself down, and said: "Walk over me toward the Father's house and the Father's love." He died to save men who did not understand and would not appreciate. "He went about doing good." This man, who could command the universe, and yet who used all his powers to benefit and uplift humanity, is the goal of the creation. He is the one toward whom all things tend; in him is revealed the perfect race. No more inheritance of vice, disease, crime, no more the trail of the serpent staining the generations and leaving marks of sin and shame on the bodily organism. The brute inheritance eliminated; the physical universe, with her myriads of forces now unknown, waiting to do the bidding of man, and all living not to be ministered unto, but to minister—that is what the Master tells us is coming, not in some far-away heaven, but on this earth, among men who will look up into the same great and wide sky into which we look.—Evangelical Messenger.

LIGHT.

"Light is sown for the righteous and gladness for the upright in heart." Psa. xcvii. 11. However dark the night of sorrow or however long the soul be bowed with trouble and anguish, the true child of God may well take comfort from these words. Sometimes called to pass a way both lone and dreary, he is said to walk in darkness—strange providences meet and often perplex him, and though daily and hourly realisations of the divine consolations sustain him, yet is his path so hedged up, so constantly does the rod afflict him that like Job of old he is constrained to say, "The days of affliction have taken hold upon me."

True we know that the Almighty has his own purposes in the severe tests to which he permits some of his people to be subjected and it may be that never in time will it be known why these special afflictions were permitted and it is well for that soul who without murmuring humbly bows its head and passes under the rod, for to such an one belongs the comforting assurance that there is a limit to the season of darkness and suffering.

Nor would the deliverance seem to indicate that change which must be produced by "mortal putting on immortality," but the rather does the verse point to a present deliverance from darkness to light—from sorrow to gladness—such a deliverance as the faith of Job apprehended (and ultimately realized) when from the midst of agony and ashes he exclaimed in triumph, "Yet in my flesh shall I see God." Nor is the case of Job a solitary one, for in all ages paid and to come the children of faith are "in all things more than conquerors."

Take comfort, then, poor troubled one. Light is sown for thee and the morn of gladness is even now breaking o'er the darkened sky. It may be thou hast long waited and prayed for deliverance, and in anguish of soul wondered if God had forgotten to be gracious, but in what hast thou fared with thy spiritual nature in all this while? Hast thou not been taught blessed lessons of subjection to the Father of Spirits, and canst thou not say as truly as did David of old, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted that I might learn thy statutes?"

Truly, present chastisement is not joyous but grievous; nor can we be benefitted thereby but rather made worse unless there be a complete surrender of the will to the divine Chastiser, meekly bowing our backs to the stroke of his mighty hand, so that in due time he may lift us up. Oh, thrice happy ones who have tasted of this precious ministry of the angel of pain, for even amid the darkness there gleams the joy of divine recognition and consolation; yea, the Son of God himself abides with his tried ones "in the midst of the fire." Well, then, may we sing,

"Sweet are the promises;
Sweet are the messengers;
Sweet [illegible] ——"

since it is through this narrow vale we pass on to reap the ripe fields of light and gladness and enjoy the beautiful yield of the peaceable fruits of righteousness.

Minister's Meeting.

At a meeting of the Church at Plymouth, Ind. held Sept. 27, it was unanimously voted that the church extend an invitation to the ministers to meet at this place the fore part of the week preceding our annual meeting which is held over the third Sunday in November. Such invitation is hereby extended to the ministers, should it be decided to hold the meeting proposed by Bro. L. E. Conner.

Signed,
A. R. Underwood,
Clerk Plymouth Church.

…before the day of tribulation the saints are to be sealed (Rev. vii. 2, 3,) "sealed," but not taken. When Christ leaves the Father's throne man's advocate will be cut off so no more can be saved. That is why they are sealed before they are taken. Matt. xxiv. 21, 22, 23. "Great day of tribulation"—Are the elect going to escape it? "For the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." 23.

Deceptions—If the saints are to be delivered from that day, why did Jesus warn us against deceptions? Rev. ii. 2, "Court" (broad way) "measure out and measure it not, for it is given to the Gentiles: and the holy city (saints) shall they tread under foot forty and two mo. ths. (three and a half years). 3 v. "I will give power to my witnesses." First witness those of Israel, Rev. vii. 4. Second witness those saved of the Gentiles, Rev. vii. 9. "And they (Saints) prophesy (of his coming) a thousand two hundred and three score days, (three and a half years). Please read 4, 5 vs. (holy) "fire proceedeth out of their mouths," "He must be killed" with a two edged sword, or Word of God, Matt. x. 34; Eph. vi. 17; Rev. i. 16; Heb. iv. 12. Rev. xi. 6 have power But it dod heavens that it rain not," rain is an element which quenches fire (Holy Spirit) "waters" that which quenches (Holy Ghost) fire; house waters is the enemy, "turn them to blood" or they become Blood Guilty. Rev. vi. 14, "came out of great tribulation" (not away from) but "out of." Again Rev. xi. 7. When their prophecy is finished the one my overcomes and kills them." Jer. xxv. 33; Rev. xi. 8. "Great city (world) where our Lord was crucified" and they shall see their dead bodies three and a half days, or three and a half years. We know when the tribulation begins men begin to fall, hence those who fell first will lay three and a half years. See 2, 3 vs. 11 verse and after three days and a half (or years) they are raised, and great fear falls upon those who behold them, compare with Rev. vi. 15, 16. Rev. ii. 12, "And I heard a great voice from heaven saying, come up hither." Read Rev. vii. 10; 1 Thess. iv. 16. And their enemies beheld them. Rev. i. 7. Compare 13 vs. with Rev. xvi. 18, 19. Rev. ii. 14, "The second woe is past," (woe of the saints). "And the third woe cometh quickly." This being the woe of the lost. Compare 18 vs. with Rev. vii. 10-27; Rev. iv. 8. Rev. xi. 16, 17, 18, 19, foretells the glory of the saints, when the ark, New Jerusalem, shall appear. Blessed, blessed day! "And there shall be lightnings and voices and thundering of the saints, av. earthquake in the earth." Rev. viii. 5 Rev. vi. 18. "Followed by great hail, "hail" and "hail-stones" is used in the Scriptures as frozen hearts of men. Ezek. xiii. 11, 22, 23.

Well, praise the Lord it is all coming! "See that ye be not troubled." Jno. xiv. 28. "Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid." Comfort your hearts, stablish you in every good word and work, 2 Thess. ii. 17. Happy in Jesus.

ROSE M. CRAVEN.

All that the Christian loses now he gains by-and-by. All he does not get in manna in the wilderness he will get in plenty in the goodly land. All that he does not get in water from the smitten rock, he will get in milk and honey, in peace and blessing, on the shining shore. He may find little repose in earth's wayside hostelries, but he shall find the better rest that remaineth in the paradise of God. He can wait, for his reward is certain; he can be patient, for it is secure; he can be joyful, for it is exceeding great.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at the Harper School House, six miles southeast of Vicksburg, Kalamazoo Co., Friday evening, Oct. 12th, and continue over the following Sunday. The purpose of this meeting is twofold. 1. To help each other; and 2. To help the unbeliever. To realize the best results in either, requires the presence of all at the meeting. It is not often that we are permitted to assemble in one body to shake glad hands, to cheer, encourage, and exhort: so let us lay aside all worldly cares for a few day and attend the meeting; doing all in our power, both individually and collectively for the advancement of His cause.

The brothers and sisters of that place have earnestly requested that the meeting might be held there, feeling that by our united effort, much good might be done. Come and all try to be there. Don't say you can't. If you have to use any such expressions, throw them at the world—the obstacles, and then start off for the conference. Take your friends with you. Go with hearts full of love to God and to man. Take with you all the zeal and earnestness you possess. Go with the intention of cheering every face you meet. Drop a smile here; a comforting word there; and a kind w…yonder. Let us throw abroad such an influence as will soften the hardest heart, and convict the vilest sinner. Those going by rail will get off at Vicksburg where teams will be waiting for you Friday and Saturday.

F. L. AUSTIN, Sec.

The Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Iowa will convene at Glad Brook at the New Church. This meeting will last four days, commencing Oct. 4th and continuing until Oct. 7th inclusive. All of like precious faith are cordially invited. Brethren, all that possibly can "come." The Glad Brook people have a fine place of worship and extend a hearty invitation to all, and we can be assured of a good meeting. Let us show them our appreciation of their invitation by our presence. Glad Brook is situated at the junction of the Chicago and Northwestern and Chicago and Great Western Railways, 20 miles northeast of Marshalltown, and is very easy of access by rail. All desiring to attend this meeting will please confer with Bro. G. P. or Albert Allard so that arrangements can be made to take care of you. Brethren, let us be up and doing, and make this meeting a memorable one. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh, are we ready?"

O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska, and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles southeast of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Oct. 5th, 1894, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from abroad. Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So, let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

WM H. DENSON, Sec'y.

The annual conference of the Church of God in the Northwest, will convene in the new church at Scholls Ferry, Oregon, commencing Friday, Oct. 12, 1894, and hold over the following Sunday.

Ample provision will be made for visiting brethren. Teams will be in waiting at the National Hotel, Portland, for those wishing, if they will inform Bro. W. W. Jaquith to that effect. Be sure to write in time.

Dear brothers and sisters, another call has been made. Will all that can come up to the help of the Lord and work for the Master? The signs of the times show to us who are waiting and watching the near coming of our Savior. As time is short we should improve it. Besides all this such a reunion always helps us. We feel that we have a foretaste of what is to come. Yours in the Truth.

ALMIRA BROOKS, Sec.

The quarterly meeting of the Church of the Abrahamic faith known as Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin Conference will be held at the Union Church 15 miles northwest of Lanark, Ill., commencing Friday evening Oct. 12th, 1894, and continue as long as profitable for the cause of truth. We extend a cordial invitation to all, and as we want a good meeting we do urge on all lovers of the truth to make an extra effort to come and help us. Gentile times will soon be in the past, and the time for the saints to take the kingdom is near at hand, perhaps nearer than we think, therefore it behooves us to be all we can. The friends in the vicinity of the meeting are amply able and willing to take care of all that will attend. Those coming by rail stop off at Lanark, Ill., where conveyances will be in waiting for all that will come. Those coming from the East must get to Lanark Thursday evening, and those coming from the West can get here on Friday evening.

J. D. BENNER, Sec.

I will be at Ridley, Ill., Oct. 4, and hold a meeting for one week. At Blue Mound, Mo, Oct. 13, and through the week following. At Bosworth, Mo Oct. 20, and week following. At Liz Creek Church, Neosho Co, Kan. Oct. 27, and over Sunday. Brethren in the different localities take notice.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Bear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all call to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notice" published on page 1 of the paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Better send a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. So we will say "I have sent bills because letters have lots of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fool him in a letter so that no one can find it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. The Resurrection according to the Scriptures—A declaration of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on this earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the possession of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ; and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at the Harper School House, six miles southeast of Vicksburg, Kalamazoo Co., Friday evening, Oct. 12th, and continue over the following Sunday. The purpose of this meeting is two-fold. 1. To help each other; and 2, To help the unbeliever. To realize the best results in either requires the presence of all at the meeting. It is not often that we are permitted to assemble in one body to shake glad hands, to cheer, encourage, and exhort; so let us lay aside all worldly cares for a few days and attend the meeting; doing all in our power, both individually and collectively for the advancement of His cause.

The brothers and sisters of that place have earnestly requested that the meeting might be held there, feeling that by our united effort, much good might be done. One and all try to be there. Don't say you can't. If you have to use any such expressions, throw them at the would-be obstacles, and then start off for the conference. Take your friends with you. Go with hearts full of love to God and to man. Take with you all the zeal and earnestness you possess. Go with the intention of cheering every face you meet. Drop a smile here; a comforting word there; and a kind act yonder. Let us throw abroad such an influence as will soften the hardest heart, and convict the vilest sinner. Those going by rail will get off at Vicksburg where teams will be waiting for you Friday and Saturday.

F. L. AUSTIN, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God in the Northwest, will convene in the new church at Scholls Ferry, Oregon, commencing Friday, Oct. 12, 1894, and hold over the following Sunday.

Ample provision will be made for visiting brethren. Teams will be in waiting at the National Hotel, Portland, for those wishing, if they will inform Bro. W. W. Jaquith to that effect. Be sure to write in time.

Dear brothers and sisters, another call has been made. Will all that can come up to the help of the Lord and work for the Master? The signs of the times show to us who are waiting and watching the near coming of our Savior. As time is short we should improve it. Besides all this such a reunion always helps us. We feel that we have a foretaste of what is to come.

Yours in the Truth.

ALMIRA BROOKS, Sec.

The quarterly meeting of the Church of the Abrahamic faith known as Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin Conference will be held at the Union Church 15 miles northwest of Lanark, Ill., commencing Friday evening Oct. 12th, 1894, and continue as long as is profitable for the cause of truth. We extend a cordial invitation to all, and as we want a good meeting we do urge on all lovers of the truth to make an extra effort to come and help us. Gentile times will soon be in the past, and the time for the saints to take the kingdom is near at hand, perhaps nearer than we think, therefore it behooves us to do all we can. The friends in the vecinity of the meeting are amply able and willing to take care of all that will attend. Those coming by rail stop off at Lanark, Ill., where conveyance will be in waiting for all that will come. Those coming from the East must get to Lanark Thursday evening, and those coming from the West can get there on Friday evening.

J. D. BENNER, Sec.

I will be at Ripley, Ill., Oct. 4, and hold a meeting for one week. At Blue Mound, Mo. Oct. 13, and through the week following. At Bosworth, Mo. Oct. 20, and week following. At Big Creek Church, Neosho Co. Kan. Oct. 27, and over Sunday. Brethren in the different localities take notice.

JOHN FOSTER.

Seeing Him who is Invisible.

Workman of God, O lose not heart,
But learn what God is like;
And on the darkest battle-field
Thou shalt know where to strike.

Thrice blessed is he to whom is given
The instinct that can tell
That God is on the field, when he Is most invisible.

Blest too is he who can divine
Where truth and justice lie,
Who dares to take the side that seems
Wrong to man's blinded eye.

For right is right, since God is God,
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin.

The Sufficiency of the Scriptures.

(Being the substance of an Address delivered before the brethren, in Conference assembled at Geneva, Dec. 24, 1868 by R. Wilson.)

I need not define what is meant by the term Scriptures, for I presume that there is not one individual present on this occasion, but understands it to apply to the books of the Old and New Testaments. These writings all Christians believe to have been divinely inspired, and therefore they are very properly esteemed as the Word of God. As this is admitted at once, I shall not attempt to prove either the genuineness, authenticity, or inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, but pass to directly inquire as to what is meant by the sufficiency of the Scriptures. Are they sufficient for the enlightenment and conversion of sinners: and for the edification and perfection of saints? And are they sufficient for these purposes without the direct operation of the Holy Spirit? These are important inquiries, and demand a careful and serious investigation. I shall then inquire—

1. Are the Scriptures sufficient for the conversion of sinners?

The apostle Paul when writing to Timothy referred to the Old Testament alone when he said, "From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." This language implies that there can be found in the writings of Moses and the prophets sufficient information to make a person "wise unto salvation." And the Psalmist even in his day could say, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple; the statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes." Again he says, "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." Light is the symbol of knowledge; hence when a person is made "wise unto salvation," he is said to be enlightened. Paul was sent to the Gentiles by the Lord Jesus, "to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light;" or from a state of sin and ignorance to a state of knowledge. For this purpose he proclaimed the gospel. And we are informed very definitely what it was that he preached—"the kingdom of God, and the things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ." These things he found in the Old Testament, for he affirmed before Agrippa, that in his preaching, he said "none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come; that Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles." And from what we find recorded in the Acts of the Apostles we find that Paul invariably preached the same things. Peter also we find frequently appealing to the testimony of the prophets, in proof of his doctrines, and to enlighten the understandings of his hearers. Read the 2nd and 3rd chapters of the Acts for an illustration of his manner of preaching, and the success which attended it. The minds of his hearers were instructed and enlightened, and many were converted to the truth. He made his appeals to the understanding—endeavored to convince them of the error of their ways—and point out to them the way of God's righteousness. He earnestly exhorted them, saying "save yourselves from this untoward generation."

One thing is very evident in the apostles, that they always sought to obtain the ears of the people. Paul says, "Faith comes by hearing;" and "without faith it is impossible to please God." But "how shall they hear without a preacher?" hence the apostles were sent out to proclaim the gospel, "as it is written, how beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" And where did the apostles find or learn these tidings? In the Scriptures. "Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." It is called the engrafted or "implanted Word, which is able to save the soul." It is also called the incorruptible seed "which liveth and abideth forever." But as seed will produce no fruit unless sown or planted, so the Word of God must be preached and heard and obeyed before persons can be saved. But the query arises—Has "the Word of faith which we preach" sufficient life-power in it to save men, without the direct operation of the Holy Spirit, as is claimed by some? We unhesitatingly answer, yes it has. And we cite for proof of our assertion what the great apostle of the Gentiles says, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek;" and also what he wrote Timothy concerning those Holy Scriptures which contain the word of faith or the gospel, viz., that they are "able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus." We cannot find the slightest hint that these Scriptures are powerless, unless applied by the Holy Spirit. No! no! "The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Heb. iv. 12. The Spirit has indited the Word, and confirmed it as the Word of God by unmistakable signs. It comes to us claiming to be the Word of the Eternal and Omnipotent Deity. When this is fully understood and believed it clothes the Word with power, whether that word be in the form of promises, precepts, commands, or threatenings. Solomon says, that "with the word of a king there is power;" and what is it that gives power? Simply this, the power behind the throne to enforce or execute that word. And so when the Word of God is "received, not as the word of men, but (as it is in truth) the Word of God," it effectually or powerfully works in those who believe. That Word of the Lord, or gospel, was held forth by the apostles, as the all-powerful means for the conversion of their hearers; and if it was effectual, it was only so to those persons, "in whom the god of this world had blinded the minds of them which believed not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." Thus, if the word is not believed, it will be inoperative, so far as operating effectually upon the affections of such persons—nevertheless the apostle shows that to those who perish, they were "the savor of death unto death; and to the other (the believers) the savor of life unto life."

But perhaps an objector will say, turn to Acts xvi. 14, and there you will find it recorded that the Lord opened the heart of Lydia. Does not that prove the direct operation of the Spirit? By no means. I would refer the objector to the same passage for an answer. If the Lord opened Lydia's heart, it was done by some means. What is stated? It is said that she heard Paul and Silas preach. The preached gospel was the key or power used by the Lord to unlock Lydia's heart; and then it is said "she attended to the things which were spoken of Paul." The word spoken reached the heart of Lydia through her ears. We know of no way to reach the mind, or touch the affections, except through the external senses. The ear or the eye was always addressed by the Lord's messengers, when man was to be instructed, convinced or converted. To Israel it was said, "Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear and your soul shall live." That "they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto his (God's) commandments, * * * Yet many years didst thou forbear them, and testified against them by Spirit in thy prophets; yet would they not give ear." And Stephen addressing the same wicked race, said, "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Spirit; as your father did, so do ye." To resist the Holy Spirit is to neglect to obey its instructions. Where that word is not known the Holy Spirit is not and cannot be resisted. But

2. Are the Scriptures sufficient to teach Christians how to perfect their characters?

The apostle Paul's testimony is, that all divinely inspired writing "is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Now it seems to me that in this statement we have everything requisite for the perfection of character. As before stated, this is affirmed of the Old Testament writings; how much more applicable the statement when the writings of the New Testament are added to them. "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through the patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." I can conceive of no circumstance or situation in life in which a believer can be placed, but that there is something in the sacred writings applicable to his case. They are eminently calculated not only to instruct, but to admonish and to comfort. We are exhorted to "grow in grace, and the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." But how can this be attended to, unless by a perusal of the Holy Oracles? Neglect the study of the Word, and there can be no increase in the knowledge of Christ. The apostle Peter exhorts us, "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby; if so be that you have tasted that the Lord is gracious." The Word must be eaten, and inwardly digested, in order to obtain this growth and spiritual strength. Take the experience of the Psalmist for an example. Says he, "how sweet are thy words unto my taste; yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth." "The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver;" "more to be desired than gold, yea than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honey-comb. Moreover, by them is thy servant warned; and in keeping of them is great reward." Why should not Christians of the present day have the same rich experience? We have a more extended range of knowledge than he had;—the Word of Jehovah, as given through prophets, the Lord Jesus Christ, and his apostles. How important then becomes the admonition of Peter, "be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior;" and also the exhortation of Paul, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another." We might inquire here, why are we thus exhorted? why ought our minds to be richly stored with the Word of inspiration? I answer, that we may be "perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Perfection of character is enjoined upon the believer. "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." But this perfection can only be attained through a knowledge of and obedience to "the perfect law of liberty." For the apostle James testifies, that "whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed." We cannot obey a law of which we have no knowledge—and there are no means by which we can obtain this knowledge, except by "looking into that perfect law;" hence the vast importance of copying the example of the noble Bereans, to "search the Scriptures daily, to see whether these things are so" or not. Even those who claim that there is a separate and distinct influence of the Spirit on the hearts of believers, cannot but admit that there is everything which is requisite for the perfection of their characters in the divine Word. If so, what is the necessity for this extra operation of the Spirit? Surely it cannot be to enlighten the mind—for this can only be done by the impartation of knowledge. I know of no addition to our stock of inspired knowledge, since the days of the Spirit-gifted apostles, that is worthy of the slightest attention. Nay, I regard any one, who at the present day, claims to present anything new as a revelation, as an impostor, or demented, unless qualified to produce the signs of an apostle. This no one is able to do.

If then the Word of the Lord is sufficient to enlighten, guide, direct, and perfect our characters, without any further addition to it whatever, what is this separate and distinct influence of the Spirit? what is its office?—how does it operate? Oh, says one, "The Spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." We believe it. The sacred record contains the words of the Spirit,—for "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit"—and that record bears witness. John says, "it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth." Jesus says, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth;" and again he says, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you they are spirit and life." And what does the Word witness? It says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life; and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son, hath not life." "You are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus; for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." These are the words or testimony of the Spirit. What additional testimony do we want, or what more weight could the Spirit add to these words? If we believe them, do they not witness or bear record to our understandings that we are God's adopted children? I know no way that the spirit could possibly bear witness, except by words or signs, addressed to our understanding. That has already been done in the Word. No additional testimony is required, seeing that we as Christians are required to "walk by faith, and not by sight." It seems to me that there is a disposition on the part of some to walk by sight, or feeling. This is not God's order. Believe the record. Remember what an inspired apostle says, "He that believeth not God, hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son."

Another objector says, Does not "the Spirit help our infirmities? for we know not what we should pray for as we ought." But how does it help? Is it not by teaching us how to pray? And are we not taught how to pray in the Word? And are not the directions plain and amply sufficient? I contend that they are. If those directions were more closely adhered to, we should not hear so many unmeaning and unscriptural prayers. It is a grand mistake to suppose that good feeling, and what is sometimes called freedom in prayer, is an evidence that the Spirit is inditing our prayers, or helping our infirmities.

Another says, But is it not said, "if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his?" Certainly; and it is Scripture too, and I believe it. But it does not necessarily follow, that because the word spirit is here mentioned, that therefore it means a distinct and separate influence or entity. Spirit in this passage, I contend, means mind or disposition. Let us read it so. "If any man have not the mind (or disposition) of Christ, he is none of his." Does it not make sense? and is it not true? This perfectly accords with the apostolic exhortation,—"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." We are also exhorted to "consider him who endured such contradiction of sinners against himself," and to "look to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith?" Why consider and look? except it be to copy his example—to drink in his spirit. He has left us an example that we should walk in his steps. Jesus said, "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." In order now to learn of him, we are necessitated to read what is written about him in the Word,—to read of his faith, love, devotion, humility, disinterestedness, &c. Possessing these we shall possess and exhibit his spirit. It will become a part of our renewed natures. But this spirit or disposition is not a separate entity, as some claim. It is produced in the believer by obedience to the Word. It is not a superadded influence given by God, to enlighten, comfort, and produce good feelings. Let a Christian only follow out the apostle Peter's advice—viz., "giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly-kindness; and to brotherly-kindness, charity," (2 Pet. i. 5-7) —and perfection of character will be attained, and the reward of the kingdom will most assuredly follow. Who will say that those who possess these traits of character have not the spirit of the Anointed One? And yet let it be distinctly understood that this perfection of character can only be obtained by practicing what the Scriptures enjoin upon us.

But I must draw to a close. The time is too short to allow of a full investigation of this subject, and to take up all the points and objections, and answer them at length. In conclusion, let me press upon your attention the absolute importance of a close study and investigation of the Divine Word. Receive it "not as the word of men, but as it is in truth the Word of God, which effectually works in you that believe.

A Preacher's Mother.

My mother's habit was every day, immediately after breakfast, to withdraw for one hour to her own room, and to spend that hour in reading the Bible, in meditation and prayer. From that hour, as from a pure fountain, she drew the strength and sweetness which enabled her to fulfil all her duties, and to remain unruffled by all the worries and pettishnesses which are so often the intolerable trial of narrow neighborhoods. As I think of her life, and of all it had to bear, I see the absolute triumph of Christian grace in the lovely ideal of a Christian lady. I never saw her temper disturbed; I never heard her speak one word of anger and calumny, or of idle gossip; I never observed in her any sign of a single sentiment unbecoming to a soul which had drunk of the river of the water of life, and which had fed upon the manna in the barren wilderness. The world is the better for the passage of such souls across its surface. They may seem to be as much forgotten as the drops of rain which fall into the barren sea, but each drop adds to the volume of refreshful and purifying waters. "The healing of the world is in its nameless saints. A single star seems nothing, but a thousand scattered stars break up the night, and make it beautiful."
—F. W. Farrar.

The Book for All.

To look at it theoretically, we should pronounce the task of producing a universal book, adapted to all races, all centuries, and all generations, simply impossible. And so it is if human productions and human powers alone are regarded. That the Bible has in it something for each and something for all, no matter what their age or degree of mental development, is not the least of the proofs that show it to be divine.

It is intelligible to the dullest, it is inexhaustible to the the keenest. "It has shallows where a lamb may wade, and depths where an elephant must swim." It is the most ancient of books, yet the newest. The date of centuries is upon it, but not the decay of age. It is interwoven with every period of life, and every kind of experience. It is hallowed by a thousand memories. The maiden is married by its sanctions, and in her lonely widowhood turns to it for comfort. It lies on the bed of death, and on the busy bench of the workshop. The soldier, marching to the battle-field, packs it carefully in his knapsack, and the civil officer lays his hand upon it when he swears to execute his country's laws. Every where it finds a fitting place. And in the closet most of all it is the one essential instrument for progress.—Christian Standard.

This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

If you can count it all joy when beset with divers temptations (trials) and feel confident that the trial of your faith worketh patience, loved ones, you are walking in the Spirit.

It has been truly said that men judge of our hearts by words and works, while God judges of our words and works by our hearts. This has sustained many a humble follower of the meek and lowly Jesus when suffering wrongfully from harsh or misguided judgment.

FARRAR truthfully says that character grows out of habits. From the universal law of habit, little by little, day by day, act by act, thread by thread, link by link, we mould the character, weave the woof and forge the chains which bind our being, and in forming our habits form our character.

IT seems a long time since Jesus said to his little band of trusters, I go to prepare a place for you; but we understand that he has been engaged in that work ever since,—and will never abandon it until he has developed the situation which is to obtain and precede his coming again. We believe he is directing the affairs of the nations and giving direction to political events so that a crisis may be formed that will necessitate his personal apocalypse. He will surely come as he said he would, and every wide-awake believer will keep a keen outlook, for the work of preparation is far advanced. May the conquering hero soon come.

A MOST remarkable address was recently delivered at Preston, England by Cardinal Vaughan at the "Catholic Truth Society," in which he says there is a growing desire throughout Christendom for a reunion. He says the prospect in England is very cheering; that there is an increasing distrust of the national religion, sensible diminution of prejudice against Catholic practices, and what a few years ago was regarded as superstitions and blasphemous have been taken back one by one till the thirty-nine articles have been banished and buried as a rule of faith. This is backward progress, we think. The cardinal says the English churches are only distinguished with extreme difficulty from the Catholic now.

BRETHREN and Sisters, be not discouraged at your present lack of perfection. It is a progressive work to get the flesh under perfect control,—a matter of stages. We must grow in God's favor by mastering one appetite after another. It was in order that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works that the precious volume was given us. We are enjoined to be followers of God as dear children, and walk in love. Let us follow on: there are heights and depths and breadths and lengths of the love of God yet unexplored,—and an inexhaustible store of grace to help in time of need,—the great danger lies in neglecting the heavenly provisions made for us. We are fully persuaded that it takes something more than the knowledge of the truth, and the discussion of doctrine to lift one to a higher plane of existence. When we delight to do the right because it is God's will we are progressing in the divine life.

No matter how strong our resolutions may be, it soon something to carry them out. Elliot illustrates this by saying we may determine not to gather cherries, and keep our hands sturdily in our pockets, but we can't prevent our mouths from watering.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, died Oct. 7, at Boston, Mass. He was born Aug. 29, 1809, in Cambridge, Mass. He was one of the best writers of the time, and as his work covered such a wide range of thought it would be hard to say in which he excelled, but, this we know, that this generation has been benefitted by the influence of this good man.

WE give in this issue the report of the Nebraska State Conference, showing the work done by the earnest workers of that section of the country. We learn of good work done by evangelists and generous giving for their support. However, our reason for writing this item is to make reply to the resolutions passed at the meeting. The names of the two brethren whose actions called forth the first resolution are withheld, as we have no right to give them. Regarding this we will say this much, it is quite likely these brethren have the "other side" of the question. It would not be pleasant for either side to have the little differences "aired" in a paper. Besides a newspaper is not the place for settling differences between brethren. If you can't agree, why the field is broad; both work as best you can independently. May be you each may "convert a sinner from the error of his way, save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of (your own) sins." Regarding the other resolution we will say the aim of the managers of this paper is to publish Truth as stated in God's Word. If we err sometimes, it is because we are like others—human, and liable to err. However, the subject of the articles not being given we are at a loss to know what is meant, and will give answer in a general way so that all may know where we stand. We believe man when placed on trial disobeyed, and having committed sin a curse was pronounced against the race. We believe mankind to still be under that curse, viz., in a lost, undone, ruined condition. We see by the record that God's work was done through different agencies and means, so far as the full and culmination of man is concerned, and we believe, as he is the "same yesterday, today, and forever," that he will continue to work through various agencies and means. The Great God saw fit to provide a means for the saving of the race that had fallen so low, and gave his only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, for that purpose and work. This divinely given Son enters upon this labor of saving the lost ones with commendable energy, and brings "life and immortality to light." How does he bring this desirable condition to light? "THROUGH THE GOSPEL." We will presume without question that "the Gospel" is the "good news of the Kingdom of God, and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ." In setting forth this Gospel the sacred writers tell us that to be benefitted by its "light," we must be informed as to what its conditions are—we must believe that the Author is able to perform his work, repent of our former sinful ways, and obey the commands he gives us. We are then in a condition to have our old sins blotted out, which is graciously done. We are then heirs with Christ to the promised inheritance, and by faithfully living out the principles we have learned, submitting to be led by him in whom we have trusted, we are certain of reward at the appointed time, which time is known only to the Father. The only logical conclusion we can come to after carefully considering the teaching of Christ and the apostles, and judging from the history of God's dealings with his people anciently, is that is absolutely and unqualifiedly NECESSARY that we believe, repent and obey if we want the promised blessing. That there is no other way to get the blessing,—that "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." Following this unquestionably logical conclusion still further, we are compelled to conclude that IF it is necessary for our salvation that we believe, repent and obey, all we have to do to miss salvation is to not believe, repent and obey. Therefore, all who do not come into the household of God, through the Door opened for them, are still lost, ruined, undone. To this point we come through study of God's Word. What the kind Father may choose to do in the oncoming ages, is not revealed to us, only so far as stated in the revelation he has given in his Word. Your ideas of the love and mercy of God may be good and very gratifying to you, but you have no right to get ideas, except as He gives example and precept. If any one has been favored with a "special revelation," it is something that has passed by us, and we know nothing of it, and will stick to the Word given. Regarding the charge that views of others are attacked, and no chance given for reply, we shall plead guilty at once. So far as attacking something that we know is error we have no more hesitation in "going for" it because it is styled "Josephitism" than if it were styled "immortal soulism," or "sky kingdomism," not a bit. We believe that Jesus Christ is the only begotten Son of God, and do not believe he is the natural son of Joseph. Our able Corresponding Editor has given a few articles on this subject and we do not care to give space to a long discussion of the question. No good can come from such debate. If it be that the "sabbath" question is meant, we can be found on the gospel side of this also. We are living under grace or favor, and not under law. Bro. Joblin is writing a series of articles on this now. When we say something antagonistic to the Catholic purgatory we do not send for the highest prelate of that church to write and defend his position; nor when we speak against the doctrine of immortality of the soul do send for the most eminent bishop of the Methodist church to see what he has to say for it. Likewise in speaking against sabbath law-keeping we do not write to Ellen White to see what the "Prophetess" can say for it. We have on hand an article written by an esteemed Brother, one who has written much and has been looked up to as an able speaker and writer, and in fact is one of the very best and clearest reasoners we have. This article as it ends is an argument in favor of sabbath keeping. We asked the author to give a few lines additional, that his readers might know how he stood, we supposing he had not finished, as it seemed unlikely after all his work as author and preacher that he had gone over to observing law and laid aside the favor and grace. We do not yet know from him how he stands.

Finally, we are opposed to personalities in writing, and wish all our contributers would avoid them. We should not have taken up this resolution by the Nebraska Conference, preferring to let it pass, only that it gave opportunity for us to make a statement that would enable all to know where we stand. Brethren, we are working as best we can. The time for labor is very short. There is no time left us for "hobby riding." As Brother Eychaner said in his letter to the conference, if you have a "hobby" leave it at home,—be ashamed to bring it with you. Do as Jesus did—"preach the gospel of the kingdom of God"—"testify to the gospel of the grace of God." Pray for us, and may God bless you all.

Justification by Faith. No. 3.

Our second article under this head closed with the remark that the doctrine of substitution nullifies the doctrine of justification. This is a fearful acraignment, but we hold it to be absolute truth, and most defensible. If one person pays the debt of another, is not the former debtor free? Is he under any obligation whatever, to his old creditor? Can the creditor exact anything more than his pay, before giving a clear receipt? Common-sense says no! Truth and right say no! And hence, if as the song says, "Jesus paid it all," what claims are there against sinners? Do they not stand before God justified through the kind offices of another? If, then, God has taken pay from Jesus, for all men, he has no claim against them; salvation for all is true. What we mean to say is, that God would not collect one bill twice. But if the debt has been paid, Paul did not speak the truth when he said, "By grace—favor—are ye saved through faith."

If substitution or vicarious suffering be true, there is no favor about it, because God has received all that was due to him. We disproved his dying either spiritually or eternally instead of any one, and said we could prove that he died temporally for no one, either: here is the proof:—Men and women still die the temporal, or natural death that Jesus died—die just as if he had not died. God is just; by this we know that Jesus never died a natural death instead of all men, or any of them, for death would in that case have long since been a thing of the past.

Let our readers think of the moral principle involved in the act of punishing an innocent person instead of a guilty one. Would a holy God and just do that? If just to himself and the defaulter would it be just to the innocent one. If substitution be true, it is founded upon justice, and is universal in its application. But if a believer in substitution should attempt to apply that principle in his own family, we think he would break down, and never again advocate it. Yes; we maintain that if substitution be founded upon justice it would be right for us to practice it, and wrong not to practice it. But did Jesus ever exhibit the Father to us in that light? We mean did the Father ever manifest himself to us thus in his only begotten Son?

But it may be objected here by some one that "it says Christ died for all, and if he did not die instead of all he sees no reason why he should die at all." We readily believe that he sees no reason for his death unless he in some sense died instead of all; but he must excuse us—there may be reasons which he does not see. Candidly, we ask, has not substitution broken down of its own weight already? Let the objector tell us, in the light of our findings thus far, or in the light of present conditions, What man evades, or escapes by substitution? We do not think there would be many advocates of substitution if people would seriously consider this question before committing themselves to it.

We wish to say here that our object in discussing this question is not to afford intellectual pastime,—not because we think no one can be saved without understanding all these deep things of God, but, because, for want of a proper understanding of them they plunge headlong into theories which are subversive of the gospel.

Truly we do read that Christ died for all; and that proves that all were dead. But far in this case, as in many others, does not mean instead of, for reasons already given—men still die. The truth is that he died on their account; died that they might live again, the fact that conditions are imposed upon men—that the benefits accruing from his death depend upon the acceptance of, and obedience to certain requirements is absolute proof that Jesus died instead of no one. To have died instead of all, in the very nature of things, would have given every son and daughter of Adam a passport to glory without conditions.

We said the law only bestowed temporal blessings. Additional proof of this is given in verse 21 where it says, "For if there had been a law given which could have given life, then verily righteousness should have been by the law." Proof positive that the law could not bestow future life,—and proof that it could not give life because no one could become righteous by obedience to it,—no one could be justified by it. That being the case when it was certainly in full force, what folly to teach that no one can be justified without keeping the law now!

The 24th verse says the law was our School Master, or rather pedagogue. For what purpose? To bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. Does the old Schoolmaster exist after the Seed comes? If it does, what is its office now, seeing we have no use for a pedagogue? Happily we have an English word to represent the original word "scolar," which has other meanings besides "Savior." The Diaglott renders it "preserver,"—and the Syriac reads, "The Life-giver of all men, especially of believers." This is sublimely true in itself, whether it be the correct rendering or not. He certainly giveth to all men life and breath and all things, and he is especially the Life-giver of believers by providing a Savior who should bestow upon them everlasting life, while all the wicked he will destroy. What, then, shall we do? Turn to 1 Tim. ii. 3, 4 and see that this writer in the same letter expresses the same idea in different words. He says that God WILLETH all men to be saved. We hold the meaning of this to be, that he has provided means adequate to this end, because, if God absolutely determined to save all men, he would do so. But his own word for it, they will not all be saved, though it is his wish that they might be saved by the means devised to that end. But this oft quoted verse itself shows there are conditions in his will to save all men. He wills or desires them to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth. The truth is the saving power of God. The sense is evident therefore. He desires that all men be saved by faith in and obedience to the truth. The first verse of the epistle to Titus shows that Christ gave himself for those who have the faith of God's elect and acknowledge the truth which is after godliness.

In our next we will show if the Lord will, by the words of Jesus himself, who he gave his life for.

Our last article closed with the assertion that the blessings bestowed upon those who were obedient to the law when it was in force, pertained to this life, they lived long, had bountiful crops, and divine protection, etc. The proofs of this are abundant: but we can only afford space for a few. In Gal. iii. 17 Paul says the law which was 430 years after the covenant of promise was confirmed to Abraham, did not disannul the promise, and make it of none effect. The promise stood as if there were no law, for verses 13 and 14 show Christ was made a curse for us that the blessing of Abraham might come upon the Gentiles,—proof enough that the promise of the blessing had not been disannulled by the introduction of the law,—proof enough that faith in the promise was still the divine means of justification to be employed by man.

In order to have an opportunity to answer, he asks, "Wherefore then serveth the law?" As if to say what was the law given for if the promise was in full force? Here is his answer: "It was added because of transgressions." Believers still believed because the law had not disannulled the promise; they were still justified by faith, but the law had been added to control those who had no faith—to control a mass of sinners and keep them separate from the Gentiles so God's purpose could be carried out. It [the law] was added till the seed should come to whom the promise was made." That seed was Christ, (v. 16.) The purpose for which the law was added having been served, the law had to go.

We have proved that the law only bestowed temporal blessings. Additional proof of this is given in verse 21 where it says, "For if there had been a law given which could have given life, then verily righteousness should have been by the law." Proof positive that the law could not bestow future life,—and proof that it could not give life because no one could become righteous by obedience to it,—no one could be justified by it. That being the case when it was certainly in full force, what folly to teach that no one can be justified without keeping the law now!

The 24th verse says the law was our School Master, or rather pedagogue. For what purpose? To bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. Does the old Schoolmaster exist after the Seed comes? If it does, what is its office now, seeing we have no use for a pedagogue? Happily we have the answer in the words of the Holy Spirit:—"But after that faith is come we are no longer under a schoolmaster;" no longer under the law.

We sincerely pity those who persist in placing themselves under that old Schoolmaster, when the next verse says of the Church at Galatia, "For ye are all—every one of you—the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ." The law has nothing to do with it, because the next verse says, "As many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ; and" and what? "heirs according to law?" oh, no. What then? "according to promise." We have the answer to this in the 18th verse, "For if the inheritance be of the law it is no more of promise." Now, beloved Paul, will you settle it forever, if you please? To be sure he will: and this is the way he does it,—"But God gave it to Abraham by promise."

As the law strictly obeyed could neither justify nor give life, nor bestow the inheritance, is it not the very acme of folly and madness to trust in it for those blessings 2000 years after it has passed away?

If people try to mix faith and law together the Spirit heads them off directly by saying "If they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect." How so, Paul? "Because the law worketh wrath; for where no law is, there is no transgression; therefore it is of faith, that it might be by Grace,"—favor. So sure as Paul here speaks the words of the Spirit, so sure is it that no one can earn an heirship by obedience to law. If that were possible, then God would owe it to them, and they could demand it of him as their right, and there would be no grace or favor about it.

Turning to the 7th chapter of the book which says, "The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation," we find him saying, "know ye not brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth. For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So, then, if while her husband liveth she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress; but if her husband be dead she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man." What did the apostle write this for? Shall we guess at it? No; we ought to be out of the guessing business,—besides, we have the lesson pointed out to us in the next verse. He says, "Wherefore my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the Body of Christ?" For what reason? "That ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. For when we were in the flesh the motions of sin which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. But now we are delivered from the law, that (law) being dead wherein we were held, that we should serve in the newness of Spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter."

In the above quotation we have infallible testimony, that if, after being married to Christ we cling to the law we commit spiritual adultery, and commit the monstrous folly of expecting fruitfulness from A DEAD HUSBAND, after marriage to a living one, even to him who has been raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. What gloriously simple truth this is! How can the honest mind fail to see the Truth of God stand out here? If we are married to the law Christ is not our husband. If Christ—the living Christ be our husband, the law, the dead law is nothing to us.

In the 18th chapter of Acts we find the only standard of justification in this age. Says Paul, "Be it known unto you therefore men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins;" that includes all unpardonable sins. It continues, "And by him all that believe are justified from all things which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." This is testimony of the most positive character, and undoubted authority, and the wonder is that men can be found to controvert it, or scheme to get around it, but such there are, and we expect to overhaul their objections in our next numbe. In the mean time we trust what has been written may receive earnest and prayerful attention. We are striving to get down to foundation Truths.

A Noble Youth.

How many young men, just budding into manhood, have taken the first fatal cup! And not stopping at the first, as they may have thought of doing, they have taken a second soon after the first, and so on, until their ruin was complete.

There was once a young man who was clerking in a large dry-goods store where many other men were employed. Some of the latter urged the new-comer to accept a social glass, but he refused. The young men laughed at him, calling him a "baby," and also said that "one glass would not hurt him."

"Ah, no," he replied, "if I should take one glass, I could easily be persuaded to take another. My mother taught me to shun the fatal cup. And when I was a little child, she taught me this verse, among many others, 'Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.'" The lads laughed and sneered at him, but it was useless to try to remove his scruples.

"My father," the brave boy continued, "went the downward path, and at last filled a drunkard's grave. I do not intend to follow in his footsteps."

If other young men would only stand ground firmly for the right, doing nobly as this one did, there would be a great many less drunkard's graves and a great many more happy hearts and homes.—Young People's Paper.

An Infidel Silenced.

A noted infidel was traveling in a car in which a minister was seated. He at once commenced an argument with the clergyman in a loud tone, so as to be heard by other passengers. Among the latter was a blind man who listened attentively. Turning suddenly to him in a pause in the argument, the infidel said:—

"Do you, sir, believe in a God, who has made this beautiful earth, and the Sun to shine upon it, and who has adorned the heavens with myriads of stars, and yet, without any offence on your part, has deprived you forever of the power of beholding them?"

"I am surprised, my dear sir," replied the man, "that you should ask me such a question. I do believe in the existence of God as firmly as I do in my own, and I could doubt the one as easily as the other. There is, however, one thing that strikes me as being very peculiar in what you have said. When you reason of God you do not seem to be governed by the same principles as when reasoning about men and the common affairs of everyday life."

"Suppose, on reaching your home and on entering your room, you find a lighted lamp upon the table—what will be your conclusion?"

"Why," answered the infidel, with a sneer, "I shall conclude that some one placed it there."

"Well, then, when you look into the heavens and see those innumerable lights of which you have spoken, why do you not come to the same conclusion, that some intelligent being placed them there."

The skeptic declined to talk any more on the subject, but it was evident to all the passengers that he felt thoroughly humbled and uncomfortable.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

Poetry.

To-day is this All?

"And is this all that I can say to-day—
This little while to-day—the sun doth shine?

Yes, all—my yesterday went by last night,
And left regret for wrong, remorse for slight.

To-morrow for me lieth yet in doubt,
I may behold it, from the mist emerge and

Live like the to be's hours of my to-day,
While busy self-interest I may pass by.

Now, since I own no other lay nor this,
Let me not here our golden moments waste.

That will secure from heaven a gracious look
And keep my record clean in life's fair book.

What is it to Confess Christ?

"What if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Rom. x. 9, 10.

The word confess has a similar meaning to profess or acknowledge, and these words are used sometimes as synonyms. To confess is to assent to, profess, publicly own, admit, avow, or acknowledge a fact or truth. And in order to intelligently confess, or acknowledge Christ, he must be known, as revealed in the Bible. No one can properly understand or comprehend a proposition, a thing, or person, unless first correctly informed with reference thereto. So with respect to Christ. This is a word of frequent occurrence in the New Testament, and relates to a person, called in our text "the Lord Jesus." The word Christ is more of an official title than the name of a person, although the title is sometimes used to designate the person. The word is derived from the Greek word Christos, and in our common and revised versions of the New Testament, it is transferred instead of being translated, with the terminal os cut off. Christos means in English an anointed one. If the reader will turn to John i. 41, and iv. 25, he will find the Hebrew word Messias, meaning Christos in Greek, and Anointed in English. This word Messiah also found in Dan. ix. 25 is the only place where the word is not translated in the Old Testament. Priests and kings were anointed with the holy oil, by order of Jehovah, under the law. See Exod. xxx. 30; 1 Sam. x. 1; xii. 5; xv. 1; xvi. 1-13; 1 Kings i. 39; xix. 15, 16. These priests, prophets, and kings were then the Lord's anointed ones.

Jesus of Nazareth was anointed with the Holy Spirit and power, (Acts x. 38,) and united in himself the three offices of prophet, priest, and king. God, his Father, anointed him when John baptized him in the river Jordan, and with a voice from heaven, acknowledged him as his Son. Jesus was then qualified for his great work of saving men—first, as a prophet to instruct them by speaking the words of God, and confirming that message, and proving himself as God's Son, by the works he did; secondly, as a priest, offering himself as a ransom for those who believe; and lastly, as the King and Judge of Israel and the nations. After his anointing and temptation he returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee, and coming to Nazareth, where he had been brought up, he went into the synagogue, on the sabbath day, and as he stood up to read, the book of the prophet Isaiah was given him. He read where it is written, (lxi. 1, 2,) "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor," etc. Luke iv. 16-22. This anointing made Jesus the anointed one, or Jesus the Christ. Hence the name of Jesus is very frequently associated with his official title—Christ. Sometimes it is written by the sacred writers as Jesus Christ, Christ Jesus, Lord Jesus Christ, Lord Jesus, etc., but in every place the word Christ means anointed.

No one can confess Christ properly without understanding that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God. Gabriel announced to Mary, his mother,—his name; that "that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Luke i. 31-35. He was begotten by the power of the Highest, and born of Mary; made or "born of a woman," Gal. iii, 4. Hence he is called the only-begotten Son of God, John i. 14, 18; iii. 16, 18; 1 John iv. 9. Jesus had no existence before his begettal and birth as recorded by the evangelists Matthew and Luke; nor was he the Christ before the anointing, or publicly acknowledged as the Son of God, until his Father made him known. Matt. iii. 17. As to the sectarian tradition of his pre-existence as the second person in the trinity, or as an eternal Son, by whom all things were made, and of his descent from a higher spiritual to a lower animal nature, by a mysterious incarnation, the Scriptures of truth are silent. In confessing Christ, as God's Son, no one is required to believe such unreasonable dogmas. In proof of this I refer the reader to the divine record. Jesus once asked his disciples as to what men said of him, as to who he was. They said that some thought him to be John the Baptist, some Elijah, some Jeremiah, or one of the prophets. Then he asked, "But whom say ye that I am?" Simon Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus said that this was a revealed truth from the Father to him, and did not come from men. Matt. xvi. 13-17. Peter had his attention first called to Jesus the Messiah, by his brother Andrew, one of John's disciples; "and he brought him to Jesus." John i. 35-42. Peter was one of those who were "taught of God" by the prophets. See John vi. 44, 45. So when Peter became acquainted with Jesus, and saw his works, he recognized him to be the one "of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write." At another time, when some disciples were offended at his teachings, and left him, Jesus said unto the twelve, "Will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God." John vi. 66-69. Peter spoke for all the twelve. And in connection with this confession is the obtaining of eternal life.

In John ix. we have the wonderful case of Jesus giving sight to a man born blind. After much investigation by the Pharisees, who could not deny the miracle wrought, they came to the conclusion that Jesus was a sinner, because he made clay, and opened the man's eyes on the sabbath day; and because the man contended that "God heareth not sinners; but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth," etc., they cast him out of the synagogue. They had already agreed that if any should confess that Jesus was the Christ, they should be excommunicated. It will be noticed that this man had not yet seen Jesus, but no doubt apprehended who it was that had opened his eyes; he having not seen, yet believed. When Jesus heard that they had cast him out, he found him, and asked, "Dost thou believe on the Son of God?" And when he asked, and was informed who he was, "he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him."

There were many Jews who believed on Jesus in secret, but were afraid to confess him openly. John vii. 13. "Among the chief rulers many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him; lest they should be put out of the synagogue; for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God," John xii. 42, 43. Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, who came to interview Jesus by night, seems to have been one of those secret believers, who lacked the moral courage to confess him as the Christ; for when he spoke a word in his favor, the Pharisees easily silenced him by asking, "Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look; for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet," John vii. 2; vii. 50, 52. Nicodemus, however, showed his sympathy for Jesus, by bringing one hundred pounds of spices—a mixture of myrrh and aloes—to use in the burial of Jesus. Another disciple, (but secretly for fear of the Jews,) named Joseph, of Arithmathea, obtained the body of Jesus, and [illegible] Nicodemus wrapped the body in fine linen with the spices, and laid it in Joseph's own new tomb, which he had hewn out of the rock. John xix. 38-42. We have no further account of these two secret friends of Jesus, but it is to be hoped that afterwards they openly confessed the Lord Jesus, and believed that God raised him from the dead, so that they might be saved. See the confession of Nathaniel in John i. 47-51; also of Martha in John xi. 24-27.

There is much more comprehended in confessing Christ than many persons think. A Scriptural confession is not what some call bearing testimony for Jesus, by standing up in meeting to say, "I love Jesus," or "I am a Christian," or "I know that Jesus has saved me," etc. We may learn what it was to confess Christ in the apostles' days, and what it cost the disciples, by reading the Acts of Apostles, and the letters of the apostles to the various congregations. The text at the head of this article, properly understood, will show what it is to confess Christ. Yet some persons by separating it from the context pervert and fail to discover its meaning. Before we can confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus, and believe in the heart that God raised him from the dead, we must know something about him; for "faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Paul says; "How shall they believe in him, of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things." The apostles were the chosen and sent ones to preach this gospel of peace. Paul was one of them. He said, "necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel;" and "I am not ashamed of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. i. 16; 1 Cor. ix. 16. And in the verse immediately preceding our text, he says, "The Word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart; that is, the word of faith which we preach." This word of the faith, or the gospel, being in the mouth and the heart of the believer, then if he confess the Lord Jesus and believe that God raised him from the dead, he shall be saved. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." The gospel preached by the apostles is called by Peter, "the incorruptible seed," and "The Word of the Lord," 1 Pet. i. 23-25; by James, "the word of truth," and the engrafted word," James i. 18, 21; by Jude, "the common salvation," and "the faith which was once delivered to the saints," Jude 3; by Paul, "the unsearchable riches of Christ," and "the kingdom of God, and those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ," Acts xxviii. 31; Eph. iii. 18. This gospel is the seed which Jesus sowed in the hearts of men, called by him "the word of the kingdom," and "this gospel of the kingdom." Matt. xiii. 19; xxiv. 14. "The word of the faith" preached by the apostles included "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Anointed." Acts viii. 12; xxviii. 31. This good news had been hid from former generations, but was made known to all nations, by the commandment of the everlasting God, for the obedience of faith," Rom. xvi. 25, 26. The apostle offered this salvation first to the Jewish nation; and when they rejected it, judging themselves unworthy of everlasting life, they then turned to the Gentiles. Acts xiii. 46. Paul was especially sent by the Lord Jesus to preach the gospel to the Gentiles, to make them obedient by word and deed. Rom. xv. 18-19; Gal. i. 11, 12. The obedience required of those who believe the gospel is, "Repent, and be immersed in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins," Acts ii. 38; this was the way to become "obedient to the faith," and "to obey from the heart that form of doctrine" preached, and "to purify themselves by obeying the truth." Acts vi. 7; Rom. vi. 17; 1 Pet. i. 22. This law of the faith, or baptism, was given by the risen Jesus to the apostles, and they as [illegible] obliged to preach and [illegible] command of their Lord [illegible] the believers were [illegible] obedience; even those [illegible] baptized in Holy Spirit [illegible] the house of Cornelius P[illegible] commanded to be baptized in [illegible] the name of the Lord. A[illegible]. 47, 48. Thus is the way C[illegible] was confessed in those days. [illegible] members of the body or congregation of Christ, without exception, had to put him on by baptism. Gal. iii. 26, 27; Rom. vi. 3, 4; Eph. iv. 5; v. 25-32.

In primitive times it was a very serious thing to confess Christ. It often involved the loss of relatives, friends, property, and even life itself. Paul said he suffered the loss of all things for Christ's sake, Phil. iii. 7, 8; and to Timothy, after mentioning the various persecutions he passed through, he said, "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Tim. iii. 10-12. Jesus told his disciples that they should be persecuted;—"Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake;" and "the servant is not greater than his master: if they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you;" "in the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world," Matt. x. 22; John xv. 20; xvi. 33. Again he said, "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Mark viii. 34, and whosoever shall confess me before men, him will I confess before my Father who is in heaven. But whosoever will deny me before men, him will I deny before my Father who is in heaven," Matt. x. 32, 33. Truly the words of Jesus were fulfilled in the trials endured by the apostles and the early church, in thus denying self, taking up the cross, and acknowledging or confessing his name before men. Bitter persecution, suffering, and even death itself were the result. The history given in the book of Acts verifies what Jesus said—"They will deliver you up to councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues; and ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake;" Matt. x. 17, 18; "they will put you out of their synagogues; yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service," John xvi. 2.

In the Acts of Apostles we find Peter and John put in prison, on account of healing a lame man in the name of Jesus, and preaching the gospel. Acts iv. 2, 3; but their persecutors fearing the people let them go the following day. Then because of the great success of the Word, and the many signs and wonders among the people by the apostles, Acts v. 12-16, the high-priest and the Sadducees were filled with indignation, and laid hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison. But the angel of the Lord delivered them that night, and said, "Go, stand and speak in the temple, the words of this life," verse 20. They did so; and then they are re-arrested and brought before the council, and examined; but on the plea of Gamaliel, are discharged after being scourged, and commanded not to speak in the name of Jesus. They rejoiced, however, that "they were counted worthy to suffer for his name," and continued their work, verses 40-42. Chapters vi. vii. records the arrest of Stephen, his defence, and death. Chap. viii. 1, the persecution and scattering of the Jerusalem church. Chap. ix. gives the account of the conversion of Saul of Tarsus, while on his way to persecute the disciples at Damascus, and also of his own persecutions. In chap. xii. we read of the apostle James, John's brother, being killed by king Herod, and of Peter's imprisonment, and his deliverance by an angel. Chap. xiv. 19, 20, gives an account of the stoning of Paul; and chap. xvi. of Paul and Silas being scourged, thrust into the inner prison, and their feet fastened in the stocks. But they were miraculously delivered. Also at Thessalonica Paul and Silas were in trouble, chap. xvii. 5-10; at Corinth, Paul was summoned before Gallio, by the Jews, but he refused to hear the case, and drove them from the tribunal, chap. xviii. 12-17. The balance of the book is mainly occupied with the history of Paul, and his trials, and ends with him being a prisoner at Rome. For a recital of Paul's sufferings for Christ and his gospel, read 2 Cor. xi. 23-28.

[illegible] [illegible] followed the first preachers of the Word, and those who believed it, and confessed the name of Christ, that is true "that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God," Acts xiv. 22. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him," 2 Tim. ii. 12. There can be a repetition of these days of persecution before the end come. See Dan. xi. 1, 35; xii. 9, 10; Rev. xi. 3, 7; xiii. 5-10, 15; xiv. 9-13; xv. 2-4; xx. 4. Should we be called upon to pass through the fiery tribulation, may we study to [illegible] and be found [illegible] in the day of the Lord Jesus. We cannot [illegible] the glory of the kingdom [illegible] to believe, receive and obey the gospel, and that he will [illegible] the Lord Jesus from heaven with the reward of salvation through his name. The apostle John wrote his gospel that "we might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing we might have life through his name." John xx. 30, 31. "Nevertheless," says the salvation is not only for Peter's name or any other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv. 12. Reader, do you believe "the word of faith," or the gospel, which the apostles preached and are yet ready to [illegible] the Lord Jesus whom God raised from the dead, that you may be [illegible]? If so, then like Paul, you are called on the name of the Lord to [illegible] and wash away your sins, and be saved. Acts xxii. 16; Rom. x. 13. Then by continuing steadfast in the faith, and being faithful unto death, you will secure the crown of life and righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give to all who love his appearing. Rev. ii. 10; 2 Tim. iv. 8. Hear who the glorified Jesus sent the overcomers in the church at Sardis—"To him who overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels." Rev. iii. 5.

Conference Report.

The Churches of God, in Neb. met at Cambridge, Sept. 11, 1891, according to notice.

The meetings opened on Friday evening by a discourse by Brother Adams, in his usual forcible manner, on "The Gospel."

A larger audience was present than was expected. The interest and attendance increased each day, and on Sunday afternoon of the last day 600 people were on the grounds. The seating capacity of the large tent was not sufficient to hold the immense crowd on several occasions.

The principal subjects discussed were, the gospel, kingdom of God, Christ's nature and character, baptism, etc.

A larger number were present from abroad than at any other meeting ever held here. Among the number were, Brother and Sister Carr of Iowa, Gustafson, John and Geo. Mehrens of Blair, Bro. J. P. Glenn of Kan. and nine zealous workers for Christ came with teams from St. Paul, a distance of 150 miles.

Ministers present were A. J. Eychaner, Atmos Adams, T. G. Bartlett, W. L. Carver and J. P. Glenn.

Bro. Glenn of Kan. and Bros. Bartlett and Crowe of St. Paul were ordained to preach the Word. Brother Carver is a young man who started in the work a little over one year ago, and his discourses delivered on Tuesday was a surprise to all. It would do credit to many who have had years of experience in preaching and dividing the Word of Truth.

In view of the [illegible] and hard times it was thought by some that little could be done for the coming year, but when the time came the manner in which the brethren responded with cash and pledges with which to forward the work was indeed pleasing to witness. Yes, the work is going ahead in Nebraska. After all expenses are paid we have $23.55 in the treasury. The Lord is working with his people and although a few still need help before another report is read, the brethren are wide awake to the Master's cause and are willing to sacrifice part of the time for several days. At the first session on Wednesday, the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. After verbal reports from delegates of the different churches, as to Bible reading, social meetings, Sunday schools, work, etc., the evangelist submitted the following:

Received during the year, $619.[illegible]. Expenses, $80.00. Less expenses, $[illegible]. Churches organized, 7. Number baptized, 107. Number discouraged, 250.

Amount evangelist report: Received, $[illegible]. Expenses, $82.[illegible]. Days engaged, [illegible]. Baptized, [illegible].

Resolved, That the amount received during the year to be used during the year to be used in evangelical work, $[illegible]. Expenses, $[illegible].

Number of churches organized, 9. Discouraged, 150. Baptized, 307. Total amount received including evangelist, $563.94.

On motion the churches at Fair Haven and Center on the north side of Lemon were attached to the Nebraska State Conference.

The following officers resulted as follows:

M. M. Noyes, Pres. A. J. Cole, Secretary, and A. F. Harlan, Treasurer.

On motion of Bro Harlan, Bros. Adams and Prime were re-elected evangelists for the coming year.

The following committee was appointed on resolutions, Wm. Stevens, W. L. Crowe, and John Mehrens.

We the committee on resolutions, beg leave to submit the following:

Resolved, That the action of [illegible] in standing out against the Nebraska State Conference is wholly unwarranted, and an act that we can not approve of. We hereby express our sincere regret that there any discension in our ranks.

Resolved, That the Nebraska State Conference hereby express their regrets that THE RESTITUTION has published a series of articles that carry a spirit which were [illegible] as productive of division and confusion in the Body of Christ. We further regret that articles are published which attack the views of others without giving opportunity to reply.

On motion the following committee was appointed to receive and distribute funds from eastern brethren to those actually in need by reason of loss of crops by drouth. W. A. Moore, Chairman, Bartley. O. W. Misner, Sec'y, Arapahoe, and R. P. Story, Trens. Holdrege.

A letter of greeting was read from Bro. L. C. Watkins, of Campbell, formerly of Gordon, Neb.

The business of the "Church of God Tract Association," was transacted at this time and the following report was made:

Amount received, $61.55. Paid for tracts, $7.40. Balance in treasury, $54.15. There were through the year nearly [illegible] tracts bought and distributed. Officers elected for the year were: John Mehrens, Blair, Nebraska; Geo. Mehrens, Blair, Neb. Jas. Prime, Beaver City, Neb.

Baptism was administered to three candidates—Sister [illegible] Wisner, Coal Gap, Brother W. B. Wolf, Lincoln, Sister Rena Gordon of St. Paul. The latter not being satisfied with her former baptism was again immersed.

This meeting afforded opportunity to form new acquaintances. It united hearts in love toward each other, and was in many ways productive of great good, and will long be remembered.

Now Brothers and Sisters, let us endeavor to carry out in our lives each day the many good things we have learned and show to the world that we have left all for Christ. Let each one strive to push forward the work and preserve intact the system now in vogue in our state, that much good may be done in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The next quarterly conference will be held at Oxford, due notice will appear in RESTITUTION.

Submitted in Love.

J. J. Cary, Sec.

Sow seed. Send THE RESTITUTION to some one who is a stranger to God's truths, and perhaps from this may grow a desire on their part to accept them.

Ark, Sunday of the [illegible]

Plymouth, Ind. held [illegible] was unanimously voted, that the church extend an invitation to the ministers to meet at this place the fore part of the week preceding our annual meeting which is held over the third Sunday in November. Such invitation is hereby extended to the ministers, should it be decided to hold the meeting proposed by Bro. L. E. Conner.

Signed,

A. R. Underwood,
Clerk Plymouth Church.

Editor Restitution:

A Ministerial Association as proposed by Bro. L. E. Conner, would do much good. I would love to attend, but alas, I have not the means, but hope others can do so. Oh, how we need stirring up. It seems that some of us are asleep just at the breaking of the long looked for day. In some portions of Arkansas there is good work being done. Last Sunday I went with Bro. Mancrief to Bear, to hear a Baptist preach after which Bro. M. defended himself in bold, yet fair terms, he having previously been assailed through the Mt. Ida Herald, as still preaching his doleful creed that man had no immortal soul. There were three Baptist preachers present who preach that popular doctrine, and one of them asked him to meet him at his next appointment, and he would reply to his discourse, which was agreed to. I hear that Bro. M. left an appointment for the 5th Sunday, at Bear, to show what the kingdom of God is, and what is required of us in order to inherit it.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

R. A. Hoggard.

Editor Restitution:

I just noticed Bro. Conner's call for a Ministerial Meeting, and I must say I am in hearty sympathy with it. The only exception I could take would be his basis of decision which would give it to the state having the most ministers. We have lost everything here this year, so none of us could go very far to attend, therefore would be shut off should it go very far east. We offer to give the brethren a hearty welcome and pleaty to eat and entertain them every way satisfactory if they will come to Arapahoe, Neb. We can secure you half fare from Omaha here, and from Chicago for that matter over the C. B. & Q. We would be glad to have the brethren see and become acquainted with us western people, and note our field of labor. I think you would be well paid. Brethren consider us at least, and if you can't come here dont put it farther off than Iowa.

Your brother, in hope.

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 13.

1. Now there were in Antiocheia throughout the existing church prophets and teachers, for instance Barnabas and Sumeon the one called Niger, and Lukios the Kurenaian and Manaen the one brought up along with Herodes the tetrarch and Saulos.

2. And as they were publicly serving the Lord and fasting, the Sanctified Spirit said, Separate for me Barnabas and Saulos unto the work for which I have called them.

3. Then when they had fasted and offered votive-prayer and laid their hands upon them they let them go.

4. And they sent by the Sanctified Spirit went down into Seleukeia, and from there they sailed away to Kupros.

5. And arriving in Salamis they published the word of God in the synagogues of the Joudaians. And they had Joannes also as a subordinate.

6. And passing through all the island as far as Paphos, they found a certain man of prominence a magus, a false-prophet, a Joudaian, whose name was Bariesous.

7. And he was associated with the Anthypatos Sergius Paulus a man of understanding. This man (Sergius Paulus) invited Barnabas and Saulos and asked to hear the Word of God.

8. And Elumas the magos withstood them. For in this wise is his name interpreted, seeking to divert the anthypatos from the faith.

9. And Saulos, he who is also Paulos, being filled with Sanctified Spirit, steadfastly regarded them.

10. And said, O thou full of all deception and all facility, thou son of a diabolos, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease perverting the upright ways of the Lord?

11. Lo, now the Lord's hand is upon thee and thou wilt be blind not seeing the sun until an appointed time: and straightway there fell upon him mist and darkness and he went about seeking hand-leaders.

12. Then the anthypatos when he saw what had occurred experienced faith, astounded at the teaching of the Lord.

13. And those about Paulos leading up from Paphos went to Perge of Pamphulia. And Joannes withdrawing from them went back to Heirousalem.

14. They however going on through from Perge arrived in Antiocheia of Pisidia, and entering into the synagogue on the day of the sabbatic rites they sat down.

15. And after the reading of the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them saying, Men, brethren, if there is any word of exhortation in you for the laity (royal-people) say it.

16. And Paulos arose and making a gesture betokening silence, said, Men, Israelites, and ye who fear God, may ye have hearkened.

17. The God of this laity chose out our fathers, and exalted the laity in their sojourn in a land of Egypt (Aiguptos) and with an uplifted arm led them out of it.

18. And when he had supported them for a time of forty years in the wilderness and cast down seven nations in a land of Chanaan he gave them to inherit their land for about four hundred and fifty years;

19. And after that gave them judges until Samouel a prophet.

20. And thereafter they preferred a king and God gave them Saulos son of Kais, a man of Benjamin's tribe for forty years;

21. And when he had removed him he raised up Dareid for a king for them, to whom he testified and said, I have found Dareid the (son) of Jessai a man after my heart, and he will do (authorize) all my purposes.

22. Of him from the seed according to promise God led for Israel a saviour, Jesous namely.

23. Joannes having pre-heralded before the face of his in-coming a baptism of repentance unto all the laity of Israel.

24. And when Joannes was fulfilling his course he said, What do you suppose me to be? I am not he; but lo, there cometh after me, one the latchet of the sandal of whose feet I am not worthy to loose.

25. Men, brethren, sons of Abraam race and ye among you who fear God, unto you hath the word of this salvation (salvation in the abstract) been sent.

26. The dwellers in Hierousalem though and their rulers not knowing him and the voices of the prophets which were being read every sabbatic period judged and fulfilled.

27. And finding no cause of death they asked Pilatos to have him removed.

28. And when they had consummated all the things that had been written concerning him, taking him down from the tree they placed him in a memorial tomb.

29. But God awakened him from among the dead.

30. And he appeared for more days unto those who had gone up from Galilaia with him to Hierousalem, and who are now his witnesses to the laity.

31. And we are announcing unto you the good tidings of the promise that occurred unto the fathers, that God hath fulfilled this to your children in having raised up Jesous.

32. Even as also it hath been written in the second psalm, My son art thou, I to-day have begotten thee.

33. And because he raised him up from the dead never more to return to corruption, he oracularly said in this wise, I will give unto you the holy, the reliable things of Dareid.

34. Wherefore also in another (place) he saith, Thou wilt not allow thy holy one to see corruption.

35. Dareid though when he had served (as a rower on a bench of oars) his generation in the counsel of God lay down to sleep (lit. was laid down to sleep) and added to his fathers and did see (or know) corruption.

36. Be it known to you then, men, brethren, that through this (person) remission of sins is being announced unto you:

37. That in this person every one who experimenteth faith is being justified from all those things from which ye were unable to be justified in the law of Mouses.

38. See to it then that what hath been oracularly said in the prophets come not upon you.

39. Perceive ye despisers, and wonder and vanish away; because I am working a work in your days, a work that ye will not put faith in if one should discourse it to you.

40. And as they were going out they were exhorting to the effect that these oracular words might be talked to them during the intervening sabbatic period.

41. And when the synagogue had been dismissed many of the Joudaians and reverent proselytes followed Paulos and Barnabas, and they talking to them persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

42. And on the next sabbatic occasion nearly the whole city were gathered together to hear the Word of God.

43. But the Joudaians when they saw the crowds were filled with envy and spake against the things that had been said by Paulos, blaspheming.

44. And Paulos and Barnabas speaking boldly said, Unto you first was it necessary to talk the Word of God. Since ye reject it, and do not judge yourselves worthy of the eternal life, lo, we are turning away unto the nations.

45. For in this wise hath the Lord enjoined upon us, namely I have set thee for a light of nations that thou shouldst be for salvation (word used as an abstract) unto the end of the earth.

46. And the nations that hear have been rejoicing and glorifying the Word of the Lord, and as many as have been appointed unto eternal life have experienced faith.

47. And the Word of the Lord was being borne through the whole country.

48. But the Joudaians stirred up the reverent women of refinement and the first men of the city, and awakened a persecution against Paulos and Barnabas and cast them out of their boundaries.

49. And they shaking off the fine dust from their feet against them went to Ikonion.

50. And the disciples were filled with joy and Sanctified Spirit.

COMMENT.

"Manaen" "one who indeed hath been'b."

"Niger" dark colored.

"Seleukeia" "a well-lighted place."

"Salamis" "a road-stead or a place where the vessels move with the waves."

"Paphos" (probably) "a foaming" or "bubbling."

"Bariesous" "son of Jesous."

"Elumas" "wise" or "learned" with the additional idea of a covert or concealed character.

"Perge" "surrounding land."

"Pamphulia" "an every-tribe-place" or a place populated by mingled tribes.

"Pisidia" "their own meadows."

"Chenaan" "a place completely swallowed up by an abyss"- probably a name embodying in tradition the judgment on the Pentapolis or commonly known as "Sodom and Gommorra."

"Keis" "a sleeper?"

"Beniamin" "a son to heal you." The father's word of comfort and assurance to the despairing and dying Rachel, who had called the child "son of my woe."

"Dareid" "taught to know."

"Ikonion" "little Ikos."

"Magos" does not mean "sorcerer" R. V. This is a relic of superstition which once called all science magic and sorcery.

"Facility" instead of "villainy" R. V.

"Son of a diabolos" instead of "son of the devil" R. V.

"Laity" or "royal-people" all along here instead of "people" R. V.

"Keis" instead of "kish" R. V.

"Purposes" instead of "will" R. V.

"Of him from the seed according to promise" instead of "from this man's seed according to promise" R. V.—a very different thought you will perceive.

"Jessai" "Thy goings."

"Unto you" instead of "unto us" R. V.

"Every sabbatic period" instead of "every sabbath" R. V. in the sense of the regular Jewish Saturday or seventh day.

"Judged and fulfilled" instead of "fulfilled them by condemning him" R. V.

"Removed" instead of "slain" R. V.

"But God awakened him from among the dead" instead of "but God raised him from the dead" R. V.

"And because etc." instead of "and as concerning etc." R. V.

"Was laid down to sleep" instead of "fell on sleep" R. V. A very peculiar piece of imagry this would be.

"In this person" instead of "by him" R. V.

"In the law of Mouses" instead of "By the law of Mouses" R. V. Notice the importance of this, as it gives us some idea of the result of the great judgment.

"During the intervening sabbatic period" instead of "the next sabbath" R. V.

The 48th verse I consider a part of Paul's address here.

"Of refinement" or "good manners" instead "of honorable estate" R. V.

It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notice," published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 17, 1894. NO. 30.

Poetry.

Is God a Myth?

"Is God a myth?"
I asked the flowers, the lily on the stem,
Your earth-born answer to me, "No!
My God, thy God, is not a myth."

"Is God a myth?"
I asked the mountains and the valleys;
They answered, high and low,
Each cried in indignation, "No!
My God, thy God, is not a myth."

Has still the world
Infidel scoffers hurled,
And vain philosophy has proven to the world,
All Christ's words false,
Now, while I sit despondent,
I thank my God I know He's real;
My God, thy God, is not a myth.

Did God Desire Disobedience?

W. H. Wilson:

Will you kindly and thoroughly answer the following question, viz., "Does the Bible teach that God designed the fall of man before he had created him?" And greatly oblige your sincere friend.

J. C. JONES.

To the above question I should answer most decidedly, No. It is entirely out of harmony with the character of God to command obedience, and design disobedience. The following is his first command to man: to which the death penalty is attached in case he was disobedient: "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Can we for a moment suppose that the great Creator of whom it is said; "Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne; mercy and truth shall go before thy face," could actually practice duplicity with innocent and unsuspecting man whom he had created? "Doth God pervert judgment? doth the Almighty pervert justice?" No, never! Yet, such would be the case, should he command obedience under penalty of death, and at the same time design disobedience: and then execute the death penalty on him, for doing that which he designed h. should do before he made him. Such a thing is not supposable of him of whom it is said: "just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

God did not make man a mere machine capable of only doing that for which a mere machine was designed. He was made a freewill agent, with full power to make a choice, and obey or disobey just exactly as he wills. This is illustrated in his dealings with Israel, he says: "See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil; In that I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply; and the Lord thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it. But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods and serve them; I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land, whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it. I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both you and thy seed may live." Could a just, merciful, and loving God set before Israel "life and death, blessing and cursing," and at the same time take from them the power of choice? Would there be any more justice in God commanding Adam to obey under penalty of death, and yet have designed that he should disobey before he made him? Most assuredly not. God has set before every one the power of choice from Adam down, and we also know that to choose to obey, is to choose good; and on the contrary, the choice of disobedience is a voluntary choice of evil.

We must ever draw a sharp distinction between foreknowledge and foreordination, they are not the same thing at all. To say that God foreknew Adam would fall, is not the same as saying he designed he should fall. He made him with the power of obedience or disobedience, and in that he commanded obedience, it is a clear evidence that he desired obedience; and if he desired obedience, he did not design that he should disobey and thus fall. It would be too inconsistent to say he commanded obedience and desired and designed disobedience. Well, says one, if God desired obedience he could have made him so that he would obey. Very true, then he would have amounted to nothing more than a senseless machine, and there would have been no merit in his obedience.

"And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness." I apprehend that the words: "after our likeness," means something more than the phrase: "in our image," if not, it would be a useless repetition of the same thought, and Holy Writ is not built that way. The words: "in our image," may relate to personal form, and "after our likeness," to similar or like characteristics, or powers, as for instance the power of choice. Had he not been created with the power of choice, he would not have been made "after" the "likeness," of his creators, though he may have been "in" their "image." His appeal to us all is: "My son, give me thine heart." This implies the power to either give or withhold, a power which has descended to us from our federal head.

The fall can never defeat the design and purpose of God to people this earth with a race of obedient sons and daughters, who have become so by the personal exercise of the power of choice.

The first Adam failed to obey, a "second Adam" is then brought upon the theater of action, and concerning him we read: "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." He also was made a free-will agent with power either to obey or disobey, but concerning him we read: "yet learned no disobedience." The first Adam did not learn that lesson, but the second Adam did, and proclaimed to the world I have overcome." And in that he succeeded, he has become "the author of eternal salvation unto all who obey him."

The whole scheme of human redemption is built upon the plan of faith and obedience. We may have faith, even, but if we fail to yield obedience, it will never save us. In that Jesus "learned obedience," we are now required to absolutely and without question, "obey him."

Now, what does he require us to "obey him" in. He sent his heralds out with this message: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned."

And this means that we must believe and "obey" just the very gospel he preached. To believe and obey a man-made gospel will be counted as disobedience. As to what he preached as the gospel see Mark i. 14: "Now after that John was put in prison Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." See also Matt. iv. 23: "And Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. ix. 35, confirms the same truth: "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." He commissioned others to preach the same gospel. See Luke ix. 2, 6; "And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick. And they departed and went through the towns preaching the gospel."

Jesus has "overcome," and "learned obedience," and if we desire the "eternal salvation," we are commanded also to "obey him," and the "obedience" he has commanded is to "believe the gospel" and be "baptized" after believing it; and the gospel he preached, is the "gospel of the kingdom;" and the kingdom he referred to, is the kingdom of Israel. "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel." "In the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging (ruling) the twelve tribes of Israel." "Wherefore, remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, * * * that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world." Eph. ii. 11, 12.

So those who fail to believe the gospel of the kingdom, and be baptized, and are "aliens" from Israel's commonwealth, and don't have an interest in the "covenants of promise," are disobedient ones, and are said to be "damned," "without Christ," "having no hope," "and without God." Such expressions certainly don't mean salvation.

Not a single soul of us can ever be saved without unswerving obedience to what the obedient Son of God has commanded. We have the power given us to either obey or disobey just as we will, and will be held accountable for our act, just as much as Adam was. Adam could never have been held accountable for disobedience, if he had not the power to obey. And it would be exceedingly inconsistent to say God commanded disobedience, and desired and designed obedience. Our God don't act that way. He always means just what he says, and will hold us all accountable to do just what he says, and he who does his will, shall live forever. "And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." This being the case "Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Jesus in his model prayer said: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is heaven." In the sweet by and by the kingdom will come, and his will be done as completely in all the earth, as it is now done in heaven. It will all be brought about by the obedient second Adam. And then will be heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia; for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." The will of God will not be accomplished in the earth until every will is brought in harmony with his will, and then they will all unite in the grand chorus: "Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

W. H. WILSON.

Editor Witness:

One of your correspondents asks you in the paper of Sept. 12, "What does Salvation mean?"

I would like to answer that question as I understand Bible testimony on that subject. He says, "we read much in the Bible about salvation, yet, I think that many have not a good idea of what salvation is, or what it means to be saved." I agree with him in this statement. Salvation is a very important part of the gospel of Christ. Paul writes to the church at Ephesus, "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the Word of Truth, the gospel of your salvation," Eph. i. 13. Gospel is translated from the Greek word, "Evangelion," which means a good message, and in this passage, a good message concerning a great salvation. It is important to learn from the Bible what the promised salvation will be, and when. The last words Jesus said to his disciples were, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned." The being saved will be some time in the future, after the faith of the gospel, and baptism. "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation," Rom. i. 16. Therefore, Paul was not ashamed of it. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation," which follows the faith, the righteousness, and the confession, Rom. x. 10. "And that knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed," Rom. xiii. 11. When Paul and his brethren had been Christains for a long time, they had not been saved but were nearer the much-desired salvation. "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation," 2 Cor. vii, 10. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling," Phil. ii. 12. "But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for a helmet the hope of salvation For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him." The Christian needs the whole armor while he lives, and has to fight the good "fight of faith," and should not throw away his helmet which defends the head,—a vital part. But he cannot hope for salvation after he has obtained it. "Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do," 1 Thess. v. 8, 9, 10. Paul to the Hebrews, i. 14, writes, that the angels "minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation." The heirship of salvation is in this life, the inheritance, in the future life. The apostle Peter, i. 3, "Blesses the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be ye are in heaviness through manifold trials; that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ; receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls."

The incorruptible inheritance and great salvation, according to this testimony, will be revealed in the "last time," and the fiery trials that would cost them much suffering, notwithstanding their joyful hope, would show their faith by which they would overcome their trials, to be worthy of praise, and glory, and honor, at the "appearing of Jesus Christ," (not before.) The testimony of the Lord through his servant Paul in the 9th chap. of Hebrews and 28th verse is exceedingly plain. "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them who look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin offering unto salvation." No salvation until the second appearing. All the sleeping saints of every age will sleep on forever if the Savior does not appear the second time for their salvation. The honor of "the great salvation," should not be given to the "last and worst enemy death, the king of terrors." What will the promised salvation consist of? The answer of many would be, the salvation of the soul at death, and the words of Peter that I have quoted would be considered proof. Nothing is said in the Bible about an "immortal soul." It does say, if one convert his erring brother, he will save a soul from death. The word soul used in the 1st chapter of Peter is Psenche and is the same that is translated life in Mark viii. 34. "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it, but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and forfeit his life." R. V. Whosoever, therefore, shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous generation; of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels." All those who have given up the present life for Christ's sake will save the future eternal life promised, (or find it, Matt. x. 39.) Thus we see that soul in the Bible has a first and secondary meaning. "Saving a soul from death," is an example of the first use, and means saving a person from a second death, Rev. xx. 6. Paul writes, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory," Col. iii. 3, 4. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," (the sinner shall die.) The first time the word soul is used in the Bible is, Gen. ii. 7. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." The word here translated soul, is from the Hebrew nephesh, which, in the first chapter is three times translated creature. Nephesh should be translated alike in the same connection. If it had been translated creature every time in the Old Testament, much error would have been prevented. But that souls mean living creatures is very apparent in many places. One example. Joshua and his army took it (the city of Eglon) and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed." Next "they took Debir and the king thereof and cities and smote them with the edge of the sword and utterly destroyed all the souls therein." The same is said of several other cities. Immaterial, and immortal souls could not be destroyed with the "edge of the sword." See Joshua x. 35 30. Bible salvation is a salvation of the body and the future life. Paul writes, "We are waiting for the redemption of our body, for we are saved by hope, but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not then do we with patience wait for it," Rom. viii. 24, 25. This testimony is very plain, that the inspired apostle waited for the redemption or salvation of his body. But how can the body be saved? Let the true and faithful Witness answer. "Jesus saith unto her (Martha) I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die. Believest thou this?" Paul's testimony is similar. "For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not go before them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. iv. 15-18. The bodies of all the righteous dead will be saved by the first resurrection, by putting on immortal, spiritual bodies, 'fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body," when they shall awake from the sleep of death at the sounding of the last trump, and the voice of the archangel, and meet the Lord in the air, and so be forever with the Lord. At the same time (and not before) the living saints will be changed in a moment and caught up to rise and meet the Lord with the many millions of martyrs and overcomers who have slept in the dust of the earth for a longer or shorter time. This is the "one blessed hope." When the signs in the heavens and on the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the shaking of the atmospheric heavens by cyclones, etc., begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh. Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 14.

1. And it came to pass in Ikonion, during the same period, that they entered into the synagogue of the Joudaians, and talked so that a vast multitude of both Joudaians and Greeks experienced faith.

2. But Joudaians who distrusted stirred up and afflicted the souls of the nations against the brethren.

3. Then they passed considerable time speaking boldly in the Lord who was testifying to the Word of his grace, giving signs and prodigies to occur through their hands.

4. And the multitude of the city became divided, and some were with the Joudaians and some with the apostles.

5. And when an impulse of the nations and Joudaians along with their rulers to treat them with contumely and stone them had occurred,

6. Becoming aware of it they fled for refuge to the cities of Lukaonia, Lustra and Derbe and the surrounding country.

7. And those there were being evangelized.

8. And a certain man of influence in Lustra disabled in his feet was accustomed to sit, lame from his mother's womb, and he never had walked.

9. This man heard Paulos talking; and he (Paulos) steadfastly regarding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be saved,

10. Said with a great voice, Stand erect upon thy feet. And he leaped up and walked.

11. And the multitudes when they saw what Paulos had done, raised their voice saying in the Lukaonian dialect, the gods have become like to men and come down to us.

12. And they called Barnabas Zeus (Lat. Jupiter) and Paulus Hermes (Lat. Mercury) since he was the leader of the Word.

13. And the priest of Zeus (the statue of Zeus) which was in front of the city, brought bulls and chaplets to the gateways and along with the multitudes was going to offer a sacrifice.

14. But when the apostles Barnabas and Paulos heard of it they rent their outer-garments and ran in among the multitude shouting,

15. And saying, Men why are ye doing these things? We also are men of like feelings with you announcing the good tidings that you turn away from these nullities unto a living God who created the heavens and the earth and the sea and all the things in them:

16. And he in the bye-gone generations permitted all the nations to go their way in their own ways,

17. Though he did not leave himself without testimony while he was doing good, giving you showers from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling your hearts with sustenance and rejoicing.

18. And saying this with difficulty did they cause the multitudes to leave offering sacrifice to them.

19. And Joudaians came there from Antiochaia and Ikonion and persuading the multitudes and stoning Paulos dragged him outside the city, supposing him to be dead.

20. But when the disciples had encompassed him, he arose and entered into the city; and on the morrow went out along with Barnabas to Derbe;

21. And when they had evangelized that city and made disciples of a considerable number they returned to Lustra and Ikonion and Antiochaia,

22. Staying up the souls of the disciples and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that through many tribulations it behoveth us to have entered into the kingdom of God.

23. And electing elders by show of hands, church by church, for them, and offering votive-prayer with fasting, they committed them to the Lord in whom they had put their trust.

24. And going through Pisidia they came to Pamphylia.

25. And having talked the Word in Perge, they went down to Attaleia.

26. From there they sailed away to Antiochaia, whence they had been committed to the grace of God for the work which they had fulfilled.

27. And when they had arrived and gathered together the church, they told all that God had caused in connection with them, and how he had opened a door of faith for the nations.

28. And they passed (lit. were away) not a little time along with the disciples.

COMMENT.

"During the same period" omitted in the best text.

"Experienced faith" instead of "believed" merely R. V.

"Distrusted" instead of "were disobedient" R. V. The word is the opposite of the one meaning "experienced faith."

"Considerable time" instead of "long time" R. V.

"Who" instead of "which" R. V. referring to a personal Lord.

"Giving signs and prodigies to occur through their hands" instead of "granting signs and wonders to be done by their hands" R. V.—a very different thought to my mind.

"And those there were being evangelized" instead of "and there they preached the gospel" R. V.

"Faith to be saved" instead of "faith to be made whole" R. V.

"The leader of the Word" instead of "the chief speaker."

"Outer garments" instead of "garments" R. V.

"Permitted" instead of "suffered" R. V.

"Casting elders by show of hands" instead of "appointed for them elders" R. V.—this shows how they appointed elders in those days.

"In whom they had put their trust" instead of "on whom they had believed" R. V.

"Had caused in connection with them" instead of "had done with them" R. V.

The Restitution.

What Resurrection advocates: the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of Kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of their bodies, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a heavty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

A DISPATCH from Hungary says the upper house is debating a Liberty of Worship Bill, and Cardinal Schlauch says the passage of such a bill would ruin both society and the state.

ERRATA—In second column of "Justification" No. 2, read, "yield that debt," instead of "that death." In first column of "Law or Gospel" No. 2, second column read, "Intelligent creature," instead of Creator.

A BROTHER talking here a few days ago made a point after this style: In nature we find opposites—light and dark, heat and cold, sweet and sour, good and bad, love and hate, life and death—and in proving that the chosen of God (by the Gospel call) will be given everlasting, eternal life, he found just as much Scripture to prove the eternal death of the opposite—the wicked, who do not accept the Gospel call.

SKEPTICS cannot point to one unholy word or one unholy action, in the life of God's beloved Son, although he lived among those who hated him. We should remember this when the misconduct of professors is given as a reason for neglecting or rejecting the religion of Jesus. Pilate's verdict was, "I find no fault in him," in spite of the clamor of his enemies. He was full of grace and truth, and that means that there was no room for subterfuges in him.

NAPOLEON gave his soldiers, after a famous battle, a simple medal, inscribed with the name of the bloody field, and the sentence, "I was there." Money could not buy from his veterans this little memorial of their part in the campaign of the great warrior. God grant that when the "conflict of the ages" between right and wrong shall be over, and the banner of truth shall wave triumphantly everywhere, all our readers may be able to say with satisfaction, "I was there." The overcomers will be crowned.—Messenger.

THE Common Prayer Book of the church of England contains Tyndale's and Coverdale's version of the Psalms, and Psalm cxxxiii. 2, instead of reading as the common version, reads as follows:—"For thou hast magnified thy name and thy Word above all things." The next version is that of Richard Harrison, 1556. It was a reprint of the text of Tyndale—Davis and Rhèhis, "For thou hast magnified thy holy name above all." The next in order is the Geneva Bible. "For thou hast magnified thy name above all things by thy Word." This version passed through more than 60 editions prior to the issue of the authorized version.

BELIEF without foundation truths are worse than useless—they delude and destroy.

THE Psalmist records as that "the mercy of the Lord" is for everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children, to such as keep his covenants, and to those that remember his commandments to do them. What could more plainly set forth the reasonableness of immortality from a sinful mortality? Surely by no ordinary sense can man be said to remember the commandments of the great God.

Oh, what strength we should find if we at all times realized the fact that God is everlasting, the changeableness and uncertainty of all things around us, loved friends may grow cold, and those we have loved and still love do not remember us, but it comforts us to know that we are connected with one who changes not—is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

Justification by Faith. No. 4.

According to promise we now prove by Jesus' own words, who he gave his life for. The reason it is necessary to do this is because many people either do not fully understand what justification by faith is, or do not fully believe it. If they understood and believed that they could be counted righteous by faith, surely they would look no further; but they do look further, and this fact makes it necessary to introduce the testimony of Jesus. In John x. 14-17, he says, "I am the good shepherd; the good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep . . . I am the good Shepherd, and know my sheep and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep." Heretofore I saw for what purpose he was able to lay down his life, and for whom, and we have our readers to which well his words. He does not say that he will lay down his life for goats, for the unjust, or for the irresponsible, and those who hold that he did, ought to be held strictly to account for claiming to know better than Jesus, on whose behalf he laid down his life. We hold that Jesus suppressed no essential truth here, because what he says agrees with so many other utterances of his. It is in strict accord with John iii. 16 where he says:—"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Here it is seen that God's purpose is in harmony with the Son's, viz. the bestowment of life, everlasting life. And the 18th verse shows again, on what condition this life can be obtained, by believing on the Son. Jesus died to impart mortal life to no one; that is obtained from the first Adam, through natural law.

Jesus says "the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." Who are the sheep? We have the answer to this in the 4th verse: They are those who hear his voice and follow him (they enter the fold by him, v. 9). Taking these words in connection with John iii. 16-18 we see they believe what he says when they hear his voice, and for that reason follow him. They want the life he offers them, and accept his death as the means to that end; and, by the faith exercised in him and his offices and work, they are justified from all past sin and made meet to be partakers with the saints in light,"—in a word "have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." The conditions here set forth clearly disprove the substitutionary idea. All who hear his voice may become sheep; he is able to save to the uttermost, but they must come to God by him, or derive no benefit from his death. "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

Jesus is speaking of the sheep who have entered the fold by the door when he says, "Because I live ye shall live also." Did he ever say others beside his sheep should live because he did? If not, by what authority is it claimed that others beside the sheep share the benefits accruing from his death? Is it not because some believe in substitution that they think others beside the sheep will live because Jesus lives? Do they not think he has died instead of every body, and therefore everybody will be redeemed from death? But is it not a great mistake to say that one died instead of all, and that all died? Does claim that a creditor [illegible] instead of receiving from [illegible] Surely by no ordinary sense can man be said to [illegible] himself, because it is the [illegible] that Paul [illegible] with Christ in God, and they appear with him in glory when he appears. Christ was risen to God [illegible] He is [illegible] a quickening spirit. The first was of the earth, earthy and a natural, and [illegible] natural nor [illegible] to his children. He could impart no [illegible] Spirit, and that Jesus [illegible] up his natural life will [illegible] that the natural life of the body can be restored with [illegible] conditions. But upon what principle could such a result be attained? We do not think any one action of man effected [illegible] but upon the principle that Jesus' death was the [illegible] for which living ever the account of Adam's sin has been atoned for, whatever that means.

Let us look into that matter a little. We find that the apostle Paul was once under the law of sin and death," but he knew [illegible] from it. By what means was he freed from it? Was it from [illegible] by the substitutionary death of Christ? If so we are [illegible] and will stop down and out at once; but we will take no second hand testimony. We will only call the word in the matter. Here it is: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Here we have infallible testimony that there is no redemption to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk after the spirit and not [illegible] infallible testimony also are we in Christ Jesus, and walk after the Spirit, under condemnation? We know this is [illegible] from the words of Jesus to John [illegible] already spoken unto him, now again: "He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already."

It will now be interesting to know in Paul's own words how he was freed from the law of sin and death. He says, "For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." He had come into Christ Jesus, had become one of those for whom the good Shepherd said he would lay down his life. He had complied with the law of life in Christ Jesus promulgated by the Spirit. This law had freed him from the law of sin and death, and his future life was hid with Christ in God.

Surely Paul's was not an exceptional case. He knows all these are in Christ under the law of sin and death; under consideration never hints that the death of Christ would free them from it without compliance with the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus; we do not think any warrant can be found in the Scriptures for the idea that the death of Christ ensures the resurrection of those not in him.

We want our readers to take in the whole situation. Christ had died and had been raised again some 25 or 30 years perhaps before Paul wrote this letter to the Roman brethren; and he did not teach the reliving of any out of Christ through the death of Christ,—the very opposite of this. He taught justification by faith. To teach reliving in mortal nature by reason of Christ's death irrespective of faith, is to teach freedom from the law of sin and death by substitution, instead of faith.

We are distinctly told in the second chapter of Hebrews that Jesus partook of the same flesh and blood as those for whom he died; and we are as distinctly told that the life is in the blood; and we are asked to believe that the blood of one person is an equivalent for the blood-life of countless millions. It makes one's heart ache to see such profound ignorance on the part of religious teachers—teachers who do not know the first principles of the gospel. Such doctrines could only originate with those infatuated with the Trinitarian and immortality dogmas.

We expect to discuss the resurrection of the [illegible] in our next.

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 4.

Our No. 3 [illegible] with the words of the Spirit [illegible] by Asaph [illegible] 50, and [illegible] not be unmerciful [illegible] protection [illegible] of our redeemer might [illegible] pick up the thread of his argument [illegible] it [illegible] saith you, [illegible] men, that they [illegible] dead [illegible] dead [illegible] [illegible] and that believe [illegible] justified [illegible] Moses [illegible] justified [illegible] who [illegible] the law of [illegible] How can [illegible] the [illegible] of law claims [illegible] How can the promises [illegible] refer [illegible] [illegible] This is [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of God's word affirmed [illegible] more [illegible] work. We [illegible] justified [illegible] and this Scripture teaches that we can be justified by believing in Jesus and justification by believing in Jesus is the justification that could be contained under the law.

The law held a sword of [illegible] over man, and the offender was put to death, the absolute [illegible] inexorability in this life, and that was all; it did not make them heirs of the promises to Abraham 400 years before. In order to inherit the promises to Abraham they must be believers. And now as to the gospel of Christ in contrast to the law:—Instead of an arbitrary command that could be mechanically obeyed without heart-work, it is a loving message about searching ways out in the matter of a sinner's offer of pardon, and reconciliation, and adoption, and sonship, and heirship to an inheritance with everlasting life thrown in—all this by faith, is comprised in the gospel which Paul [illegible] power God employs to save. The conditions enacted are, belief in the gospel, baptism toward [illegible] Baptism for the remission of sins, and the observance of all things he has commanded. This is the prophet he raised up like unto Moses (who was a law-giving type of, and which Moses was to) whom we should supercede him. Is it any wonder we read of his being the end of the law? no wonder he said the words he spoke [illegible] judge us? no wonder he said the law and the prophets were until John, and since then the kingdom of God is preached: no wonder we read, "Blessed are they that do his COMMANDMENTS." Why keep the commandments? Ans: "That they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." All this for doing His commandments. Is not that enough, and good enough? What more could we ask? What more are we capable of? If we were to keep some law besides his, what could we expect as our reward?

Let us take another stand-point. The faith that saves works by love; the love of Christ constrains believers to love; and Jesus says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." His commandments cannot be kept without love. And let us say here, it will keep us so busy to keep all his commandments that we will have no time or strength to keep any others. We know something about this ourself, as it is more than forty years since we have been trying to keep them; and to our sorrow we say it, with very indifferent success; still we try, although when we would do good, evil is present with us. Yes; we were utterly undone only that by grace we are saved through faith—faith is imputed to us for righteousness, and instead of death for sins of omission and commission as under the law, we have an advocate with the Father who has been tempted and tried in all points like as we are, and is therefore able to succor us; and besides all this we read that God is faithful and just to forgive us when we confess and forsake our sins. "Like as a Father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him because he knoweth their frames and remembereth they are dust." In harmony with all this we read in Gal. ii. 16, "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even WE [we Jews have set up under the law, and trained in the law] "even WE have believed in Jesus Christ that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no man be justified. But if while we seek to be justified by Christ we ourselves are found sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid." In next verse explains what kind of sinners he was speaking about. Hear his explanation: For if I build again the things which I destroyed I make myself a transgressor." If you look at chap. 2, v. 5, you can see clearly yourself that he was speaking about the law and its ceremonies, and the ungodly about to be justified. Having found and told the Roman brethren that we are not under the law, but under grace he would be a poor architect to build up the law again. Then he proceeds: "For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. I do not frustrate the grace of God;" if the works of the law were of themselves sufficient he would do just that. Paul concludes with a statement that is unanswerable: "For if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain."

Saint Paul says that "the law of commandments" was the law of Moses, and the ten commandments or those were called the law of God. If we prove this to be a grand mistake, as we expect to, we find at the same time undermine the whole superstructure built upon it since 1844, and lay its advocates under great obligation for exposing it; yet to be justified by faith, and have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ if they be shown the error of their way.

To see the folly of this claim it is only necessary to read and believe the words of the Spirit by God, in 2 Chronicles where we are told that Abraham had two sons—one by the bondwoman and the other by the freewoman; and Paul those sons represent? The Sinaitic covenant, or law added to increase and was cast out, and the Jerusalem covenant which was the promise of all who believed the promises to Abraham, and was free; and wherefore, brethren, we are not the children of the bond woman, but of the free." Paul had no further use for the covenant that enslaved people, and so cast it out.

It is admitted by Sabbatarians that what is called "The law of ordinances was abolished by Christ." This is interpreted to mean that the ceremonial part of the law was taken out of the way. We are told that the words "law of commandment contained in ordinances" explains everything in harmony with their views, that there were no more sacrifices, and offerings, and washings, etc., but that the ten commands are in full force yet.

No one will dispute that we often use words conventionally. For instance, we frequently speak of the ordinance of Baptism as if the word ordinance implied the act of burying one in the likeness of Christ's death. But after examining ten different words rendered ordinance and ordinances in the Scriptures, we feel warranted in saying that it is never employed in the Book of God to mean temple service, or any other service, but as the law, decree statute, or rule by which such service became obligatory. We invite the closest criticism here, and feel sure that the honest of heart will henceforth understand the word ordinance in the Bible much the same as they do when they read it in connection with the actions of the city Council every week, viz:—that it is a decree that such and such things shall, or shall not be done. If this be the Truth, as we believe it is, what becomes of the Sabbatarian claim about the law of ordinances?

Pernicious Literature.

The influence of a book is inevitable. A bad book may not and it cannot be the murderer of an individual, but may decide the destiny of a nation. Miller says that [illegible] has [illegible] by the chivalry of Spain, for Spain produced [illegible] Don Quixote. He [illegible] gentlemen [illegible] and [illegible] so [illegible] to [illegible] Thus this great evil is not only imminent, but is already established almost as it is only too evident in blasted homes and worse than wasted lives.

When we recount the fact that in addition to the loss of sensational story books, there are also sensational story papers, the circulation of some of which is equal to the combined circulation of all the religious weeklies published in the cities from which these sensational story papers are issued, and when we remember that there are two such worthless papers whose combined issue nearly equal the circulation of all the religious papers in the United States, then we begin to understand the magnitude of the question which relates to pernicious literature.

The streams which flow from these polluted fountains are pouring their flood of filth into every village and hamlet, debasing and destroying thousands of our nation's fairest sons and daughters. What are you doing to protect your home from these debasing and destroying influences? Are you supplanting this evil by taking a pure, wholesome, attractive Christian paper? What pictures do your children look at? What books and papers do they read? Do you know? Have you ever considered? Have you ever gone a step further in the investigation, and inquired what kind of books and papers are being read by your neighbors? And have you sought by personal influence to introduce into other homes inspiring books and helpful periodicals? To what extent have you interested your community in your own religious paper, and making it the means of continual blessing to the families throughout your entire neighborhood?

A Good Name.

A young man does not always find it easy to get on in the world without education, or family influence, or personal friends, or property, or health; but he will find in the long run that it is far easier for him to make his way among men without any or all of these advantages than to make substantial progress in the world without the reputation of a good character, even though he has all these other possessions. Character stands for something everywhere, in spite of its frequent slightings. Men who are lacking in a good character appreciate and value it in others. A band of robbers would want an honest treasurer.

The young man whose word can not be believed, whose honesty is not above suspicion, and whose personal life is not what it ought to be, is not the young man that the business world has open places for. He may have wealth and wealth and family position and a host of friends, but if he is without character he is at a disadvantage in every position in life. When a young man who has lost his good name makes an effort to recover it he finds that his way upward is a hard one—a great deal harder, in spite of all other helps, than it would have been if he had made a right start without those helps.

Friends are comparatively powerless in their efforts to win confidence for one who has proved himself unworthy of it on former occasions. Then it is likely that the young man is to realize as never before that "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," even as a worldly investment. Because it is so hard to get on without a good name, or to regain it when once surrendered, every young man who has that possession ought to count it above price, and to have a care lest he loose it.—S. S. Times.

Take Time for the Bible.

As we drift along the swift, relentless current of time toward the end of life; as days and weeks and months and years follow each other in breathless haste, and we reflect now and then for a moment that, at any rate for us, much of this earthly career has passed irrevocably; what are the interests, thoughts, nay, the books, which really command our attention? What do we read and unread? What time do we give to the Bible? No other book, let us be sure of it, can equally avail to prepare us for that which lies before us; for the unknown anxieties and sorrows which are sooner or later the portion of most men and women; for the gradual approach of death; for the period, be it long or short, of waiting and preparation for the throne and the face of the Eternal Judge. Looking back from that world, how shall we desire to have made the most of our best guide to it! How shall we grudge the hours we have wasted on any—be they thoughts, or books, or teaching—which only belong to the things of time.—Canon Liddon.

In the Day of Trouble.

A day of trouble is very sure to come; and there are few who have not known sorrow, and that cannot say, "I am the man that has seen affliction." And in the day of trouble the question arises, "What can be done?" We are perplexed, afflicted, tried and confused; we wrestle with our fate; we struggle against obstacles; we sometimes try to do things which are important; and at last find ourselves bewildered and helpless in the midst of troubles from which we know not how to escape.

The divine prescription is wonderfully simple and appropriate. "Call upon me in the day of trouble, and I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." If we learn this method of dealing with our troubles we shall not move rashly or hastily. We shall not allow our souls to be tossed in tumult and turmoil. We shall wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and through the openings of his providence, the guiding of his counsel, the leading of his Spirit, the help of his servants, and in unexpected and providential ways, the Lord will work deliverance for those who trust in him.

How many have tried this prescription, and have found the promised deliverance! An hour of prayerful waiting on God has cleared the sky, banished the clouds, solved the difficulties, and opened a right and safe path, in which they could walk forward through the midst of all their difficulties.

How important that we heed this divine voice! We are prone to call upon friends, to pour our griefs into the ear of strangers, to fly this way and that for help, when the divine command is "Call upon me!" There is one eye that ever watches, there is one ear that is never closed, there is one arm that is not shortened that it cannot save, there is one helping hand that is ever stretched out to those who call upon God. Let us make him our trust and refuge in every dark and trying hour, assured that he will never suffer the righteous to be moved.

The Day's Demands.

God give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treachery to his face.
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking.
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting Justice sleeps.

Must We Sow Our Wild Oats?

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say I have no pleasure in them." Eccl. xii. 1.

The way to eternal life and the kingdom of God, is narrow, straight and hard to travel. We have to deny ourselves many things.

The worst enemy we have to contend with is ourself, but he that ruleth himself is greater than he that ruleth a city. We are put on trial now and if we conquer our wayward selves, we shall help to rule nations in God's everlasting kingdom. We believe we are to be sober minded, and we get this from the Scriptures. In the last days men will be "traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." 2 Tim. iii. 4. All this is fulfilled in the present generation. The worldly amusements are crowded along our path so close and in such bewildering variety that the young Christian is tempted on every hand. Little harmless amusements that can hurt no one, only just to keep them from thinking on serious subjects. No time to rest, only to keep them excited over the next party or excursion, until they don't have time to read the Bible only just to snatch it up and read a short chapter, for they are so tired, have worked hard all day, and have to get ready to go to that party tonight. I am sure God ought to excuse them, they want to do right, and are really doing no harm, only having a pleasant time. But let me implore you, don't let those innocent amusements crowd your Savior into too small space or I am afraid God will excuse you altogether when he comes to make up his jewels. But we all have to sow our wild oats sometime, says some one, but may be some of you can avoid it, stop and think of the snares in that wild oats field, and how many never come out again, and how many bitterly regret ever having entered at all.

Listen to Solomon in Eccl. xi. 9, "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." "Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of countenance the heart is made better. The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth. For as the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool, etc." Eccl. vii. 3, 4, 6.

Our Lord is now selecting a royal priesthood, an holy nation for that great kingdom, which shall put down all other kingdoms and fill the whole earth. He only wants brave, earnest men and women, gold tried in the refiner's fire. We wonder how much time that grand old hero Paul gave to fashion, games, and parties. Let us hear him on this subject, in 1 Thess. v. 6, 8, "Therefore let us not sleep, as do others, but let us watch and be sober. But let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for a helmet, the hope of salvation." Read Titus ii. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 12, "That the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, etc. The aged women likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things, that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste keepers at home. Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded. Teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world." Mark his words "in this present world." He does not say have all the fun you want now and live godly after while, does he? "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober and hope to the end," etc. 1 Peter i. 13. "But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer." 1 Peter iv. 7. Turn to Isaiah liii. 3, 4, and read a description of our Lord. "He is despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not." "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted."

Yet we should not count it all loss, if we have to miss some of the pleasures of this life, for we have a glittering crown, and eternal life, and pleasures that never wane when the chief shepherd shall appear.

VIOLA V. SKEELS.

The law of Christ, vs. the law of Sin and Death.

This subject is one that should claim the attention of every son and daughter of Adam. And why? Because every one is, or has been under penalty of that law. Adam by disobedience having brought himself and posterity under its power, therefore, the law of life through Christ Jesus is the only law that will ever deliver or make us free from the law of sin and death. Why? Because God having sent his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and by a sacrifice for sin condemned sin in the flesh that the righteousness of the law of Christ might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For they that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh, but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. for to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace, because the carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be, so then they that live after the flesh cannot please God. for if ye live after the flesh ye shall die, but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." When Adam disobeyed God by putting forth his hand and taking of that which God had forbidden him to eat (although tempted by the wife of his bosom) they both lost favor with him and were banished from the garden, and the tree of life (of which they might have eaten and lived forever had they been obedient) was guarded by a flaming sword, to prevent the sad consequence of immortalizing sinners. Thus, their children who are of the same nature of their parents are still under the law by which they were held. Oh that each one of Adam's children might clearly understand the sad condition in which their natural parents have placed them and flee for protection to the Father of spirits and live. Yes flee to him before it is too late, for, hearken to what he says, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man (in that he is also flesh, because he is flesh.) No, for God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of his heart was evil continually, therefore, he determined to destroy man whom he had created, both man and beast. But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord, because he was a just and perfect (upright) man and walked with God, therefore, he and his sons, with his and their wives, were not destroyed with the flood of waters that God caused to come upon the earth. But through them the earth was again repeopled and again man was offered the privilege of attaining eternal life. This time God made known his purpose to Abram the son of Terah, a man of great faith, showing him that he yet intended to rule this earth in righteousness; and that through him and his seed he should accomplish the work, but that many years should pass before this great work should be accomplished; thus he, Abram, should go to his fathers in peace, die, be buried in a good old age, that his children should become strangers in a land that was not theirs and should be afflicted four hundred years, but that God would judge that nation by whom they were afflicted, and that they should return to the land covenanted to him and become a great nation. This is the extent of God's revelation to Abraham, and he also renewed his promise to Isaac and Jacob. Then for further light upon this important subject we must look elsewhere. We read in the book of Exodus that God raised up for the children of Israel, (Jacob) a leader, Moses by name, by him he delivered them from Egyptian bondage, the land in which they were strangers, and brought them to Canaan, the land covenanted to Abraham. There he planted them, giving them his law by which they were to be governed, and promising them if obedient thereto they should become a great nation, and the fear of them should be upon all other nations, but, should they fail to keep his laws and statutes, they should be scattered among all nations and become a reproach and a by-word. The Jewish nation failed to obey God, and curses instead of blessings was the result, and when the promised seed came whom Paul declares was Christ, they received him not, but put him to a shameful death, declaring that they would not have this man to rule over them. Now because God's purpose of ruling the world in righteousness by Abraham and his seed was for a season postponed, will any one dare say that God's purpose has been thwarted by mortal man? Oh man, oh woman, beware, that you charge not God foolishly, for his ways are not our ways, neither his thoughts our thoughts. He has said the word. Righteousness shall cover the earth as waters cover the sea, and although we see it not as yet, let us believe the word he has spoken, for his resources are never-ending, and he can bring light out of darkness, and order out of confusion. He has brought from the dead the Lord Jesus that Great Shepherd of the sheep, which is as proof to every child of God that he is fully able to fulfill every promise that he has made. Although the kings of the earth did set themselves and the rulers took council together against the Lord and his Anointed, yet, he that sitteth in the heaven shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision, for he shall speak to them in his wrath and vex them in his sore displeasure. How? By sitting his King upon his holy hill in Zion, hearken unto the decree: "The Lord hath said unto me, thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee; ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Ps. ii. And again, "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment. The eyes of them that see shall not be dim and the ears of them that hear shall not hearken, the heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerer shall be ready to speak plainly," Isa. xxii. 1, 3, 4. In that blessed age there will be no deception, the vile person shall be known as a villain and by the righteous laws then in force shall he be judged. But why continue this subject farther. The testimony concerning the rightful heirs of the world and by what law man can obtain an heirship with Christ, the seed of Abraham are too numerous to mention. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses let every word be established." May God strengthen his waiting ones.

Iowa Conference Report.

According to announcement the Semi-annual Conference of the Churches of God met at the new church at Gladbrook, Oct. 4, to 7 inclusive. Preaching brethren from abroad were G. M. Myers, Belle Plaine, J. M. Primmer, Independence, C. W. Russell, of Alden.

The business meeting was well attended with good interest. State Evangelist, Bro. A. J. Eychaner, and assistant evangelist Bro. C. W. Russel, made a full report of the summer's work.

No. days worked by evangelist, 76. Assistant, 84.

No. of sermons preached by evangelist, 70. Assistant 60.

No. baptized, 36. Congregations organized, 3 Alden with a membership of 20, Popejoy, 14, and Eagle Grove, 13.

Freight, light, and tent expenses $48.70. Amount paid evangelists, $305.00. The State or contingent fund and the Evangelist fund were consolidated by vote of the conference, thus simplifying the work.

The question of reaching isolated members remains unsolved. Our work in the state could be doubled each year if these brethren could be found and if they would lay hold of the work. But few who are not connected with our organized conference ever contribute a dollar to the work.

A committee was appointed consisting of A. J. Eychaner, G. R. Chown, and L. Marsh, to draft resolutions concerning the death of Bro. R. J. Hill, and the following were adopted:—

Resolved:—That the Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa assembled at Gladbrook, recognize in the death of our Brother, R. J. Hill known throughout the state and elsewhere as an able and valued Christian worker and pioneer, and we hereby express our sympathy with Sister Hill and family in their sorrow, and we cherish the hope that he will live again when the Life Giver comes.

Letters of recommendation were issued to G. R. Chown, Gladbrook, Iowa, to J. M. Primmer, Independence, C. F. Kennedy, of Garwin.

A letter from Sister Roxana Wince of Indiana was read and highly appreciated by the conference.

Two essays by Miss Edith Anderson, and one by Miss Sadie Williams were read by the corresponding secretary. They were good essays and the writers received a vote of thanks from the conference.

There were 7 sermons preached during the meeting. They were all practical and left an impression for good.

During the meeting Mrs. Laura Staffa, Mrs. O. Cady, Mrs. Rose Starbuck, and J. M. Primmer, put in membership with the congregation at Gladbrook.

The time was fully occupied from first to last by the social meetings, Bible readings, and preaching, and the meeting was one long to be remembered by all who attended. The letter of Sister Wince and the essays above referred to were sent to the Illinois Conference for their benefit and then to be forwarded for publication in THE RESTITUTION.

Outside duties of the secretary prevented him being present all the time and this is his apology for a partial report.

O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

To the Church in Conference assembled at Gladbrook, Oct. 4-7, 1894:

Dear ones of the household of faith, it is with feelings of humility and gratitude toward God that I pen you this my brief report of labor as an evangelist. Solittle fruit appears for so much labor, that I sometimes fear you have selected the wrong person for your evangelist. When we compare our labor with other evangelists of the self-styled "orthodox" type there is such a difference that there is hardly a comparison. I can only account for the difference on one ground, and that is that the gospel is not popular and that its work is to call out a certain type of mind and character, and as these are comparatively rare we are obliged to travel over more ground to reach even a few. As a rule our ministers are intelligent and conscientious men. Among those who hold to the doctrine of the coming of Jesus, the setting up of the kingdom of God on earth, and conditional immortality may be mentioned the names, of those whose scholarship and piety have justly given them a place among the foremost leaders of mankind; yet with even this advantage our progress is slow and sometimes on a stand still. When, however, we compare our state work with the work of the believers in other states we find a very favorable comparison. Nebraska takes the lead. Perhaps Iowa stands next. Yet we could do much more by a united effort on the part of all.

My report properly begins at the June conference, where I preached three discourses and baptized six persons. After conference was over Bro. C. W. Russell and myself remained at Nevada until June 25, holding meetings every evening yet we had a fair hearing and a few attended on those things that were spoken by the evangelists. At Eagle Grove, I preached 17 discourses and Bro. Russell preached 11 discourses, making 28 in all, and one organization meeting. Four were added by faith, repentance and baptism. We also organized a church or rather a society of believers with O. J. Allard as Elder. On Monday evening Sept. 17, at 8:30 I took a train for Cambridge, Nebraska to attend the annual meeting of the Nebraska brethren and sisters, where I arrived at 9:30 on Tuesday evening. Here I found Bro. J. J. Cady at the train and the meeting was indeed cordial. We then walked over to the tent where the brothers and sisters were yet waiting until we should arrive. I need not tell you of the hearty hand shaking and tender embraces of old time friends who meet me there that evening. The Cadys, the Harlans and the Primes firm in faith, and though so poor this year in worldly goods, they are heirs of the kingdom and of the righteousness which is by faith. I preached 8 discourses to large audiences, and made an address at the riverside on the subject of baptism to about 700 people, who assembled to witness this symbol of burial and resurrection. I then took the cars again and by the power of steam and the kindness of the great Father I was again in Eagle Grove Tuesday morning at 6:10. We then took down our tents, loaded and marked them, attended to the baptism of Bro. Vose and Sister Brown. Then in the evening Bros. Myers, Russell and myself met with the faithful ones at Eagle Grove at the home of Bro. and Sister O. J. Allard where we had a quiet meeting and organized the church which we trust and pray may be a blessing to the people at Eagle. Bro. Myers spoke about 40 minutes setting forth the duties of an elder and his congregation. There is a large field for missionary effort at Eagle and we hope that they may not be forgotten by this conference, as well as the other points where we have organized congregations. This closed our tent work. Summary: sermons preached at Nevada 8, Alden 21, Popejoy 14, Eagle 17, Cambridge 8; total number of sermons preached 68. Total number of sermons preached by Russell 60, number of sermons at conferences 15, the total number of social meetings 20, and the number of meetings held in the tent 163. The number baptized is 36, of whom 11 are men, 21 married ladies and 4 young ladies. Thus you see there are 11 men and 25 women or more than twice as many women as men. Woman's heart is more susceptible of receiving the glad tidings than man's, and so it has ever been. The saddest part of my report is yet to read or rather there is a part I never can read. No young men obeyed the gospel!!! What a fearful blank in this report, who can tell how they may be reached?

The names of those who were baptized are as follows: Nevada, L. P. Sherwood, Sadie Williams, Mrs. M. A. Complin, Annie Berry, Hattie Booth and Christ Middleknuff; Gladbrook, Frank Wilson, Mrs. W. H. Taylor, Miss Hattie Berry, and T. E. Dawson; Alden, Frank Furry, Ella Furry, A. H. Goodin, O. H. Calkins, Mrs. O. H. Calkins, Mrs. Pettenger, Mrs. Hearst, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Biglow, Mrs. Hartinger, Emma Joslyn, John Wagner, Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Elijah Thomas and Jas. Ghoslin; Popejoy, Frances Hopper, Mrs. Matthew, Mrs. Ed. Stewart, Clarence Dodd, Mrs. Ed. J. Popejoy, Mrs. Geo. Stewart and Mrs. Kemp; Eagle Grove, Mrs. T. Kithcart, Mrs. Cena S. Corsman, Arnetta E. Howen and G. W. Vose.

Financial report: total tent expenses $48.70, amount paid evangelist $205.00. Respectfully submitted.

A. J. EYCHANER, Evangelist.

To the Iowa Conference Board, Church of God, Brethren:

My faith is in the promises of God made to the Fathers. That he will send Jesus Christ at the times of restitution to restore all things spoken of by the prophets and apostles, remove the curse of sin and death, raise the dead, restore Israel, and set up the kingdom of God on the throne of David in Jerusalem to order and establish with judgment and justice forever the blessings promised in the gospel. That the gospel is the tidings of these things and that faith and obedience will secure eternal life, and a part with Christ in the honors of the kingdom in ruling over the nations in the age to come, that the wicked will be destroyed, all opposing powers be put down, righteousness be established and the nations blessed with peace and "the knowledge and glory of the Lord will cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea."

Yours in faith, hope, and charity. S. D. FAHRNEY.

To the brethren in the Ministry, scattered abroad, Greeting, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ:

Although not seeing you, yet we are knit together in love unfeigned through God, the Father, and our Savior Jesus Christ, and seeing that we have an opportunity of meeting in a ministerial gathering, that we may become personally acquainted, let the church scattered abroad put forth their best efforts to make the meeting a success.

When Brother L. E. Conner was at our conference last June I spoke to him concerning this matter, that the preaching brethren should hold a ministerial conference for the purpose of developing plans for spreading the truth, and discussion of questions of vital importance to all lovers of the truth.

I am glad to see through THE RESTITUTION, the interest manifested by the brethren at Plymouth. I think it is the proper place for the assembling of the brethren as it is the headquarters of the only paper that we have as a church, and as the brethren at Plymouth have given their immediate attention to the call, it shows an interest in the matter, and should have the benefit of the meeting.

I would like to see the brethren take hold of this matter, and let us have a full representation of all churches as far as possible throughout the United States. This can be accomplished if every brother will do his part in the work and send your minister by throwing in your little mites. You will never miss it.

Your minister will return to you with new life, and new thoughts that will build you up in the faith and encourage you to a higher life, and a closer walk with God, "for in a multitude of counsel, there is wisdom." We need a unity of thought and purpose in the work of the ministry.

Brethren, I pray you do not let us be slack in this meeting, but let us hear from the brethren wherever they may be. Send in a word of encouragement, and begin at once to make preparation to come to this gathering, that we may be strengthened by assembling together and holding communion with each other and partake of the blessings, coming from such fellowship and communion that we may be able to impart something new to our brethren and little flocks scattered everywhere.

I am looking forward to a gracious feast at the coming ministerial gathering. My prayer is for God's richest blessings to attend the effort, that those of the one faith may rejoice together and God's name may be glorified.

Your brother and co-laborer in the vineyard of the Master in hope of the coming glory. Amen.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

...ty in one of the chief ...s of the Christian character. We are taught in the Bible to be humble, not vain and proud, for we read in 1 Peter v. 5, "Likewise ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder, yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble."

From this text we learn we are to trample on our pride, and humble ourselves by being subject one to another. This is a hard lesson for the vain, proud, and weak heart of man, and unless the heart is filled with the divine love and goodness of God, it can never be done.

Pride will not let a person bend to the will of God, but rather a proud person wishes to go his own way, careless of God's commands; thinking that they can live a life without help from their heavenly Father.

For awhile they may seem to prosper but the more high and prosperous a life they lead now; more terrible will be their fall in contrast, for pride must have a fall. God resisteth the proud, for them he does not give the grace he gives to the lowly minded. Though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly; but the proud he knoweth afar of. Those having their hearts filled with prideds not live near God. They do not seek him in prayer, and if they do read his Word, it is not with a mind ready to learn and obey what they find therein. Therefore, God knoweth the proud afar off. They are not his children.

A person who is exalted in his own mind would never go to the Maker of all things to ask for forgiveness, and help to live a quiet, humble life.

Humility was one of the chief traits of Jesus. Never exalted but always humble and lowly. He who had the most reason to be proud was the most humble. If we are going to follow in his footsteps this is a lesson that should receive from us careful attention.

"He that is of a proud heart stirreth up strife." The proud will not always occupy a place of high standing; nor will they always be honored, for we read in Prov. "A man's pride will bring him low, honor shall uphold the humble in spirit. And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased, and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted." Here we learn of the downfall of the proud and the rising of the humble.

Even kings of proud renown will come under the will of God and be made humble. "He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath showed strength with his arms; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their own hearts."

When the two men went up into the temple to pray, one a Pharisee and the other a publican, how great was the difference between them, how the one boasted of his deeds and himself, yet, the other, who cried to God, saying, "Be merciful to me, a sinner," was more justified than the proud man, "for "He that exalted himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

Let us all try with God's help, to smother down the pride in our hearts and humble ourselves before God and our brethren, so that we may be acceptable in God's sight, and receive our just reward in due time. A reward well worth all our trials in this world.

EDITH ANDERSON.

Washington's Rules.

These rules of behavior were collected by George Washington, when fourteen years of age for his own use:—

Every action in company should be with some sign of respect to those present.

Be no flatterer, neither play with any that delights not to be played with.

Show not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he were your enemy.

Let your discourse with men of business be short and comprehensive.

In visiting the sick, do not presently play the physician if you be not knowing therein.

Undertake not to teach an equal in any art himself professes—it savors of arrogance.

When a man does all he can, though it succeeds not well, blame not him that did it.

Wherein you reprove another be unblamable yourself, for example is more powerful than precept.

Use no reproachful language to any one, neither curse nor revile.

Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any.

Let your conversation be without malice or envy, for it is a sign of a tractable and commendable nature; and in all cases of passion admit reason to govern.

Be not angry at table, whatever happens; and if you have reason to be so, show it not. Put on a cheerful countenance, especially if there be strangers, for good humor makes one dish of meat a feast.

Let your recreations be manly, not sinful.

Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called "conscience."

The last two of these rules are especially noble and beautiful. Taken together, the rules show how careful of his behavior Washington was when he was a boy. Our young people could not do better than to adopt these rules.

"NEITHER."

"Well, I cannot understand why a man who has tried to lead a good moral life should not stand a better chance of heaven than a wicked one," said a lady, a few days ago, in conversation with others about the matter of salvation.

"Simply for this cause," answered one. "Suppose you and I wanted to go into a place of interest where the admission was one dollar. You have fifty cents and I have nothing. Which would stand the better chance of admission?" "Neither," was the solemn reply.

"Just so; and therefore the moral man stands no better chance than the outbreaking sinner. But now, suppose a kind and rich friend, who saw our perplexity, presented a ticket of admission to us at his own expense! What then?" Well than we could go in alike; that is clear."

"Thus, when the Savior saw our perplexity, he came, he died, and thus obtained eternal redemption for us (Heb. ix. 12), and now he offers you and me a free ticket. Only take good care that your fifty cents does not make you proud enough to refuse the free ticket, and so be refused admittance at last."

A Loan to the Lord.

A poor man with an empty purse came one day to Michael Feneberg, the godly pastor of Seyg, in Bavaria, and begged three crowns that he might finish his journey. It was all the money Feneberg had, but as he besought him so earnestly in the name of Jesus, he gave it. Immediately after he found himself in great outward need, and seeing no way of relief, he prayed, saying: "Lord, I have lent thee three crowns: thou hast not yet returned them, and thou knowest how I need them. Lord, I pray thee, give them back."

The same day a messenger brought a money-letter, which Grossner, his assistant, reached over to Feneberg, saying, "Here, father, is what you expended." The letter contained 200 thalers, or $146, which the poor traveller had begged from a rich man for the vicar; and the childlike old man, in joyful amusement, cried out, "Ah, dear Lord, one dare ask nothing of thee, for straightway thou makest one fool so much ashamed!"

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

Change of Address.

On and after Sept. 25, 1894, my address will be Rossville, Illinois, instead of Plymouth, Ind. Correspondents will please take notice.

Effects of Cider.

Many persons have reasoned, or been unconsciously influenced by the conviction that the use of cider, as a beverage, inasmuch as it was a product of orchards planted and brought to maturity by the hand of their owners, must be an innocent custom. Others have reached a different conclusion, and affirm that the innocence or guilt of any practice depends upon its relation to the advantage of those concerned. Careful observation of the natural results of cider drinking have brought most careful thinkers to the inevitable belief that it is the cause of great mischief to the physical system of those using it, that it throws out of balance the mind, destroys the equilibrium of the feelings, causing headache and an almost uncontrollable irritability from which proceeds much strife and bitterness.

A late tragedy in Northfield, Mass., demonstrates this. A father and son who lived near each other and both drank sour cider, imbibed much of the fiery fluid, and, as a consequence, quarreled much. The son loaded his gun with a heavy charge of shot and determined to shoot his father. They came into close conflict, and the muzzle of the gun was turned in some way from the father toward the son, and when it was discharged sent the heavy load which it contained into the bowels of the son, killing him on the spot. It is said that no other intoxicating liquor possesses the power of making men contentious as much as cider. After it has acquired the alcoholic quality and become sour, it is fit for nothing except the manufacture of vinegar. When it has turned to vinegar, it has lost its intoxicating power, and may be used for a variety of culinary purposes. But let all persons beware of the use of cider. A deadly serpent lurks within it.

Alcohol regularly applied to a farmer's stomach will remove the boards from the fence, let the cattle into his crops, kill his fruit trees, mortgage his farm and sow his fields with wild oats and thistles. It will take the paint off his buildings, break the glass out of his windows and fill them with rags. It will take the gloss from his clothes and polish from his manners, subdue his reason and arouse his passions, bring sorrow and disgrace upon his family and topple him into a drunkard's grave.

Announcement.

I will be at Ripley, Ill., Oct. 4, and hold a meeting for one week. At Blue Mound, Mo. Oct. 13, and through the week following. At Bosworth, Mo. Oct. 20, and week following. At Big Creek Church, Neosho Co. Kan. Oct. 27, and over Sunday. Brethren in the different localities take notice.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Brethren:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 24, 1894. NO. 40.

Poetry.

Life's Battle.

The following lines composed by J. J. Cady and read at the Nebraska Annual Conference, and sent to THE RESTITUTION by request.

Brother, Sister, on life's pathway,
Are you striving with your might?
Are you pressing toward the Kingdom,
Are you ever in the right?

Does your feet sometimes slip backward
As you press toward the goal?
And life's billows surge around you,
As they sweep, resist roll?

Look up, brother, grasp the anchor,
He will take you safely through,
Jesus is a faithful Captain,
He gave His life for me, for you.

Take to you the whole armor,
Right to conquer, fight to win,
There is not triumphant nothing
You can ask, I can contain.

Do you want to be immortal,
And see Jesus as he is?
Then leave worldly things behind you
Or you never can be His.

Oh, forsake all worldly pleasure,
Be thou faithful to the end,
Hear the words of Jesus saying,
I will be your truest friend.

I will guide you to that haven
You shall safely reach the goal
When the storms of life are over,
Where no billows ever roll.

In this world of sin and sorrow,
Oft he's with cries and tears,
Be you pray, "Our heavenly Father,
Drive away all doubts and fears."

Keep me in thy love and favor,
In that straight and narrow way,
Bring me home at Christ's appearing,
To the realms of endless day."

This should be the Christian's watchword,
Cast on Him your every care,
Forget not to watch and rejoice,
Forget not your daily prayer.

Brother, Sister, I'm sure you,
For life's race will soon be o'er.
Keep the faith, and work for Jesus,
Your reward will then be sure.

Ought Christians to be Partners with Unbelievers?

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." 2 Cor. vi. 14.

The design of Jehovah in calling Israel out of Egypt was to separate the nation from all other nations for himself. Egypt and the rest of the world were idolators. Even Abraham was called out of an idolatrous land, and separated from his father's family, which "served other gods." And because he believed, and obeyed the Lord, he received promises and covenants of blessing, ratified by an oath. So also his fleshly posterity, the children of Israel, having been called out of Egypt, was delivered by the hand of Moses, and while in camp before Sinai, he Lord directed his servant to say unto them, "Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then yo shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation," Exod. xix. 5, 6. The covenant he made with them required obedience to the ten commandments, and all the statutes and ordinances which he appointed for them to observe. The covenant however was soon broken by them, and they provoked the Lord for forty years in the wilderness, so that they fell there; "there was not left a man of them, save Caleb the son Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun," Num. xxvi. 65; that is, of the 603,550 which were numbered in the wilderness of Sinai.

The apostle Paul wrote to the Corinthians a word of caution, based on the example of the Israelites in the wilderness. Read 1 Cor. x. 1-11. He says, "Our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and all were immersed into Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and all ate the same spiritual (typical) food, and all drank the same spiritual (typical) drink; for they drank [water] from a spiritual (typical) rock which followed them; (but the Rock was the Anointed one.) With the greater number of them, however, God was not well pleased: for they were laid prostrate in the desert. Now these things were made types for us, in order that we might not be lusters after evil things, even as they lusted. Nor become image-worshipers nor practice fornication, nor tempt the Lord—neither murmur as some murmured. But these things happened to them typically, and were written for our admonition, on whom the ends of the ages have come." And again Paul informs us, that "whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patiences and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." Rom. xv. 4. As the types, shadows and examples of the Mosaic dispensation were written for our profit, we may read and learn whatever Moses and the prophets wrote that will illustrate and help us to understand the teachings of Jesus and his apostles. Christians of the apostolic order are a called-out people—"called by the gospel to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ," 2 Thess. ii. 14; God "hath called you unto his kingdom and glory," 1 Thess. ii. 12; and "called us unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord," 1 Cor. i 9. To call is to invite to follow as a disciple, as in Mark i. 16-20. The gospel call is to sinners, "to turn them from darkness to light, and from the powers of Satan unto God," Acts xxvi. 18; and as it is God who calls by the gospel, it is that we "should show forth the praises of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvellous light. 1 Peter ii. 9. As the call is to sinners, those who obey it are the called out ones—"the called of Jesus Christ"—"beloved of God, called saints," or holy ones, Rom. i. 6, 7. A change of state, condition, and character is implied. There is a change or transformation takes place, described as a quickening—"even when we were dead in sins, hath he quickened (made alive) us together with Christ," etc; Eph. ii. 1-6; also, "a passing from death to life," John v. 24; 1 John iii. 14. If the gospel call is accepted and obeyed a change of state takes place. The sinner is justified by faith, and made free from sin, when he obeys from the heart the form of doctrine which the apostles preached. Rom. v. 1; vi. 17, 18. "The form of doctrine" which they preached was, remission of sins by immersion into the name of Jesus Christ. Acts ii. 38. Thus they "purified their souls in obeying the truth." 1 Pet. i. 22.

It is evidently the design of the gospel call to separate a people for the name of the Lord. Acts xv. 14. The nation of Israel was first invited to this high privilege, but they failed through disobedience. Though of the circumcision, they were uncircumcised in heart and ears. The gospel call was even offered first to the Jews, though they had killed the heir to the inheritance, and persecuted the disciples; but when they nationally rejected the great salvation, because offered through Jesus, the Word of life was then sent to the Gentiles. Acts xiii. 46. Therefore one body is now formed of believing Jews and Gentiles, the called out ones, named the body of Christ—"the new man, which according to God has been created in righteousness and holiness of the truth." Eph. iv. 24. "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works," Eph. ii. 10. This ecclesia, or body of Christ, is God's family—a holy temple—builded together for a habitation of God in Spirit.

The gospel call is to holiness of life;—God has chosen those who believe "as a first fruit for salvation in sanctification of spirit and belief of truth," 2 Thess. ii. 13; and "this is the will of God, even your sanctification," 1 Thess. iv. 3; "abstain from all appearance of evil; and may the God of peace himself sanctify you wholly; and may your whole person—spirit, soul, and body—be preserved blameless in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. v. 22, 23. Sanctification or holiness implies separation for the service of God. Jesus was a perfect pattern of sanctification. He prayed his Father to keep his disciples from the evil that is in the world, and "to sanctify them through the truth." John xvii. 15-19. The truth—the word of God—the gospel, is the sanctifying agent, and is able to build up, and to give an inheritance among the sanctified. Acts xx. 32.

The Scriptural meaning of sanctification may be learned from the use of the word under the law. The principal idea connected with the Word is separation for a special use or purpose. The first-born of Israel, both of man and beast, were sanctified or set apart for the Lord. Exod. xiii. 2, 11-13. Then the Levites were chosen instead of the first-born among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle; and the Levites shall be mine. I am the Lord." Num. iii. 45; viii. 17, 18. The Levites were given to Aaron and his sons as a gift for the Lord, to the service of the tabernacle for the congregation. Num. xviii. 6. And as neither the priests nor Levites had any inheritance in the land, the rest of the tribes were required to offer a heave offering unto the Lord of a tenth of their increase for their support. The tithes were given to the Levites to inherit; and they were required to offer a tenth part of the best portion of those tithes for a heave offering for the Lord for the use of the priests. Num. xviii. 20-32. The priests, the Levites, and everything pertaining to them in their office were sanctified to the Lord, and called holy; and also the nation, because severed and separated from other people. Their days of rest were holy sabbaths—their feasts—sacrifices—oblations, etc., were holiness to the Lord, etc. Notwithstanding all the laws, commandments, and ordinances given them, and promises of temporal blessings, to keep them a distinct and separate people from other nations, yet it was true as Daniel said, when confessing their sins—"We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments; * * * * Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing from thy precepts, and from thy judgments;.....Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing that they might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him." Dan. ix. 5, 11. And even after their restoration from the seventy years' captivity in Babylon, and a further trial of some hundreds of years, there was no improvement; for Paul writing about the Jews, said, "who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, but are contrary to all men: forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins always: for wrath is come upon them to the uttermost." 1 Thess. ii. 15, 16.

Here we have the example of a chosen and holy nation departing from the law, and breaking the covenant of the Lord their God, and the consequences which followed. The nation of Israel has a typical significance which cannot be ignored, especially when we consider what Paul says—"who are Israelites; to whom belong the sonship, and the glory, and the covenants, and the law-giving, and the rites of service, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and from whom is the Anointed, according to the flesh; he who is over all, God blessed to the ages. Amen." Rom. ix. 4, 5. We should remember that as we have been baptized into Christ, we are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 27-29. As Christ is the one Seed of both Abraham and David, he is the heir to the promised inheritance of the land, and also of the throne and kingdom, Gen. xiii. 14, 15; Gal. iii. 16, 17; Luke i. 31-33; so Gentiles, who by faith and baptism are adopted into the family of God, have become joint-heirs with Abraham, David, Christ, and those of the fleshly seed who are of the Abrahamic faith and disposition. Christ by the cross has reconciled both Jew and Gentile unto God, and formed them into one body; and to this divine family, called "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people," he has given eternal life, and the first or chief place in the kingdom of God, on the condition of being faithful unto death. Rev. ii. 10; iii. 21. "For we are partakers with Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end." Heb. iii. 14; iv. 1, 2.

Can believers of the apostolic order be partners or associates with Christ and with unbelievers at the same time? What says the Word? See the text, and following verses. The law prohibited the Israelites to make a covenant with other people, or to make marriages with them. Exod. xxiii. 32; Deut. vii. 1-4; Josh. xxiii. 11-13; Neh. x. 28-30; xiii. 23-31; Ezra x. As to the marriage relation read what Paul says in 1 Cor. viii.; and Jesus in Matt. v. 31, 32; Luke xvi. 18. Jesus said that his disciples were not of the world, "even as I am not of the world," (John xvii. 14-16) and he prayed the Father to keep them from the evil. The apostle John says, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him," 1 John ii. 15-17; and Jas. iv. 4 declares, "whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." Do we not manifest our love or friendship to a person by association and appreciation? Jesus said to his disciples, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." John xv. 14. This is the test by which we may measure ourselves and others. Jesus showed his love to his Father by keeping his commandments, (John xiv. 31; xv. 10; x. 17, 18;) even unto death. Israel failed in attaining that which they desired, because they followed their own counsels; (Psa. lxxxi. 11-16; Isa. xlviii. 17-19;) so if we follow their example we shall fail to obtain the prize of our high calling. Phil. iii. 14, 18, 19.

Israel, according to the flesh, is called by Jehovah "my first-born," Exod. iv. 22; and when delivered from Egypt, he said by the prophet—"Out of Egypt I have called my son," Hoshea xi. 1; and "I gave Egypt for thy ransom." Isa. xliii. 3. Israel is a type of Jesus, the one seed of Abraham, and those who are in him. And according to Matt. ii. 13-15, Jesus was taken into Egypt, when a child, to save his life, and then called out of it. Egypt may be taken as a symbol of the darkness, slavery, misery, and death in which the world is placed by sin; and the deliverance of Israel out of that house of bondage may be understood as symbolical of our deliverance from the power of darkness into the wonderful light of the gospel. Israel was redeemed by an immense sacrifice of life—all the first-born of Egypt died, both of man and beast. Exod. xii. 12, 29, 30. Also, the entire host of Pharaoh which pursued Israel into the Red Sea were drowned. Chap. xiv. 27, 28. We have been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ from the slavery and dominion of sin, so "that henceforth we should not serve sin." Israel covenanted with Jehovah to be his people, and to serve him alone as their God. But they soon forget the Lord, and turned to idols, and lusted after evil things. In heart they despised "the pleasant land," and desired to return to Egypt. Therefore the Lord swore that they should all die in the wilderness, and not enter the promised land. The apostle exhorts us, "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God." Heb. iii. 12; iv. 1.

But "they are not all Israel, which are of Israel, neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children; but, In Isaac shall thy seed be called," Rom. ix. 6, 7. So we see there are two seeds—one of the flesh, and one of the promise; and there are two covenants—the old and the new. The old or Sinaitic covenant, which gendereth to bondage, is well represented by Hagar, Sarah's bond maid, and corresponds to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But the new covenant, or the exalted Jerusalem, represents the free-woman, or Sarah, our mother. "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." See Gal. iv. 22-31. Then, as we are free, no longer slaves to sin, but the children of God, why should we not maintain our freedom? Let us not become entangled with a yoke of bondage any more, whatever that may be; the Jews were unable to bear the yoke of bondage to the law, under which they formerly lived, and Peter spoke against Gentile disciples being placed under such a yoke. Acts xv. 10. But may we not yoke ourselves if we desire to do so? Yes, lawfully we may; that is, under law to Christ. If we are unequally yoked, we transgress, and sin against ourselves. We suffer present loss, and endanger our future salvation. Such a course would be unwise, to say the least. The temptation may be for present advantage, which under certain circumstances, would be of great force. "But let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. There hath no temptation taken you but such as is in common to men; but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." 1 Cor. x. 12, 13. Worldly gain, or fame, or honor, should not tempt us to form alliances with the world. We should rather follow the example of Moses, who refused the dignities of Pharaoh's court, and "chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of the Anointed greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward." Heb. xi. 24-26. So also Jesus, "who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame." chap. xii. 2. And Paul said, "I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them as refuse, that I may win Christ." Phil. iii. 8. "No man can serve two masters;" we cannot serve Christ and the world. Paul reminds Timothy "that no man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier," 2 Tim. ii. 4; so the Christian soldier, if he would "fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life," cannot participate in all the plans, schemes, and combinations of worldly men. They may be praiseworthy and advantageous for those who are only looking for temporal good, but for a Christian who is looking for the unseen, eternal things, they will only be a hindrance, a temptation, and a snare, and may cause him to fall in the battle. We enlisted for the war, and to obtain the victory. It is to the victor that the reward is promised. Rev. ii. 26; iii. 21. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." Rom. xiii. 12. The armor of light is described in Eph. vi. 10-17—which please read.

And now let me in conclusion say, that if we would obtain the victory, we must put on the armor, and fight lawfully; if we would run so as to obtain, we must "lay aside every weight, and the sin which so easily besets us;" and if we would be "the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty," we must obey his voice, and come out of all unholy alliances, and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." 2 Cor. vi. 14-18; vii. 1.

If the reader will only take the trouble to read the references given in the foregoing article, he will be amply repaid for his trouble. I could not quote at length without occupying too much space.

Harmony Asked For?

I find the following in RESTITUTION of Sept. 26, 1894:—

"In behalf of some of the afflicted ones of the One Body, Brother and Sister Sanford request Bro. B. Wilson to harmonize Jas. v. 14; 1 Tim. v. 23; 2 Tim. iv. 20; Phil. ii. 26-27; Acts ix. 37; John xi. 3, with the positions taken in his article in RESTITUTION for August 8th."

As I see nothing contradictory in my article to what is found stated in the above references, my answer will be short and easy. In fact there is really nothing to harmonize. With respect to Jas. v. 14, 15, "Is any sick among you? let him call," etc., the position I took in reference to this advice of the apostle James, was that the sickness here spoken of, "refers to bodily diseases which came upon them as a punishment for transgression;" something similar to "the sin unto death," in 1 John v. 16, 17; and of the judgments Paul alludes to in 1 Cor. xi. 27-34. As the apostles had power given them to inflict punishment sometimes upon offenders, so they had power also on repentance to remove the judgment, or provide means by which it could be done, as in this of the apostle James.

The advice of Paul to Timothy to "use a little wine for his stomach's sake and his often infirmities," 1 Tim. v. 23, in no wise conflicts with my position. Timothy was not sick, but probably of a weakly constitution, and as he had much work to do as an evangelist, Paul gives him some timely and salutary advice for the benefit of his health.

2 Tim. iv 20, and Phil. 25-30, which mentions the sickness of Trophemus and Epaphroditus—these two believers are the only ones named as sick in all the epistles. This I distinctly stated in my article. There are allusions made to sickness in other places, how brought on, and provision made for its removal.

The cases of Tabitha or Dorcas in Acts ix. 37, and of Lazarus in John xi. 3, were of sickness which ended in death. It is highly probable that both Martha and Mary were correct in their supposition, when they said to Jesus, "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." They knew that he would have cured him of the sickness, see John xi. 21, 32. But as in the case of Lazarus, a message was sent to Jesus, saying, "Lord, he whom thou lovest is sick;" so the disciples at Joppa, hearing that Peter was at Lydda, sent two men to him saying, "Do not delay to come to us." In both cases, the sick persons died before the arrival of the parties sent for. No doubt the object was to have the sick ones healed, but death was permitted, that God might be glorified, John xi. 4, 60. Hence they were restored to life, and the result was, that many who saw and knew of these things believed.

Nebraska Conference.

Report of the Church of God of St. Paul, Neb., as read at annual conference held at Cambridge from Sept. 14th to 24th, 1894.

The gospel of the kingdom was first preached at St. Paul in June of the year 1893. Bro. Adams then came and declared the truth in his earnest, fearless way, and a few were baptized, but there was no church organized until Nov. 5, 1893. We now have a membership of about 45. Since the organization of the church we have had Sunday school, social meetings and preaching services regularly. We have Sunday school and preaching in the afternoon, and social meeting in the evening. Owing to the zealous and untiring efforts of Bro. Bartlett, together with his ability and thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, and also to the interest manifested by all the members, we have prospered in our work and we feel that the Lord has blessed us. We take up but one collection on each first day of the week. Since our organization we have received $57.24 besides other money paid the evangelist. From this we have paid our incidental expenses, and now have $16.70 in the treasury.

RENA M. GORDON, Sec.

In connection with the above report I wish to add a few items that were overlooked in my report of the annual conference. A special feature of the conference was a children's meeting conducted by Sister Dora Harlan and illustrated from the blackboard. She showed them that as a candle gives a greater light than a match, and a lamp a greater light than a candle, so little boys and girls should reflect a small light, and as they grow older and become men and women, should by good acts and deeds illuminate every one around them by the great lights which they reflect. It seems to me that if at our annual meetings we have social and children's meetings, exhorting and encouraging one another, striving to know what is our duty to each other and to our children instead of spending time in discussing questions on which we may perhaps be divided, and which are not the most essential to our salvation, more permanent good will result and our influence reach out, till it will be felt far and near, so I say let us spend more time in instructing the young, for the nearer a child's life is in accordance with God's law, the less he have to lay aside, and the easier it will be to live a perfect Christian when adopted into the family of Christ. Viewing it from every standpoint we believe a vast amount of good can be accomplished during the coming year if every one will give the wheel a push, and when you can say a word of encouragement or write a short article for THE RESTITUTION, and always be in place at the social meetings with something good to offer, and the cause of Christ will most surely prosper. Yours for advancement.

J. J. CADY.

Our post of duty is never in more than one place at a time. For the time being, we always belong in one place only. If we recognize this truth, we shall never have reason to fear that we ought, perhaps, to be somewhere else than just where we are, when we are in a place where our present duties,—and we never have a right to be anywhere, even for a moment, where it is not our duty to be, There is no such thing as a choice between duties; the choice is always to be where we belong; and it is wrong for us not to be there.—*S. NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given to the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association, that the regular annual meeting will be held at Plymouth, Ind., on Saturday, Nov. 17, 1894, for the election of a Board of Directors, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the Association.

ROBERT RAILSBACK, Pres.
Attest:
A. R. UNDERWOOD, Secy.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

THERE being five Wednesdays in this month there will be no issue of this paper next week.

WE will be under obligation to any one who will give us the present address of F. T. Wilson, former address, 917 W. Grand Ave., Des Moines, Ia.

IT grieves us to say that the grim monster has again invaded the afflicted Household of Faith at Salem. On Saturday the 13th, we were summoned to conduct the funeral services of the beloved, and long afflicted Sister Burton. Further notice of whose life, and faith, and hope, will appear later.

THE Czar of Russia is reported as near death's door, and naturally much anxiety is felt regarding the future ruler of that empire, as the son who succeeds him may change the existing policy of the government. One son, Grand Duke George, is advised by his father to renounce his claims, as he is in poor health. The student of prophecy necessarily watches these changes in the policy of governments, and Russia especially. The present conflict between China and Japan may bring others in, and the nations of Europe may have to settle old scores sooner than they wish.

A DEVOUT old brother was on the way to meeting, and having plenty of time he took out the Grand Old Book and read as he went. Presently he was accosted with "Good Morning, Mr. P—, "Ah, Good Morning" replied the brother; "I was reading my Father's will as I walked along." "Well, what has he left you?" asked his friend. "He has bequeathed me a hundredfold more in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting," replied the brother. A beautiful reply.

MR. ST. GEORGE MIVART is a distinguished Roman Catholic layman, a student of natural history, has written some of the best treatises in opposition to the theories of the Evolutionists, who seek to find man's origin in the ape. He has been writing in the nineteenth century against Universalism, as irreconcilable with all Catholic doctrine, but argues that even for those who are shut out from the "beatific vision," there will be for all eternity a real and true happiness in hell. Even at the worst he represents that hell may be better than the experiences of bad men in this life.—But we notice that Mr. Mivart has been taken to task by a priest, who asks, "What is the advantage of an infallible church if upon so elementary a doctrine as that of our future destiny, we are left in doubt?"

...says, "The Bible alone, of all books in the world, instead of uttering the opinions of the successive ages that produced it, has been the antagonist of these opinions, and victor over them all. It maintained the unity of God amid all the darkness of western polytheism; the vivid personality of God against eastern pantheism; the ineffable purity and holiness of God against the obscenities of Egyptian and Cannanitish idolatry; the omnipresence of God against the heathen theories of Gods many and Lords many; teaching salvation by grace through faith just when and where the great schools of philosophy were glorifying their schemes of human regeneration,—teaching the resurrection of the body, and that this mortal must put on immortality, just when Socrates and Plato on the one hand had theorized for man an immortality that excluded the body, and Epicurus and his swinish herd on the other hand were teaching practical atheism. In all these things the Bible was in advance of the ages in which it was written, and the antagonist of the false teaching of those ages."

THIS little pick-up, entitled, "Never mind what they say." may be useful to some sensitive soul, perhaps, and if so will pay for insertion.

Don't worry or fret'
About what people think,
Or your ways or your terms,
Of your food or your drink,
If you know you're doing
Your best every day,
With the right on your side,
Never mind what "they" say.

Lay out in the morning
Your plans for each hour,
And never forget
That Old Time is a power.
This also remember
Along truths old and new,
The world is too busy
To think much of you.

Then let us, forgetting
The lascivious throng
That loafes us daily
While marching along,
Press onward and upward,
And make no delay—
And though people will talk,
Never mind what "they" say.

Then garner the minutes
That make up the hours,
And pluck in your pilgrimage
Heaven's bright flowers.
Such grumblers as sure you
Your currency will not pay,
With conscience at rest,
Never mind what "they" say.

Justification by Faith. No. 5.

We are told in Rom. v. 17 that "by one man's offence death reigned by one;" and in the 18th verse, that "by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation." All men are but the multiplication of Adam; they possess the same nature and therefore suffer the same kind of death, they return to the dust from whence they were taken. The law of sin and death, then, would utterly extinguish every son and daughter of Adam. But we must mention a thought that occurs here. The words "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" explain better than any others could, what death means; now we ask if Christ had died as the substitute of all men would he have gone to dust? If substitution [illegible] a place in the Divine Economy, was he not suffered to [illegible] instead of all men? What part of the penalty remitted in his case? If so, how was that part of the debt paid? Is not the fact that all men still return to dust proof that it is not paid, and that men pay it each one for himself as a part of the original Adam?

And we ask the candid searcher for God's truth in the premises, if the condemnation which came upon all men by the offence of one, does not rest upon all still, seeing that substitution has been fairly disproved, and men still return to dust? Presuming no exception will be taken to this, we remark, that no kind of life at all could have been enjoyed if the law of sin and death were in full operation to all eternity; and the question to solve is, what did the Almighty do to avert this calamity? How could it be mitigated without compromising the principles embodied in the divine government? Or, How could he be just, that is, exact all the law required, and at the same time justify the sinners?

As sin was certainly the cause of death, it is safe to say that death would operate till sin was pardoned. Certainly it was God's prerogative to say on what conditions he would pardon. He certainly never said he would pardon providing some one would die instead of all men, because they would need no pardon under those circumstances. And doubly certain is it, that no vicarious work or suffering enters into the divine scheme when we read in Romans iii. 24 "Being justified freely, by his grace (favor) through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus." Would it be true to say we are justified freely by his grace, if some one else had assumed all our liabilities, or even a part of them? We trust our readers will weigh well these questions, and their consequences, because two opposite things cannot be true.

How, then did God become at once just and the justifier? We have an explicit answer in the next verse where it says God set forth his Son to be a propitiation. In what way? "Through faith in his blood to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God." We have already seen that there would have been no need of pardon, or remission of past sin, if the doctrine of substitution be true. But although Christ died, man still needed pardon: and that pardon was conditioned upon faith in his blood. Why faith in his blood? Because his blood ratified, made effective, the life-giving covenant; and this gives one reason why there was no remission of sin without the shedding of blood.

We submit, then, that there was no room for the forbearance of God which the apostle speaks of if Christ had died as the sinner's substitute.

Coming to the 20th verse, we have a reiteration of this great justifying principle, in these words, "To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness, that he might be just, and the justifier," (of whom? all men? No;) of him which believeth in Jesus." We humbly admit that the CONDITIONS of the Gospel of the grace of God constitute the means man must employ in order to close up the breach created between him and his maker; and this process has been called religion, because that word signifies the reuniting of something which has been severed. Man had no religion before he sinned, and needed none; but this is only incidentally thrown in, so that our readers may rightly estimate what on every hand is called religion.

Paul was a workman that needed not to be ashamed, and there is no danger of finding him stultifying himself, so we will bring together several of his statements in setting forth this great foundation truth:—

In Rom. v. 18, He says condemnation came upon all men by the offense of one, (man). The 12th verse shows that condemnation to be death,—"death by sin;" the loss of their natural life; and they had no other to be deprived of. This doom awaited all, although they did not sin as Adam did, because he begat children in his own likeness, mortal, or subject to death.

All will admit that no one can be saved unless (1) he can get out from under the condemnation of the law of sin and death which came upon all by the offence of one, and (2) be justified,—freed from his individual sins, i. e.—pardoned, forgiven.

We submit, that as but one justifying principle has been revealed to man, he must be freed from the law of sin and death on the same principle as he is freed from his individual sins, namely, BY FAITH.

Of course what we say of this matter, however plausible, is without value unless it be sustained by the living Word. If we can show an example or application of the principle stated in the precious paragraph it will be of immense value in this investigation; our readers are therefore invited to turn again to the 8th of Romans, where it says:—"There is therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit; for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

Here the apostle speaks for himself. He was, in common with all others, under condemnation by the offence of Adam, apart from any sin of his own. But at the writing of the epistle, a change had taken place, by means of God's saving power, the gospel. He was now in Christ Jesus and walked after the Spirit. Compliance with the law of the Spirit of life had freed him legally from the law of sin and death. Physically, or constitutionally, he was not yet changed; the time to be freed from his body of death, for which he thanked God in anticipation, in chap. 7, and vs. 21, 25 had not come. This change was the subject of hope, and hence he was only saved by hope, as yet. There was no legal necessity for him to die, only a physical necessity, as we may be assured, for if he had remained over unto the coming of the Lord he would not have died; he says so. In all candor we ask, if Paul was freed from the law of sin and death by being in Christ and by compliance with the law of the spirit of life, and walking after the Spirit, must not all others be freed from it in the same way? If not freed from it in that way, must not death eternally hold them? The idea that they live simply because Christ died is based on vicarious suffering, which is without foundation in truth, because not justified by faith from Adam's offence before they died, and so like sheep are laid in the grave. Psa. xlix. 14-20—Please read.

In our next we expect to show, that not only was no ransom paid to God, but that God pays a ransom for man; thus completely turning the tables. We also expect to take up the subject of the resurrection of the unjust, after showing who they are.

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 5.

We think it has been clearly proven that one and only one power is employed by God to save men, and that that power is the gospel; and that the principle upon which God justified men has always been faith and obedience; and that an arbitrary law was not given for salvation purposes, but to control, isolate the descendants of Abraham who had no faith, and prevent them from mixing with Gentiles, so that God's promise that Abraham's seed should be the Savior of the world could be fulfilled,—that the law was enacted for a time, the purpose being to conduct them down to the coming of the Christ, and then having served the purpose of its enactment, it ceased to be. This was objected by the minister referred to at the beginning because Jesus in Matt. xxiv. told them to pray that their flight be not in the winter, nor on the sabbath day, which showed that it was not abolished 40 years later, at any rate, and this was in reply, also to our statement that the law, according to Paul, was nailed to the cross" with Christ. This at first appears formidable, but on closer examination is found quite in harmony with our views of the truth. The expression "nailed it to the cross was a figurative one. Paul did not mean that Jesus, before being nailed to the cross himself took a hammer and nails and thus fastened the document to the wood, so we must look at it figuratively. Death by crucifixion was usually a very lingering one. Really it was death by exhaustion. Men would suffer on for days. The allusion to the cross at all, proves the expiration of the law—its death. 2ndly it proves a slow, lingering death. The law of the sabbath had to be observed by certain sacrifices, and this could only be done at the Temple, which stood about 40 years longer, and then the law that had been added because Abraham's descendants were transgressors, was done away, after being in force some 1500 years, or thereabouts. It had served the divine purpose—Abraham's seed had come according to promise.

To show that we have the truth, it is only necessary to read Heb. viii. 13, "In that he saith a new covenant, He (God) hath made the first old." Not dead, exactly, yet, observe, but decrepid. It then continues, "Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." And you will see that this is something more than what is called so often by those who differ with us—"the ceremonial, or law of ordinances." It was the covenant or agreement itself; (as is abundantly proven by verses 5-10) based upon promises that were to vanish away, or give place to the new, of which the old was only a shadow, and is a BETTER covenant than the old because based upon better promises,—better because the old one brought temporal, and the new eternal blessings. And if our readers want to know how much better than the old the new is, and at the same time have infallible proof that what is done away, called the old covenant was actually the ten commandments written on stone, let them read 2 Cor. iii. 7 where it says, "but if the MINISTRATION OF DEATH written and engraven in stones was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance, which was to be DONE AWAY, how shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory. . . . For if that which IS DONE AWAY was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious. Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech, and not as Moses, which put a vail over his face that the children of Israel could not look steadfastly to the end of that which is abolished; but their minds were blinded, for unto this day remaineth the same vail, untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament, which vail is taken away in Christ."

In the above we have the most absolute proof that the law graven on the stones was done away in Christ, and men cannot reject it with impunity, and all the twisting and turning in the world will not alter it. There is nothing here about ceremonial law being done away in Christ. It positively says it was what was graven upon stones was done away in Christ. There were no ceremonies graven on those stones. The law of ten commandments is called the ministration of death, in the 7th verse; and it is astounding that men should persistently try to place themselves under that ministration of death after God has graciously supplanted it by the glorious ministration of the Spirit, and given them the privilege of saying with Paul, Rom. viii. 1, 2, 3. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." How so, Paul? v. 2. "For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death, for what the law [of commandments] could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and by a sacrifice for sin, margin, condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law [providing it had been possible to keep it, which it was not] might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." The fact that the law could not be kept because of the weakness and perversity of the flesh, made it the very ministration of death instead of life.

Profoundly grateful for these words of the Spirit, we are prepared to learn what it was the law could not do, from Gal. iii. 19, "For if there had been a law which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." Here are two things the law could not do:—It could not give life, the very thing mortals need most, and secondly it could not constitute a person righteous, the one essential thing for unrighteous man. This lesson is taught over and over again in other words, so that we are quite sure we have the truth of the matter.

The last passage quoted is absolute proof that as the law could not give life, or enable a man to become righteous before God,—God graciously sent his Son to do what the law could not do,—make a way by which we could be justified; and those who wish to know on what principle this was accomplished can read in Rom. iv. 25 of Christ "who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification," and the next verse says, "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." What is the cause of this rejoicing and hope? The justification by faith which was not obtainable by the law was one cause, and another is given in Rom. v. 10 where we learn that we shall be saved by the life of Christ, which the law could not impart; and still another is found in these words: "And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have attained the at-one-ment. Absolutely there is no law in the conditions of salvation, except the law of faith and obedience.

A Converted Purse.

"Certainly. I am grateful to you for asking me. Put me down for twenty-five dollars."

A look of pleased surprise passed over the solicitor's face, succeeded by another of perplexity; for it happened that he knew that his friend had precisely the same salary as he, and that twenty-five dollars was a generous fraction of his income.

"Oh! that's more than we expect, Frank,—and than you can afford, too, I fear," he added, with the freedom of a comrade.

"Oh, no! let me tell you how it is, Jack. You know I turned right-about-face when I became a Christian, last winter; and I resolved at the start not to enter into a junior partnership with the world, and a senior partnership with the church.

"You knew my habits. I was not an inordinate smoker. Three cigars a day, with a treat to the fellows now and then, cut off, reduced my expenses a hundred dollars a year. Then I had a careless fashion, ruinous to my digestion, of adding a bottle of claret, or some fancy, indigestible pudding or cream, at least twice a week, to a wholesome lunch. Looked squarely in the face, and given its right name, it was an indulgence of unlawful appetite; so I made seventy-five dollars a year by stopping that. Sunday headaches, too, went at the same time.

"One day I was looking over my neckties to find some particular color, and I found I had thirty-seven, with at least ten scarf-pins. That made me run through my accounts next day—they weren't very well kept, but I guessed as nearly as I could—to see what there was in my wardrobe that would leave me better dressed, from a Christian and artistic point of view, too, for that matter, if I never wore it again; and I am ashamed to say I found I had a hundred and fifty dollars worth of drygoods on hand that was the price, not of good taste, but mere caprice.

"Now I don't propose to submit to a taxation in behalf of my weaknesses and vices, and be niggardly with the church I've promised before God and man to support and increase.

"There you have it all! I spent over three hundred a year, you see, in the service of appetite and fashion, for things that made me less a man. I've transferred that mortgage; yes, I can afford easily that twenty-five dollars, especially when it is to rescue some other fellow deeper in than I was. Come to think of it, make it thirty! The other five is a thank-offering!"—S. S. Times.

The British Empire.

The British Empire is a political creation unparalleled in the world's history, not only by its extent and population, in both which respects it is slightly surpassed by China, but because, with an area of more than 10,000,000 square miles and with 352,000,000 inhabitants, it is scattered over the whole globe. It embraces all zones from the icy wilderness of Hudson Bay to the tropical jungles of India and the mahogany forests of Honduras; there is scarcely a product which a British province does not bring forth in excellent quality, and not less various are the degrees of civilization of its inhabitants from the Kaffirs of the cape to the highly cultivated citizens of Toronto or Sydney. We find with Christians of all confessions 200,000,000 Hindoos, about 70,000,000 Mohammedans, and 8,000,000 Buddhists; and the Bible is printed in 130 languages and dialects represented in the empire, yet, notwithstanding such promiscuous elements, the government—with rare exceptions, maintains order and [illegible] of dissolution is visible.—Forum.

Ancient Relics from Coptos.

Kuft is the ancient Coptos. It is 400 miles from Cairo and 110 miles from the Red Sea. It is believed by Egyptologists that the descendants of the kings of the twelfth dynasty established themselves at Coptos and thus kept up communication with other countries by means of the Red Sea. Dr. Flinders Petrie has been at work at Coptos and has discovered there many objects of historical importance. It is even believed that Coptos was the place whence came the Egyptian families of Kings. Under the ruins of a Ptolemaic temple statues have been found with figures of elephants and ostriches. Dr. Petrie writes: "The whole evidence, internal and external, points to these colossi and the carvings on them being long anterior to the rise of historical monuments." The date of these relics is supposedly somewhat earlier than B. C. 5,000.

The Zion Association of Baltimore was organized on Sunday, September 9th, for the purpose of fostering the national idea among the Jews, and to co-operate with similar societies in Europe and the United States, with the object of colonizing Palestine with Hebrews, who are emigrating from Russia and other countries in Europe. The society will, in the near future, publish a declaration of its principles, giving the reason that led to the formation of this Society in Baltimore, and calling upon all Hebrews to unite and assist the great work which is carried on in the land of our fathers.—Jewish Exponent.

OBITUARY.

Samuel Andrews died at his home in Benton Harbor, Mich., on Sept. 28, 1894, aged 78 years, and 15 days. He was buried on Sunday following. The sermon was preached by the Christian minister of which church deceased was a member. He was converted to the Advent faith when Moses Hull first preached through Indiana. He was ordained as a minister and preached the Word for several years. He buried his wife a year ago last April, after that feeling lonesome and having no church of his own near he united with the Christian church. He was the father of 10 children only 3 of whom survive him, the only son that grew to manhood gave his life for his country. A noble man has gone to rest awaiting the true Christain's reward of a resurrection from the dead.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. [illegible] Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

Previously published,	$155.00
Previously used, for S. C. Oliver, to go to Oklahoma,	$15.00

I am now situated so I can do evangelist work this winter, anywhere within 100 miles of Sac City, Iowa. Brethren wishing my help please write me.

What must I do to be Saved?

The above question is of great importance, as it implies that there is a possibility of being lost, and embraces so many duties devolving upon each individual of faith, obedience and love, as to call in requisition every faculty of man, that he may love the Lord with all his heart, soul, might, mind, strength, and his neighbor as himself.

Such is the duty of man, as recorded in Luke x. 27, the answer of Christ to the lawyer who understood that upon these two hung all the law and the prohbets.

In the 11th chapter, 28th verse, we read, "Blessed are they that hear the Word of God, and keep it."

In the 18th chapter, 18-22 verses inclusive, in answer to the question of the ruler:—What must I do to inherit eternal life? Jesus referred him to five of the commandments which hung on the law of love to man.

In Eccl. xii. 13, Solomon says, "Fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man."

James, who seems to have written his entire letter to the generation which should witness the close of this dispensation, as the five chapters appear to indicate, and which epistle is addressed to the twelve tribes in the 2nd chapter, magnifies the Royal law expressly quoting two commands, and declaring if we offend in one point we are guilty of all.

John the beloved disciple, in the 2nd chapter of his 1st epistle says, "Hereby we do know that we know him if we keep his commandments," and in the 7th verse says, "I write no new commandment but an old commandment, which ye had from the beginning," and in the 5th chapter says his commands are not grievous, and in Rev. xxii. the same apostle says, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

In John iii. we find that Nicodemus after confessing our Lord to be a teacher from God, was told as a requirement to follow his faith, "Ye must be born again."

It does not appear as is taught by some, that Nicodemus came to Jesus by night because he was ashamed to be seen in his company by day, on the contrary his duties of the day necessitated a coming by night. He believed and need not to be ashamed, but in addition to his belief was told, "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

It seems quite necessary to obey the injunction of our Lord to "Search the Scriptures" in order to understand what he meant by being born of the water and Spirit.

A review of those texts of Scripture in which water is referred to as an agency in our salvation, leads us to believe baptism to be the birth by water. The reason therefore seems to me conclusive, the word "born" being defined by lexicologists, means brought forth, to give life, a new life. Let us investigate and see if in the language of Christ or his apostles we can find a warrant for this position.

In the German translation the text reads, "Except a man be born out of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Baptism signifies burial, according to Rom. vi. 3-5, and if a man be buried in water and is not brought forth or born out of it he must of necessity perish, but it brought out his faith in the resurrection of Christ is shown forth, and in the language of Paul he is begotten unto a lively or living hope of his own resurrection, by the resurrection of Christ from the dead.

In 1 Cor. xv. 29, Paul put the question, "Why baptize for the dead if the dead rise not?" He understood that baptism must precede Spirit birth or the resurrection. John the Baptist, the forerunner of Christ, immersed for the remission of sins, but declared, "he that cometh after me shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire, i. e., shall give new life to the righteous at the resurrection, but will burn the chaff, (wicked) with unquenchable fire.

The righteous shall be born of the Spirit at the resurrection. We are aware that this position is controverted by many; but a close analysis of the subject in Sacred Writ carries with it an irresistable conclusion that to be converted, and to be born of the Spirit are two separate occurrences.

1. In Rev. i. 5, Christ is called the first begotten of the dead, and as begotten and born are words used interchangeably in the Scriptures, it is safe to read it born, here then to be resurrected is a birth. In 1 Cor. xv. 20, our Lord is called the first fruits of that birth. He also gave the required proof of that Spiritual birth by appearing with the disciples the doors being shut and they not knowing from whence he had come. He told Nicodemus as recorded in John iii. that every one that is born of the Spirit could so do.

2. A converted man does not give evidence of being guided by the Spirit, nor can two converted agree always. Paul and Barnabas quarreled, Paul withstood Peter to the face because he dissembled and was to be blamed.

3. A man born of the Spirit must be Spiritual and we are taught in 1 Cor. xv. that a man becomes a Spiritual body at the resurrection from the dead. In Col. i. 16, the Savior is called the first-born of every creature, and why? He was not born before Adam after the flesh. No, but the first fruits of the heavenly birth, that by his ransom we may have strong consolation to flee for refuge to the hope set before us.

4. The Lord told Nicodemus that which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit. When we were born of the flesh we came to the world that now is, when we shall be born of the Spirit we shall enter the world to come, and this thought is in perfect harmony with 1 Cor. xv. that there is a natural body and a Spiritual body. The latter he declares to be given at the resurrection of the dead. The question here presents itself, "how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation."

5. When we are born of the Spirit we are ready to enter the kingdom of God, the inheritance promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and they who are blessed with faithful Abraham. We are then ready to say, "O grave, where is thy victory? O death where is thy sting?" We are then ready to take that kingdom over which Daniel tells us four great universal empires held sway. The Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman. We shall then witness the destruction of the Russian army according to Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix. Shall see the Mosque of Omar razed to the ground and the holy city supercede as foretold in Rev. xx. Acts xv. Luke xxi Matt. xxiv. xxv. Ezek. xl. xlviii. Zech. xiv. Heb. xi.

We see the restoration of all things as foretold by Peter in Acts iii. and foretold by all the holy prophets since the world began. Shall see the Star of Jacob according to Num. xxiv. The Bright and Morning Star, according to Rev. xxii. The Sun of Righteousness, who shall arise with healing in his wings. He who cometh with dyed garments from Bozrah, to receive all who have kept the commands of God and the faith of Jesus, who have not lifted up their souls unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully, who have given a cup of cold water in his name, who have visited the widows and fatherless in their afflictions and kept themselves unspotted from the world, those who have come up through great tribulation and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

Rom. viii. 11, also teaches a resurrection birth, "but if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you."

Peter in his first epistle i. 18, teaches the resurrection birth, that Christ being put to death in the flesh, was quickened, (made alive) by the Spirit. We believe that by that birth he became the Son of God.

Rom. i. 3, 4, declares him to be of the seed of David, but declared to be the Son of God according to the Spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead.

Christ says in Luke xx. 36, of the resurrected, "neither can they die any more, for they are equal to the angels and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection."

The apostle tells us, "as many as believe gave he power to become the Sons of God. Belief or faith then becomes a very necessary requirement in order to be saved. Believe not only that Christ exists and died, and arose from the tomb, but in the doctrines which his Word teaches when rightly divided.

The Scriptures teach that there is to be a time when a nation is to be born at once. Isa. lxvi. 7, 8, reads, "Before she (Zion) travailed she brought forth, before her pain came she was delivered of a man-child. (Christ.) Who hath heard of such a thing? Who hath seen such things?

Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day?

Shall a nation be born at once? For as soon as Zion travailed she brought forth her children.

The context proves this to be yet to come, for the next verse says they shall be delighted with the abundance of her glory, and the same chapter very explicitly tells of the gathering of his people, and that from one new moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another shall all flesh come to worship before the Lord.

Paul says in 1 Thess. iv. 14, "for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep will God bring with him. and that we which remain shall be caught up with them.

Brethren, and friends, the time for the travail of Zion is near. Already the nations are in distress, and those who wait for redemption in Israel are in anxiety by its delay, waiting, hoping, and trusting the holy promises.

Soon the pangs of deliverance and then the glory, the peace, which shall be like a flowing river.

May the duties taught by the Lord and his apostles be the subject of our daily lives, that at the birth of the royal nation, in the twinkling of an eye, we too, may come before his presence with exceeding joy.

Truly God is good to Israel, even such as are of a clean heart, Ps. lxx. 1.

Turn again, O God, and cause thy face to shine and we shall be saved, Ps. lxxx. 3.

"Obedience is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams."

Bright sheaves of promise bound with truth
The Holy Book enfold,
Gives ogre wisdom to the youth,
Youths brightness to the old.
Unfolds its wisdom, hear its word,
In wisdom's fountain laved,
See it is written ye have heard,
By faith ye shall be saved.

The Truth.

During the years of our lives, when amid the trials and temptations which come to every one of us, we could overcome all of them if we would only study more closely God's Word.

Our greatest trial should be the question in each mind, "What is the prospect of me gaining life eternal, a life free from death?"

The way to get this life is plain and simple. You must have faith in the truths which are revealed in God's Word, repent and be baptized into Christ's body.

God is truthful in all his works, for it is written in Deut. xxxii. 4, "He is the Rock, his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment; a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he."

In Ps. lvii. 10, David spoke of his truthfulness as, "I will praise thee O Lord, among the people; I will sing unto thee among the nations; for thy mercy is great unto the heavens, and thy truth unto the clouds."

Ps. c. 5, "The Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting, and his truth endureth to all generations."

Ps. cxvii. 2, "The prophets say, happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God."

It is also told by Nebuchadnezzar in Daniel v. 37, "Now I Nebuchadnezzar, praise and extol, and honor the King of heaven, all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment, and those that walk in pride he is able to abase."

Concerning the song of them that overcome the beast, it is written in Rev. xv. 3, "And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty. Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints. Who shall not fear thee O Lord, and glorify thy name, for thou only art holy; for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest."

John iv. 24, "God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in Spirit and in truth."

In John xvii. 17, Christ prayeth for believers saying, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth."

To be constantly in the faith you should study to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth.

In the battle-field of life you should proudly stand as is written in Eph. vi. 14, "Having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked."

The truth should at all times be observed. We must not only study the truthfulness of God but we must also strive to be like him, for the lip of truth shall be established forever; but a lying tongue is but for a moment." Prov. xii. 19.

What do we think of a person who professes to be a Christian but is very untruthful? Is he or she like Christ? We all know that if we will keep the commandments of God we will therefore gain peace and joy.

Some of the things that we must do are found in Zachariah viii. 16, "Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbor; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates, and let none of you imagine evil in your heart against his neighbor; and love no false oath; for all these are things that I hate, saith the Lord."

May more of God's people see and have faith in his precious truths is my prayer.

Sadie Williams.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Assembled in coference, students of the law of your God:—of the literal and spiritual seed of Israel. May the God of your fathers of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob be with you and bless you:—

The Bible is a wonderful book. All of peace and of blessing that we enjoy comes from its influence. You are here tabernacling together because of the Bible. It has called and you have answered. You have come to pay homage to the great and holy Being who has given us this Book; to thank him for the blessings it has conferred, and for the precious hope it has brought you of continued life and greater blessings beyond. You have come to help one another do this in a befitting manner; to praise him with united voices for his goodness and love; to exhort your dear fellow-pilgrims to faithfulness in his service; to warn them of the danger there is of losing all. And I want to help you, I want to be there in spirit, earnestly beseeching you to let no trivial thing steal away the precious moments of your waiting before God. You have come to his courts:—ah what a thought! for there is no greater —let it be with reverence and with thanksgiving. If you would have him here with you, listening, approving, shedding abroad his comforting spirit, quickening you to new life and love, helping you to convert others to the glad and happy way that leads to eternal joys, you must first go down into you own hearts, and clean out the rubbish. There must be no poison in the cellar if the house of life is to be clean and sweet, and life-giving to the lost and the sick with sin. Put on the garments of righteousness. Purify your hearts by obeying the truth, let it sink deep into your understanding that if you are not clean—if you do not make yourselves worthy—you will lose all that you have been striving for,—the crown, the kingdom, the life and more woful thought—you will drag others down to death. Jesus was "subject unto his parents," and subject unto God: he did the will of his Father in heaven, be ye also subject unto God. "Present your bodies a living sacrifice to God." That which is to be made a sacrifice must be without blemish, it must be holy. You have heard and have believed the gospel. You have been baptized, do not rest there, be transformed, let your nature be made over. I say these things because I feel that our spiritual condition is not what it should be, that we are not careful enough in our daily walk, not earnest enough in making preparation for such seasons as these, not fearful enough lest our influence be on the side of evil.

Be watchful, dear ones, it is our glorious mission to tell of a coming Savior. The signs have appeared that assure us that his coming is near. Only watchfulness and prayer will make you worthy to escape the dreadful things that are falling in swift judgment upon a wicked and rebellious world, only watchfulness and prayer will qualify you to stand before the Son of Man. You will be cut asunder and have your portion with the hypocrites if we are not found watching. "Have your loins girded, your lights burning like men waiting for their Lord, so you may open immediately at his knocking. Blessed are the servants that the Lord shall find watching when he comes."

S. Roxana Wing.

Labourers are Few.

Jesus, the great teacher of teachers, our example, Lord and Master, when engaged in the public proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom, seeing the multitudes tired and scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd, says to his disciples, "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into the harvest." Matt. ix. 35-38. Brethren and sisters, how is it with us today? Let us cast about and take a glance at the field and see, O see how few the laborers are. The field is large and the laborers are few, very few. Men and women on every hand are perishing without hope. It is much like men and women starving to death in a land of plenty, because of extravagance, bad management, and a lack of generosity. So, brethren, our duty is to be generous, both in temporal and Spiritual things, offer the Bread of Life to dying mortality. Invite them to Jesus, the Life Giver. Not only so, but let us unitedly pray to the Lord of the harvest to send more laborers into the harvest field. Men and women who are in earnest, who have the work at heart, and who are not afraid to work and trust the Lord of the harvest. I know several brothers and sisters who are well informed and able to teach, who ought to "be about their Father's business." Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest. Jesus in his Word is calling for you to go and help to gather in the sheaves. Will you go?

Editor Restitution:

I just arrived at home from Crawford Co., where I have been preaching more or less for 24 years. On Sunday I buried in baptism an aged couple, Brother and Sister Wilson. The brother was 78, and the sister 62. It was a surprise to many to see such old people start for the kingdom of God, but they have entered the race to work for the prize of the high calling of Christ in God. Their reason for putting it off so long was the conflicting doctrines taught by the so-called Church, but when they heard the truth they saw the beauty of the message of the kingdom of God, a big difference between a good gospel and one that is full of hell-fire and brimstone.

The Truth is gaining ground, men that once rejected it are now beginning to believe it. But we are not doing what we ought to do. Many of our brethren are smoking and chewing tobacco, and are taking from 2 to 4 political papers, but oh how hard it is to raise money to take The Restitution, and they can always find 10 cents or more to attend places of amusement. But how about the preacher? "Oh well, we cannot afford to help him very much, we have to pay our taxes and interest on borrowed money." Now is preaching the gospel one man's work, or does it belong to the whole body? I am of the opinion that it belongs to every member, whether north, south, east or west. The gospel knows no bounds, 1 Thess. i. 8. I have three calls, in different places, will we let these people cry for food? I am ready to go anywhere the brethren will send me. My living is all I want. Come let us be up and doing while it is called today for the night will soon come.

May the Lord bless us, and may we all work together in the Master's cause.

John Foor.

Be Generous, Be Kind.

It is always a good plan to weigh well our words and actions, as the words we speak, and the acts we do, have a lasting influence over those with whom we associate. If we would always do this, the angry words we want to say, would remain unsaid, the sarcastic letter we were aching to write, to wound the feelings of perhaps [a brother or a sister, would never be written, and in after years we would praise God that we guarded our tongues, and did not let the enemy of our soul use it. A writer has truly said, that the power of the human tongue is inculculable, we can measure the effects of the tides and winds, and weigh the planets; but no one has ever invented a method for calculating the influence of the tongue for good or evil. It is man's most fearful weapon of attack, it has the sting of the adder, the poison of the asp, when in use by the enemy.

But, when converted to God, and used for his glory, kind and loving will be our words and thoughts, "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

Dear Household of Faith, let us be careful what we say, let us be generous and kind, patient and merciful.

"Oh, let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess."

Dear Institution:

Brothers and sisters of the One Faith. I will once more write you, to let you know I am still living, and my paper comes every week, and oh, what a comfort it gives me, but when you think you can't send it free any longer just stop it, for times are so hard. As there is no Church of God here I never attend any of their meetings, and I am like Bro. George Haynes, I could never live in any other church, and do my duty towards God.

I saw in my last paper the notice of the death of my beloved Brother H. J. Hill. I have known him from childhood. Another good man is gone. I pray for the recovery of his faithful wife. I am 81 years old and in very poor health. I live with my children but make my home with my youngest, Mrs. Flora Brown. I do love to read the letters from my dear brothers and sisters, they cheer me in my old days. I will close for this time.

Looking for the soon coming kingdom, I am your Sister.

Conference Report.

The "Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Mich., Oct., 12, 1884," is the title of a page in God's "Record of my Sheep." All that is recorded on that page, only he knows, but we have the promise that he that giveth a cup of water in his name shall not lose his reward, and we know of many good deeds performed in his name.

The meeting was well attended from the beginning, and yet, all were not there who have before met with those of like precious faith. Some are silently sleeping, waiting. May God comfort those made lonely. Some were necessarily detained at home, and our Father knows if there were others who might have met and thrown out their influence for the furtherance of his cause. However, those opportunities are gone. The labors performed, pleasant hours, all been credited. Not one omitted. Each opposite the proper name.

Brother Wagoner of Ind. and Bro. and Sister Woodward did good work for the Master, speaking words of truth in simplicity and earnestness.

Although none put on Christ by baptism, yet much good was done, as was shown by the interest manifested by non-professors, two or three stating that the way looked brighter, and that they intended searching the Scriptures, and if they found those things to be so they were ready to obey.

At the business meeting M. A. Woodward of Dutton, Mich., was chosen Cor. Sec'y. Matters pertaining to the furtherance of evangelical work were earnestly discussed, but no definite plan formed.

F. L. Austin, Sec.

Report of Meeting.

The quarterly meeting held at the Union Church, Ill., Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13, and 14, was very well attended by the brethren and friends, and the best of interest was manifested, and we have reason to believe that good will be the result.

Bro. D. M. Hudler did all the preaching, and that in his earnest and convincing way.

The conference year closed at this meeting and the brethren re-engaged Brother Hudler for another year to preach at the following named places,—Antioch, Dixon, Adaline, Lanark, Plum River, Union, Pleasant Valley, Silver Creek, Rochelle, and Slicks. The last three named places shall have preaching as often as can be reached, the other seven will have preaching every eight weeks.

Commencing with June, 1893, there has come into my hands as treasurer $602.00, which amount has been paid out for preaching, to the evangelist and other brethren called in for help.

For the coming year we have good obligations for the sum of $437.00, which we expect to swell to over $500.00. This sum has been freely given, and we have reason to think none have been oppressed, nor feel that it is not lent to the Lord. Our section of the country has surely been blessed with good crops, and the brethren gave freely.

J. M. Glotfelty, Treas.

Announcement.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, Ind., commencing on Friday, Nov. 16, 1894, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday.

At our last conference it was ordered that this conference be carried on strictly in accordance with the constitution which provides that each church shall be entitled to one vote, or delegate, at all meetings of the conference, for every ten members, and one for every fraction of six, said votes to be cast by the delegates of the several churches. Each organized church, no matter how small, will be entitled to one vote or delegate.

It was further ordered that the president instruct the churches to authorize their delegates to state to the conference the amount their churches can donate for evangelical purposes, also that the churches be notified of the action of the conference, and unless they comply with the same they will not be recognized by the conference.

Now, brethren, this is an urgent call, and it is absolutely necessary that there be a wakening up if we are going to still continue to carry on the conference, let every organization realize that they are a part of it, and that your help is needed to carry on the work. Dont think this is for some one else, for it is for you, and dont think that because there has'nt been much done, that there can't be, but forth every effort and you will be blessed for it.

Let the brethren and sisters come full of love for the truth, and have a grand good meeting.

J. F. Wagoner, Pres.
A. C. Roberts, Sec'y.

Change of Address.

On and after Sept. 25, 1894, my address will be Roseville, Illinois, instead of Plymouth, Ind. Correspondents will please take notice.

Scriptural.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 15.

1. And certain ones had gone down from Joudaia, and were teaching the brethren, that if ye have not been circumcised according to the custom of Mouses ye cannot be saved.

2. And a standing having occurred and not a little discusion on the part of Paulos and Barnabas with them they appointed Paulos and Barnabas and certain others of them to go up to the apostles and elders in Hierousalem about this question.

3. Then they being sent by the church, went through Phoinike and Samarein recounting the conversion of the nations; and were causing great joy to all the brethren.

4. And when they had arrived in Hieroslama, they had a reception from the church and the apostles and the elders, and told all that God had done in connection with them.

5. But certain ones of those from the sect of the Pharisees who had experienced faith stood out, saying that it was necessary to circumcise them and enjoin on them to watch to keep (the esoteric watch) the law of Mouses.

6. And the apostles and elders were gathered together to see about this matter (lit. word).

7. And when much disension had occurred, Petros arose and said unto them, Men, brethren, ye know well that from days of old God choose out from among you that the nations through my mouth should hear the Word of God and experience faith.

8. And the God who knoweth hearts hath testified in having given to them the Sanctified Spirit even as also to us;

9. And hath discriminated in no respect between us and them in having cleansed their hearts in the faith.

10. Now then why are ye proving God to have placed a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were strong enough to carry?

11. On the other hand through the grace of the Lord Jesous we trust we have been saved in the same way that they also do.

12. And all the multitude became silent and listened to Barnabas and Paulos as they discoursed all the signs and prodigies God had caused among the nations through them.

13. And after they had become silent Jakobos answered and said, Men, brethren, may ye have hearkened unto me.

14. Simeon hath discoursed even how God first took an oversight to take out from among the nations a laity (royal-people) for his name.

15. And with this agree the words of the prophets even as hath been written;

16. After these events I will return and build up the tabernacle of Daveid that hath fallen down, and the overturned parts thereof I will build up and I will make it upright,

17. That the residue of men (or mankind) may seek out the Lord, and all the nations upon whom my name hath been called, saith the Lord who is the author of these things,

18. Well known since there was an animate age.

19. Therefore I judge that we do not trouble those from the nations who are turning unto God,

20. Except to enjoin on them that they refrain from things offered to idols, and from fornication, and from that which hath been strangled, and from blood.

21. For Mouses hath had those who were heralding him in the synagogues city by city, during every sabbatic period he being read.

22. It seemed best then to the apostles and elders along with the whole church to send chosen men of influence of theirs to Antiochaia along with Paulos and Barnabas, Joudas the one called Barsabbas and Silas, men who were leaders among the brethren,

23. They having written through their hand as follows: The apostles and brother elders to the brethren throughout Antiochais and Suria and Kilikia of the nations greeting:

24. Since we have heard that certain ones of ours have disturbed you with words, fitting up your souls with directions which we have not sent,

25. It hath seemed best to us when we had got together with one accord to send chosen men of influence unto you along with our beloved Barnabas and Paulos,

26. Men who have exposed (or surrendered) their lives for the name of our Lord Jesous Christ.

27. We have sent therefore Joudas and Silas and them to announce the same things by word.

28. For it hath seemed best to the Sanctified Spirit and to us to impose no further burden upon you than these things that are necessary, namely,

29. That ye refrain from idolotrous practices and from blood and from things strangled and from fornication, watching to keep yourselves from which ye will do well. Be robust.

30. They then when they had been dismissed, went down to Antiocheia, and gathering together the multitude they delivered the epistle;

31. And when they had read it they were rejoiced with the consolation.

32. And Joudas and Silas they also being prophets, consoled the brethren with many a word and s'ayed them up;

33. And having spent their time they were dismissed from the brethren with peace unto those who had sent them.

35. But Paulos and Barnabas continued to pass time in Antiocheia, in company with many others also, teaching and announcing the good tidings of the Word of the Lord.

36. And some days afterward Paulos said unto Barnabas, Let us return and take an oversight of the brethren throughout every city in which we have published the Word of the Lord, to see how they are.

37. And Barnabas counseled that they take along with them also Joannes called Markos;

38. But Paulos thought that the one who stood away from them from Pamphylia and did not go along with them unto the works —that they should not take him along with them,

39. And there occurred a paroxysm (or something more than a dispassionate difference of opinion) so that they separated from one another, and Barnabas taking Markos with him sailed away to Kupros;

40. And Paulos selecting Silas went out, committed to the grace of God by the brethren.

41. And he went through Suria and Kilikia staying up the churches.

COMMENT.

"To watch to keep" instead of "keep" R. V. the esoteric watch.

"From days of old" instead of "a good while ago" R. V.

"Experience faith" instead of "believe" R. V.

"And the God who knoweth hearts" instead of "God which knoweth the heart" R. V.

"In the faith" instead of "by faith" R. V.

"Why are ye proving God to have placed" instead of "why tempt ye God that ye should put," etc. R. V. What does this mean? Is it possible to tempt God? James says it is not. They were trying here to prove to the rest of the church that God had already placed this yoke upon them all, and Paul and Barnabas had taken the negative of this question, and proved it too, indisputably.

"We trust we have been saved" instead of "we believe we shall be saved" R. V.—A very important difference of statement, I think.

"Prodigies" instead of "wonders" R. V. There is another word for "wonders" in the Greek.

"A laity" instead of "a people" R. V.

"Took an oversight" instead of "did visit" R. V.

The 16-17 and 18th verses are not poetry, blank verse nor any other kind of metrical composition as indicated in the R. V.

"Since an animate age" instead of "from the beginning of the world" R. V. It is evident from what has been revealed in the Scriptures that "the cosmos of the heavens and the earth" or "the world" in that sense was created some thousands of years before "the animate creation" was placed upon the earth, and God could not have revealed these things here spoken of to an intelligent humanity before they were here to receive the revelation. What do you think about it reader?

"Those who" seems to me better grammar than "them which" R. R. Look it up.

"Except to, etc." instead of "but that" R. V.

"Hath had" instead of "hath" R. V.

"Heralding him" instead of "preach him" R. V.

"Silas" "a quiet asterisk."

"Brother elders" instead of "elder brethren" R. V.

"Fitting up your souls with directions which we have not sent" instead of "subverting your souls; to whom we gave no commandment" R. V.

"Joudas and Silas and them to announce, etc." instead of "Joudas and Silas who themselves also shall tell, etc." R. V.

"Be robust" instead of "Farewell" R. V.—that is as we use the term now.

"A paroxysm" instead of "a sharp contention" R. V. as already explained. Same word in "let not the sun go down on your wrath."

"Kilikia" from Kilix the ancestor of the Kilikians—the brother of the Kadmos who is said to have brought letters to the Greeks.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Conference Report.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God known as the Northern Nebraska and Southern Dakota conference met near Fairfax, South Dakota, Oct. 5, 1893, and held a business session and adjourned until our next quarterly meeting as we found so many people in that immediate section of the country that were sick and not able to go to meeting, and the weather being severe and cold no one could turn out and as soon as the weather would admit we had to return back to our homes. We were sorry to learn the sad news of the suffering people in South Dakota, as they raised no crops the last year on account of the severe drouth, which leaves them in a suffering condition, and would say that if they don't get aid very soon their condition will be pitiable indeed, for this reason the people are not in a condition to carry on our conference as they expected. Brothers and Sisters in the name of our blessed Savior and Redeemer, let us remember those dear suffering ones of South Dakota in our prayers as the Lord is our only help in the time of need. Also let us remember that we are living in perilous times, so let us be ready for the coming King when the nations of the earth and all evil systems shall be broken up and subdued, then we look for a new order of things to be ruled in righteousness by the coming of the Son of Man.

A letter of greeting was received from our dear and able brother John L. Wince of Pierceton, Indiana. The same was read and may the Lord be with our Brother Wince in all his deliberations, and may we also be ready to meet him in the kingdom to come.

Ed. "It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Poetry.

Go Work To-day.

"... the harvest-time is passing
And the summer will soon be dead.
My Father, work with Me to-day,
And I said, the Master said,
Oh, busy, busy world,
Where the reapers gather the sheaves,
God pity the idle hours I've
That might have 'Nothing but leaves!'

"I have walked earth's weary pathway
With the giddy throngs I've strong,
Where the blossoms hid serpents,
And the song drowned the moan;
Where the earth-face mocked the sunbeam,
And the death-chasm swept the sea,
But the presence of the Master
He has been by me each day."

Original.

"I Have Overcome."

"In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." John xvi. 33.

While in thoughtful meditation of the above Scripture, I said to myself, Oh, what would I not give could I but truthfully say from the heart: "I have overcome the world?" Alas! what is there worth living to in this world? Everything is transitory, changing, and passing away. Where is proud Babylon, Assyria, Palmyra, and Thebes? They rose and spread themselves in mighty grandeur, and are gone. Scarce a ruin tells of their former existence. Where are the former mighty kingdoms of Greece, Persia, Rome, Egypt, and other great empires, which have appeared and exercised their mighty power in the earth? Alas! like brilliant meteors they appeared for a brief period, and are gone!

The face of the world itself is on the change. Today we may witness the forest clothed in living green, and the fields also blossom in glory, but to-morrow it is gone.

The tree falls and decays, even the rocks crumble and pass away. Says Greenwood: "The firmest works of man too, are giving away. —the ivy clings to the mouldering tower—the briar hangs out from the shattered window.

In the spacious domes which once held our fathers, the serpent hisses, and the wild bird screams. The hills which were once crowded with all that taste, science, and labor could procure—which resounded with melody, and were lighted up with beauty are buried by their own ruins, mocked by their own desolation. The voice of merriment or of wailing, the steps of the busy or the idle, have ceased in the deserted courts."

Everything animated advances in age and passes off the stage of existence. We are also conscious that in a few short years the measured strokes of the funeral bell will announce our decease, and the clods of the valley will be our resting place. No one can stop the onward march of the dread chariot of death. All must fall beneath its ponderous wheels. You may be young with ruddy cheek, but he will blanch it, he will quench the fire of your eye, and command the heart to stand still.

Amidst all this change and uncertainty what is there which cannot be moved? which is certain, and which will abide forever? See Heb. xii. 25–28, "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven; whose voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear."

Who is it that will receive a "kingdom which cannot be moved?" See Rev. ii. 26. "He that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him will I give power over the nations." See also Rev. iii. 21. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."

Then it is overcomers only who are promised "a kingdom which cannot be moved." But how is it, can an overcomer be removed by death? See what Jesus says in Rev. ii. 11. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death."

Then it is overcomers only who have any promise of exemption from the "second death." See also 1 John ii. 17. "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

And it is the "will of God" that we should be overcomers. Then none need delude themselves with any thought that they will "abide forever," or receive "a kingdom which cannot be moved," unless in the first place they are overcomers.

Overcome what? Jesus says: "I have overcome the world," and we are expected to do likewise. "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God." 1 John v. 4, 5.

Then if we would overcome the world, we must have "faith," and a part of that faith is a belief "that Jesus is the Son of God." He who believes him to be the Son of Joseph, does not possess an overcomer's faith. Peter says: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."

One of the most difficult points in our warfare is to overcome personal temper. The wise man says: "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness. He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city."

O how it would help us, when we feel the heat of anger rising, could we but stop and reflect that we are not overcomers but we are being ourselves overcome if we allow the heat of temper to master us. Remember also that Jesus says: "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels."

Would you not feel very happy were you assured that Jesus would retain your name in "the book of life," and confess it before the blessed Father, and all the holy angels? This you can have providing you are an overcomer.

Another point in an overcomer's warfare is to overcome the filthiness of the flesh. Paul says, "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and Spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient; but rather giving of thanks. For this ye know, that no whoremonger nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolator, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God."

An overcomer can never indulge in "filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting." Let us be on our guard and check each one of them. What is so filthy as a tobacco chewer? he pollutes himself inwardly and outwardly, and defiles his breath so that he becomes offensive in the presence of those who do not use it. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

I well remember a dear brother who now sleeps in Jesus, who was a slave to his pipe. He determined to be an overcomer, so he took his spade and went into his garden and dug a hole, and put his pipe in, and said: "I will never smoke no more until that pipe grows." And as his pipe never grew, he never smoked again. He overcame the habit.

Says Jesus: "Behold I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown. Him that overcometh, will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name."

It seems as though a thousand foes were ever on the alert besetting the path of those who seek to overcome, but let us not be discouraged. Jesus says, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world," and he will surely help us, if we but fight courageously and trust him.

The character of an overcomer is to be admired. As a writer said, such a one is "a beautiful character, which reflects our Lord's purest image, is the truest wealth. Moth and rust cannot corrupt it; thieves cannot steal it. It is the only possession that will stand the crucial test of trial and sorrow, the fires of affliction, and come forth as silver seven times refined, it is the only treasure which we can carry with us through the garden gates, into the pure sunlight of the eternal world." And though crushed, like the leaves of a fragrant shrub, they then give forth their perfume.

Amid the harsh realities of life they preserve a sweet and gentle spirit, which can feel for other's woes, and pour the healing balm of love into a wounded heart.

They are blessed messengers of mercy sent forth to bless other lives. They are sunbeams that warm and cheer us, they melt the heart. They are indeed flowers full of odors; they leave only fragrant memories behind them.

May God bless the overcomers, and may we all join company with them.

W. H. WILSON.

Sundry Thoughts.

The perversion of the gospel combined with the spirit of faction and sect-making that began to work in the days of the apostles laid the foundation for the great apostacy, which in the course of time culminated in the manifestation of what Paul styles "that man of sin." The revelation of that "lawless one" and the apostacy that came first are related to each other as cause and effect. Had there never been any such thing as departing from God's truth by presumptuously perverting the gospel, there would be no place in the history of the world for the anti-christ. Indeed, the "man of sin" is the natural outgrowth of the legitimate fruit of apostacy. Whoever or whatever the "man of sin" "that lawless one" may be, he cannot be identified apart from those whose heritage is the fruit of the "secret iniquity" prevailing in apostolic times. The man of sin is the direct and legitimate child of sin. Sin is the transgression of known law, for where there is no law there is no sin. A sinner therefore is a "lawless one" in the sense of rejecting law, and deliberately refusing to yield obedience to its restraints.

The man of righteousness is the Lord Jesus, who condemned sin in the flesh—not as I apprehend by dying on the cross, but by a perfect obedience to the divine will and requirements in all things. He was in no sense a lawless character, but contrawise an obedient son—a "righteous servant," in all things under restraint, and never rebellious and disobedient. This was something new in the history of the world. He was in fact the new man, though made out of the old. He was begotten by the Holy Spirit excluding the will of the flesh, "made of a woman, made under the law," yet made of the same flesh nature that was under the curse of sin. All this was something new, and it is not improbable that the prophet Jeremiah alludes to this in the words "the Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, a woman shall compass a man." Jeremiah was certainly encouraging Israel as to the future development of Jehovah's purpose in their return from Babylon, and the manifestation of their long looked for Messiah. I am unable to conceive what this new thing could be as expressed in the words "a woman shall compass a man," unless it be the conception and birth of Jesus anointed as the Seed of the woman. The Lord Jesus is the beginning of the new creation—the head of the new world, and stands forth as the "man of righteousness"—the official and representative head of a family of new or resurrected ones, who have become new or renewed creatures in him by faith and obedience. God is creating a new family in the earth, involving trials and afflictions, self-denial and patience, more than the old Adamic man cares to endure. The "obedience of faith" comprehends more than the religionists and pietists of our day are willing to learn and accept. Indeed it is a difficult task for a man to educate himself, much more his unbelieving neighbors into a full willingness of mind to accept the truth in its purity and put away his own vanity and pride, and cheerfully yield obedience to the law of the spirit of life, as exemplified in the Lord Jesus. "Great is the secret of Godliness," says Paul, in contemplating the character and work of Jehovah's first born son. The secret of true piety must become a matter of experience to all who desire to attain unto eternal life by a godly walk and conversation. The world is full of piety of a certain kind, and often times have we come in contact with it, only to be deceived and disappointed, and made to feel how hollow and worthless is all pretense and show when the enlightening and sanctifying power of the truth is absent. Sometimes we meet with some whose piety is so apparent, that we are led to think and feel that this is our opportunity,—here is one who certainly venerates the Deity and revers his Word. Most assuredly we think he will respond to the truth, if he can only hear it. We prepare for the work—we approach him kindly—gently, even cautiously, calling attention to certain things taught in the Scriptures, and how irreconcilable they are with the dogmas of popular belief. Is it necessary to say more? Our disappointment is so sore and disheartening that we conclude for the time being, that we will not open our mouth again to a modern pietist. The love of the truth is essential to true piety. Enlightenment of the mind by the reception of Jehovah's Word must take place before we can even know what piety is. Jesus learned obedience by things he suffered. We are no better than he, neither is the world of mankind any better in our time than it was in his day. How then can loyalty to the truth be maintained by us, without suffering the evil speaking and persecution of sin. It is well to consider how graciously we have been visited, if it is our good fortune to have tasted of the "good word of God," and to have been "sprinkled with the blood of the covenant," reconciled to God by faith and obedience, to not let one day go by without earnestly thinking of our responsibility, and invoking the divine blessing to make our calling and salvation sure.

Some of the Gospel once Delivered.

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

The time has now come when the "gospel once for all delivered" to the church, should recommence its mission, and as there is an anathema pronounced upon all who preach any other, it behooves us individually to promulgate this, or finding offense therein, to hold our peace or controvert it at our peril. * * * * We do not believe that the inherent immortality of the soul is taught in the Scriptures, but rather that the direct opposite is found therein (study No. 6, page 11; study No. 8, page 222; study No. 7, page 283-286) and we conjure all those who, like ourselves were reared in the confusions that are bred of this original doctrine of the devil in Eden, to review the proof and hasten to the light as it is in Jesus Christ. "Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have everlasting life." And they teach of him in whom alone then canst even have conditional immortality. Now the truth of the whole matter is plainly set forth in the first four chapters of Genesis, and the case may be rested on the evidence they alone afford. The argument is as follows, 1st, Before Adam was created he certainly had no identity, no living soul as commonly defined; he was in the disintegrated dust of earth, and was blowing, in his unorganized state, where the spirit listed! Let us now see if man in his creation had any specific, physical pre-eminence over the beast, for our translators distinguish him as "a living soul," from the beast as a "living creature." In this they deceive us and confuse themselves and were guilty of misrepresentation, in that the original text uses one and the same word only in both cases! towlt nephesh (a creation, or a soul, as you wish, but with no distinction in either case!) Now the verb "to live" is chayah; "living" is translated from chai, both in Genesis i. 21, 28; and ii. 7; Genesis i. 21: "God created . . every living (chai) creature (nephesh)." So in Gen. ii. 7, "And man became a living (chai) creature (nephesh)." Verily dust they were (both of them!) and are, and unto it do they return! Now, the life of this dust is not the breath that God breathed into it—but the blood is the life thereof, as the Scripture testifieth, and the breath vivified it. It was this (his life) that Christ poured out—it was this that cried out from the ground when Cain killed Abel! God said not unto Abel, thy brother's soul hath appeared before me, as if forsooth his spirit had come up into some intermediate state! But he said "the sound (qol) of thy brother's blood crieth out unto me from the ground!" Abel was dead, his breath was knocked out of him, and his life was poured out of him; he no longer existed; he was as if he "had not been," he knew nothing at all, all his thoughts had "perished," his nephesh was dead and his identity annihilated! This question, thus far has had nothing whatever to do with the resurrection, or the second creation, and our only object is to make plain the completeness as to the individual of death as an end of life. The dead are in their grave (sheol)—nowhere else. There they await the change (resurrection) that in Christ Jesus is promised unto all. "Ye must be born again." Thank God for that! Now if this is written and taught in the Scriptures, it behooveth us to accept it speedily—for the remaining time now is short. And all who fail to see it will thereby suffer loss. The only logical way to investigate these facts is to "search the Scriptures." Try this with Young's Concordance that gives the Hebrew and Greek words as well as the English text and 90 per cent of the difficulty vanishes at once.—C. A. L. Totten, in our Race News-Leaflet.

Is not Christ the Everlasting Father?

Hearing a discussion in a Bible class on this subject brought the following thought—If we take Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as types—it would seem to make the matter plain. Abraham representing God, was the father of all Israel, etc. (of many nations). And the fact that Isaac was his only son (of promise) and also a father of Israel, did not in the least diminish Abraham's fatherhood, but helped in carrying it on, and in establishing his rightful claim thereto, and so of Jacob, these three are the triune fathers of Israel, and as such are all in one line, and inasmuch as Christ gives eternal life to all that obey him he becomes the everlasting father of all such, without diminishing in the least the glory of his and our superior Father of all.

Editor Restitution:

I was pleased with the article by Bro. W. H. Wilson in your paper of August 8th on Sunday school work. There is certainly a great need of instruction, given by those of our faith, for use in our Sunday schools. I do not know of any thing now published, regularly, for that purpose. I know attempts have been made to publish quarterlies and papers, but did not receive the support they should have had. There must be a good many Sunday schools among our people, there certainly are children. We should have something we can feel safe to place in the hands of our scholars, knowing that it is God's own truth there presented.

Will not some of the brothers and sisters, who are capable of presenting such instruction in a simple and interesting way, see if some arrangement cannot be made by which we can have weekly instruction for use in our schools. If not space in THE RESTITUTION, could not leaflets be used? The expense would be less than for quarterlies, and answer the same purpose, would be better for the younger scholars. Could we not have the same subjects for lessons as those used in other quarterlies. Your sister in Christ.

ANNA E. DRAW.

Dear Restitution:

I have written once before for this good paper, and as I read the good pieces, I feel as though I wanted to write something for the paper also, and I am glad to say that I am on the Lord's side and I feel as though I could not say or do enough for my dear Savior that has done so much for me, and I try each day to become more like him. I feel that his coming is very near and we have not much longer to work for him. Let us try to be more faithful, and have our lamps all trimmed and burning, ready to meet the Bridegroom when he shall come is the prayer of your Sister in Christ.

GERTRUDE EYER.

There is a vast difference between praying for each other and preying on each other.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION associates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

NOTICE TO STOCK-HOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given to the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association, that the regular annual meeting will be held at Plymouth, Ind., on Saturday, Nov. 17, 1894, for the election of a Board of Directors, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the Association.

ROBERT RAILSBACK, Pres.
Attest:
A. R. UNDERWOOD, Secy.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

THE City of Mexico was visited by an earthquake on Nov. 3, and a number of people killed.

DID you ever consider God's proposition to make you rich? It is this: "Give and it shall be given unto you."

EMPEROR William of Germany has dismissed Caprivi from his position as Chancellor, and chosen Prince Von Hohenlohe as his successor.

WE will be greatly obliged to any one who will send us the present address of A. D. Jones, late residence, North Side, Spokane Falls, Wash.

THE latest dispatches concerning the war between China and Japan indicates that the affair is far from an end, and the Japanese are in the lead so far.

THE Empress of China took poison, Oct. 31, and died from the effects. The Emperor had quarrelled with her and slapped her face, where upon she committed suicide.

ALEXANDER III, Czar of Russia died at Lavadia, in Crimea, where he had been taken for treatment, on Nov. 1, 1894. The Czarowitz Nicholas has been proclaimed Czar. Just what will be the course of this new sovereign, whether for peace or war, is yet unknown. The following from an English statesman will show the general feeling of anxiety. "Alexander's death for the moment unhinges the whole scheme of the balance of Europe. For all that appears to the contrary it may unhinge it permanently. The immediate future of Europe hangs upon that of Russia and the future of Russia, for all the data we possess for forming reliable estimate, is wrapped in impenetrable mystery. Never in European history was there so strange a moment. Who would have prophesied that a century after the French Revolution a continent of free and constitutional States would have its happiness depending upon the character of the youthful ruler of a byzantine autocracy? We know absolutely nothing which is at once authentic and valuable, as to the qualities and disposition of the new Czar. We hear all sorts of stories, but these are no more than worthless gossip. Whether Nicholas II. has a will of his own or is but a weakling, whether he has inherited the earnest and simple conscience of his father, or the subtle intellect of his grandfather, or the imaginative ambition, mysticism and craft of Napoleon's Alexander are—save, perhaps, to his mother—conjectures likewise."

...ARNESS are usually hindrances, not helpers. Busy workers seldom have time to criticise the work of others."

"THERE is no single day that passes, whether stormy or bright, from which we may not extract some happiness."

PLUTARCH said, "To do an evil action is base; to do a good action without incurring danger is common enough; but it is the part of a good man to do great and noble deeds, though he risks everything."

PHILLIP BROOKS said, and we think it good advice. "Set yourself earnestly to see what you were made to do, and then set yourself earnestly to do it; and the loftier your purpose is, the more sure you will be to make the world richer with every enrichment of yourself."

WE promise our readers some remarkable matter from the writings of Prof. Dimbleby, of England, in our next number, in relation to Bible times and seasons. Those who have read Prof. Totten with interest will be sure to read what this Eminent Scientist from over the water has to say upon the same theme.

ESPECIAL attention is called to the notice of the Indiana Conference which is to meet at this place next week. Brethren and Sisters, come prepared to do your duty. Remember, our work for men is to preach the gospel as Christ and his apostles taught. Speculating as to just what the all-wise Father has in store for his chosen ones, and for the balance of humanity, during the on-coming ages, other than is plainly revealed in the Bible, is time and effort worse than thrown away. Let our time and money be used in telling men and women what they must do to be saved, live right ourselves, and our reward and future life is assured by free gift from God. May we each be faithful.

JUST hear what Peter says about those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious; he says they are "Living stones;" and then enjoins them to be built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." "A chosen race,—a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for a purpose, that you may declare the perfection of him who called you out of darkness into his wonderful light; who once were not a people, but are now God's people; who had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy." It would be difficult to add anything to this statement of the Christian's status, we think. "Living Stones" in the house being erected for God to dwell in; a holy and royal priesthood, by virtue of an union with the Anointed to be King of Israel; called and pardoned for a purpose, and are God's people. Following this is the earnest entreaty to maintain this status by abstaining from fleshly desires which war against the life.

Communing With the Sects.

To Sister Bowman we would say, we think you are on the right track. You do well to call for a Bible reason before you consent to commune with the sects. If you adhere to that position you will never commune with them for the Bible reason for so doing will never be forth coming. You may well ask why you should leave them and then commune with them? If you have been called out of darkness into the marvelous light of God's truth you cannot sit with those who are in Egyptian darkness; what fellowship is there between such? If it was right for you to leave them, it cannot be right to return to them. To commune with them would be to say to them practically, "I believe the truth and you believe a lie; but I reckon it wont make much difference if you are sincere;" and that would imply that what of truth you had embraced was merely truth in the abstract, instead of the truth, the Word of the truth of the Gospel. The tone of your letter makes us hope better things of you. You will remember that Jesus prayed to the Father for his disciples, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is truth.' We trust that the truth has separated you from the sinners you refer to—that is sanctified you. We do not call them sinners reproachfully, but sorrowfully because the gospel of Christ is the power of ' ' unto salvation to every one that believeth, and that gospel is the sum of what the good God offers to bestow on condition of faith and obedience.

As they reject what God offers they are unbelievers, and unbelief is sin, a heinous sin. You are supposed to have had your sins pardoned when you from the heart believed the truth and put on Christ by baptism. As all this is foolishness to the human societies you speak of they must be sinners, and it was for that reason you are supposed to have left them. If they had been saints you would have left them at your peril. As they are strangers to the covenants of promise they are as completely without God in the world as were the Ephesians, (see chap. ii. 12, 13,) in like circumstances.

Read over the seven pillars of truth in the fourth of Ephesians often, and then the wiles of the adversary will not affect you. Read and ponder over 1 Cor. x. 16, 17, and then you will realize that it is not the Lord's table where God's truth is contemned, and you will have no desire to sit with those who professedly engage in a service intended to show forth the death of Christ till he come, while they have no hope or wish for his coming. We are making a great ado about nothing if truth is not essential to salvation, and for our part we would on no account baptize one who did not understand it to be a matter of life to believe and obey the truth, and of death not to do so.

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 6.

In resuming our studies we turn to the Great Apostle of the Gentiles and read Rom. iii. 20, "Therefore," (after showing them that what the law said, it said to those under the law,) "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his (God's) sight." Now follows the reason, "For by the law is the knowledge of sin; but now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets, even the righteousness of God by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all, and upon all them that believe, for there is no difference, (now, since the law is abolished) for all have sinned (Jews and Gentiles alike) and come short of the glory of God, being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. This is a wonderful Book indeed; it must be of God. It was given to thoroughly furnish his witnesses, and the way it anticipates all their wants by anticipating all the isms that would spring up in these last days excites our love and admiration. Why, if this statement, grand in its simplicity, were only believed with the heart by the Sabbatarian community they would disband at once and come together again as the Household of faith, and while burning their spurious pile of Gospels would rejoice with Paul that "the gospel of Christ" "is the power of God unto salvation."

We call attention to the fact that the 21st verse says that the righteousness of God by faith WITHOUT the deeds of the law, was actually witnessed (foreshown or predicted) in the law by the prophets, so that it was always a part of his programme that the law should only exist till it had answered the purpose for which it was given; and the Word of the Spirit in Paul for it, his purpose in this respect was announced both by the law and the prophets, and this should prepare us for the further statement in Gal. v. 4, that "Christ is become of no effect unto you; whosoever of you are justified by the law, ye are fallen from grace." (favor.) This is a fearful condition to be in. What does it mean? Why, we read "By grace (favor) are ye saved," so that to fall out of favor is to fail of salvation. Just so sure as Paul was speaking for God, so certain is it that justification can only be attained by faith in God's covenanted blessings, and obedience to the conditions exacted; and to seek justification by obedience to the law is to forfeit all claims upon the offices and work of Christ. The context proves that this solemn assertion applies both to the ceremonial observances and the ten commandments—the law as a whole. Plainly the law will not save because it cannot justify; plainly the gospel will save because faith in it will justify.

Sabbatarians, say the ten commandments are the law of God, and all others the law of Moses, bearing this in mind we propose to test it by what our Lord says to the lawyer in the 22nd of Matthew. Said the lawyer, "Master, which is the Great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment." But he did not stop there, but added, "And the second is like unto it, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Do our readers know that neither of these two greatest of God's laws are found among the ten? In view of the Sabbatarian claim we ask, does the law of Moses out-rank the law of God? Are any of our readers so blind that they cannot see that the two greatest commands, greater than either of those graven on stones, expired at the death of Christ if the Sabbatarians are correct.

Any candid person must admit that we have detected a stupendous blunder in the Sabbatarian theory, by turning to the 6th of Deut. where this first and greatest commandment is found, and reading as follows:—"These are the commandments, the statutes and the judgments which the Lord your God commanded to teach you." It is important to know that this greatest commandment was not given for some forty years after the ten were given; and the second greatest, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" is found in the 19th of Leviticus, and also given after the ten. Our Sabbatarian friends will have to settle it with Jesus, he says, "All the law and the prophets hang on these two," and they are not among the ten.

The truth of the matter is that God called Moses up into the Mount where he remained forty days; and two stones were delivered to him on which were graven ten commandments; but not one of them had any penalty attached to it. And when a man broke the fourth commandment by picking up sticks he had to be put in the lock-up while they found out what the penalty was to be.

In the face of all this, our friends claim that that law had been in force from creation. Just think of it: the law in force 2500 years during which time the whole world except one family were swept away with the besom of destruction for their wickedness, and yet no penalty was attached to the law of the Sabbath all that time. Even Moses knew nothing about such penalty!!!

Oh, is it not easy for people to believe what they want to believe? Is it not hard for them to believe what they do not want to believe!!

After Moses received the stones God told him to announce to the people that they were to be sanctified, and were to wash their clothes for two days and be ready for the 3rd day when God would come down in the sight of all the people. But when frightened by the lightnings and thunder and smoking mountain they moved away and asked Moses to speak to them instead, lest they die. God heard this request and granted it, and bid Moses say to them, "Get ye into your tents again;" but Moses was thus addressed: "But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will speak unto thee all the commandments (besides what were written upon the stones) and the statutes and judgments which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess. Ye shall observe to do therefore as the Lord your God commanded you. Ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left."

From this it is seen that the Great God was about to deliver these statutes and judgments to them himself, but at their request employed Moses to do it. Were they any the less God's laws because Moses delivered them to the people? Do we not read that Moses wrote all the words of the Lord? Ex. xxiv. 4, and in Deut. xxx. 10, we learn that they were written in a book called the "Book of the law:"—"If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in the book of the law, and if thou turn unto the Lord thy God with all thine heart and with all thy soul," etc.

We have in the above infallible evidence that there is only ONE SET of laws—they are all the laws of God, but Moses was the Mediator of the Sinaitic covenant. He was God's representative, God's lawgiver.

Justification by Faith. No. 6.

It might be urged against the idea advanced, that a person is freed from the law of sin and death by faith and obedience, that when our Governor pardons a prisoner the sentence is made void and the man goes free, and that a like result when God pardons should follow. This would be a very reasonable objection. But in addition to what we said in our last, we remark here, that there is no parallel between the Governor's pardon and that of God's. The Governor only restores the liberty and rights the man had been deprived of. God covenants not to restore the life that was doomed to be extinguished because he was in Adam, but divine, glorious, everlasting Life. There is a set time for the bestowment of that nature of existence, and this involves the temporary operation of death between pardon and resurrection; in God's mind the sentence is abrogated,—only the physical consequences are not immediately removed; but they will be, for the subjects of pardon belong to God, and God's dead men shall live.

We now propose to show that no ransom was ever paid to God. We are sorry it is necessary to do this, because every Bible believer ought to see that everything belongs to God, to begin with, and therefore it were IMPOSSIBLE for him to receive payment in full or in part for any benefit whatever. "By grace are ye saved."

True, we read of the "One Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." But was not this very Christ Jesus the gift of God? Is it not this same Christ Jesus who says to Nicodemus, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life; for God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved? God is the Savior then, and Jesus is the Divine Agent,—according to this Scripture. Surely no one will now deny that God the Father furnished the means for accomplishing his purpose to save all who would believe. And if he furnished the means, how can any reasonable person say he was paid a ransom?

But we read further that God was in this Christ Jesus reconciling the world unto himself. Is this compatible with the substitutionary idea? Let us see:—"The word reconcile is derived from the Latin words, re again, con together, and cilo, to move or excite. To reconcile, then, is to move or excite with a view to bringing together again. That implies that there has been a previous oneness, but that it has been severed; and the wonderful works performed by Jesus, and the ineffable words of beauty and love which he spake were all of God. God was the prime mover in the saving scheme. "God hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. v. 18, and the 20th verse adds: "Be ye reconciled to God;" that is, by accepting the provision made.

Another striking passage on this subject, is that of Isaiah liv. 16, which reads as follows:—"He (Jehovah) saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor, therefore his own arm brought salvation unto him, and his righteousness it sustained him." "There is no Savior besides me," Hosea xiii. 1. "Nothing could be clearer than that the breach was brought about by man, and that God initiated the healing process," and debt paying by another, or vicarious suffering, has no place in the divine scheme, so far as we can see.

We are distinctly told in Heb. ii. 13, 14, that Jesus partook of the same flesh and blood as that of the children whom God gave him. 1 Tim. ii. 5 says he gave himself a ransom for all: and in Matt. xx. 28 the faithful and true witness himself says he came to give his life a ransom for many. The life is in the blood. He gave his life by giving his blood. And it is held that the blood of this one person, that is the life of this one person was given up, as a substitute for the life of the whole race. We very reverently and tenderly ask if the blood of one was equivalent to that of the whole race?

If this question were addressed to those who believe that the man formed of dust has a super-added entity called the soul, which is immortal, and survives the body as well as antedates it, and the doctrine of the Trinity or three God's in one of equal power and authority, they would say, "Yes; being divine he could suffer in a limited time an equivalent in value to the endless woe due to transgressors." But if questioned closely these same people will not say that his divinity suffered, but try to evade the difficulty by saying it was not necessary to atonement that the same penalty should be endured or that the same amount of suffering should be inflicted on the vicarious sufferer as was due to the sinner. But we ask, if a less amount would satisfy Justice, or, if Justice can be satisfied with less than eternal suffering, why then demand such a penalty of the sinner? Is not such a demand unjust? If it be unjust we may depend upon it that Justice does not demand it.

Another class of Substitutionists have arranged it so that the whole compound nature suffered death as satisfaction for man's sins; but this theory is liable to the same objection as the other—there is no element of everlasting suffering in it and hence no equivalent, no satisfaction, no vindication of Justice, when the death is infinitely short of eternal. These are some of the lamest pleas we ever heard. Not only are they without foundation in truth, they bemean the God of love and truth representing that he resorted to such expedients in order that the penalty of his own law might be evaded; and besides that, they outrage common sense. We hold that the doctrine of substitution can be harmonized with no one plainly revealed truth of God. It originated with the apostasy, and is part and parcel of it. It is squarely opposed to the doctrine of justification by faith, and flatly contradicts the Spirit's announcements that "By grace ye are saved through faith."—and that we are "justified freely by his favor;" it is not our due through the kind offices of another. It is squarely opposed to the statement that God who spared not his Son but delivered him up for us all, will with him freely give us all things. It is a gift made possible by what the given and delivered Son did in our behalf. And as we have no space to take up the other question suggested—the resurrection of the unjust—it must go over again, and we will conclude by showing briefly what he did to enable the Almighty to freely give us all things.

He came, did Jesus, to give his life in our behalf. We have seen that his life went out with his blood. Now let us hear him on the eve of the sacrifice of himself: "This cup is the New Covenant in my blood; this do you as often as you may drink, for my remembrance." This covenant had long been made. It was the covenant to give life after death, the covenant that assured Abraham that he would after receive the land he then lived in as a stranger; "the everlasting covenant." It was typically ratified to Abraham, but the typical ratification did not give it life-imparting force. It required the better sacrifice to do that. Read Heb. xiii. 20 again and again till you realize that the Almighty One has a plan of redemption and works to it. Even Jesus was brought again from the dead through the blood of the everlasting covenant. God will freely give all things through this law of life.

OBITUARY.

Charles Harper Logan was born in Wayne County, Indiana, Nov. 14th, 1810. Died Oct. 28th, 1894, aged 74 years 11 months and 14 days. Moved from Wayne Co. to Shelby, from Shelby to Rush and in 1836 to Marshall where he lived up to the day of his death. Was married to Sarah Voreis May 5, 1843. She preceded him to the grave, dying Sept. 20th, 1890. To this union were born eight children, as follows: Leonard, Sylvester, Mead, Julia, Willis, Gideon, Marshall and Hugh, all of whom survive him, and are living in this county. He also leaves three brothers, James W., Henry M., and John J. Logan, and one sister, Mrs. Sarah C. Chaplin, widow of the late Elder S. A. Chaplin. His father was Elder Henry Logan, one of the early pioneers of this county, and one of the first preachers of the Gospel in this locality. Early in life he united with the Disciple (Christian) church. In 1844 he embraced the doctrine of the premillenial advent, life through Christ, destruction of the wicked, and kindred views. These he held uncompromisingly the remainder of his life and no one, conversing with him on Bible themes need misunderstand him as to what he believed. The funeral services were held at the home of his son-in-law, J. W. McCrory, by J. S. Hatch and the writer. He was buried in the cemetery near his old home. Short will be his sleep for the Lord is coming soon. We sorrow not as those who have no hope.

JOHN L. WINCE.

At the time of the death of Bro. Logan, the family of one son, Mead, of this city had an additional affliction in the death on the evening of Oct. 27, of Mrs. Abshire, mother of Mrs. Mead Logan. She was an old resident of this county, aged 70 years. Her husband died some four years since. The funeral was held at the church four miles north of here on Oct. 30, '94.

CARD OF THANKS.

The children and other relatives of Chas. H. Logan, desire to return their sincere thanks to friends for kind assistance and sympathy expressed during the last illness of their father and brother.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Dear Restitution:

In regard to the proposed ministerial conference would say:—Yes, I am in favor of it for council and union. Come to Gladbrook, Iowa. We will welcome you; and you will find the brethren of the west liberal in sentiment, firm in the faith of the gospel and ready for co-operation in the Master's work.

Respectfully yours.

A. J. EYCHANER.

FROM Lee and Shepherd, Boston, we have received four of "Miss Jerome's Banners." Each leaflet a Banner consists of four panels beautifully decorated in colors and gold attached by ribbons. They make very pretty and appropriate gifts, and are sold at reasonable price, 50c. each. Send for catalogue to Lee and Shepherd, Boston, Mass.

I expect to be at Argos, Ind. over the 4th Sunday in November, meeting to begin on Saturday evening before.

J. S. HATCH.

I am now situated so I can do evangelist work this winter, anywhere within 100 miles of Sac City, Iowa. Brethren wishing my help please write me.

ELDER C. W. PITSER.

SOW seed. Send THE RESTITUTION to some one who is a stranger to God's truths, and perhaps from this may grow a desire on their part to accept them.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 16.

1. And he arrived at Derbe and at Lustra; and lo, there was a certain disciple there Timotheos by name, a son of a faithful Joudaian woman and of a Greek father;

2. And he was testified to by the brethren in Lustra and Ikonion:

3. This man Paulos deemed to have to go out along with him and he took and circumcised him, because of the Joudaians who were in those places, for they all knew his father, that he was a Greek.

4. And as they were going their way through the cities, they committed to them to watch to guard (or enforce) the decrees that had been determined by the apostles and elders in Hierousalumn,

5. The churches accordingly were being staid up in the faith and increasing in numbers day by day.

6. And they passed through Phrugia and the province of Galatia being prevented by the sanctified spirit from talking the Word in Asia:

7. And when they had gone through Musia they attempted to go their way unto Bethunia and the spirit of Jesous did not allow them;

8. And passing by Musia they went down to Troas.

9. And a vision during the night appeared to Paulos. A certain man, a Macedonian (Makedoon) standing and exhorting him and saying, cross over into Makedonia and respond to our cry for help.

10. And when he had seen the vision, straightway we sought to go out into Makedonia, deducing therefrom that God had called us to evangelize them.

11. And having been conducted up from Troas, we ran a straight course to Samothrake, and on the following day to Neapolis.

12. And from there to Philippi, which is a chief city of that portion of Makedonia, a colony namely. And we were in that city wearing away some days,

13. And on the day of the sabbatic rites we went outside by a riverside where it was customary for votive-prayer to be, and sitting down we engaged in talk with the women who had come together;

14. And a certain woman, Ludia by name a seller of purple of a city of Thuateira, one who respected God was listening; whose heart the Lord opened to heed the things spoken by Paul.

15. And when she had been baptized, she and her household, she invited us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and abide; and she constrained us.

16. And it came to pass as we were going our way to the votive-prayer, that a certain house-maid having spirit, a Puthon namely met us, one who had afforded her lords much employment by divining.

17. She following Paulos and us was screeching, saying, These men are bond-servants of the Most High God whoever they are, declaring unto us a way of salvation.

18. And this she was doing for many days. And Paulos getting worn out, turned and said to the spirit, I direct thee in the name of Jesous Christ to come out of her, and it came out the same hour.

19. And when her lords saw that the hope of their occupation had gone out, they laid hold of Paulos and Silas and dragged them to the Agora (market-place) before the rulers.

20. And leading them into the presence of the magistrates they said, These men are disturbing our city, being Joudaians.

21. And are publishing usages which it is not proper for us to accept or do we being Romans (Hromaioi).

22. And the crowd made a stand together against them, and the magistrates rent their outer-garments off them and gave directions to beat them with rods;

23. And having laid many blows upon them they cast them into prison and enjoined on the keeper of the prison to watch to keep them securely;

24. And he having received such an injunction cast them into the inner guard-chamber, and secured their feet in the wooden thing.

25. And in the middle of the night Paulos and Silas were engaged in offering votive-prayer and singing hymns to God; and the prisoners were listening to them:

26. And suddenly there occurred a great quaking (an earthquake probably) so that the foundations of the prison were shaken, and straightway all the doors were opened and the bands of all of them were loosed;

27. And the keeper of the prison being awakened out of sleep and seeing the doors of the prison opened, drew his sword and was about to make way with himself: supposing that the prisoners had escaped.

28. But Paulos called out with a great voice saying, Do thyself no harm, for we are all here.

29. And calling for a light he leaped in fell trembling before Paulos and Silas.

30. And conducting them outside he said, Lords what doth it behoove me to do to be saved?

31. And they said, Put faith in the Lord Jesous and thou wilt have been saved and thy house.

32. And they talked to him the Word of God along with all those in his house.

33. And taking them aside that hour of the night he washed their stripes and he and all his were baptized straightway?

34. And conducting them up into the house he placed a table beside them and was made glad with all his house in having put faith in God.

35. And when it had become day the magistrates (or prators) sent the lictors saying, Release those men.

36. And the keeper of the prison announced the words to Paulos to this effect, The magistrates have sent to have you released. Now then go out and go your way in peace.

37. But Paulos said unto them, They have flayed us publicly uncondemned, we being Romans, and have cast us unto prison, and now they are putting us out secretly. No indeed! But let them come themselves and conduct us out:

38. And the lictors announcated these words spoken to the magistrates; and when they heard that they were Romans they were afraid,

39. And came and besought them, and conducting them out requested them to depart from the city.

40. And going out of the prison they entered in unto Ludia and when they had seen the brethren they exhorted them and went out.

"Thuateira" "a place for bruising incense."

"Hromaioi" (Romans) "People of robust strength."

"Neapolis" "new city."

"Lustra" "a place set free."

"Timotheos" "one who honors God."

"Ludia" "a Lydian."

"A Puthon" instead of—"of divination" R. V.

"Whoever they are" instead of "which" R. V.

"A way of salvation" instead of "the way" R. V.

"Lords" instead of "masters" R. V.

"Occupation" instead of "gain."

"Was screeching" instead of "cried out" R. V. There is no English word that expresses the Greek word here used any better.

"The wooden thing" instead of "stocks" R. V. We do not know that they had "stocks" in those days.

"A light" instead of "lights" R. V.

"Lords" instead of "sirs" R. V.

"Put faith in" instead of "believe on" R. V. Also "in having put faith in" instead of "having believed in" R. V. The demons believe in God, but don't put any faith in him.

"Lictors" instead of "sergeants" R. V. They didn't have "sergeants" in those days.

Dear Sister Eychaner:

The circular you so thoughtfully sent me last May, I admit has not been very promptly attended to, for I had made up my mind there would be enough testimonials concerning "the faith once for all delivered to the saints," but reading the articles from the brethren scattered abroad, from week to week in THE RESTITUTION, it gives me courage to do my part. So I send you at the eleventh hour my testimony, and if not too late and you think it worthy, you may put it along with the rest of the "symposium" of writers, hoping you will be able to read my writing for I am not much of a scholar. "Variety is the spice of life." I had two or three other points I thought of taking up, but I guess I have written too much already, according to the rules of this circular. If I have said too much, you may trim it down to suit your judgment. It is for us to try and give the trumpet a certain sound in these last days of ignorance and superstition. We rejoice the time is very near when the Lord will destroy the face of the covering cast over all peoples and the veil that is spread over all nations, and the rebuke of his people shall he take off all the earth, for the Lord hath spoken it.

Yours in the hope of the gospel,
JOHN O. WOODRUFF.

1. I believe in One God, the Eternal Father, who made the heavens and the earth by his great power, and stretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for thee. "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath seen, or can see." "Thou art worthy O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power; for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." "He is the Rock, his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." "Upholding all things by the Word of his power. The Preserver of all his creatures. It is in him we live and move and have our being. He giveth to all life and breath and all things. It is he that hath created us and not we ourselves. O give thanks unto the Lord for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever."

2. One Lord, Jesus Christ, Son of God in being begotten by the Holy Spirit, Son of Man by being born of a woman, the human, and the divine beautifully blended together in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. "He is in the likeness of the invisible God. Firstborn of all creation; because in him were created all things, those in the heavens and those on the earth; the visible and the invisible, whether thrones, or lordships, or governments, or authorities; all things have been permanently placed. He is also the Head of the Body, the Church; who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead, that he might become pre-eminent among all. Because in him it was thought good that the whole fulness should dwell, (Diaglott.) The embodiment of all that is great, good and lovely,—a manifestation of the Father's love toward us. Having overcome under trial, he became a merciful and faithful high-priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. "For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment to the Son; that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He was put to death for sin, raised from the dead for righteousness, and exalted to the heavens as the Mediator between God and man.

3. The Holy Spirit is not a person, but the influence or power of God, proceeding from him and filling all space for the execution of the works he may design to do, the medium of his power in all its infinitely varied manifestations. Spirit proceeding from God might be familiarly illustrated as light proceeding from the sun or warmth from fire. The subject is a very deep one and in the language of David in the 139th Ps. "Such knowledge is too wonderful for us; it is high, we cannot attain unto it, we possess the Spirit's testimony given to us through holy men of old, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. Thy Word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path. It will make wise unto salvation .....making the man of God perfect thoroughly furnishing unto all good works. This phase of the Spirit's power is what most entrents us in this our present probationary state.

4. Man a creature of the ground under sentence of death because of sin. He lives by the breath of life common to all creatures, though organically superior to them, being endowed with various faculties, capable of being instructed in the Divine will that he might form a character in harmony with the mind of his Creator, and reflect his glory. According to the testimony he was the last and noblest of God's works. "And God saw every thing that he had made, and behold it was very good." He was made in the image of the Elohim, regarding form and capacity. "Thou madst him to have dominion over the works of thy hands." This fearfully and wonderfully made man (Adam) must be put to the proof, or put on trial for the development of character, if I may so speak. "Holiness" is not a creation but a development. From the record we learn our great progenitor failed through disobedience, and forfeited his right to a future life. "By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin. The creature was made subject to frailty not of its own will, but in hope." "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth into him might have everlasting life." Our Godlike powers, if used in doing the good and acceptable and perfect will of God, will in the due time result in our exaltation to the Divine nature, "Bearing the image of the heavenly." Immortality is a future condition of existence, attainable only by those who please God by faith in what he has revealed, and obedience in what he has commanded. The gospel is made up of promises, exceeding great and precious embracing the things hoped for and to be realized at the return of King Jesus to set up his kingdom. That future economy to be established on earth by Christ and his saints will result in abolishing all human governments, and subjecting mankind to the will of God. They who hear the Word of the kingdom and understand it, possess the key to the Bible. The hope of our calling is a call to his kingdom and glory.

5. Salvation—deliverance from sin and death by resurrection and bodily glorification at the coming of Christ, and an inheritance of the kingdom of God offered to all men on condition—1st, believing the glad tidings of Christ's accomplishments at his first appearing and of his coming manifestation in the earth as King of Israel, and Ruler of the whole earth at the setting up of the kingdom of God. 2nd, repentance or reformation. 3rd, of being immersed in water for a union with his name unto remission of sins, and 4th, of continuing in well doing to the end of this probationary career.

6. The wages of sin is "death" unqualified. "Thou shalt surely die." "Thou shalt die and not live" are the words of Scripture. If we would confine ourselves to Bible language, "death" would never be prefaced by the word,—"temporal, spiritual, eternal, Adamic, penal, or first death, etc.," as commonly done by many writers. "Sin when finished brings forth death," James. "They which commit such things are worthy of death. What fruit had ye in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death." (Paul.)

7. The hope and resurrection of the dead. That resurrection is conditional and not universal, seems clearly taught in the Scriptures of Truth. "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth into me, (at my return) shall not die. I am he that liveth, and was dead and am alive forevermore, and have the keys of hades and of death." We have it four times repeated in the 6th chapter of John, "I will raise him up at the last day." "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that age and the resurrection from the dead.....can die no more, they are equal to the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." No ambiguity about such language. Christ's resurrection is a pattern and pledge of ours. "Because I live, ye shall live also;" It is the prerogative of Jesus who holds the keys to unlock the tomb and release the children of death—his chosen and faithful ones, and give them an abundant entrance into his kingdom. While this is the case with a certain class may there not be others who will be saved; yet so as by fire, who will "be called least in the kingdom of heaven." Every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor. There will be variety in the living stones of that future temple. "One star differeth from another star in glory." Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought (or gained) but that we receive a full reward." "The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, and let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." There will be no mistakes made in that future discerning between the righteous and the wicked—between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. When the due time comes to bring to light the hidden things of darkness and make manifest the counsels of the heart, then shall every man have his due praise from God. "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God. How unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out. For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counselor? who hath first given to him it shall be recompensed unto him again? For out of him and through him and to him are all things, to whom be glory forever, Amen."

The Christian Character.

A question that should interest us, and we should study over is, what should a Christian do, and how should we who claim a membership in the one faith, live? What better instructor can we rely upon than the Word of God. On the pages of that wonderful Book we can find lesson after lesson for our daily life.

Those that become partakers of the divine nature, and turn their backs on all worldly things, enter into a new life, a life filled with the love and goodness of our Divine Father.

Love is the element of heaven, hence it must be the element of the gospel; and therefore, if we desire to live a Christian life, and are looking forward to a better life in the future, and a home in the kingdom, our hearts should be full of this element. Love for God and his blessed Word will inspire a person more than anything else. No matter how rough and uneven the path of the Christain may be, love will smooth it and make every duty a pleasure.

How earnestly we should strive to get and keep our hearts filled with this divine love, for without love we are without God, for "He that loveth not, knoweth not God for God is love." All through the Bible we find lessons of love for the Christian. In Christ's sermon on the mount, he teaches the need of love in our hearts. Matt. v. 44, "But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." Think how the weak human heart would have to be filled with love to bless and pray for their enemies.

Humility was one of the chief traits of the character of Jesus, and if we are trying to follow in his footsteps, is not this one of the greatest lessons for us to learn and not out? He that had the most reason to be proud was the most humble. "Though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly, but the proud he knoweth afar off."

A Christian could not be of a proud nature and walk in the path laid down for those who are to live and be with Christ in his glory. As he suffered and was humble in this world, so will we have to bear the taunts of scornful ones, and be humble one to another; and then, as we have shared with him the trials in this world so, by his promise, we will share with him his glory in the life to come. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began." And again, turning to I John ii. 25, we read, "and this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life." We read in Heb. ii. 6, "But without faith it is impossible to please God; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Here is another virtue to add to those we have found so far. Nothing can be done without faith. If we did not have faith how useless our lives would be. Not one ray of light to brighten the inky darkness. Nothing to look forward to that would elevate us from the low standard of life. But all this darkness is dispelled by the bright light of faith, carrying joy and comfort to our hearts. Through faith we can see beyond this "vale of tears" and know of a better lot in the future. Faith is the evidence of God's love in our hearts, for if we have a true deep love for him, we have faith in him. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

Think of the wonderful things that were performed by the prophets through faith. And if we are to accomplish anything in this world, we must have faith in the Word of God; for through faith we can conquer all the obstacles in our path and not be cast back. It is to "faith we are to add virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren or unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

When filled with the Spirit of God we should then walk by his counsel, ever seeking by diligence, and well doing to gain the reward. Gal. v. 22, 23, 24. "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law. And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."

Many lessons for the Christian can be found in the fourth and fifth chapters of Ephesians, "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers." "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice." "And be kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's sake hath forgiven you. Walk worthy of the sight of God, with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love. Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

If we try to live up to all these virtues, we will be like Christ as much as it is possible for weak mortals to be, and then when our work is finished we can look forward to the coming of him who will reward every man according to his works, and what a blessed thing if we hear the glorified Savior saying to us, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

EDITH ANDERSON.

Iowa Work.

Dear Restitution:

A report is due your readers of the work done here in Clarke Co., inasmuch as it was through the brethren at large that the Contingent Fund enabled me to come here. I left home Oct. 22—my birthday anniversary, in the early morning for Arispa, in Union Co. Brother Earle Tillman met me at the train and took me to the home of Bro. and Sr. Henry and Jenette Tillman. After dinner we drove over to Hopeville, Clarke Co., a distance of about 12 miles. Hopeville is the place where we preached six discourses one year ago last April. We found the Disciple Church open and its members extended to us a hearty welcome. In our former visit here we spoke on the gospel, coming of Jesus, the resurrection, and the kingdom. This time we took up the subject of man's mortality, and life through the Christ. There has been a good interest from the first, and a large attendance. Many are reading the Bible, and we believe that much fruit will yet result from our labors. On Tuesday evening the opportunity was offered for obedience. Three arose for baptism. The next evening the opportunity was offered again and another young man arose for baptism. These were all immersed the next day, Oct. 25, in the river.

The names of those baptized are Virgil Tillman and his wife Fanny, a young couple just starting in life. They concluded that life would be a hard battle without Jesus as Captain, and so enlisted under his banner at its beginning. May they be true to him and be crowned victors at last.

The other two baptized were young men of bright promise, Fred Morgan and Dell St. John. These two, are the fruit of the labor of our young brother Karis Tillman, and we rejoice that God has blessed his labor in bringing in these sheaves. Karie you should be proud of the work God has done through your faithfulness. Keep sowing the seed, the harvest is sure. To Virgil, and Fanny, and Dell, and Fred, I would say, trust in God and do your duty, study the Scriptures, and scatter its gleaming pearls of truth, and a rich reward will be yours both now and in the by and by.

Brother and Sister Tillman are rejoicing that their toils and prayers are beginning to show good results, and they want to thank all who have helped by this fund. I feel that for the time and money expended the results here are far more satisfactory than most points visited this summer.

We have now recieved from the contingent fund as follows:
Expenses of trip of 1893, $9.20, expenses of present trip, $4.50, total $13.70. Result—Six baptized into Christ, 11 sermons preached and seed sown which may yet bring many into the fold of the Good Shepherd.

Will those who have used this fund report the result in THE RESTITUTION, that the contributors to it may know the good that this fund has done?

Will start for home Saturday morning (D. V.) to fill the appointment for Sunday morning and evening at Gladbrook.

A. J. EYCHANER.

Divine Communion.

There is no possible way of finding comfort amid the providences that come to us in life but in an intimate and habitual communion with God. Much as we may desire to avoid providences so often of an afflictive and disciplinary character, our heavenly Father sees it wise to administer his government over us in a manner that often hides his love to our human thought. Doubtless in this way he would keep us from pride and vanity, and impress upon us absolute dependence and his guidance, instill a deeper religious conviction in our true life, and clarify our vision of spiritual things. But theorizing thus, as we often do, how few accept his way with unruffled composure, rejoicing that we are in his hands! Such blessed rest in God comes to us only through one well-trodden path—the holy path of prayer. We do not mean an approach to the mercy seat merely at stated times and in formal utterances, but a constant drawing near to him in the silent depths of devotion, in the soul's unuttered supplications, in the hourly spiritual contact of the human with the divine heart.

But this power to pause amid conflicting uncertainties, and let God give light upon the path in his own good time, is not the product of human philosophy. This ability to wait until he shall solve the problem belongs only to souls that are constantly closeted in his presence. Helping them to decide difficult questions is one of his ways of "rewarding openly."

And who will say this is not a rich reward for obeying our Lord's command: "Enter into thy closet?" Can anything surpass such comfort as is found here? Toiling, weary pilgrim, at the shore of the sounding sea, amid mountain steeps, beneath the broad canopy of the heavens at midnight, wherever thou art found, enter the inclosure of prayer and abide very near to him who "seeth in secret." O what safety is here!—Christian Advocate.

"A backslider and a balky horse are very much alike: neither one will do a thing.

...is said of Reuben the first-born of Israel, "his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph, the son of Israel; and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. For Judah prevailed above his brethren and of him came the chief ruler, but the birthright was Joseph's." 1 Chron. v. 1, 2. So again in Jeremiah, "I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born." God makes no mistakes, he gives utterance to no meaningless words, he utters no untruths. There is something connected with the giving of this birthright that means grandeur and glory and world-wide dominion. For see—"The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills; they shall be on the head of Joseph and on the crown of the head of him that was separated from his brethren." Jacob said of Ephraim and Manasseh, "Let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth."—Manasseh "shall become a people, —he shall be great, but his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations."

These things are prophecies, they are spoken by one who is able to carry out all his plans. There is none like him, his counsel shall stand. What then, are we going to do about it? Is Judah the only remaining tribe of God's ancient people? If so, what becomes of the most beautifully worded, most richly poetic prophecy in all the Bible? Where and how can the birthright be Joseph's? But Judah is not Israel. The terms are entirely distinct, the one includes the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin carried captive to Babylon, and brought back from captivity; the other is applied to the ten tribes, who were deported to the cities of the Medes, in the days of Hoshea. From the time that the Lord rent the ten tribes from the house of David, Israel and Judah are kept distinct and apart in all the prophecies. Yet our preachers talk of them as if they were still one people. They speak of the people known as the Jews, as if they alone were Israel; as if there had never been any separation, and as if all the promises of restoration and of blessing applied to them. It will not do, Judah will not fill the bill. Judah is many in number, but they are scattered among all nations. They have no landed possessions; no dominion as a nation. And if gathered, the blessing pronounced upon the head of Joseph's sons would not be theirs, they have never become "a multitude of nations."

Jesus knew of "the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Josephus says that in his day they were exceedingly numerous. Paul avers that God has not cast away his people, and yet it is the opinion of professed Christendom, that he has done this and that Ephraim and Manasseh, with all their brethren, are lost, and can never be found. They have been lost, but only in fulfilment of God's Word. They were to forget their name, their origin and their resting place. But they were also to be found. Ephraim and Judah are yet to become one stick upon the mountains of Israel. It was never said that Judah was to be lost. And Judah was to suffer from the persecuting sword, from famine and pestilence, was to be a curse and astonishment, a hissing and reproach among all nations; to have no ease, no rest for the foot—life, hanging in doubt; eyes failing, heart trembling. But such was not to be Ephraim's fate. Prosperity is predicted for the sons of Joseph. And they with their brethren were to be the instruments in God's hands for blessing the nations of the earth. What then must we do? To what conclusion must we come? We must look for the sons of Joseph; we must come to the conclusion that they are now a hidden people, but that they stand at the headship of the world in greatness, in purity and in knowledge. To the English-speaking people alone can the birthright blessings be applied. They are "a nation" and "a multitude of nations." They possess the ... the gates of ... the gates of the West Indies, etc. To them are entrusted the oracles of God, they are keepers of a day of rest, they are missionaries of the world, they inherit the desolate places. We of the United States are not Gentiles, we belong to Israel. A mixed race we may be, but with such powers of assimilation that others are lost in ours, —the stranger that dwells among us becomes of us, and loses his identity, and all distinguishing characteristics in our dominating blood. Judah was to have the scepter. England's queen is descended from King David, and her children are prospective heirs to many thrones—Christ comes from Judah, and the kingdom now preparing through Joseph's sons will soon be his, for the birthright of blessing is Joseph's.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

[This article by Sister Wince is published here, with the distinct understanding that she is solely responsible for what is said. We mean by this that we do not take as much stock in the theory that the lost ten tribes are found in the English speaking nations, as some do. However, we have no quarrel with those who believe this, but insist that our work is the preaching of the gospel of this age.—ED.]

OBITUARY.

"If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come."

The above quotation from the book of Job was used by the subject of this sketch only two days before his death when talking with me on the doctrine of the immortality of the soul.

Wm. Dresser was born in London, Eng., Aug. 20, 1813, emigrated with his parents when ten years of age to the United States, and settled in Ohio. Was married to Sarah Janks, July 29, 1838, came to California in 1850, where he resided the rest of his life. He was one of the first to organize a Sunday school in California and was always in the work when an opportunity offered. He was one of the closest students and ripest scholars I ever knew. For many years before his death he was a firm believer in the doctrine of the second coming of Christ to reign on this earth. He often told me that while young he used to wonder what is meant by the "kingdom of God" but never got an idea that satisfied him till he found it in THE RESTITUTION all of whose teachings he fully endorsed and which he read for over 20 years. Up to the day of his death he was a hard student, the Bible for a long time being his principal text book. He took no man's exegesis of a passage of Scripture but went to the Greek and sought out every point which could throw any light upon it. Thus untiringly patient in his study when he would come into my presence with "Eureka" on his lips I always knew I would get the benefit of his discovery, and it was always good, and profitable to me. His expositions were clear and forcible, and carried with them a pathos that showed the deep undercurrent of feeling beneath the apparently placid exterior. Physically he was a great sufferer for many years, but his strong faith in God, and his indomitable will-power, enabled him to rise above his sufferings and look beyond this vale of tears to the glory which shall be revealed in us when the sufferings of this present time are over. He frequently expressed the wish to die suddenly. He did not want to burden any one by a long illness. His wish was gratified. On the 7th of September he took his wife to the depot, at Santa Ana, Cal., placed her on the cars for a trip to Los Angeles, to visit friends, saw her comfortably seated, ministered to her wants, stepped off the cars and fell dead on the platform. A large concourse of friends and relatives including twenty-three grandchildren mourn his loss. He leaves a widow and five children, all of whom are living proofs of the statements made by Solomon, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

On Monday Sept. 10th a long procession followed his remains to the Santa Ana cemetery where he sleeps in peace awaiting the resur... [illegible] ...shall not see his like again, and earth is poorer, because he is gone from it, but we do not grudge him the well earned rest, and he will "stand in his lot at the end of the days." May we too be there.

MRS. A. C. MOSHER.

Life and Death Eternal.

If I believe in the hopeless doom of incorrigible sin, and also in the undimmed glory of a perfected Kingdom, I must believe in the annihilation of the incorrigibly wicked. Fire, in the Bible is generally an emblem of destruction, not torment. The chaff, the tares, the fruitless tree are not to be tortured, but to be destroyed. The hell-fire spoken of in the New Testament is the fire of Gehenna, kept burning outside the walls of Jerusalem, to destroy the offal of the city. Here was the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is unquenched; emblems of destruction, not of torment. I find nothing in the New Testament to warrant the terrible opinion that God sustains the life of his creatures throughout eternity only that they may continue in sin and misery. That immortality is the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ; that man is mortal, and must put on immortality; that only he can put it on who becomes, through Christ a partaker of the divine nature, and so an inheritor of him who only hath immortality; that eternal life is life eternal, and eternal death is death eternal, and everlasting destruction is destruction without remedy—this is the most natural, as it is the simplest reading of the New Testament.—Lyman Abbott.

"Use your gentlest voice at home. A kind word is a joy to dear ones around the family hearth. Train it to sweet tones now and it will keep in tone through life."

Announcement.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, Ind., commencing on Friday, Nov. 16, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continue over the following Sunday.

At our last conference it was ordered that this conference be carried on strictly in accordance with the constitution which provides that each church shall be entitled to one vote, or delegate, at all meetings of the conference, for every ten members, and one for every fraction of six, said votes to be cast by the delegates of the several churches. Each organized church, no matter how small, will be entitled to one vote or delegate.

It was further ordered that the president instruct the churches to authorize their delegates to state to the conference the amount their churches can donate for evangelical purposes, also that the churches be notified of the action of the conference, and unless they comply with the same they will not be recognized by the conference.

Now, brethren, this is an urgent call, and it is absolutely necessary that there be a awakening up if we are going to still continue to carry on the conference, let every organization realize that they are a part of it, and that your help is needed to carry on the work. Dont think this is for some one else, for it is to you, and dont think that because there has'nt been much done, that there can't be, but forth every effort and you will be blessed for it.

Let the brethren and sisters come full of love for the truth, and have a grand good meeting.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letter is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of nine mos of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are hereunto subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 14, 1894. NO. 42.

Poetry.

FOR MY SAKE

These little words, for use of topmost meaning;
How few, alas, the heart can wisely hold!
These little words! but on their import dwelling,
What wealth of love their syllables unfold!

"For My sake" cheer the suffering, help the needy;
On earth this was my work; I give it thine.
If thou wouldst follow in thy Master's foot-steps,
Take up my cross and come and learn of me.

"For my sake" let the harsh word die unuttered
That treadles on the swift, impetuous tongue;
"For my sake" check the quick, rebellious feeling
That rises when the brother does thee wrong.

"For my sake" press with steadfast patience onward,
Although the race be hard, the battle long.
Within my Father's house are many mansions,
Where thou shalt rest and join the victor's song.

And if in coming days the world revile thee,
If "for my sake" thou suffer pain and loss,
Bear on, faint heart, thy Master went before thee,
They only wear His crown who share His cross.

—Churchman.

Original.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 17.

1. And passing through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonika, where there was a synagogue of the Joudaians.

2. And as was his custom Paulos went in unto them, and on three sabbatic occasions discoursed to them from the Scriptures,

3. Opening up and presenting the fact that it behooved the Christ to suffer and arise from among the dead, and that this Jesous whom I am announcing unto you is the Christ.

4. And certain ones of them were persuaded and cast in their lot with Paulos and Silas, and a vast multitude of the reverent Hellenists and of the chief women not a few.

5. But the Joudaians getting jealous and taking along with them certain wicked men of influence of the market-men and getting a crowd together stirred up the city to tumult, and taking their stand before the house of Jasom, sought to lead them before the demos;

6. And not finding them they dragged Jason and certain brethren to the rulers of the city with the complaint that those who had stirred up the inhabited (south) to revolt, had arrived here also;

7. And that Jason had entertained them, and that they were all doing things contrary to the decrees of Kaisar, saying that there was a King Jesous,

8. And they stirred up the crowd, and the rulers of the city hearing these things,

9. And taking that which sufficed from Jason and the rest release them.

10. And the brethren straightway in the night sent away both Paulos and Silas to Beroia, and they when they had arrived went into the synagogue of the Joudaians.

11. Now these were better-born than those in Thessalonika, and they accepted the word with all eagerness daily looking up the Scriptures critically to see if these things were so.

12. Accordingly many of them were persuaded and of the refined Greek women and men of influence not a few:

13. But when the Joudaians from Thessalonike knew that the Word of God had been published also in Beroia by Paulos, they went there also making a commotion and stirring up the multitudes;

14. Then straightway the brethren sent Paulos out to go his way to the sea; and Silas and Timotheos awaited him there.

15. But those who were forwarding Paulos conducted him to Athens (Athenai); and taking an injunction to Silas and Timotheos to come as soon as possible to him they returned.

16. And Paulos while awaiting them in Athenai had his spirit vexed in beholding the city to be idolatrous.

17. He was accordingly discoursing in the synagogue to the Joudaians and the reverent men and in the market-place every day to those he chanced to meet;

18. And certain of the Epikourians (mercenary protectionists) and Stoikoi philosophers joined issue with him; and certain ones were saying, What would this seed-word fellow like to say? And some, He seemeth to be a publisher of strange demons, because he was announcing the good tidings of Jesous and the resurrection.

19. And laying hold of him they led him to the Areiopagos, saying, We are able to comprehend what this new teaching is which is being talked by thee, are we not?

20. For thou art bringing certain strange things to our hearing. We desire therefore to know what these things purpose to be.

21. Now all Athenians and the strangers sojourning there enjoyed their leisure time in no other way than in speaking or hearing some newer thing.

22. And Paulos taking his stand in the midst of the Areiopagos, said, Men, Athenians, I see that you are in every way too respectful to demons [or superstitious].

23. For as I was passing through and looking up at your objects of veneration, I found even an altar [a heathen altar] on which was inscribed, "To an unknown God." That which ye are rightly reverencing though ignorantly I am publishing to you.

24. The God who created the Cosmos and all things in it, this one being Lord of the heavens and the earth doth not dwell in inner-sanctuaries made with hands;

25. Nor is he being served by the hands of human courtiers as one who stands in need of any thing, he who giveth life and breath and all things to all;

26. And he created of one blood every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, having set definite period and boundaries for their habitation.

27. That they might seek God to see if forsooth they might grope after him and find him, although he is not of a truth far from each one of us.

28. For in him we live and move and exist, as also certain ones of your own poets have said, namely, "For we are of Him even as to generation."

29. Since we are God's generation then we ought not to suppose the divine nature to be like to gold or silver or a stone, to a characteristic expression of man's art and device.

30. Overlooking the times of his ignorance therefore God is now telling all men everywhere to repent.

31. And that he hath set a day in which he is going to judge the inhabited in righteousness, in a man whom he hath appointed [limited by boundary lines —opiso —is the word from which we get "horizon"] providing faith for all, in having raised him up from among the dead.

32. But when they heard of a resurrection of dead people, some scoffed, and some said, We will hear thee again also about this.

33. In this wise Paulos went out of their midst.

34. But certain men of influence who adhered to him experienced faith, among whom indeed were Dionusios the Areopagite, and a woman Damaris by name, and others along with them.

COMMENT.

"Amphipolis" "a surrounded city."

"Apollonia" "Apollo's place."

"Thessalonika" "a victory of Thessalonians."

"Jason" "An entire healer."

"Beroia" "a moving stream."

"Athenai" "people of Athena."

"Athena" "Minerva" in the Latin.

"Athens" "a lawless place."

"Epikourioi" "Protectionists" or those who believed in hiring mercenary troops; then derivatively a sect of philosophers, but originally a political party in Athens.

"Stoikoi" not "Stoikoi" a sect of philosophers so-called from Stoichos meaning first a row of something—then first-principles methodically arranged—then the philosophy based upon such a statement of first-principles and those who accepted and advocated it, also a political party in Athens opposed to the Epikourians—"a people's party."

"Areiopagos" "Mars-hill" or the hill of the God of war whose name was "Ares" from aeio a male—the crude conception of manliness being courage in war.

Dionusios—belonging to "Dionusus," one of the names of "Bacchus" the god of wine.

"Certain wicked men of influence of the market-men" instead of "certain vile fellows of the rabble" R. V.

"Stirred up the city to tumult" instead of "set the city on an uproar" R. V. which is very queer English to say the least, be it literal or figurative.

"The demos" instead of "the people" R. V. meaning what we mean by a "police-court" or the lowest judiciary.

"The inhabited" instead of "the world" R. V. It wont do to translate this phrase and "the eons" and "the Cosmos" by our one word "world" as the C. V. and R. V. do.

"Another king" R. V. "Another" not in best text.

"That which sufficed" instead of "security" R. V.

"Better-born" instead of "more noble" R. V.

"Were persuaded" instead of "believed" R. V.

"Refined" instead of "honorable estate" R. V.

"Men of influence" instead of "men" merely R. V.

"Awaited" instead of "abode" R. V.

"Joined issue" instead of "encountered" R. V.

"Seed-word fellow" instead of "babbler" R. V. which spoils the point of the fling.

"Demons" instead of "gods" R. V.

"Enjoyed their leisure" instead of "spent their time" R. V. only their leisure time.

"Some newer thing" instead of "some new thing" R. V.

"Too respectful to demons" instead of "somewhat superstitious" R. V.

The word for "altar" here means "an altar with steps" or a heathen altar.

"Inner-sanctuaries" or "temple-niches" instead of "temples" R. V.

By the hands of human courtiers instead of "by men's hands" R. V.

"Of one blood" instead of "of one" R. V.

"Periods" instead of "seasons" R. V.

"For we are of Him even as to generation" instead of "for we are also his offspring" R. V. Not the same thought.

"The divine nature" instead of "Godhead" with a big G. R. V. as though this word meant the same as God. For it does not, any more than human nature means the same as "the man."

"A characteristic expression" instead of "graven" R. V.

"The inhabited" instead of "the world" R. V.

"Providing faith" instead of "hath given assurance" R. V. The word is "faith" here.

"From among the dead", instead of "from the dead" R. V.

CHAS GARDNER.

[Read at Iowa Conference.]

The Kingdom of God.

God once had a kingdom upon the earth, called the kingdom of the Lord over Israel. This we find by reading the fifth verse of the 28th chapter of 1 Chron. "And of all my sons (for the Lord hath given me many sons,) he hath chosen Solomon, my son, to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel." And again turning to 2 Chron. ix. 8 we see the kingdom spoken of again. "Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighteth in thee to set thee on his throne to be king for the Lord thy God; because thy God loved Israel, to establish them forever, therefore, made he thee king over them, to do judgment and justice."

By these references we know that the kingdom of God was on this earth, and was a material kingdom having territory, subjects, and a king. After Solomon's death the kingdom was rent, for the prophet said to Jeroboam, "For thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, Behold I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee. The other two tribes were ruled over by Rehoboam.

Jeroboam was king over the house of Israel, and Rehoboam reigned over the house of Judah in Jerusalem on David's throne.

Following on down the record we come to the last king which was Zedekiah. He done evil in the sight of the Lord and humbled not himself before the Lord. "Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, take off the crown, this shall not be the same, exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Since the kingdom was overthrown there has never been to this day a ruler over the house of Judah sitting on David's throne in Jerusalem.

But those that are looking forward to the coming of the rightful heir to that throne, believe that soon Christ will come, and once more the kingdom of God will be set up on the earth, ruled by righteousness and justice.

Many believe that the kingdom of God is in the human heart, but how could that be, when, as I have said before, a kingdom must have territory, subjects, and a ruler. The kingdom of God will be a literal kingdom, just as much as any kingdom on the earth now.

We are told in the Bible that Christ will return and re-establish the kingdom, Luke xix. 12, "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, (or title to that kingdom) and to return." In Daniel vii. 13, 14 we read, "I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him." "And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." "But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom forever." By reading another reference we find "And the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Then when the curse is taken from the earth, all things will be pure and holy, radiant with the glory of the Lord, those who have been faithful to his teachings will live with him, no more sorrow nor care, but everlasting love, joy, and peace.

Where could be found a brighter prospect to spur the Christian on to more earnest endeavor and diligence in the Word of God? Surely our trials in this world will be small in comparison with the glory in the next.

EDITH ANDERSON.

Editor Restitution:

I send you these lines to transfer if you think them worthy of a place in your paper, to the scattered ones of like precious faith.

I have just returned from our Semi-annual conference which convened at Ghulbrook. We had a good meeting. The Word was fitly spoken by able speakers, and many testified that it was good to be there. We missed those who were not with us, but the Lord was with us, which is a great consolation to those bereft of dear ones.

Jesus is ever at hand to lend his waiting ones while toiling through this vale of tears. With God's Word, and its Spirit in my heart I know I shall hail the glad coming of the Lord, who will call his servants to an account. May we so serve him that he will say to us: "Well done."

The Lord knows how to do his own work, his thoughts are not our thoughts, nor his ways our ways, but there is one Spirit, and one hope of your calling, and we should do well to enquire, what is the mind of the Spirit? Let the Scripture interpret Scripture, and let us pray that the Holy Spirit may lead into all truth. I have thought much upon the nature and power of the Holy Spirit, yet, I do not claim to have any clearer light than Christians in common possess concerning this glorious theme. We should all study the Holy Book and treasure to ourselves the best thoughts and conceptions as to the nature of the Spirit. We know its office in the redemptive plan, and we should try to possess it, and work together in love. Let us search for the living springs of its flow love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith. I could ever acknowledge my Lord's dealings in this life. Pray that he may direct my footsteps through life's journey, and meet the dear ones of earth when the redeemed are gathered home. The day of reward is coming. Crowns of glory and palms of victory await the sacrificing ones. I can conjecture what my feelings would be should I be left out. We cannot endure the thought. We must speak, live, work, pray much, and fight the good fight of faith.

My dear sons, J. J. and F. P.—— and my dear Ella, and Jessie, your eyes will fall on these lines I have hurriedly penned, as the dear RESTITUTION goes to you every week, they may be my last words to you, fourteen sisters paid over $20.00. Some who joined never paid anything, others have perhaps done more than they ought. Over $100.00 has been paid in the year, and we expect much more will be done the coming year, for the sisters are entering the work with much zeal. The money is the Lord's and is being used for him. Already the $5.00 worth of tracts have been received and some started on their mission. It was suggested at one of the social meetings that the only way to live in happy union and touch with the Master, was to be often with him in the words he has given us. I thought I desired to have more of the Word committed, so began on reaching home, to learn one verse a day. I got along nicely the first week, beginning at the first chapter I opened to, which was 1 Peter iv. It was just what I wanted. Then on Monday I read for our morning lesson the 80th Psalm, I said to my husband, "I believe we had better learn that first verse if we can," I began and after three days I said, "that is the hardest verse I ever undertook to learn in my life." My husband laughed and remarked, "It might be still harder to practice," which I admitted. He thought he could learn it without any trouble but he did not master it that day, and I labored with the words until the next Monday morning before I could repeat it perfectly. Now when I learn to always practice them I shall be a happy woman and a splendid Christian. Read and learn it sisters, (and brothers too, political excitement now, it will do you good) and then it will never be said again, as it was once, "I always knew there was a great deal of gossip at our conference meetings. Think of going to a meeting to gossip, we will never get in union with the Master as long as we occupy his time in such woeful waste." I said, "I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue. I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked is before me." God help us to watch that we all but wonderful member of the body.

Yours, trying to gain the victory.

MARY A. WOODWARD.

Editor Restitution:

I have just received letters from the conference dated Oct. 9th, also others which I will try to answer through THE RESTITUTION, as I am just recovering from a hard sick spell, and am too weak to write to all separately. I am truly grateful to the friends for the sympathy expressed: yes, he was a good parent and a kind husband, and he gave his life for the Master's cause. My loss, no one but myself can realize. Oh, I so long for the Lord to come and set death's captives free. Life sometimes seems a burden greater than I can bear, yet death is an enemy and we dread his cold embrace. Like Paul we have a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better than to live or to die. But oh, that we could know how long we must wait until our change come. It says in Daniel xii. 10, The wise shall understand. Again in Rev. iii. 3, If therefore thou shall not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee, which implies that if they did watch they should know. Will Bro. W. H. Wilson please answer this question in THE RESTITUTION: Are the prophecies of Christ to his apostles in regard to the signs of his coming so literally and completely fulfilled, that we may look for his coming for his saints at any time? Oh brothers and sisters, let us strive to be ready that we may not be left out when he does come, be it sooner or later. Your sister in Christ.

MRS. R. J. HILL.

As we hold a candle to the flame until it is fully lighted, so we must hold ourselves to Christ and his Word by meditation.

I expect to be at Argos, Ind. over the 4th Sunday in November, meeting to begin on Saturday evening before.

J. S. HATOR.

I am now situated so I can do evangelist work this winter, anywhere within 100 miles of Sac City, Iowa. Brethren wishing my help please write me.

ELDER C. W. PITSOR.

Sow seed. Send THE RESTITUTION to some one who is a stranger to God's truths, and perhaps from this may grow a desire on their part to accept them.

"I feel a great interest," says Whittier, "in any effort to check the pernicious habit of tobacco using. It is not only a nuisance, but a moral and physical evil, and a shame to our boasted refinement and civilization."

A good rule to follow is this: "Be toward strangers prudent, towards friends trustful, toward God believing."—Dr. A. McKenzie.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

NOTICE TO STOCK-HOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given to the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association, that the regular annual meeting will be held at Plymouth, Ind., on Saturday, Nov. 17, 1894, for the election of a Board of Directors, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the Association.

ROBERT RAILSBACK, Pres.

Attest:
A. R. UNDERWOOD, Secy.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfillment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You do by paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

"THE night and the storm look as if they would last forever, but the calm and the morning cannot be stayed."

"ONE of the greatest causes of trouble in this world is the habit people have of talking faster than they think."

"IN the very nature of the case, spiritual growth must be marked by change in thought and experience, but the change will be onward and upward, and never backward."

"WRITE your name in kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. Your name, your deeds, will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening."

"To no kind of begging are people so averse as to begging pardon,—that is, where there is any serious ground for doing so. Where there is none, this phrase is as soon taken in vain as other momentous words are, upon light occasions. On the other hand, there is a kind of begging which every body is forward enough to engage in; that is begging the question."

THE Baptist convention of the State of Arkansas, in session at Lonoke, Nov 7, adopted the following:

WHEREAS, It is the opinion of this convention from information regarded as reliable that the President of the Chicago University, Dr. Harper, entertains and promulgates ideas and opinions at variance with the universal belief of all good Baptists—to-wit: the divinity of all the books of the Bible; therefore,

Resolved, That we believe it to be exceedingly dangerous to have our young ministers educated at said institution, and that we recommend that our churches be cautious in the employment of pastors and evangelists coming therefrom."

THE following dispatch dated Nov. 8, tells of another one breaking away from creeds, and daring to think for himself.

"The Rev. C. A. Brandt, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Barnum, Minn., surprised his congregation this evening by renouncing the Presbyterian faith that cutting himself loose from all denominations and creeds, claiming they are in direct violation of the teachings of Christ. Mr. Brandt is widely known in Minnesota, and was supposed to be one of the strongest ministers of the Presbyterian doctrine in the State."

The word may be called the foundation of faith, because if we have no knowledge of God we can have no faith; and "without faith it is impossible to please him, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Heb. xi. 6. As knowledge increases, faith deepens until it leads up to full assurance of faith. Addressing Israel, Moses said, "Know therefore that the Lord thy God, he is God, the faithful God which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments, to a thousand generations," Deut. vii. 9. The Psalmist also declared, "Thy mercy, O Lord, is in the heavens, and thy faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds." Psa. xxxvi. 5. That declaration is couched in hyperbolical language to show how unlimited, how boundless is the faithfulness of the Most High. But people must know him before they can realize this. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God."—we can know God by what he has revealed of himself, and in no other way. By searching no one can find him out.

Bible Times and Seasons. No. 1.

According to promise we herewith subjoin extracts from a work entitled "New Era at Hand" by the Enoch astronomer, Professor Dimbleby, as found in the Federal Visitor. He says:—"The great prophecies of Scripture have a most remarkable feature by ending as they began, that is to say, they end on the same year of the solar cycle, same month, same date of the month, and the same day of the week on which they began. Yea, more, for they end when the eclipses are of the same character; and by this we see that he who directs and controls the orbs of heaven is the author of the prophecies. There are a great number of splendid new facts to be obtained from Scripture when it is properly treated. And those who deny the truth of the Pentateuch and other historical portions of Scripture would be filled admiration rather than doubt, if they were shown, as they ought to have been shown, that the Bible is unsurpassed for its precision, respecting astronomical and scientific time, and that to challenge Biblical time or history —and I would especially mention the records of creation and the flood—is to challenge and to mock at the movements of all the planetary bodies, the eternal laws under which we live. The Royal Geographical Society settles all distances and localities by latitudes and longitudes obtained by celestial observations and measurements, and until we treat time in the same way, the records of Scripture will not be correctly known.

"Gen. i. is a point of time, from which all eclipses and transits work with precision, and are now tabulated, bringing them down to those now seen; and supplies us with momentous evidence of the beginning of the present motions of the earth and moon. These evidences show that the earth did not turn on its axis in less than 365 days before creation, and had no obliquity of its axis, for producing seasons, and that on the 4th day which the eclipses show was Wednesday, the sun was "set" on the equinoctial colure, where we now find it on the 4th day of every solar year, September 23rd.

"Had the revisers, when they gave us a new Bible, been equal to their work, and purged it from the Pagan rubbish, in which men have entombed it, then no skeptic could have laid a finger on it, and all Christians would have seen that the sacred text is an inspired book from first to last, true and simple in all its years and dates, and that the voice that rolls the stars along spake all the promises." Our readers can see somewhat of the claims made by the Professor. We have neither time nor space for more this week; but we hope to give some of his chronological dates and correspondencies in our next number, which point to the year 1897 when he is convinced Gentile times shall close and the Jewish begin under David's greater Son. He says he expects this as he expects the sun to rise tomorrow.

It is truly wonderful what an amount of learned research is being given to the subject of profoundest interest to the adopted children of God. The thought that we may be so near the end of life's conflict thrills us with joy in anticipation. Let us watch and pray and prolong the apocalyptic welcome, "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly," Amen.

Justification by Faith. No. 7.

In Hebrews v. 9 we read of Christ, that, "Being made perfect he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." As he was never imperfect in character, it must be the perfection of his state that is here referred to, it was after that change took place that he became the author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him. He then possessed, and could therefore impart that perfect existence to others according to his oft repeated promises, to raise them up at the last day.

We know of but one salvation by Christ, and that is the eternal salvation. of this passage, and is certainly confined to those who obey Christ. Who do men obey Christ? Is it not because they believe him, and love him because of what they believe about him? So it seems to us.

We have evidence in this Scripture that the eternal salvation Christ is the author of, is confined to those who obey him. They obey him because they believe him, —and by believing in him are justified.

Now, as both prophets and apostles teach that the just shall live by faith, we have infallible evidence that the great salvation, that is, the eternal salvation of this Scripture, is to obtain eternal life or divine nature of existence and all its concomitant blessings; and we may well ask how the unjust are to live, who have no faith to justify them? Do they, too, live again because Jesus lives, as do his sheep, for whom he gave his life? Is the life of the unjust hid with Christ in God? These are very serious and important questions: and it is, as it ought to be, our earnest desire to exhibit the truth, and nothing but the truth of God in the premises.

It is held by some able and earnest students of the Word that the unjust include only those who have once tasted that the Lord is good, have been cleansed from their old sins, put on the sin-covering name of Christ, and after all fall away. It is held that by virtue of their once legal and constitutional union with Christ, they will be raised with the children, but having proven unfaithful, will suffer the second death; a death from which there is no recovery. We know there is a resurrection both of the just and the unjust; and while it is true in one sense that all who are not just are unjust, yet it would not be proper to adopt this broad sense, if other Scriptures in the nature of things limit it. We think there are many passages which clearly teach that all men will not be raised from the dead. And if not raised, why not? It must be because in a general sense, it would not be in harmony with Jehovah's purpose to do so.

Jesus said, "My Word shall judge you at the last day;" and again, "If I had not come and spoken unto them they had not had sin; but now they have no cloak for their sin." The divine idea contained in these utterances seems to be this: "That responsibility is the basis of judgment with God; and it is knowledge which makes man responsible, and therefore amenable to the judgment. Hear the same infallible speaker again in Luke xii. 47, 48. "And that servant which knew his Lord's will and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes, but he that knew not and did commit things worthy of stripes shall be beaten with few;" this fully establishes the principle that knowledge makes men responsible, we think; but it is further confirmed by Paul in 1 Tim. i. 13 where he says he "obtained mercy for blasphemy and persecution, and injuries, because he did it ignorantly in unbelief."

Will our readers consider well the words of the Spirit in the 49th Psalm? Speaking of such as put their trust in their wealth he says, "Nevertheless, man being in honor abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish....Like sheep they are laid in the grave,—death shall feed on them....the grave being a habitation to every one of them (margin) but God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave ...Man that is in honor and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish." Our readers will see that this Scripture cannot possibly be harmonized with the doctrine of salvation by which all the race of man is supposed to live again.

The Spirit in the 26th chapter of Isaiah says of certain wicked men, "They are dead, THEY SHALL NOT LIVE: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish;" and then adds in a most forcible contrast, "Thy dead men shall live: together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew shall be as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."

Here it is affirmed that one class shall live and arise from the dead, but that the other shall not.

Again, in Is. 24 and chapter it says of the nobles and army of Babylon, "They shall lie down together, they shall not rise: THEY ARE EXTINCT: they are quenched as tow." What! extinct, after Christ's satisfaction for the sins of the whole world!!!

In the 51st chapter of Jeremiah we have from the mouth of God this remarkable language, in reference to these Babylonians, "I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and—[and what?) sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the Lord." Another, tells of some who "shall fall and never rise up again;" and Psa. ix. 17 says the "wicked shall be turned into sheol, and all nations that forget God." In Job xxiv. 19 we read that as drought and heat consume the snow waters, so doth sheol those which have sinned... the worm shall feed sweetly on him; he shall be no more remembered." These Scriptures, taken in connection with the statement of Paul in Rom. ii. 12 furnish absolute proofs we think that the human family is divided by God into three classes, the just the unjust and the irresponsible; for it says, "For as many as have sinned without law shall—shall what? Be forgiven? No! Raised to have another opportunity because of Christ's satisfaction? Nothing of the kind! It says "they shall perish without law." This proves the assertion that knowledge makes men responsible, and amenable to the judgment, and explains why certain are extinct, and shall not rise, and powerfully disproves the substitutionary sacrifice of Christ; he died instead of no one; no one can be benefitted by his death (so far as salvation is concerned,) unless like Paul he is freed from the law of sin and death by the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus. Amen. Rom. viii. 2.

Our conclusion is, therefore, that the second Adam does not become the Father of the unjust, or else the second death would have no power over them. Jesus plainly teaches that he only raises whom he pleases (John v. 21: and in chapter 6, v. 40 he tells us whom he will be pleased to raise—those who believe on him. This is very explicit, and it serves to illustrate Paul's agonizing effort to secure a resurrection out from among the dead.

Confessedly we are discussing a profound and difficult subject, and we cannot hope to arrive at all the truth, but we do hope to be able by a comparison of Scripture with Scripture to make some progress in divine knowledge. With the aim in view we ask if there is to be a resurrection of any dead ones besides those whom Jesus is pleased to raise? We think there must be because the same verse that says the "Son quickeneth whom he will" also says, "For as the FATHER raiseth up the dead and quickeneth them, even so the SON," etc. Here are two, Father and Son, referred to personally, as raising and quickening dead ones. We know precisely what class Jesus wills to raise and quicken, viz., —those who believe in him, and thus have been justified; and is it not lawful to conclude that those whom the Father raises and quickens are the unjust, and that they are reanimated with the life of the first Adam because not worthy to be made partakers of the second, through willful rejection of the gospel, or unfaithfulness after acceptance? We think so.

A word more concerning the irresponsible class. In the second chapter of Romans we find that patient seekers for immortality have eternal life. We find that those who do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness have indignation and wrath. This clearly disposes of two portions of the human family; no reasonable person will question this, because the truth is right on the surface. This same verse and the next show that this destiny of the two classes applies to Jews and Gentiles alike, for God is no respecter of persons. Here another portion of the human family is introduced. "For, as many as have sinned without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall also perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law —under the law; Diaglott—shall be judged by the law, and the penalty we have just quoted, is "indignation and wrath."

Clearer proof that those who are ignorant of God's will, will not be judged by it, we cannot conceive of. At times, we are obliged to feel our way along very slowly and carefully, and even then make mistakes, but here we enter a veritable tower of strength that all the artillery of the enemy cannot batter down; those who sin without law PERISH without law; Christ's death avails them nothing. He was not the "satisfaction for their sins." They die in the Adam they were born of, never having gotten into the second Adam, the life imparting spirit.

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 7.

After another week we still think a people must be sorely in need of a foundation for a new community when they separate the law of Moses from the law of God for that purpose, seeing God's connection with the law of Moses is so clearly shown in Gal. iii. 19. We are there told that the angel (of God) ordained, or instituted the law in the hands of a Mediator: and the merest novice will not deny that that Mediator was Moses.

We have said that the ten laws on stones had no penalties on the stones. The penalties are found in the book of the law. All God's statutes to Israel go to make up the law of God to Israel; and we find the priest had to write the curses for certain crimes in a book. The penalty for violating the first commandment is found in Ex. xxxii. 25-28, and xxxiii. 22. That of the third is in Lev. xxiv. 10-16, 23. Just think of it,—is not the penalty a very essential part of any law? And when the penalty of a law of God written on stones is found in the book of the law, is not that good evidence that both the laws of the stones and those of the Book are of God?

In Ex. xxi. 17, we find the penalty for violating the fifth commandment—"Honor thy father and thy mother"—it was death, and is death still if the law is in force. We do not see how it can be in force without a penalty. The penalty was the loss of mortal, blood-life; obedience to it ensured, not eternal life, but long mortal life, and a natural death, instead of a short one, and being deprived of it by stoning.

We find the penalty of death for violating the seventh commandment—death both to the adulterer and adulteress—recorded in Lev. xx. 10; and that is the penalty today if the law is in force, and so of all the rest.

In Ex. xviii. 15, 16 we have positive evidence that the civil laws of the land are styled the statutes and laws of God; it was his nation; he was their King. Moses says the people came to him to enquire of God, and he judges between them and makes them know God's statutes and laws. They would know them all by heart by hearing them read a few times.

More than 60 years after the decalogue was given we read in the 24th of Joshua, that "he wrote in the book of the law of God;" and in 2 Chron. xix. 9, that "the Levites taught in Judah and had the book of the law of the Lord with them." We learn that the Book of the law of the Lord was lost and almost forgotten during wicked reigns; and we learn of its being found again when the good King Josiah came to the throne, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 14.

In the 8th chapter of Nehemiah we read that Ezra stood on a pulpit and read from the book of the Law of Moses distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading. In the 8th verse it is called the Law of God. All the Sabbatarians in the world cannot alter this. It is absolute proof that the distinction they make between the law of Moses and the law of God exists only in their imagination. The same law is called both the law of Moses, and the law of God in the same chapter.

If the above be not sufficient, our readers may see in Neh. ix. 1-3 that this same law is called, "Law of the Lord," "Law of God," and "Law of Moses."

In Luke ii. 22-24 it is also called both the law of the Lord and the law of Moses.

Mountains of such testimony could be piled up if it were necessary; but we think every honest soul should see that the above Scriptures knock one of the greatest foundation stones from under the Sabbatarian edifice. The law of Moses was the law of God; there were not two series of laws; because, if words mean anything, Heb. 1 proves that the temple services were part and parcel of the first covenant, which was graven on stones. This is the Spirit's testimony, not man's. Let the earnest student consult the context from vers. 6 to 9 chapter viii. and see that the subject is concerning covenants, the first and second. Verse 1 of chapter ix. says the first (covenant) had also ordinances of divine service and a worldly sanctuary—the covenant had this service, —it was attached to it, as the service or ministry of Christ is now connected with the new and better covenant;—the covenant is not the service, and the service is not the covenant, but it belongs to it.

If any still cling to the law in spite of these bright beams of light from the Word of God, and so many assurances that only the gospel of Christ will save, I would say, really in the language of Paul, O, foolish Americans, who hath bewitched you? The answer to this may follow next week if the Lord will.

Discrepancies.

Bro. Reese is anxious to have a "full explanation of Matt. xxvii. 3, 4, 5, and Acts i. 18, 19 to assist him in the defence of the Bible" against an Editor who is denouncing the whole Book because of the apparent discrepancy.

We have a thousand reasons for implicit faith in the Word of God and therefore can afford to trust him in the dark. The case is different with the Editor; he does not want to believe it and these passages furnish him with a pretext. We are persuaded with Dean Alford, that only "an accurate acquaintance with the actual circumstances would fully account for the discrepancy," this unfortunately, we do not possess, and therefore cannot expect to silence despisers of the Word.

If a perfect harmony of these passages were possible we would doubtless have found it in Sister Reed's "Bible Triumphant." What she has written is helpful to those who believe and love God's truth, but the words "perhaps" and "probable" make it unsatisfactory with skeptics, and somewhat confirms our opinion that the real key to this difficulty has yet to be found. In reference to the suicide of Judas, she writes as follows:—

"It is written in Matt. xxvii. 5, that Judas went out and hanged himself. Luke in Acts i. 18, relates only the circumstances which followed after he had hanged himself, viz., "that falling headlong," (perhaps by the rope breaking, or that to which he had fastened it giving away,) he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out. There is no knowing how long (perhaps weeks or even months) he might have remained suspended (for it is probable that he hung himself in some unfrequented part of the neighboring woods) even until decomposition of his body had far advanced, and then the falling from a very low height indeed could be quite sufficient to cause a rupture, or bursting of the parietes of the abdomen, and the consequent gushing out of his intestines or bowels."

In reference to the purchase of the potter's field we find the following from the same author:

"Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity." Upon examination we find that this text, and the one recorded in Matthew, are literally true, for the reward of iniquity. (i. e. Judas' iniquity) bought the potter's field; consequently it was Judas, who, by his iniquity in betraying his Lord and Master, actually bought this property, although it was the priests who handed over the money for the field to the owners; they were the agents, he the principal. As it may be said of any rich man, he purchased such a piece of ground, although he may never have seen either the land or its owners, yet it may be truthfully said of him that he bought the property if it was done with his money, while another person in speaking of the same transaction could also say, with truth, that the land was purchased by the agent who transacted the business."

Bro. Reese and all lovers of Truth would be grateful for any additional light, we are sure.

"I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead." Rev. iii. 1.

At a time like the present, when there is so much of professed Christianity in the world that seems to elicit criticism, and when each is so prone to speak of the unscriptural doctrines or teachings of some particular denomination, is it not well that we turn the gaze within, that we may know ourselves. Shall we not look into the life which is to be our example, that we may behold our own unworthiness. In the light of divine truth, we may ask, "What should the world think of us? What can we think of ourselves? and above all what does God think of us?"

So sure as God knew the manner of life and the work of the seven churches of Asia, he is familiar with our lives, and the work of the church or organization to which we belong. The church of God is a unit in its purpose, yet it is composed of individual churches or congregations, throughout the length and breadth of the land. Each individual church if true to the name it has espoused, is a member or part of the one body, which is the prospective Bride—the Lamb's Wife, "for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv. 12. Yes, thank God, we must be Christ's,—"For by one Spirit ye are all baptized into one body," 1 Cor. xii. 13, "and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise," Gal. iii. 29, yet. each individual church has its peculiar environments, its own temptations, its own burdens to bear, and so sure as God is true, each church shall receive and be blessed in proportion to its faithfulness. The moral and religious influence of a church or body of believers, is no greater than the sum of its individual members. Read all of 1 Cor. xii. the 27 verse "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular," and in the preceding verse, and whether one member suffers all the members suffer with it. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain,"—not profanely, neither to no purpose, but for his name, that we may be a glory to him. Jesus said, "I am the vine, my Father is the husbandman, every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away, and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, (or cleanseth it) that it bear more fruit. Oh how we need his cleansing Spirit, that while we have a name that we live we may not be dead. May God help us that we bear not his name in vain, but that we help by our talents and by our means as he has blessed us, and that we may be as lights to the world. Oh how happy if in that day it might be said of our church to which we as individuals may belong, as it was said of the church at Smyrna—"I know thy works, and tribulations, and poverty, (but thou art rich.) Yes, bless his holy name, measured by the standard of heaven, though we may be poor in this world, though we may suffer persecution, if we are living in the Spirit of the Master we are rich, for we are heirs with him, and if faithful until death he will give us a crown of life.

Yours in the love of the truth.

J. H. WESLEY.

Selected.

Peter's Estimate of Christian Character. 2 Pet. i. 5-8.

"Add to your faith virtue."

There is a necessity for having the faith for a foundation of a true Christian character, because everything else is based upon it. And not only the faith, as the subject matter of the gospel, but also faith in God. It is written, "Without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Heb. xi 6. Its necessity and significance is thus made manifest.

The apostle then goes on to say —"add to your faith, virtue." The word virtue is generally understood to mean moral goodness. But as this definition would include everything mentioned by Peter in this connection, it must mean some particular moral excellence; such as courage, fortitude, bravery, etc. The Greek word from which it is translated is aretee, and only occurs five times in the New Testament: three times in this chapter, verse 3 and 5 once in 1 Pet. ii. 9, translated praises; and once in Phil. iv. 8. There is no reason why the word should be rendered virtue, as meaning virtue in a general sense, in the passage under consideration. Hence nearly all modern translators and critics render aretee, courage or fortitude in this place. The injunction then would read—"add to your faith, courage or fortitude." This rendering is proper and also agreeable with the context.

And why ought courage to be added to faith? Because without it faith would in a great measure be inoperative. Of what use is it, though we have a correct faith and all faith, if we lack the virtue of courage to confess it or make it known to others? We are exhorted by Jude to "earnestly contend for the faith;" and by Paul, "with one mind to strive together for the faith of the gospel, and in nothing to be terrified by our adversaries," Phil. i. 27, 28. But this requires courage. The timid, the faint-hearted, the irresolute will never be found "earnestly contending," or "striving together." They dread the consequences. They are always either thinking or saying —"what will people say of us, if we thus act?" or "what is the use of causing contention, when we can get along quietly without it?" They wish to walk arm in arm with the world, and be at peace, rather than obtrude their views upon them. It is persecution that they fear, and to avoid it they are willing to compromise. But this is a faith without works—a dead faith. In order to keep faith alive, it is necessary to add courage or fortitude to it. Jesus said, "Whoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he comes in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels." Mark viii. 38. And again, "Whoever shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." Matt. x. 32, 33. It required a great deal of courage to confess Jesus before men of that age, who everywhere ignored his claims to the Messiahship. To be one of his disciples was to become an outlaw, and to be exposed to death. And many of the primitive disciples sealed the truth with their blood. But at the present time to confess Jesus does not bring imprisonment and death, because the law of the land happens to be in our favor. Still human nature is the same now as then, and there is deep-seated enmity in the human heart towards God and his Anointed One, and those who serve them: and hatred is manifested in some way. Not unfrequently is it the case, that when "the truth as it is in Jesus" is embraced by some individual of a family, that all the members of that family turn into bitter persecutors, thus verifying what Jesus said, that "a man's foes should be those of his own household." Also, it sometimes happens that a neighborhood will turn persecutors, though they may be restrained by law from acts of personal violence. Now it requires courage for a disciple under such circumstances to confess Jesus, and to make known his words. How necessary then that it be added to faith, in order that perfection of character may be attained!

Our faith is so peculiar—so different from the faith of the sectarian world—that it exposes us to more persecution than others. Though we believe nothing except what we find in the Scriptures, and which we can demonstrate was "the faith once delivered to the saints," yet when set forth in its simplicity and fulness, as the faith which saves, as the gospel in which is deposited the power of God for salvation to all who believe, —we are denounced as bigots, narrow-minded, heretics, the church doors are closed against us, ministers warn their people to be aware of our doctrines and heretical notions, and advise them not to hear what we have got to say, or to come with us, and editors of religious papers endorse such conduct, and shut down upon what they cannot answer or refute. Now it requires considerable courage or moral force to confess the faith, to uphold and maintain it, and to earnestly contend for it against such mighty opposition. The whole strength of the religious world with their learning, their piety, their ancient usages, and their numbers are all pitted against us, but to the one rooted and grounded and settled in the faith, it amounts to nothing. We know that we have the primitive faith, the one preached by the Apostles, concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Anointed—and that our enemies have it not. Again, courage is needed to refuse to practice the precepts of our Divine Master. They are so at variance with worldly maxims and practices, which in the way are almost now universally endorsed by professors of religion, that it requires quite an effort and a determination to fully carry them out. Yet it is absolutely necessary. And not only his precepts must be endorsed, but also his example must be followed. "Learn of me," said Jesus; "I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." And Peter says, "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps." Thus to follow our Master absolutely requires the addition of courage to faith. We have many noble examples of heroic fortitude in those who suffered on account of the gospel, and their firm adhesion to the teachings of Jesus, and we are to be "followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises."

Seeing then that courage or fortitude is a necessary qualification to be added to faith, according to Peter, in order to be secure against falling, and the charge of unfruitfulness, let it be sought after and practiced. And in the language of Paul we would say, "Finally my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God that you may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand."—Gospel Banner, 1867.

British Maritime Interests.

According to careful and elaborate calculations which have been made recently by the Admiralty in London as well as by the principal experts on naval matters the gross value of British maritime interests amounts to slightly over $10,000,000,000. These figures comprise the total value of the sea-borne commerce of the British Empire as well as such foreign maritime commerce as is carried in British ships owned in England, the value of the securities and marketable documents conveyed to and fro in British ships owned by British subjects, and the value of the mercantile shipping itself. In the face of these stupendous figures the sum of $100,000,000, which the British Parliament votes every year toward the maintenance of the navy, cannot be regarded as excessive.

Turkey is Anxious About Tripoli.

The Turkish Government is beginning to get anxious about Tripoli, the last of its African possessions. This is proved by the late arrival of two German officers attached to a Turkish engineer corps in Tripoli, where they immediately began the work of inspecting the forts and batteries. These consist of seven forts and redoubts, situated at the entrance to the harbor, the coast, and the city gates in such a way that they command by their crossfire the access from land and sea. They are armed throughout with Krupp breech-loading guns, and although being an older style of artillery, they are by no means what the Italian paper, Tribuna, calls them—"card houses, more dangerous to their inhabitants than to a attacking party. The military garrison of Tripoli has been steadily increased in the course of years, numbering now from 11,000 to 12,000 men, half of whom occupy the forts. It consists of four regiments of infantry, two regiments of cavalry, and one regiment of artillery with twelve batteries of six Krupp guns each. The magazines contain large amounts of arms, which, if distributed among the fanatic Mohammedan population of the country, would suffice to equip an army of 100,000 men. Such an army would prove to any invader a formidable opposition in view of the fanaticism and fatalism of the men. What made the resistance of the Tunisian Arabs in 1881 so short and spiritless was the entire lack of sufficient armament. This would not be the case in a Tripolitan invasion.

Juvenile European Rulers.

The ascension of the Grand Duke Nicholas to the throne of the Romanoffs will add another youthful monarch to the royal galaxy of Europe. This frail heir of the crown of the autocrat of all the Russias is only 20 years old. He will be called to rule 126,000,000 subjects. Thirty-five-year-old Kaiser Wilhelm lords it over 49,000,000 Germans. Over the 5,000,000 people of Portugal reigns King Carlos, who is four years younger than William. King Alexander of Servia, with its 2,200,000, was born in the Philadelphia centennial year. Little Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands first opened her eyes on 4,000,000 subjects only fourteen years ago, and the baby of all the Old World royalty—King Alfonso of Spain—was not born until after his father's death in 1880, and presides at the tender age of 8 over the destinies of 18,000,000. Thus at the close of the nineteenth century 250,000,000 Europeans find themselves under the crown of six rulers whose average years are only 22. Philadelphia Record.

Unhappy Czarina of Russia.

There is a good deal of sincere sympathy expressed just now for the Czarina of Russia, who has never known much actual happiness in her life since she entered her exalted estate. She has been a good wife, too, and a tender mother, when court etiquette would permit, and in her early youth was almost as pretty a woman as her sister, the Princess of Wales. She accompanied her sister to London when the heir to the English throne was married, and rode through the streets in a carriage preceding England's future Queen. So charmingly did she bear herself that the loyal Londoner mistook her for Princess Alexandra, and cheered her lustily, whereat, fresh from her father's court, she blushed and bowed so sweetly that a number of folk were sorry that she and not the rather impassive Alexandra was the choice of their Prince. Queen Louise of Denmark has always had an especial fondness for archaic names with pretty meanings. Dagmar, the Czarina's name means dawn. An early and lovable Queen of Denmark was the first Dagmar. The Czarina, following the example of her mother, named her favorite daughter Xenie, meaning gladsome. Thyra and Gugalora are two other names the Queen of Denmark has rescued from forgetfulness and bestowed on her favorite grandchildren. Women who answer to the pretty name of Maud will be grateful, perhaps, to Queen Louise, who has made a study of woman's names. She finds that Maud is not a diminutive of Martha or Matilda, as too many believe, but is an abbreviation from Mahaud, a Flemish lady and Countess of Champagne in her own right. It was her hand that held the crown over the head of Philip the Long when crowned at Rheims.

Religious Toleration in Russia.

An illustration of what is meant by religious toleration in Russia is afforded by a case which recently came up on appeal before the Saratsk District Court. It seems that an officer of the rural gendarmerie had observed that several peasants were in the habit of meeting in a cottage where they read the Evangelists, prayed, and sang hymns. Suspecting these persons to be Stundists the officer surprised and arrested ten of them. Before the local magistrate the accused declared that they were faithful orthodox believers, but as the Scriptures were never read or expounded to them by the priests they claimed the right to do so for themselves. The court held that the case came within the prescriptive meaning of the Governor's rescript with regard to the Stundists, and each of the prisoners was fined 50 rubles, or in default condemned to suffer ten weeks' imprisonment. The victims carried their case before the Central Court at Riasan, and their conviction after re-affirming that they were good orthodox subjects, and admitting that an apostate from the State religion was liable to a criminal prosecution and to penal banishment, based his defense upon certain articles of the code, which distinctly concedes to every Russian such religious toleration as the prisoners claimed in their private religious exercises. The provincial court appeared to be unable or unwilling to determine the line which divides illegal sectarianism from the rights of the orthodox citizen to read the Scriptures on his own behalf, and the case has been remitted to the Senate.

Archæological Ground.

At Athens the Greek Government has recently declared the whole region lying between the Theseion and the monument of Lysicrates archæological ground, thereby compelling the proprietors to sell at prices to be fixed by a commission of sworn experts. It is believed that the American and German schools and the Archæological Society of Athens can easily raise the funds needed to buy it. The latter society, in its excavations at Epidauros, has brought to light the stadium, which is apparently intact. On sinking trenches across the area to a depth of five yards or more the rows of marble chairs, each with its inscription, which ran completely around the stadium, were found in their proper places. It will be the first Greek stadium yet known in its original state.

The Jews of Hungary.

Religious tolerance is making rapid strides in Hungary—a nation, indeed, which has always led the van of every kind of progress in the dual monarchy. This time, says the London Chronicle, it is the Jews who are going to profit by the march of freedom, and even the House of Magnates, where political and religious prejudices have naturally been most stubborn, has now adopted the Jewish disability bill. The measure is but a necessary corollary of the civil marriage act, and having passed this law, the Magnates could scarcely have rejected the other. Several of the Magnates, in debating the bill, acknowledged the patriotic services rendered by Hungarian Jews, and, indeed, there is reason to believe that Kossuth himself had a good deal of Semitic blood in his veins. His enemies at least said so. But reproaches of this kind will now lose much of their point in Hungary. It is Austria proper where the Judenhetze is fiercest. Certain it is that some of the best Jews who have attained distinction in the west of Europe were of Hungarian origin.

If you live with God, it is your privilege to talk with him. Some people live so far away that they cannot get any communication with him.

The Young King of Spain.

A correspondent of the London Morning Post thus describes the boy King of Spain: "In appearance the little King is very bright and attractive, and he has lost that overweighted look which he had as a very young child, when his head seemed too big for his shoulders. His manners are very bright and vivacious, and from head to foot he is a thorough little Spaniard, taking much more after his father, the late Alfonso XII., than his Austrian mother. His power of repartee is already famous, and he loves to exercise his baby wit upon the aged generals and diplomats of his court. He takes easy likes and dislikes, which are not always in accordance with political exigencies. Thus, one of the great personal favorites is M. Sagasta, the chief of the Liberal party. After a recent change of Cabinet he asked peevishly why M. Sagasta no longer visited the palace, and insisted that he should still come to see him."

To Consecrate a Greek Church.

Nicholas, Bishop of Alaska and of the Aleutian Islands, accompanied by his private secretary and his attendant, arrived at the Grand Pacific Hotel Tuesday afternoon. His Grace is the American representative of the Russian branch of the Greek Church. A Greek church is to be consecrated in Southern Illinois, and as Bishop Nicholas is the nearest dignitary of that church empowered to perform the consecration ceremonies he has made the long journey from Alaska for this special purpose.

Say Good Words.

The teacher who educates your children, says an observer, tells on your after year doing her duty. She may train them in a perfect way, making them grow to noble manhood and womanhood, but never a word of appreciation does she hear. Let her make a mistake, however, let something go wrong and you denounce her in terms of severest blame. The newspaper writer gives his lifetime to writing things that will be helpful to the readers. It is his daily and nightly thought how he will interest them, instruct them, and give them new courage when they are weary and disheartened. Never a word of praise do you give him. If he says anything you do not like, however, like lightning descend the bolts of your wrath. He hears from you then—he does indeed.

The Ten Commandments Abolished.

"For we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus, unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. Wherefore, remember, that ye being in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world, but now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace, who hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby," Eph. ii. 10-16.

Now if our ten precept friends cannot prove that God wrote other commandments and ordinances besides the ten written on tables of stone, why, down goes their cob house. Now if I prove the Lord wrote ordinances, why are they not the ten written on stone by the Lord, which Paul says is abolished, in Eph. ii. 15.

Now just listen a moment. They feared the Lord and served their own gods after the manner of the nations whom they carried away from thence. Unto this day they do after the former manners. They fear not the Lord, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the Lord commanded the children of Jacob, whom he named Israel; with whom the Lord had made a covenant, and charged their saying, ye shall not fear other gods, nor bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them. But the Lord who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power and a stretched out arm, Him shall ye fear and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice. Now, listen, "and the statutes and ordinances, and the law, and the commandments, which he wrote for you, ye shall observe to do forevermore, and ye shall not fear other gods." 2 Kings xvii. 33-37.

"Ye shall not fear other gods," shows the resting has reference to the commandments the Lord wrote on tables of stone at Mount Sinai. Now I want those people that are continually crying to gentiles people in bondage to show where the Lord wrote other commandments, besides the ten words, or else acknowledge that the ten on tables are called ordinances. If they cant do it, why acknowledge like men, that they are abolished at the cross, except what has been commanded in the New Covenant.

Dear Restitution:

My subscription should have been paid before this, but I am thankful to be able to pay it now, for to me the value of our beloved paper cannot be told in words. It is so full of Bible truths that I could not think of doing without it. God has blessed so many of our dear brothers and sisters with the talent to write for the benefit of the Church of God, to guide them in the narrow way that leadeth unto life and build them up in the faith once delivered to the saints. May they not be weary in well-doing, for in due time they shall reap if they faint not. My daily prayer to God is that they may write to glorify God and not to please men, or ride a hobby. I am much pleased and profited by the clear and forcible articles of Brother Joblin on "Saved by law or gospel" and "Justification by Faith." I trust our dear brother will not stop until he shows us what we must be obedient to under the New Covenant. Does not obedience imply something to do as well as to believe the gospel. I would kindly ask our brother to show as clearly as possible how part of the Old Covenant could be justly transferred to the New and not the whole of it. Paul tells me in Rom. xiii. 8 "He that loveth another hath fulfilled the law for this he says I must not commit adultery, kill, steal and covet." Now this was in the Old and carried forward in the New. Now I am not a sabbath-keeper I have yet to see good reasons for doing so. I have heard their preachers and read their works.

Yours for the one faith.

John Harris.

Dear Restitution:

As report of labor done is anxiously read by the brethren, I thought I would give a brief account of my trip to Nemaha Co. My daughter has lived there for several years and has not affiliated with any of the sects, and some wished to know why? she gave them her reasons and some were curious to hear the doctrine preached. I gave them four discourses on the following subjects: "Nature of man," "The time of reward," "The kingdom, what is it, when will it come," "What we must do to be saved." Some were much interested, and some were the other way. The first night a young minister came to me and introducing himself said, "As you are preaching a strange doctrine will you give your proof texts?" I told him I would be particular after that and give them. It occurred to me that the old proverb is here fulfilled, "Truth is stranger than fiction." After that three of them took notes and I gave opportunity at the close of each meeting for asking questions and their replies were very gentlemanly. On Sunday morning I read the fifth chapter of Matthew which touches on legal divorces. After meeting a gentleman asked for information on the question. He had asked other ministers but got no information. I told him Jesus was talking to the church and all who became adopted into the family of God, of Christ, of God must abide by the law of God. Civil government could make you conflict with God's laws, but no servant can serve two masters. Paul tells how far the church shall be subject to the powers that be. One old gentleman dying of Asthma, came to talk to me at my daughter's house; he said he had just a little while to live and he would like to know where he would go when he died. It made me think of Job's question, "If a man die shall he live again?" Brother Orem was to have met me but stormy weather hindered. I will try and visit them again.

Yours in hope.

OBITUARY

Fell asleep in Jesus Oct. 21, '94, Alfred P. Jones, at the home of his daughter Sister M. Young, Cleveland, Ohio, aged 66 years and 9 days.

Bro. Jones was born in England, but some 37 years ago came to America with his family, making Pittsburgh his home for about two years, then removed to Canada where he remained about four years when he brought his family to Cleveland, Ohio, where he remained till death claimed him. He was an iron worker and seemed to know all about iron. I have sometimes thought he could tell you the quality of iron even in the dark,—it seemed instinctive with him. In religion he had been among the Adventists somewhat, but on coming to Cleveland he soon embraced the gospel of the kingdom and became a very intelligent and active member of the Church of God. For years I think no one did more than he to build up the church, and spread the knowledge of the truth. He was made an overseer and well performed the duties required of him. He certainly did contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. He was quite competent to hold his own in argument with any who may oppose the truth, and was never ashamed of the gospel of Christ. For a number of years his health was not good. Nearly five years ago his wife, Sister Jones fell asleep. Since which time he has not been like his former self, what with poor health, and the loss of a faithful companion whose place no one could fill. Still, we often heard his voice in our meetings, though his strength failing his voice, never very strong, grew weaker till but few could hear him. He was always sound in the faith, still he grew weaker and weaker both physically and mentally till a number of days he was confined to his bed. Of course he knew that death was near of which he was not afraid. Though he longed for the Lord to come, yet knowing that the Lord had power over death, he wished to die rather than suffer. He awaits the voice that shall raise the dead. He leaves one son and two daughters to mourn for him, all of whom have long been in the truth. May God bless them all and keep them to that day when the dead shall be raised incorruptible, when our brother and all the faithful will live again and share in the kingdom of God. Till then we bid our dear brother sleep on.

Rouse your heart to diligence. If a man have much to write, and is almost at the end of his paper, he will put much in a little room.—Eland. (Died 1691.)

[illegible] something.

You are not here to vegetate or to dream; you were born to act. Every man coming into the world is furnished with a commission of service. That you are here is evident that some work awaits you, for the great Master sends no one into the field sure to find his task and to fall into line with the reapers. Service is the key to a human life; all else is subsidiary, mere hypisy. So you perform the allotted task, you shall, at set of sun, hear the "well done" and receive the accustomed "penny." Blessed are those servants who, when the Master of the Harvest calls, shall be found, sickle in hand, among the stalks of golden grain!

But, not to tell, not all perform the task assigned them in the divine order; and, what is more strange, it is not always the bad who refuse to recognize the divine command, that fail to do their work; it is often the well-meaning men who recognize the obligation and intend to discharge the duty. Simply they do not do it. They dream of doing, without ever taking the task in hand. The reasons for not doing are various; often plain, but sometimes obscure, to the individual himself, and possibly such as he would not venture to put in words. Some never get ready. They imitate the bobolink, which persistently swings on his "brier or weed," ever ready to mount, making many attempts, while remaining an inveterate procrastinator. The intentions of such people are good, but they are never effectuated in action. Others fail to perceive what duty is. They may never see until they begin to act; the first step will make clear the second. They may never have an outline of duty ten miles ahead, and because not thus favored, they refuse to do anything.

There are those who do not like the tasks assigned them. If they were called to something else, if the task of some other had been assigned to them, they would be valiant soldiers. Still others fail because they do not like the regiment into which they are mustered. That you are there is a reason why you should fight there. Providence often selects our associates in service, and such selections are usually the best. To get out of these relations is too often to get out of the service. But be sure to do something, and begin today. Delay means failure.

We have all seen them.

There are wonderful people about, whose wisdom would beat Solomon into fits and yet they have not sense to keep their own kettle from boiling over. They could manage the nation, and yet can't keep their boys out of the farmer's orchard; they could teach the parson, but they can't learn themselves. They poke their noses in other people's concerns, where they are as welcome as water in one's shoes, but as for setting their own house to rights, they like the job about as much as a pig likes to have a ring in his nose.—John Ploughman's Talk.

We laugh at a boy who will tug a sled for an hour to reach a summit from which he will slide down in a minute; but he is a philosopher to the man who does hard work for six days that he may on Saturday night, turn his coined sweat into the till of the saloon.—Ram's Horn.

Over the entrance to the most famous Egyptian library, the oldest in history, ran the motto: "Truth is the food of the soul." This is just as true today as it ever was. On truth, and on this only, can the human soul feed and thrive."

Coals, when separated, soon go out; but heaped together they keep each other alive. So of Christians talking together of the dealings of God with their souls, it warms all up to a glowing heat.—Holden Conner.

It is very hard to get any good food down a sick horse, and it is about as hard to feed people upon the Word of God who are so full of the world that they are sick of religious thought and conversation. —Advance.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Laura Wilson died in Leighton, Mich. Aug. 28, 1894, after a long and painful illness.

Laura M. West, was born in Scipio, Steuhens Co. N. Y. March 5, 1819, was married to James Polton April 29, 1839 living in Hichmarket, Lewis Co. N. Y. until 1850 when they moved to Holland, Ottawa, Co. Mich. where her husband died Feb. 17, '78. In 1881 she married Mr. Benj. Wilson of Holland. Eaton Co. Mich. In 1887 death again visited her home taking her companion, leaving her alone. Her health failed her at this time and she came to live with her sister, Mrs. G. G. Allen, who tenderly cared for her until death released her from her suffering. Deceased was a member of the M. E. Church from her 14th year until about 10 years ago she went to CHRISTIAN UNION and was sent her by friends, and also embraced the gospel faith, and at the last June Conference held at Dalton united with the "Church of God" by letter. Her remains were taken to Holland for interment and on Sept. 30, Elder B. W. Woodward preached the funeral sermon at St. Albans, and now where two weeks before her life ceased for her and administered the sacrament. Sr. Laura leaves two brothers, two sisters, and many other relatives and friends to mourn her decease, but this comforts all, she went in hope.

MARY A. WOODWARD.

Died at his home near Waterville, Wash. Oct. 1, 1894, after a long affliction and much suffering, Brother George W. Gard, in the 69th year of his age.

Brother G. W. Gard was born in Preble Co. Ohio, Jan. 2, 1825. Subsequently removed to the State of Missouri, and was afterward married in that state to Miss E. J. Hand, Mar. 5, 1845. In 1853, he in company with his father's family removed to San Joaquin Co. Cal. near the city of Stockton. About 1854 he made profession of Christianity, united with the Church of Christ (Disciples) sometimes called the Campbellite Church. He was a very devoted member. Some years later he removed with his family to Lake Co. Cal. He settled on a beautiful home on the west bank of Kelsey Creek about two miles north of Kelseyville. In 1878 if I recollect right, I commenced preaching in that neighborhood and Bro. Gard was soon an interested listener. He criticised some of the positions, especially on immortality and the kingdom. We had many private investigations at his house, and the result was finally that he yielded to the teachings of the Scriptures upon these and all others where at first we differed.

Subsequently about 1882, I organized the Church of God near his home. Bro. Gard and wife and several of their children became members. In 1887 he with his family removed to this state where he made a farm upon which he died.

He lived a devoted Christian life, always ready to accept truth and discard error. He became very well versed in the Scriptures, and was quite an able defender of the truth. When we organized a church here he was ready and united and was one of the substantial members.

In his death the church has sustained a great loss in these times of peril. His companion has met with an irreparable loss—and his children have lost a kind and devoted father. He left a wife and seven living children, three daughters and four sons to mourn his loss. He will be missed in the community as all good men are.

We sorrow not as those who have no hope. Some two weeks before his death he requested me to preach his funeral, giving the subject,—"Death and the Resurrection," he citing me to 1 Cor. xv. and 1 Thess. iv. I preached the funeral to a large audience in the cemetery Oct. 3.

Our brother was strong in the faith that the enemy death could not hold him as a captive very long. That soon the Life Giver would come and call for his Jewels: and that they then would put on immortality, but untill that time he must repose in a dreamless sleep. We hope to meet him in the first resurrection.

In hope.

Announcement.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, Ind., commencing on Friday, Nov. 9th, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continue over the following Sunday.

At our last conference it was ordered that this must never be overlooked strictly in accordance with the constitution which provides that each church shall be entitled to one voter or delegate at all meetings of the conference for every ten members, and one for every fraction of six, and also to be represented by delegates of Bible and character. Each and every church, no matter how small will be entitled to representation hereafter.

It was further ordered that the president instruct the churches to attend, or their delegates to attend to the reference the case at their churches, and also to evangelical pastors, and all Brethren to be notified of the session of the conference, and unless they comply with the order they will not be recognized by the conference.

Now, brethren, this is an order, and it is absolutely necessary that there be a full turning up if we are going to do business to carry on the conference, let every organization realize that they are a part of it, and their presence help is needed to carry on the work. Don't think this is for some one else, for it is to you, and don't think that because there has'nt been much done, that there won't be, but forth every effort and you will be blessed for it.

Let the brethren and sisters come full of love for the truth, and we'll have a good meeting.

Poetry.

The Advent of Christ.

Lord, I shall come! the earth will shake,
The hills fall, seas run forsake;
And, with a cry, from the south or north
The dust withdraw their feeble night.

The Lord will come; but not the same
As once in lowly form he came,
A silent bush to slaughter led,
Else bruised, the suffering, and the dead.

The Lord will come, a dreadful form,
With storm-flame and robe of storm;
To shout, wing and wings of wind,
Anointed judge of human kind.

Oh this be he who went to stray
A pilgrim on the world's highway;
By power opposed, and mocked by pride?
Yes! it is this the Crucified!

Go, herald! to the mighty plain!
Go, rock the mountains—cry it in vain!
But faith, ever-rejoicing hope,
Shall sing for joy, "The Lord is come!"

Heber.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 18.

1. After these events withdrawing from Athens he went to Korinthos:

2. And finding a certain Joudaian Akulas by name, of Pontos by birth, who had come recently from Italia, and Priskilla his wife, because of Klaudios having directed all Joudaios to withdraw from Hrome (Rome) he went to them.

3. And because they were of like craft he abode with them, and engaged in work. For they were tent-makers by trade.

4. And he was discoursing in the synagogue during every sabbatic period and persuading both Joudaians and Hellenists.

5. And when Silas and Timotheos had come down from Makedonia Paulos was holding on to the Word, going through the testimony to the Joudaians of Jesous the Christ;

6. But as they continued to army themselves against him and to blaspheme, he shook out his outergarments and said unto them, Your blood be upon your head. I am clean. From now on I shall go my way unto the nations.

7. And departing from them he went into the household of a certain Titus Joustos by name, one who respected God, whose house was adjacent to the synagogue.

8. Now Keispos the ruler of the synagogue had put faith in the Lord along with all his household; and many of the Korinthians hearing it were experiencing faith and being baptized.

9. And the Lord said in the night through a vision unto Paulos, Fear not, but talk and do not keep silent.

10. For I am with thee and no one shall impose upon thee to do thee evil, because I have a vast laity in this city.

11. And he stayed a year and six months among them teaching the Word of God.

12. And while Gallion was anthypater of Achaia, the Joudaians with one accord arose against Paulos, and led him to the bema (judgment) saying,

13. This person is persuading men to worship God contrary to the law,

14. And as Paulos was about to open his mouth Gallio said unto the Joudaians, If this were some act of injustice or wicked act of recklessness, O Joudaians, I would suffer you word by word,

15. But if it is questionings about a word and names and the law that is according to you ye yourselves shall see to it. A judge of these things I do not desire to be,

16. And he drove them from the bema.

17. But they all laying hold of Sosthenes the ruler of the synagogue beat him before the bema, and Gallion cared for none of these things.

18. And Paulos when he had remained a considerable number of days with the brethren, being dismissed, sailed away to Syria and Priskilla and Akulas along with him, he having shaved his head in Kenchreai, for he had a vow.

19. And they arrived in Ephesos, and they left him behind there; and entering into the synagogue he discoursed to the Joudaians.

20. And when they requested him to remain a longer time he did not consent.

21. But being dismissed and saying I will return unto you again God willing, he led up from Ephesos.

22. And going down to Kaisaria he went up and greeted the church and went down to Antiokeia:

23. And when he had spent some time he departed going through the provinces of Galatia and Phrygia in order, staying up all the disciples.

24. And a certain Joudaian Apollos by name, an Alexandrine by birth, a man of influence as a logician and one who was able in the Scriptures arrived in Ephesos.

25. This man had been taught as a Katechumen the way of the Lord, and seething in the Spirit, he was talking and teaching the things concerning Jesous knowing well only the baptism of Joannes;

26. And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue. And when Priskilla and Akulas heard him, they took him to themselves and set forth the way more accurately to him;

27. And as he desired to go through into Achaia the brethren forwarding him wrote to the disciples to accept him; and who he had arrived and contributed much to those who experienced faith through the grace.

28. For he forcibly and utterly confuted the Joudaians, in public demonstrating through the Scriptures that Jesous was the Christ, (the Anointed).

COMMENT.

"Was holding on to the Word" instead of "constrained by the Word" R. V.

"Going through the testimony of Jesous the Christ" instead of "testifying that Jesous was the Christ."

"laity" instead of "people" R. V.

"I would suffer you word by word" instead of "reason would that I should bear with you" R. V.

"Drove" instead of "drave" R. V. This has not been good English for at least a hundred and fifty years.

"Able" instead of "mighty" R. V.

"Seething" or "boiling" instead of "fervent" R. V. This word is very suggestive to the thoughtful reader and more truly so than the weaker word "fervent" which does not translate the Greek term.

"Knowing well" instead of "knowing" only R. V. He probably had some knowledge of the Messianic prophecies from what we are told about Apollos here and elsewhere.

"Of God" not in the best text R. V.

"Forwarding" instead of "encouraging" R. V. They did something more than "encourage" we know, as they gave him letters to the brethren and "forwarding" in those days generally meant more than this even on the part of the church, of a practical nature, too.

"For he forcibly and utterly confuted" instead of "powerfully and that publicly" R. V.

"In public" or "publicly" goes with the following clause.

"Alexandros" "a man who is a defender."

"Korinthos" "the place of the maid Iris." So named in the old Greek mythology. "Iris" was the daughter of Cadmos who according to Greek mythology brought letters to Greece.

"Akulas" akin to "Akulos" an eatable acorn, the fruit of the tree prinos or ilex or evergreen oak.

"Priskilla" "a little saw."

"Pontos" "the open sea."

"Klaudios" "a lamenter."

"Sosthenes" "saved from death"

"Gallion" a brother of Seneca the philosopher, and then "proconsul" or more accurately "anthypater" of Achia—the word means an inhabitant of Gallia or a Gaul.

"Titus" "one who is ready."

"Kenchraia" "a place of millet" where it was raised or sold.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Heir of David's Throne.

To begin with, let us read the first sixteen verses of the 17th ch. of 1 Chron. In these verses are recorded the circumstances under which the promise was first made to David that he should have a son to reign upon his throne forever. Before David's death he called Solomon his son, and repeated the promise to him in the words recorded in the 22nd chap. of the same book and in the 7th to the 11th verses. Speaking of this covenant, David says, "God hath made with me the everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure." In the 89th Psalm and the 3rd and 4th verses we read, "I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations." Again from the 34th to the 38th verses, we find these words, "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven."

In order to learn the impossibility of this covenant being broken, let us read the 20th and 21st verses of the 33rd chapter of Jeremiah. "Thus saith the Lord; if ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne." Why did God make this covenant with David? Why not have made it with some one else? It was for the reason which he gives in the 22nd verse of the 13th chap. of Acts. He says, "I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil my will." Would God make his covenant with one who would not obey him or who would not believe his promises? No, he made it with one who should fulfil all his will. We now look down the long line of kings who ruled over Israel, growing worse and worse as time goes on until we hear the words of the Lord to Zedekiah, Ezekiel xxi. 25-28. Since that time there has been no ruler over Israel, and no one has taken the throne of David. Who then has the right to this throne and when will the promise be fulfilled?

The angels in foretelling the birth of Christ said, "He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Again in Acts ii. 30, we find that God had sworn with an oath unto David that he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne. Therefore we have no knowledge of David's possessing a throne above the clouds, and the Bible positively states that he has not gone there himself (Acts ii. 34), we must necessarily conclude these promises were made concerning the throne of David, which was upon Mount Zion in Jerusalem. But let us look for further testimony.

In Rev. xxii. 16, Christ plainly tells us that he is the root and offspring of David; and in Acts xv. 16, speaking of taking from the Gentiles a people for his name, he says, "After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up." If we wish to find how it is to be rebuilt, we have only to turn to the 11th verse of the 9th chap. of Amos. Here we find that it will be as it was in the days of old. Thus we see that Christ is the heir spoken of, and that the throne of his father David shall remain overturned until he comes to possess it. When, therefore he shall have returned to the earth, and shall have become King of kings and Lord of lords, what shall those receive who have forsaken all for him? In Matt. xix 28, we find that the twelve apostles are to sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. This takes in only the twelve apostles, a very small number of those who have followed the teachings of Christ. What shall the others receive as their reward? In Rev. iii. 21, we read, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." We will not sit with him in his throne; but, like the apostles we will have a work to do. In 1 Cor. vi. 3, we find that the saints are to judge angels. Then shall have come to pass the prophecy recorded in Dan. vii. 27. "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Thus we see how great the reward if we are only faithful. May we all so live that we may be permitted to enjoy the promised inheritance is my prayer.

Yours in the blessed hope.

The Omnipotence of God.

The Scriptures disclose the omnipotence of God; he hath created all things by his wisdom, and by the might of his power. To the mind which fully comprehends the structure of the heavens, the power of the Almighty architect is most signally displayed: a superficial examination may not thus impress us. We witness from month to month the revolution of the moon about the earth, and from year to year their conjoined revolution about the sun; we trace the planets in their harmonious career; all is so simple, so beautiful, that the idea of the display of vast power does not at first come down upon the mind.

But let us for one moment contemplate, at nearer distance, these ponderous orbs. Examine, if you please our own earth, one of the smallest of them, and you find a solid globe of 8,000 miles in diameter, possessing a weight so enormous, that any and all the structures of men upon its surface, sink to utter insignificance in the comparison, and weigh as the small dust of the balance. And yet, go to the pyramids of Egypt, and contemplate those heavy relics of antiquity: how do their vast proportions, the solid rocks which constitute their mass, elevate our ideas of the power which reared these huge fabrics. But these are stationary. Could they be hurled with swift velocity, from their solid bases, by some mighty catapult into space, never again to revisit the earth, our ideas of the power requisite to such a phenomenon would be greatly enlarged. Man, by his superior wisdom, and by the exercise of that intellect which God has given him, has gained a certain mastery over the potent forces of matter around us; we witness with amazement, the fiery trains, which with irresistible velocity, fly across the iron ways built for their appointed tracks. What stupendous power is developed in this fiery car of earth! We involuntarily shrink from the approach, and tremble as it dashes by us flying with a speed of sixty miles in a single hour of time. But what are these atoms compared with the solid earth itself, and with the display of power here, when compared with that which launched this mighty globe, with its continents and oceans into space, and hath dashed it with a velocity such that its hourly journey is sixty-eight thousand miles? Or look yet higher to God's fiery car, the sun, linked to a thousand revolving worlds! onward its mighty mass, a million of miles in diameter, sweeps through space, bearing with it its retinue of flaming worlds.

God's mighty arm hath projected these stupendous orbs, and his omnipotent power alone hath impressed upon them their amazing velocity. It is not possible to escape from this conclusion by arguing the laws of motion and attraction. These are but the mode in which God exercises his power, they are not the power itself. Let some gigantic arm reach out and attempt to arrest the moon; were the trial possible, were the power of every human arm concentrated into one, even the power of the thousands of generations which have peopled the earth, even this combined and concentrated power could not check this puny orb of heaven one single moment in its swift career.

Again what mighty force restrains the planets in their orbits? There is no one who is not familiar with the force developed in all revolving bodies. If a globe be attached to one extremity of a cord, while the other is retained in the hand, the moment the globe is set revolving it commences a struggle to break the cord, and free itself from the restraining hand. As the velocity of revolution increases, so does this developed tendency to fly from the center increase. If, then, a planet were located in space, at its appropriate distance from the sun, and received an impulse capable of impressing on it the velocity due to its orbit unrestrained by any central power, it would fly from its orbit and dart onward for ever through space in a direct line, never turning to the right hand or the left. What tremendous power, then, is necessary to bind these mighty worlds into their encircling orbits! It is again useless to say that this is accomplished by the power of the sun. Matter is inert, it can have no power save what God shall give. As well might we declare that it is the power of the bone and muscle of the brawny arm of the smith, that wields the ponderous sledge. Sever that same powerful arm from the body, the form is retained, the muscle and bone are there, but mind, the animating principle, is gone, and at the instant of its departure all power is dead. So sever the sun from the will of God, and in that vast aggregation of matter all power dies, its light fades, and the planets, loosed from God's controling power, fly madly through the abyss of space.

Nothing short of omnipotence can hold these flying worlds. These are, however, but the merest atoms of creation; all their combined masses flung into the sun would scarcely augment his bulk by an appreciable quantity; and yet this mighty mass, the sun itself, is no more quiescent than its attending satellites. It, too, is flying through space, impelled and guided by the same Omnipotent hand. Stretching yet further into creation, we behold an amazing scene. Not a solitary star that fills the concave is at rest; all, all, we witness with amazement, the car of the blazing Sirius to

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Justification by Faith. No 8.

In considering the destiny of those who will not be judged by law because ignorant of it, it would be sinful on our part not to keep before the reader's mind certain well established (because plainly revealed, principles. For instance, it distinctly says in Rom. iv. 15 that "where there is no law, there is no transgression;" and therefore no punishment, of course; all of which goes to show that we must take the declaration of Chap. 2, v. 12 that "as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law" just as it reads; and as it reads it is absolute proof that the people who ignorantly do what the law forbids, can be classed with no others, they form a class of themselves, and their destiny is peculiar to themselves.

This same truth is taught in the 10th verse of the 3rd chapter, as follows: "now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law." From this it is clear, (1), that some are not under the law; (2) that those not under it are not addressed by it, or amenable to it. This is God-like,—just. It is just that they perish, or they would not perish; if some of our readers cannot see the justice of it, it does not alter the fact: it is a fact they perish. Exactly what God in his love gave his Son to prevent, takes place—they perish. Why do they perish? Were the means inadequate? No; he was sent in the interest of mankind—the world of mankind, without respect to color, or age, or nation, or social position;—but NOT without respect to disposition. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever BELIEVETH in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." He came to save believers; he would save the whole race if the whole race would believe, not otherwise.

In 1 Cor. 32 the apostle says of himself [illegible] brethren whom he had [illegible] of the world. "But when [illegible] judged we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world." This, taken in connection with verse 18, of John 3rd chapter, which says, "He that believeth not is condemned already" clearly teaches that the world is under condemnation; but that the church is not; for the Lord himself says in the verse last referred to, "He that believeth on him (the Son of God) is not condemned." How is this freedom from condemnation brought about? The grand statement of Rom. viii. 1, 2 furnishes the answer: "There is therefore NOW NO CONDEMNATION to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." That is a sublime and comforting statement, and, with the explanation immediately following, furnishes a most complete answer, as to how freedom from the condemnation resting upon the world is obtained. It says, "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." This golden text will bear repeating on every page. "The law of the Spirit of life." We paraphrase this, to show what we understand by it, and to amend it, thus: "The law by which the Spirit bestows life." It contains three clauses,—(1) Faith in the covenanted blessings. (2) Repentance toward God. (3) Obedience to the faith in baptism into the name of Father, Son and Spirit. Heart-work in this direction will enable one to say with Paul Rom. v. 1, "Therefore, being justified by faith we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

The law of sin and death, was the law transgressed by Adam, and thus brought death—death by sin, as already remarked upon. It involved the whole race although they sinned not after the similitude of Adam's transgression; they inherited his nature.

Those who claim life from the dead simply because Jesus is supposed to have died vicariously, think it would be unjust toward millions upon millions of the human race not to have had an opportunity to believe the gospel during their natural life, unless they live again. We counsel all such to be very careful along here. The very idea grows out of the assumption that God owes them something, and would evade the payment in that way; but this is strictly opposed to the Spirit's declaration, "By grace ye are saved."

Must not the Infinite and Holy One be allowed to say on whom he will he bestow favors? We feel certain such views have been adopted because they were thought to exhibit the character of God in a more lovely light, without due consideration, and shall therefore leave no stone unturned in our effort to show them that it is rather a foul dishonoring theory.

Was he under any obligation to create man in the first place? If not, was it not a prerogative to make him as he pleased, and to subject him to whatever restraints he pleased, and to make his tenure of life depend upon whatever conditions he pleased, or to inflict for disobedience whatever penalties he pleased? So it seems to us.

It is admitted that man was disobedient, was sentenced to death, that he died, that all die in Adam, and it is not claimed that the sentence was unjust. But when God in great mercy offers to bestow another—an everlasting life upon all who believe and obey him, it is held that he is under obligation to make the offer universal. This practically though not intentionally, implies that it was not altogether just to sentence man to death, and exactly right that children should inherit the mortal nature of their parents, and that all should be granted another life, as a matter of justice.

This runs counter to so many clearly defined principles of the Truth that we cannot possibly enumerate them all. It is based upon the doctrine of substitution, and in all God's recorded dealings with the human race, we know of no instance where he punished an innocent person instead of a guilty one? We see that this would mock him stultify himself, for he has solemnly said he would by no means clear the guilty; and if by NO means, then NOT BY SUBSTITUTION.

The divine method is to justify by faith all who believe with the heart. Like Abrahm, their faith is reckoned to them for righteousness; they believe unto righteousness; and we are no longer guilty, and have no need of a substitute.

The divine announcement is, that the soul that sinneth shall die; of the millions and millions that sin and die, is there anything more against them than was threatened against Adam? Is there anything less? If they willfully reject God's overtures and are thus amenable to the judgment they die the second death; but if not thus amenable they are not judged by the words of Jesus; they die in Adam, they perish.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked—whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap." Those who sow to the flesh reap corruption. After they have reaped their harvest will they be allowed to sow again? If so, how many more crops will they be allowed to raise in a probationary or experimental way? "Be not deceived; God is not mocked." Jesus says, "Strait is the gate and narrow the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Is that so? Only a few find the way of life? What becomes of all the rest? Ans.: "Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat." Those who enter the strait gate and walk in the narrow way of life to the end will obtain it; when he who is their life shall appear they appear with him in glory. Their probation ends at death. But mark it well, they fall asleep in Jesus: in God's mind they do not die in Adam, because they are in Jesus and so are called "the dead in Christ," because while in life they put him on,—were baptized into him.

As the destiny of travellers in the way of life is sealed at death, so also the broadway travelers' account are closed at death. If they have spurned God's offers then, their doom is certain; the Word of Jesus for it, destruction awaits them.

We want our readers to look this matter squarely in the face. If substitution be true, then, as the catechism teaches, Christ died to appease divine wrath, or to satisfy divine justice, and the death of Christ was a weather-arrangement, instead of a love-arrangement, so that the God whom we have hitherto served as the God of love, was, in the counsels of his own eternity, reheating his own anger and its appeasement." In the whole book of God there is no foundation for this theory. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. Next to the doctrine of eternal torment we doubt if anything has done so much to cause infidelity, as this irrational and impossible doctrine of substitution. We affectionately plead with our readers to strip it of all its sophistry, and then they will realize its deformity, and see that it means "no sin and another suffers." But not in all the Book of God can we find one instance where a judicial transfer of guilt to an innocent person has been made.

Are we pointed to the bullocks and lambs of the Mosaic dispensation? If so, we ask if God considered the life of these animals an equivalent for man's? If not, where is there any proof of substitution? What saith the Scriptures? "It is not possible for the blood of bulls and of goats to take away sin?" Why not possible, pray, if the life of the animal was instead of the life of the man?

Be it remembered God has shown us by fearful examples how he enters into judgment with debased masses of men, too low down in the scale of existence to be influenced by loving motives—mere masses of flesh. He sweeps them off the face of the earth with the besom of destruction, as unfit to live, and tells us plainly "they shall not rise." And he has just as plainly told us that he will again employ these methods to rid the earth of its scum at the end of the age, although they know nothing—absolutely nothing of God or his saving scheme. Here we give another note of warning lest we think God unrighteous.

We every now and then hear assertions about what Christ's death did for the whole human family, but assertions amount to nothing; and a church or community founded upon assertions is nothing at all. Of value. Substitution being true, and the blood-life of Christ being equivalent to the blood-life of the whole race, and accepted as such, then resurrection may be universal. Saying nothing about those who God says shall not rise, here, we ask, WHEN do they rise? The order of the resurrection as given by Paul, is, "Christ the first-fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." It would not be safe to add anything to this, because he goes into particulars in his letter to the Thessalonians, and says, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first,—then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." And we take it that these are the same who are spoken of in the 20th of Revelations as living and reigning with Christ a thousand years,—when, according to Is. ii. 2, 3, 4, the left of the nations will learn to walk in the ways of the Lord.

The account of the first resurrection says nothing about the countless millions said to be raised because Christ died. Indeed the next verse says "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." We have never seen the Scripture that tells when these myriads are to be raised, or when their opportunity comes. We suspect a kink in the theory.

Saved by Law or Gospel Which? No. 8.

Another week has passed and still the words of the apostle ring in our ears, "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace [illegible] God. Through our Lord Jesus Christ." But how the question comes up, "Peace from what?" Happily we have to go no farther than the Spirit in this 5th chapter to see that there is a spirit instruction that the wonder is, how any religious body can ignore it. It says, "Be it known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins: and by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses. Beware, therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the prophets, behold ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you."

These are solemn and important truths; they are specially addressed to those who seek justification through obedience to law. Forgiveness of sins is obtainable through the man Christ Jesus. 2 There are no pardonable sins but what can be forgiven through him. 3 All that believe are justified, and there is no law in its conditions, except the law of faith which says "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." 4. The law could not justify, or free one from sins that can be forgiven through the man Christ Jesus. We submit that this fully meets all the wants. And hence we proceed to show that any attempt on the part of man to supplement or amend this divine arrangement is a pious fraud.

In answer to the question addressed to sabbatarians "Who hath bewitched you?" We answer, ELLEN WHITE. From her early life she is said to have been "a sensational priest" of the Methodist order, and we find that she heard the apostle of Adventism Wm. Miller, when 13 years of age and became greatly excited and demented by his prediction that Christ would come in 1843. The time passed; Christ did not come; the disappointment was great at first, but after a little they reviewed their figures and claimed to discover why he did not come as expected, and at the same time justified themselves for having definitely announced the coming of the Lord in 1843.

Doubtless our readers would think if not otherwise informed that Father Miller was a Seventh Day Sabbath Man, seeing the present community sprung out of his movement, but he was not. His "Life and Views" is before us and on page 158, in his lecture on The Great Sabbath, he says, "We shall inquire whether the seventh or the first day of the week ought to be kept as a sabbath, and answers, "I SAY THE FIRST," and then goes on to argue in defence of his assertion.

Bear in mind Sunday-keeping is now said to be the Popish sabbath, and to constitute the mark of the Beast,—not so was it in 1841. The founder of Adventism had the mark of the beast. This Seventh Day feature comes of the visions of the Prophetess. After quoting the divine test for all seers we will present some of Mrs. White's visions and our readers can apply it.

In Deut. xviii. 22 Jehovah says, "when a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously; thou shalt not be afraid of him."

In a vision published at Topsham, Maine, in 1849 she says, "To speak against her visions is to speak against the Holy Ghost." In "Experience and Views" p. 12 she represents the tree of life as a golden tree standing astride the river." Wonderful, indeed!

On p. 16 she saw a temple in the New Jerusalem, but John saw no temple there, and gives the reason why. See Rev. xxi. 22.

In Spiritual Gifts v. 3 p. 48 she says "the family of Noah were in the ark seven days after the Lord shut them in, before it began to rain." Gen. vii. 11, 13 says it began to rain the same day. This is stupid.

In "Spiritual Gifts" V. 3. p. 75 she says, "Every species of animals which God had created were preserved in the ark." She must have forgotten about Ham's sin on p. 293 of v. 3, she says. "There was a class of very large animals that perished at the flood." She stultifies herself.

In V. III p. 33, 34, 35 she ridicules Hugo's fables as foolish, saying, "Men [illegible] the flood were wiser than were at all—were now living."

In "Experience and Views" p. 13 she says she saw the Father rise up from his throne, and in a flaming chariot go into the Holy of Holies, and within the veil did sit. . . . Then she says "Satan appeared to be by the throne trying to carry on the work of God." Ah!

In "Spiritual Gifts" V. III p. 75 she says, "Since the flood, there has been contamination of beast and beast, as may be seen in the almost endless varieties of species of animals, and in certain races of men." Oh! Oh!

And what think you? The uniform dress pattern, (see Testimony No. 10) was obtained in vision.

In her first vision she says, "We heard the voice of God like many waters, which gave us the day of his coming," while Jesus said, "Of that day knoweth no man." She has since given up what God's voice to us gave her. Did God make a mistake or was she false?

She has seen Satan, and kindly (?) given us a pen-picture of him as well as a brief biographical sketch. It is as follows: "Satan was once an honored angel in heaven next to Christ. His countenance, like those of the other angels was mild and expressive of happiness. His forehead was high and broad, showing great intelligence. His form was perfect, his bearing noble and majestic, but he was jealous of Jesus." What wretched drivellings! He would need a high and broad forehead to manage 1,000,000,000 subjects, though.

Here follows a vision of the second death, that furnishes a specimen of her philosophy: "I saw that some were quickly destroyed, while others suffered longer. Some were many days consuming, and just as long as there was a portion of them unconsumed, all the sense of suffering remained. Said the angel, "The worm of life shall not die, and their fire shall not be quenched as long as there is the least particle for it to prey upon."

Oh what stupid nonsense this is to peddle out for inspiration! Imagine a particle of bone without a nerve, or a small remnant of flesh or skin retaining all the sense of suffering the whole organism was capable of. Does sabbatarianism need such testimony as that? "Worm of life," too; that is the latest we have seen. Profound!!

Our readers are all witnesses that the Lord did not come as predicted. But the sabbatarians are very resourceful; they said if the Lord did not come, the next thing to it did come;—the door was shut; there was no salvation for sinners after the date set. And yet here they are, compassing sea and land to make proselytes, and going from house to house to save perishing members of other churches fifty years after the door was shut! We leave it to our readers if the whole thing is not a pious fraud?

The Prophetess says in "Present Truth" p. 22, Aug. 1849, "My accompanying angel bade me look for the travail of souls as used to be. I looked but could not see it for the time of their salvation is past." Be it known that this volume was published so many years after the door was said to be shut, and now comes an angel from the realms of glory to tell her what had been known on earth so long. We are judging this system out of its own mouth, and in view of the above facts we ask, is not this woman and her devotees living and practicing a many-headed lie? It might not be see it, but a lie all the same.

In 1849 there were millions of slaves in this country, and she told what would happen when the Lord came. "I saw," said she, "the pious slaves rise in triumph and victory and shake off the chains that bound them while their wicked masters were in confusion." Experience and Views p. 15. This being true the rebellion 12 years later must have been a grand surprise to the Almighty.

During the dark days of the war she must have been discouraged for in V. I of Testimonies, p. 259 she said England would declare war. It was false. On p. 260 she saw in vision it was impossible to do away with slavery, and that the nation would fall." It was false.

Bible Times and Seasons. No. 2.

Every earnest lover of the truth must be interested in Bible times and seasons and anxious to know all that is known about the coming of his long absent Lord. As far as we are able to judge, Professor Dimbleby's researches and calculations in astronomy, seem to confirm the divine records, and show in a remarkable manner, the harmony between revelation and astronomy, and show God to be the author of both.

"On the creation work of the first of Genesis he is particularly strong, showing that the great work did begin on the first day of the week, as is known as Sunday, and that the sun was not "set" in the firmament until the fourth day of the week (Gen. i. 17) and that these creation days were no longer or shorter than one days of twenty-four hours each. He proves the correctness of his astronomical calculations in five different ways with the cycles of the heavens. He invites investigation of his methods and is perfectly open to correction if in error, but no correction so far has been forthcoming. The agreement shown to subsist between revelation and science in God's arrangement of the world is very striking to the believer, and strengthening to his faith. He establishes the approximate correctness of the Anno Mundi date of the birth of the Christ, as given by Usher, and the Anno Domini of to-day, less one year and three quarters, which the alterations in the calendar B. C. 45 and A. D. 1582 by human legislation are mainly responsible for.—astronomers of the past failing to recognize the complicated, yet exact and perfect working of the measurement of our time by the divine standards of the heavens.

"Some of the chronological dates and correspondences given by the Professor have a very special interest for the earnest outlooker, on the stirring events taking place around us, and to the saints of God greatly more.

"We specify a few of these dates: The flood is accepted as occurring, and as clearly placed in the book of the generations of Adam, in 1656 A. M. The call of Abraham, 2082½ A. M. Sojourn of Israelites 430. Exodus (Ex. xii. 40) 2512½ A. M. Offering up of Isaac—the typical Lamb for Burnt offering—(Gen. xxii. 7) 2182½ A. M. The Anti-typical Lamb 1897 years after the typical. Crucifixion 4029½ A. M. Same period of 1897 repeated, and then "Thy kingdom come" 5926½ A. M.

"Again, covenant with David (2 Sam. vii.) 2968 A. M. Same period repeated brings us to 5920, A. M., or 1807 A. D. when realization may be expected.

"The Decree of 7th Artaxerxes 3543 A. M. erection of the wall 52 years. Cutting off Messiah 82 years. Cutting off Messiah 82 weeks (Dan. ix. 26) 434 years, making it 4020 A. M. reaching the crucifixion.

"Esther taken to the king (Esther ii. 16) 3524 A. M. 70 weeks, 490 years but in lunar time 472 to bring in everlasting righteousness, Dan. ix. 23—the birth of Christ 3036 A. M.

"Horn of goat Alexander (Dan. viii. 9) 3906 A. M. "Host trodden under foot 2,300 lunar years, equal to 2230 solar, bringing us to 5806 A. M., or 1808 A. D., then shall the sanctuary be cleansed (Dan. viii. 14.)

"Times of the Gentiles (Luke xxi. 24) seven times (Dan. iv. 16) 7x360 day years—a week of years. 2520 years.

"Times of Gentiles commenced with Babylon under Nabonassar 3370 A. M. Duration of the Four Universal Empires 1260 years. Mahommedanism to prevail 1260 years, ending Gentile Times in 5806, or in 1908 A. D.

"Duration of Babylon 90 years, Persia 200, Greece 304, Rome 666 —number of the Beast (Rev. xiii. 18) 1260 years. Mahommedan from 0636 to 5896 A. M. 1262—Gentile week 2520 years.

A DISPATCH from Rome tells of severe earthquake shocks extending over several provinces, attended with great property loss and many lives.

OUR paper is a little late this week, owing to time being occupied with the meeting of the Sub-Boilers and the conference. Reports will be given next week. The attendance was large and interest good.

ON Tuesday of last week we had a visit from Brother R. T. Elliott, of Henrietta, Texas, who came all the way here expecting to be at a meeting of ministers. As the proposed meeting was not to be held at this time, being yet to be talked of, and having left a sick wife at home, he concluded to return at once, and left us Wednesday morning.

The Armenian Horror.

The daily papers for the last few days have been giving accounts of a recent massacre of Christians in Armenia by Kurds, acting under orders from Turkish authorities. Of course the orders were obtained on the pretext of some wrong done the Kurds by the Armenians, but even if such cause had existed, gives no reason for the fiendish outrages committed. The following from the Chicago Tribune will give an idea of the horrible affair.

"The unspeakable Turk has been at his horrible work again, and in Armenia has repeated the fiendish and sickening atrocities which he perpetrated in Bulgaria in 1876, against which all Europe rose in indignant protest. It will be surprising if the whole world does not rise now and demand stern reparation and complete indemnity for what has transpired in Armenia.

It may be that the story has been exaggerated, but even allowing for exaggerations this Armenian massacre is one of the most frightful acts of cruelty in modern times, and all the more cruel that the outrages were inflicted upon a mild, peaceable, and harmless people. Like the massacre in Bulgaria the massacre in Armenia, involving the lives of thousands, proceeded upon the lines of an alleged rebellion. The Kurds were let loose upon the victims by the Pasha and Marshal of a certain district, with orders to cut the Armenians up, root and branch. How literally they carried out their instructions has been told in the dispatches. The carnage was horrible. One dispatch says, upon the authority of the Chairman of the Armenian Patriotic Association in London: Six to ten thousand persons met such a fate as even the darkest ages of darkened Africa hardly witnessed, for there, women and tender babes might have at least the chance of a life of slavery, while here womanhood and innocence were mocked at by the cruel lust that ended its debauch by stabbing women to death with the bayonet, while tender babes were impaled upon the same weapon on their dead mothers' breasts, or perhaps seized by the hair to have their heads lopped off by the sword.

Another dispatch from the same authority adds to the horrible story: In one place three or four hundred women, after being forced to serve vile purposes by the merciless soldiery, were hacked to pieces with sword and bayonet in the valley below.

In another place some two hundred weeping and wailing women begged for compassion, falling at the commander's feet. But the blood-thirsty wretch, after ordering their violation, directed the soldiers to dispatch them in a similar way.

In one place some sixty young brides and the more attractive girls were crowded into a church and after violation were slaughtered. Human gore was seen flowing from the church door.

The whole civilized world should rise and demand redress for these horrible atrocities."

MISUNDERSTOOD.

People do not understand me.
Their ideas are not like mine;
All advances seem to land me
Still outside their guarded shrine.

So we turn from simple jargon
Having many a mutual good,
Weary with the chill annoyance
So to be misunderstood.

Let me try to lift the curtain
Hiding other hearts from view:
You complain, but are you certain
That the fault is not with you?

In the sunny summer hours,
Sitting in your quiet room,
Oh, you wonder if the flowers
Breathe for you no sweet perfume?

Now, you see them bright and pearly
With the jewelry of morn:
But their fragrance fresh and early
Is not through your window borne.

You must go to them, and stooping,
Call the blossoms where they live;
On your bosom gently drooping,
All their treasure they will give.

Who would guess what fragrance lingers
In corleus's pale green shoes?
Press the leaflet in your fingers,
All its sweetness you will know.

Ever the harps Eolian sending
Unsought music on the wind;
Ever must love and skill be blending
Music's full response to find.

"But my key-note," are you thinking,
"Will not modulate to theirs?"
Seek! and subtle chords enlinking,
Soon shall blend the differing airs.

Fairly sought, some point of contact
There must be in every mind;
And, perchance, the closest compact
Where we least expect to find.

Perhaps the heart you meet recoldly
Burns the deepest lava-glow;
Wisely pierce the crust, and boldly,
And a torrid stream shall flow.

Dialects of love are many,
Though the language be but one;
Study all you can, or any,
While life's precious school-hours run.

Closed the heart-door of thy brother,
All its treasure long concealed?
One key fails, then try another.
Soon the rusty lock shall yield.

Few have not some hidden trial,
And could sympathize with thine:
Do not take it as denial
That you see no outward sign.

Silence is no certain token,
That no secret grief is there:
Sorrow which is never spoken
Is the heaviest load to bear.

Seldom can the heart be lonely,
If it seek a fuller still.
Self-forgetting, evoking only
Emptier cups of love to fill.

Twill not be a fruitless labor.
Overcome this ill with good;
Try to make glad your neighbor,
And you will be understood.

[Read at Indiana conference.]

Dear brothers and sisters:

It is five years this month since I attended a conference meeting in Plymouth. I was sick at the time and heard only one sermon, and have been ill ever since then. Had I known then of all the suffering before me, I doubt if I could have borne it, but, our Heavenly Father has wisely veiled the future, and has promised strength for each day as it comes, "As thy day is so shall thy strength be," and while he has chastened with one hand he has upheld with the other. At first it seemed very hard for me with my active temperament to be shut up in the sick room, shut off from contact with the outside world, and deprived of all its invigorating influences, its social pleasures, the beauties of nature, and the pleasures of the eye in out-door life, but, above all these I missed the privilege of attending worship with the people of God. But, I have learned that God's providence is everywhere; that he is rich in resources; that he provides, not only comforts, but pleasures for his people in every condition of life, if we will but set ourselves to find them, instead of looking for clouds and the ills of life. If we are shut in from enjoying the pleasures of out-door life and activities we are also shielded from much of the bitterness of life. Sick people have time for reflection. It is interesting to me to let my thoughts run back over my past life, and while I find much to regret, I find much to be thankful for, and I can see the hand of providence in many of the changes that come to me. I find pleasures where I had not thought to look for them before. Nature is interesting to me in all her moods. I love to watch the sky. Some one has said, "We look to the earth that we may get our living from it, to the sea that we may be saved from it, but we look to the sky with hope," and that is true. "He shall come in the clouds of heaven." When I am not able to watch the clouds I find pleasure in looking at pictures.

I would be glad indeed to be able to attend the conference. I hope that it may be a profitable season not only to those who attend, but that the cause of truth may be advanced. I am glad to learn through THE RESTITUTION that our evangelists report that the interest in the work is increasing, that the people are taking hold of the Word of Truth. God grant that the hearts of those who teach may be inspired with a zeal that will make the truth irresistable, so that the people will be compelled to come in.

A PLEA FOR THE CHILDREN.

I wish that I had the gift. I almost could say, I wish I could be inspired to say something at a ministerial conference that would arouse them to feel the necessity of providing literature for the children and young people of the church. There is a fearful responsibility resting on us for neglecting so important a part of the work. In the twenty-five years that I have been a member of the church, I can count forty-five young people, now grown to maturity and many of them occupying responsible positions, whose parents were active Christians, devoted to the interest of the truth; but, where are the children now? A few of them have gone into the orthodox churches; but the most of them are outside the pale of any church and impervious to religious influences. A small minority received baptism and identified themselves with us. Who can estimate the loss of these young men and women to the church. Brethren, let us think of these things and ponder them well in our hearts. When I look back and think of how much influence the literature of my childhood had in shaping my course in life, I can but think we are making a great mistake in allowing the children and young people to feed on the literature of the times instead of providing them with papers and magazines that teach the principles of our faith. What is it that has given the orthodox churches their present strength? It is their children's literature, books, papers, and magazines scattered broadcast plentiful as leaves of the forest. The air is full of the teachings of modern theology, so that before children are of school age they will talk of the immortal soul and the bliss that awaits the disembodied spirit. Why should we not be equally zealous in teaching the simple truths of the Bible before the minds of the children are drawn to the erroneous teachings. The impressions made in youth are the most enduring. Some one has said that, "if we want patriotism to continue to grow in America, that we must raise patriots," and Abraham Lincoln is accredited with saying that, "the best time to commence teaching patriotism is before the children are one year old." Let us make a practical application of these principles to our church policy. Let us be as wise as serpents and not be too stubborn to follow a good example wherever we find it. If we can be as enthusiastic in teaching the children of our congregations the truths we love so well, as are the other denominations in instructing theirs, or as the ancient Jews were taught, the churches that are being established by the present evangelical efforts will not die out, as so many of those established heretofore have done, if they are constantly being re-enforced by well instructed young people. The truth once established in a community ought not to loose its hold on the people and it would not if the enthusiasm could be maintained, and who could so well maintain this enthusiasm as an intelligent well trained set of young people. It has always worried me that more attention has not been given to this part of the work. I hope that Bro. Conner's suggestion that, a young people's society be formed, will receive some attention at this conference. What would you think of a Stock Farmer who would provide food, shelter, and protection for all the little colts, calves, and lambs of the flock to find their own food, shelter, and protection from the wolves? Do you think that his herds would increase very rapidly? Would you commend his judgment? I think not. We need several grades of literature for the different aged children. We ought to have a Babyland, a Youth's Examiner, and a magazine for our boys and girls who are passing through the transition period from youth to manhood and womanhood. The boys and girls who have the material in them to fill your places in the church are just the kind of boys and girls that are going to read them; they are in the seeds now preparing for future work; they are full of the ambitions that attends youthful vigor; their minds are impressionable, as the twig is bent so the tree will be inclined. If we do not furnish them reading matter they will find it for themselves.

I do not suppose that we can have all of these things at once, but we can make a beginning. If we can do no better, we might perhaps have a weekly or monthly published and mailed with THE RESTITUTION, something after the style of the Inter Ocean Junior, (I mean in size and mailing.) That accompanies that great leader into so many households. We have had two very good papers for the children. Brother Wilcox gave us a good one in the Sunshine, as did also Brother Jones in the Youth's Examiner. It is thousand pities that we did not give them a support. It is a great mistake to suppose that children are the only ones benefitted by the juvenile papers. The old and middle aged will peruse them with as much interest as the children. Lawyers, doctors, ministers and even the professors in the universities enjoy reading them. And are made better by them. I recently heard a very intellectual woman, one who makes literature a profession, say that she took several papers and magazines for her children, and that she read each one of them and took as much pleasure in them as did the children.

And there is another thing we ought to have. We ought to have a catechism teaching the principles of our faith. Truths learned in that way in childhood take hold of the mind with a force that is not easily shaken. When I was a child I studied the catechism for weeks, and we went to the church Saturday afternoon, when we were met by the superintendent of the Sunday school and some of the teachers, who heard us recite. I took the prize for best recitations in the monthly examinations. I wore my honors with as much pride as a graduate in a high school, little dreaming of a struggle that afterwards, when I began to see the simple literal truths of the Bible. There is one good brother minister, if he is in the Conference who will remember, how I struggled and resisted until the last inch of the sandy soil slipped from under my feet, so to speak.

I write in bed and am so fatigued that I am obliged to bring this all too long letter to an abrupt closing. I trust you will pardon what seems a bold effort. It is only my zeal for the cause that could induce me to do it. Those of you who are acquainted with me know that it is not like me to come before the conference with suggestions and recommendations as to what should be done. Trusting that you may have a profitable meeting. I am yours in hope of the kingdom.

My Little Hobby.

My Christian friends in bonds of love, let me tell you that my "little hobby" is a hateful little critter, and I do wish I could run him down. And by the way he is no little insignificant pony either, but has grown and spread himself like a green bay tree, till he almost fills our big world. And he is no friend to humanity, but a cruel tyrant and a highway robber. And his name in English is "tobacco." He was bred and born in a heathen land far away from civilization, cared for and reared up by his parents until he became a monster, attracting the attention and admiration of the neighbors, who could not rest until they stole him away, and brought him home and had him adopted into all semi-civilized nations—a relic of barbarism. And the world has wandered after this beast, and built him up an altar of hewn stone, and willingly sacrifices manhood and money to this pagan god, toiling him as a sweet morsel under their tongue, and inhaling and exhaling him as "sweet incense." O, the debts of the poverty and misery that come to the poor and needy of every land and clime, because this filthy demon rules as he will, and the people love to have it so. Fellow travelers to eternity, I entreat you to stop and pause for a moment. Count the millions, if you can, of hard earned cash, annually sacrificed to appease the insatiable greed of this cruel foe. View with pity that vast army of poor women and children that must toil on in their stages year by year because this monster rules to ruin. Turn your hearts toward suffering humanity and bring forth fruits meet for repentance. Count the cost of your extravagant habit to body, soul and purse, and then ask yourself the question, Is it worth while to be in fashion with this world, which is soon to pass away. Look with amazement at the mountain that shuts you off from Canaan's land. Listen to the earnest pleading of your brother and friend who has favored you and carried your account year after year, while you spend your money for tobacco! Your brother has been patient, and waited long on you to pay him his dues, so that he could pay his. Will you go on longer in this way, and stop your ears, and harden your hearts to the calls and cries of justice? How can you habitually disregard the demands of the golden rule?

Let me entreat you to open your ears to the cries of justice before it is too late. Do your duty as a man and a Christian, and make glad the heart of your old time friends. O do not treat them worse than you would have them treat you. Remember that our God in heaven looks on, and takes account of all that we do and say, and that we must meet it all in the great judgment day. But it seems that I hear some brother say, "you are cranky, it is none of your business what I do with my money, and I am hard run and cannot pay my debts now, as I would like to do." Say, brother, look well to the spirit that prompts such expressions, and where it is likely to lead you. And it is no wonder that you are hard run, and if you will take on a few more unnecessary bills to be in fashion, or because some schemer wants you to, you will increase your load. Now all this habit of chewing, smoking, drinking and snuffing are unnecessary habits that belong to this world in its fallen condition. They are not characteristics of your God, nor his Christ, nor heaven, nor angels. And how strange it is, a brother will stop his religious paper, or let it run for years rather than quit the habit. And if we make ourselves odious to our brethren or any one else, by fumigating the air with poison, or spitting the fiery liquid into their eyes, are we not wholly disregarding the golden rule, and making ourselves odious in the sight of heaven? It is just too bad that civilized man that belongs to the world, and aspires to nothing higher or better, should be found pandering to the flesh, and to extravagant, filthy, unnecessary habits of heathendom. But oh, how much worse it is for those who claim to have been washed and purified in obeying the truth, to turn back in their hearts and habits like the dog and the hog in the true proverb. I think old brother Peter was right when he said, "For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings and abominable idolatries; wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you." God in his infinite mercy has made exceeding great and precious promises to the obedient, whereby they may become partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." And Paul says, "Having therefore these promises dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." We never can lay up treasure in heaven by putting our money into Satan's tills, and doing that which our better judgment condemns, nor in leaving our homes and families, and going off in the darkness to have a jubilee with the world in some place where Jesus never would think of going after us, and where we would be ashamed to ask him to go with us. "Be not conformed to this world." The Master's cause must suffer and men and women with no hope for the world to come, and no God, must have our means. O what manner of faith and hope and love is this? It is said that no tobacco in any form is used in the colored university at Atlanta, and over 500 students attend there. Can any college for whites make the same boast of as much? I was well acquainted with one good brother who now sleeps in Jesus, when he heard the gospel and made up his mind to be a Christian, at once and forever quit the tobacco habit, before he was born I with his heart in baptism, then he could and did arise to walk in newness of life, trusting God for the living. Dear us be on our guard, and strive to imitate such a noble example and share with him the blessings of the coming age of glory. Amen and amen.

Christ's Coming.

Are we to look for the coming or commencement of the Millennium before or after Christ comes? This has been a theme that has been much considered by the churches of different denominations in this and in other countries, for an indefinite time in the past, and up to the present it is much talked of, and different conclusions arrived at. It seems at the present time to be the general belief that Christ will not appear again until after the 1000 years spoken of in the 20th chapter of Revelation, though this does not accord with the belief of some, and I might say many, in our day, who think the time is just at hand. I for one have examined the Bible much on this point, and am satisfied that the time has nearly come when we may look with confidant assurance that the latter days spoken of by so many of the prophets is near at hand, and that the fearful influence that the adversary now has over the inhabitants of the earth will be set aside, and the glorious reign of our Lord will commence, when this world is to be full of the knowledge and glory of the Lord as the waters fill the sea. It is evident that this condition of things is to occur in the latter days of the world's history by many recorded prophecies of a number of different prophets, commencing with Isa. ii. 2, 3; xi. 11, 12; Jer. xxxi. 31, 32; Ezek. xxxvii. xxxviii. It is evident by these and many other prophecies, some of which I shall name, that the children of Israel of all of the tribes are to be united under one King after losing their visibility as a nation for a long time, are to come back to prominence again in the last days; such prophecies as Hosea iii. 4, 5; Amos ix. 11; Dan. ii. 45; vii. 27; Zech. xiv. 20; also Rom. xi. which is right to the point in this relation. But what does the present condition of the world now indicate? It shows plainly that the return of our Lord in glory is the only hope of the church, as proved by her actual experience of nearly 2000 years of earthly pilgrimage.

It is the dream of many that the whole world is to be brought into subjection to Christ through the preaching of the gospel. That the church is to witness for Christ in all the world is according to our Lord's prediction, and distinct command, but that all nations are to be brought into obedience to the faith in the present age, is not stated in Scripture. Nineteen hundred years are nearly completed since Jesus gave the great command, and still we are confronted with the appalling fact that the great majority of mankind are without God and without hope in the world. Of earth's fourteen hundred millions of inhabitants, ten hundred millions are practically unaffected by the gospel, while of the four hundred millions who are nominally, two-thirds belong to the Greek and the Roman Catholic Churches, which are Christian only in name. So it appears that the per cent of really spiritual Christianity is so small that a candid judgment must pronounce it still true that the real Church of God is only "a little flock" compared with the great multitudes who are outside of the fold.

The golden age of missions is upon us, for which we are grateful, but is the golden age of union and right-eousness and peace rapidly emerging? Alas, we must confess that it is not.

Dr. Culbertson, an agent per excellence of the spirit among the heathen, declares that in spite of the marvelous triumphs of Christianity in the last hundred years, the heathen empires have not stopped their progress even one inch. Though all Christian countries have been gathering out of every kingdom, and tribe, and nation, during the last century, according to the common estimate, Dr. Paul of Syria, an orientalist on the subject, declares, that, due to the same missionary century, forty millions have been added to the ranks of Islam or Mahomet! Thus, while the conquests of missions elate us, such statistics as these appall, and they compel the question, "How long at such a rate will it take to bring all the world to Christ?" At the rate of progress hitherto of genuine Christianity on the globe, thousands of years may pass before the millennium can arrive—an awful mystery in the divine government. But does this imply that the gospel is a failure? We do not pause upon these except to say that the gospel has failed in no sense, since it has accomplished exactly what at the outset it was predicted to accomplish, viz., to gather out an elect people for Christ by means of the gospel; and that the world is growing both better and worse. The brighter the light, the deeper the shadow which it casts. As the light of Christian missions is kindling the whole horizon of the setting century with its glory, what do we discern? The tokens of the day-dawn of universal peace? No. Statesmen rather read the signs of a war of unprecedented fierceness yet before us.

Major General Tyrrell estimates that the standing armies of Europe have so steadily increased of late that they now number more than twenty million. But, you will ask, is there not a marked change for the better under the benign influence of education and scientific advancement which this century has witnessed? Recently compiled statistics declare that in the last decade, the number of murders in the United States has been multiplied six times, and that the last year has been the worst of all for crime. We are told that within the last 50 years 30,000 converts have been converted to Christianity in China, while at the same time the avarice of Christian nations has brought one hundred and fifty millions of souls in that great empire, under the doom and damnation of the opium curse. Add to this the liquor traffic pushed into Africa by the so-called Christian people of England and America and dogging the steps of the missionary at every point, and slaying its hundreds where the gospel saves one; then, give one sickening glance at the system of licensed vice in India, and then pause and reflect and cry, O, King Immanuel, return! The experience of eighteen centuries is sufficient to prove to us that no power can stop the march of crime till he whose right it is shall take unto himself his great power and reign, that no final check will be put on sin till the author Satan is bound and cast into the bottomless pit. We must affirm with equal emphasis, that there is no hope for dispersed, afflicted, and wandering Israel till Jesus appears in glory to turn away ungodliness from Jacob. If deliverance could come to the Jews by their own might and power such deliverance ought to be at hand, for it is a known fact that they hold the purse-strings of the world; and it has become an accepted fact or saying, that, no nation of Europe can now go to war without the permission of the Jewish bankers; but after all the Hebrews are in deep affliction. We are all aware of the persecution which not long ago broke out against them in Russia; and they seem to have no resting place anywhere. But, they are evidently to be brought back to their own land when the right time comes. Joseph Rabbinowites, the most remarkable convert to Christ, as some think or believe, since Saul of Tarsus, declares that there is but one hope for Israel, and that is the return of their Messiah, and the nation's acceptance of him as their expected King. When that time arrives all the people of the earth then living shall know of that great event as well as the Jews, and hope I close but I weary your take the time that belongs to others.

M. E. HUNSBERGER.

We have received a pamphlet as Le Petit quarterly for September, 1891, entitled "The life and Death Controversy in India." We learn from it that quite a discussion appeared in the leading daily paper of Calcutta, The Statesman and Friend of India, the outgrowth of the reading of Dr. Pelavel's book "The Problem of Immortality." The question of conditional immortality as against immortal-soulism is ably handled, and it is really remarkable that a large daily paper would give so much prominence to this subject. The friends of God's truth are doing good work on the other side of the world, and we bid them God speed, and may they search diligently the record and walk faithfully in the footsteps of the Master, and at last have part with Jesus in God's kingdom.

Paris is excited over the arrest of two young Germans, who are charged with being spies. It is declared that just such a condition as now exists was prevalent just prior to the war of 1870.

How vast the great sun is that rules the day; how tiny the little dewdrops on the leaf! Yet the little globe holds and reflects the greater in perfect beauty. So can the humblest soul hold and reflect the sun of righteousness.—The Churchman.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God for the south district in Nebraska will be held, D. V. at the Fairview School House in Furnas Co., commencing Friday evening, Dec. 7th, and continue over Sunday. This meeting has been changed on account of the burden of taking care of the brethren falling almost entirely on one family.

We hope as many preaching brethren as can will be present. A large attendance of those of like faith are also urged, that we may receive encouragement and assist each other as we journey on toward the kingdom.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

[illegible] I Do To Be Saved?

The above question was asked some 1800 years ago by a certain jailor at Philippi, of Paul and Silas, two apostles, who were then and there prisoners, and in his custody. Since that time it has served as a motto for many a modern sensational discourse. The jailor having just witnessed a most wonderful convulsion of nature at the dead hour of night, which had thrown open the prison doors, and loosed the bands of all the prisoners, was doubtless impelled by fear of the consequences which might result from his being found in this situation. The fear that the prisoners had escaped, for whose security his own life was responsible, had well nigh driven him to desperation and to suicide. Heathen as he was, he could have no just conception of Jesus Messiah, or of that salvation or deliverance which was to be obtained by faith in him. But the apostle Paul answered his question in a way which was calculated in his unenlightened condition to present as much of mystery to his mind, as had the earthquake of fear and consternation.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" was the apostle's answer to the question, which without further explanation, must have left him in no better condition than it found him. Such questions as the following would naturally present themselves. Who is the Lord Jesus Christ? and how is he to save me? The Apostle Paul in his letter to the Ecclesia of God at Rome has laid down certain principles that are applicable to this case, as well as to all other similar cases. With reference to the word of faith as being preached as a means of salvation, he quotes a passage from the prophets "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be delivered." Joel ii. 32. This is a parallel proposition to that presented to the Philippian jailor, and the same questions would naturally arise. These questions the apostle anticipates as follows. "How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent? as it is written, 'How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, that bring glad tidings of good things.'" Rom x. 13-15.

Here then the apostle admits the necessity of hearing, or understanding, with reference to a person, before he can be believed or called on. This was precisely the case with the jailor; he never had heard, or understood concerning Jesus Christ, consequently it was necessary for him to hear and understand before he could believe on him. This brings us to consider another principle laid down in the 17th verse of the same chapter. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." It was necessary for the jailor, and is necessary for all before they can understand or believe on Jesus as a Savior, to hear the Word of God, and if we turn to the account given of the conversion of the Philippian jailor, we shall see that this necessity was conformed to; we read, "They spake unto him the Word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house." Acts xvi. 32. Now the terms "Word of the Lord" and "the Word of God," are used interchangeably for the same thing, as we shall find by turning to the writings of Peter. He says, "Being born again not of corruptible seed,.....but of the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. All flesh is as grass. . . . . But the Word of the Lord endureth forever, and this is that Word which by the Gospel is preached unto you." 1 Pet. i. 23-25.

By this we learn, that the thing for which these terms are used is the gospel, or good message, consequently it becomes necessary for a person before he can believe on Jesus Christ in order to be saved, to have the gospel or "good message" preached to him.

The gospel is good news of "the kingdom of God," and is also called the "Word of the kingdom," which is symbolized by the seed, in the parable of the sower. Matt. xiii. 19.

We find then that the "Word of the Lord" or "Good News of the Kingdom," was preached to the Philippian jailor in order that he might believe on Jesus as the Messiah, and by believing be saved with all his house.

There is something more involved in believing on the Lord Jesus Christ than believing that such a person as Jesus died to save sinners. It is not only necessary to believe that Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ or One Anointed to be a King and ruler, but it is necessary that we receive and believe in the record of the Anointed One and these things are all set forth in the Gospel or "Word of God." Having heard the gospel and believed it, there is yet something to be done in order to be saved.

When Peter was asked on Pentecost the question, "what shall we do?" the answer was "Repent, for reformation, and be immersed every one of you for the remission of your sins." In the common version it is baptized, but as this is an Anglicized Greek word we prefer to use its proper English equivalent and translate it in this as well as in other cases. Hence we find that reformation and immersion follow faith in the "Word of the Kingdom."

We read that when the Samaritans "believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were immersed both men and women." Acts viii. 13. So also after the apostles, Paul and Silas, had spoken the "Word of the Lord" to the jailor and his house, they immersed them. In order then to be saved, we find we must hear the "gospel of the kingdom" and having heard, believe it, and in obedience to our faith, we must reform and be immersed in water for the remission of sins. This is God's plan, and in this plan there is no provision for anxious benches, nor the calling on sinners to rise up to be prayed for. They may pray and be prayed for till the day of doom, and so long as they refuse to recognize God's plan, and comply with his conditions of salvation, so long they are in disobedience, and their sins unremitted.

Paul after he had been a believer for three days, was still an unforgiven sinner because he had not rendered obedience to the faith. Hence Ananias says to him, "and now why tarriest thou, arise and be immersed, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Acts ix. 9; xxii. 16.—Herald of Truth & Evan. Messenger.

Home Politeness.

"Why not be polite?" was the question put by the late Bishop D. W. Clark. How much does it cost to say, "I thank you?" Why not practice it at home?—to your husband, your domestic? If a stranger does you a little act of courtesy, how sweet the smiling acknowledgment! If your husband shows a matter of course, do not say, "No need of that here."

Should an acquaintance treat on your dress—your very, very best, and by accident tear it, how profuse you would be with your "Never mind." "Don't think of it." If your husband does it, perhaps he gets a frown; if a child, perhaps you think he ought to be chastised.

A gentleman stops at a friend's house and finds it in confusion. He doesn't see anything that requires an apology; does not even think an apology is called for; accepts everything as right; but he goes home, where the wife has been caring for the sick ones all day, and working her life almost out. Hear him: "Don't see why things can't be kept in better order; never were such cross children before." No apologies are wanted for or accepted at home!

Why not be polite at home? Why not use freely that gold coin of courtesy? How sweet they sound—those little words, "I thank you," "You are very kind." Darling, yes, thrice sweet from the lips we love; when the heart swells, may the eye sparkle with the quiet light of affection!

Be polite to your children. Do you expect them to be mindful of your welfare, to be happy at your coming, to bound away to do your pleasure before the request is half spoken? Then speak with all your dignity and mingled politeness, and with the utmost kindness both in manner and spirit. Let politeness and kindness have a niche in your household temple. Only then will you have learned the true secret of sending out into the world addition to its working forces of real gentlemen and ladies.—Christian Advocate.

Why Will You?

Why will you keep striving for what the world says? Try, oh, try to be no longer a slave to it! You can have little idea of the comfort of freedom from it. It is bliss! All this caring for what people will say is from pride. Hoist your flag and abide by it. In an infinitely short space of time all secrets will be divulged. Therefore if you are so judged, why trouble to put yourself right? You have no idea what a great deal of trouble it will save you. Roll your burden on Him, and he will make straight your pathway. He will set you right with those with whom you set yourself wrong. He can do a thousand times more than all the potter. Most merciful One in thy wisdom wait. Never mind my cries. Cut my life off or be it prolong it, so be it. Only do thou with; but I rely on thy unchanging guidance during the trial. Oh, the comfort that comes from this!—Geo. Gordon.

"Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him." The marginal reading is, "Be silent to the Lord." When the protection of God seems to be withheld, when the earnest desires of the soul are not given, when there is no interposition for relief, we become restless, and in our impatience cry out unto God, we make complaint and mourn. But perfect confidence brings silence. We know that God will do right, and that at the right time he will interpose for us, and for his cause. In the silence of perfect faith, in the assurance that he will do for you that which should be done, "rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him."

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say I have sent loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dues Restitution:

Evangelists ordained having been sent in suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to which no reply can be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send such donations to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund be used as may be requested. Full account to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We who sustain and herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the several amounts subscribed, to fund thus created to be employed in preaching exile to baptize persons who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

King David Comes.

King David comes to claim his own
As was foretold of yore. (Zech. ix. 9.)
Desired of all, he came to save
The tents of Judah first. (Zech. xii. 7.)

Then let unto the Scattered Tribe,
Whose power the Lord hath spent,
(Dan. xii. 7.)
Why art thou late to bring the King
To Zion and repent? (2 Sam. xix. 2 11.)

Go to the Law and Testament,
Renew thy search and see. (John v. 39.)
His hands, his feet, his pierced side!
As lambent it was he! (Zech. xii. 10; Psa. xxii. 16.)

O Judah thou of all the Flock,
Art still without the Fold! (Luke xv. 1 32.)
Return unto our Father's House
Beloved as of old! (Gen. xlix. 8 12.)

In "Ephraim's" name we bid thee come,
With us the King to greet; (Rev. v. 2.)
'Tis only thus that hath may go,
And thus to get its meet. (Jer. iii. 12 19.)

Then "Ephraim's" Anglo-Saxon Staff,
From Judah's Bonded Bow (Zech. ix. 13.)
The Man of War shall loose at last,
And Zionwards he'll go! (Zech. viii. 9 23.)

On Arc's heights, our Race renewed
Shall then united be. (Ezek. xxxvii. 15-28.)
And washed in red Siloam's pool,
All men from sin be free! (Psa. lxiv. 9 10.)

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 19.

1. And it came to pass while Apollos was in Korinthos that Paulos passed through the parts above and came down to Ephesos, and found certain disciples,

2. And said to them, Did ye receive Sanctified Spirit when ye experienced faith? And they to him, On the other hand we have not even heard that there is a Sanctified Spirit.

3. And he said, Into what then were ye baptized? And they said, Into the baptism (or baptismal rite) of Joannes.

4. And Paulos said Joannes baptized a baptism of repentance saying unto the laity, that they should put faith in the one who was coming after him, that is in Jesous.

5. And when they heard it they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesous,

6. And when Paulos had laid his hands upon them, the Sanctified Spirit came upon them and they talked with tongues and prophesied.

7. And they were all men of influence, about twelve.

8. And he entered into the synagogue and was speaking boldly for three months, discoursing and persuading as to the things of the kingdom of God.

9. And as certain ones were becoming hardened and distrustful speaking evil of the way in the presence of the multitude, standing aloof from them he separated disciples from them continuing to discourse daily in the school of Turannos.

10. And this took place for two years, so that all the inhabitants of Asia heard the Word of the Lord, both Joudaians and Hellenists (Greeks).

11. And works of ability not such as ordinarily obtain God was causing through the instrumentality of the hands of Paulos.

12. So that course linen clothes and aprons were taken from his skin to the enfeebled and their diseases were being removed, and the wicked spirits were going their way out.

13. And certain also of the Joudaian exorcists who go about undertook to name over those who had the wicked spirits the name of the Lord Jesous, saying, I exorcise you by Jesous whom Paulos is heralding.

14. And there were a certain seven sons of Skeuas a Joudaian chief-priest who were doing this.

15. And the wicked spirit answered and said unto them, Jesous I know and Paulos I know well; but who are ye?

16. And the man in whom the wicked spirit was leaped upon them, and overcoming them both prevailed against them so that they fled away naked and wounded out of that house.

17. And this became known to the Joudaians and Greeks dwelling at Ephesos, and fear fell upon them all, and the name of the Lord Jesous was magnified.

18. And many of those who had experienced faith came confessing and acknowledging their doings.

19. And considerable many of those who had been practicing magic (lit. the overwrought or elaborate) arts brought their books and burned them in the presence of all; and they reckoned up their value and found it to be five myriads of silver (probably the silver drachma meant).

20. In this wise according to the Lord's controling-power did the Word grow and grow strong.

21. And when these things had been fulfilled, Paul was disposed in the Spirit to go through Makedonia and Achaia and go his way to Hierosoluma, saying after I have been there, it behoveth me to see Hrome also.

22. And having sent into Makedonia two of those who were serving him as deacons, Timotheus and Erastos namely, he held on for a time into Asia.

23. And there occurred during that period not a little disturbance about the way.

24. For a certain Demetrios by name, a silverworker who was making silver shrines for Artemis (Latin Minerva) was furnishing not a little employment to the artizans;

25. These and those who worked at such like things he assembled together and said, Men, ye know well that our prosperity is from this employment:

26. And ye behold and hear that this Paulos hath changed over a considerable multitude not only of Ephesos, but of all Asia, saying that these are not gods that have come to pass through hands.

27. And not only doth this endanger our portion coming into disrepute, but also the temple of the great goddess Artemis being accounted for naught and her being about to be deprived of her majesty, which all Asia and the inhabited venerate.

28. And when they had heard and become full of anger they were shouting, saying, Great is Artemis of Ephesians.

29. And the city was filled with commotion, and they rushed with one accord into the theatre, snatching away along with them Gaios and Aristarchos, Makedonian fellow-demesmen of Paul:

30. And when Paulos desired to enter into the deme (assembly) the disciples did not allow him.

31. Certain ones moreover also of the Asiatic rulers who were his friends sent unto him and exhorted him not to commit himself to the theatre:

32. Some then were shouting one thing and some another. For the church (ekklesia) was in a confused state, and the majority did not know for what reason they had come together.

33. However they conducted Alexandros down out of the crowd, as the Joudaians were putting him forward, and Alexandros making a gesture for silence with his hand was intending to make a defensive argument to the deme:

34. But when they recognized that he was a Joudaian, there occurred a great voice from all as for two hours they were shouting, Great is Artemis of Ephesians:

35. But the scribe sending down to the multitude, saith, Men, Ephesians, What man forsooth is there who doth not know the city of the Ephesians to be a verger of the great Artemis and of Diopetes (an image that fell from Jupiter).

36. Since these things then are indisputable, it behooveth you to become calm and do nothing headlong?

37. For ye have led these men neither as temple-desecrators nor as blaspheming our goddess.

38. If then Demetrios and the artizans along with him haven charge against any one, let public guardians be led and there are anthypates. Let them join legal issue with one another:

39. But if ye are seeking to solve something about other things, it may have been decided in the lawfully constituted ekklesia (church).

40. For we are in danger of being called to account for sedition for to-day, there being no legal cause for which we can return an answer for this mob, and having said this he dismissed the ekklesia.

Sundry Thoughts.

Cain was a man of sin, Abel was a man of righteousness, both are representative men, and both appeared before the Lord to worship. Noah also was a man of righteousness, while his contemporaries were giants in wickedness and crime. Passing over Melchesideck priest of the Most High God, and a righteous king, we come to Abraham of whom it is affirmed that he believed God and it was counted to him for righteousness. But there is another man appearing on the scene who did not exercise faith, and who was pre-eminently a man of the world, and who in fact laid the foundation of what was afterwards styled by the prophet the "kingdom of men." This was Nimrod the great grand son of Noah, and the founder of the Assyrian and Chaldean empires. If ancient history can be credited this mighty hunter, or great landed possessor, was deified by his son and afterward worshiped as a God by his descendants and adherents. Doubtless Babylonian idolatry—transmitted from generation to generation, and recognized by the Bible student will go a long way in enabling him to identify quite satisfactorily the "Man of Sin" of the Christian age, and particularly at the time of the end. The man of sin is the head of a corporate body, as is also the man of righteousness. Both stand as the official representatives of an organic system of things, that have to do with the inhabitants of the earth. They are antagonistic systems and of necessity at war,—even as sin and righteousness cannot both dwell together in peace. The man of sin therefore is a persecutor,—a lawless and malignant hater of those who espouse the cause of righteousness and loyalty to Jehovah's Word. Mother Eve in the garden of Eden before sin entered was on amicable terms with the serpent, and they could converse with each other very sociably—their conversation, however apparently harmless and friendly proved in the end very deceptive and disappointing. The serpent was a great speculator, and made an effort to reason philosophically. Eve in her simplicity testified to the truth,—for she had not only heard, but believed the truth, but she did not hold fast to the truth. Her faith weakened, and gave way before the subtile reasoning of the serpent, and inadvertently as it were she came to believe a lie, an offense of which multitudes of her posterity are likewise guilty. A lie always promises some immediate fruition—some speedy personal advantage—it appeals to the senses, and dispenses with personal discomfort in the way of labor, trial and patience as unnecessary and unprofitable. With these remarks we will take our leave for the present of Mother Eve and the introduction of sin into the world, and pass over ages of human history, full of suffering, sorrow and death,—yea full of human vanity and ambition, and the sway of sin ruling earth's unfortunate children with the rod of oppression.

Coming down to the year A. D. 70 another and a new woman appears on the earth, but under somewhat different circumstances and surroundings from that of the first. In one particular, however, the resemblance is complete in that both are under law to God. Paul describes this new woman, as one justified from the sin of the first, and therefore free from the Edenic condemnation of sin. He further testifies that she was "a chaste virgin" and moreover espoused or betrothed in marriage to one whom she sincerely loved, even Christ.

It is a proverbial saying that "history repeats itself," but this is not always true. The second man did not repeat the history of the first. The first man was disobedient, but the new man did not follow in the footsteps of Adam, but on the contrary first and last loyal to his Father's Word, and obedient to his will even unto death. The same cannot be affirmed of the "chaste virgin," as a corporate body, who had been espoused to the Lord Jesus by faith and obedience. For a time she walked in the light and love of the truth—unspoiled by vain philosophy and the traditions of men. But as time wore on, love and zeal grew cold, faith weakened, and her vows of chastity forgotten and cast away, preferring the pleasures of the present evil world that are seen, rather than the patient waiting of hope for the invisible glory of a future age. Before the apostles had run their race, the spirit of discontent began to manifest itself, indicating that the restraint of righteousness and true holiness was growing more and more irksome and incongenial to the carnal mind, impatient to be free from spiritual discipline, and be like other people respectable and honorable. To be like other people is a universal desire, a laudable ambition, and everywhere and in all time is one of the greatest barrier the truth has to overcome. There is an abundance of wealth and great possessions in the world, why not acquire and enjoy them as other people do? There are positions of honor and trust among men, why not seek them and be somebody? Have we not had enough of poverty and persecution—the confiscation of our goods, the imprisonment and death of our friends and brethren? It is not difficult to imagine the mode of reasoning that prepared the way for the "falling away," of which Paul speaks, and the consequent popular favor obtained by the relaxing of faith and testimony.

Doubtless many of those who in Paul's day embraced the gospel of the kingdom of God, believed that the second appearing of Christ was imminent, and would transpire within the generation or life time of those then living; but as time elapsed, and the apostles and others passed away—the spirit of faction and discord growing more bold and aggressive, the doctrine of Christ's appearing and kingdom was no longer the all potent stimulus to purity and peace that it had been a few years previous. The apostolic manner of speech and writing no doubt led many to think that the kingdom of God was to be immediately established:—disappointed in their expectations, they set to work to create what they previously had cherished as a matter of hope. It must not however be taken for granted that all of Paul's contemporaries believed that Christ would return to the earth in their day, for the apostle was careful to guard against such an impression becoming settled and fixed. But the fact that Paul did very explicitly state the contrary, only shows more conclusively the tendency of belief then prevailing.

Conformity to the world and its pleasures by the "chaste virgin espoused" of apostolic times, made it easy for her to court the favor of kings and rulers of this evil age. She acquired numbers, and with them came influence and power. Her bishops and priests appeared at court, sat at the banquet tables of royalty, arrayed in costly robes and gowns of the most luxuriant fabrics. There was nothing in the world too good for them. In fact they did not disdain to seek and acquire a monopoly of worldly luxury and pleasure. This was an illicit and forbidden intercourse, but nevertheless in line with what Paul and John predicted. It was spiritual lewdness and fornication resulting in the conception and birth of an illigitimate child—which as a child of sin is just what Paul contemplated and described as the revelation of "that man of sin." The title is appropriate, the description perfect, and in full accord with the facts of history. I have given the date A. D. 70 as approximately near enough the time when the one body of Christ was a pure and "chaste virgin," for at this time not only Jews but large numbers from among the Gentiles had embraced the gospel, and the justification by faith through the Lord Jesus. Here then was a community of men and women, who had become free from Adamic condemnation, and obtaining the forgiveness of their individual sins through faith, repentance and baptism into the name of the Lord Jesus the man of righteousness. They had been in Adam, but now they are in Christ, reconciled unto God and cleansed from the uncleanness of sin through the shed blood of the Lord Jesus. "This is the new covenant in my blood," said Jesus as he took the cup, all therefore who enter into covenant relationship with Jehovah are cleansed from sin through the blood of sprinkling, or what the apostle styles the "blood of the covenant."

A community of men and women thus justified and cleansed are figuratively styled by Paul a "chaste virgin espoused to Christ." But when this virgin community turned aside and committed lewdness with the kings and rulers of this present evil age, and as the fruit of her dissolute conduct brought forth a man child who should rule as a visible God in the earth, what else could this child be, but "that man of sin foretold by the prophets?" An illigitimate and therefore unholy seed—inheriting all the instinctive and inflamed desires of sin, it could be none other than that "lawless one" whose career in the world's history for upwards of a thousand years can be hardly overlooked. "That man of sin" is not one man, but a succession of men, who constitute the official head and mouth of a politico-ecclesiastical system of things—a visible ruler who assumes the authority of Christ on earth, and therefore a great sticker for civil as well as ecclesiastical power. He is the outgrowth of apostacy, the mature manifestation of that "iniquitous mystery" working in Paul's day. To overlook this fact is to make a serious mistake, and to enter upon a line of unprofitable speculation.

I am not unconscious of the fact that quite a number of prophetic expositors are looking for the evolution of a lawless ruler, who for the space of 3½ literal years shall be a terror to the world. This is not however be taken for granted one of Prof. Totten's vagaries for which he seems to have a special fondness, and even now his own chronology is dangerously crowding upon the time he has allotted for the wonders to be performed by his "anomikos." Disappointment is sure to come, as it has come to others. Time assuages grief, but it does more, it unrelentingly destroys chronological figurings and cognate theories. Prof. Totten's earnestness and enthusiasm are refreshing, but his writings are more sensational than comforting. Real comfort can only prevail where doubt is absent.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION will consider the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint heirs with Him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the bodily resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A man can reason just as admirably from false premises as true ones, and therefore the necessity of looking critically at the premises whether they accord fully with the testimony or text and context under consideration. It is an easy matter for a man of brilliant parts to theorize and speculate upon prophetic topics or subjects in connection with that most intricate and perplexing problem, Bible chronology. But for one I confess that I have never seen anything as yet concerning a reliable chronology that was satisfactory, as applied to unfulfilled prophecy. There is so much that is curious, interesting and even plausible, but nevertheless full of glaring flaws and expositional unsoundness.

In 2 Thess. 2 chap. Paul says let no man deceive you by any means for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition—who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped: so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God showing himself that he is God, or rather a God. To my mind the foregoing descriptive prophecy finds its fulfilment in the head of the papal hierarchy. The facts of history thus far correspond perfectly with Paul's statements, but we have not come to the end yet. This new God in the earth has not finished his career, nor filled up the measure of his destiny as we shall see in time. It will require the presence of the Lord Jesus on the earth to create a situation, that will cause all nations of the Greek and Roman world to turn to the bishop of Rome for counsel and comfort. The true and false prophet will then be face to face. The man of righteousness and the man of sin will then both be speaking to the world of nations in no doubtful manner, and in words that the people will clearly comprehend before the great struggle is finished. The inhabitants of earth must and will learn that they cannot believe the serpent's lie, and at the same time honor God acceptably. It will be a time of great trouble for the true and false will be engaged in active hostilities for supremacy and the world's dominion.

GEO. MOYER.

PLATTSTON, O. Nov. 15, 1894.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Please say through the paper to those who desire to know our whereabouts, that we are holding meetings at present at Plattston, Ohio, and expect to remain here until Nov. 30, then, at the request of Bro. Conner, we go from here to Rensselaer, Ind., beginning meetings Sunday, Dec. 2, the Lord willing.

Today you are gathering for another conference meeting, conferring together, and exhorting one another. How pleasant these meetings, how profitable they should be made in building each other up in the faith and hope of the gospel. May God's divine help and blessing rest upon you all at each session of the meeting, that all may be brought nearer the divine life, the earnest contending for the faith of the gospel, is the prayer of your brother and sister in the hope.

Pray earnestly for us brethren, that health and strength may be given to us, and that some souls may be brought to Christ.

B. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

As in needlework, the sad ground is laid before the beautiful colors; as the statuary cuts and carves his statue before he gilds it; so doth the Spirit of Christ begin with sadness and end with joy; first cuts and wounds, then heals and overlays the soul with comfort and peace.—Gurnall.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, Nov. 28, 1894.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You do by paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

"Is all the world there is but one legitimate originator. Man's business is that of concurrence."

"Finish what you begin. You will never succeed in anything if you give way to the habit of stopping in the middle."

A letter from J. T. Prime, says, he has recently been holding meetings at St. Paul, Neb. with good interest and three embraced the truth as a direct result.

Ruskin says there is a wider division of men than that into Christian and Pagan; before we ask what a man worships, we have to ask whether he worships at all.

"Even are the relations between God and man involved in the fact of man's moral agency, that man's business is to receive, or in other words co-operate with what God gives."

"The world is full of talkers. There is no lack of people who can expatiate eloquently on what ought to be done, but the world is almost empty of people who are doing, or trying to do, what ought to be done."

A Very good short communication comes to us from Nebraska. It would be placed in our paper at once, as it is just right—but the author failed to give name. "A Sister" may be signed to it to appear in the paper, but we must know who it is from for our own protection.

Justification by Faith. No. 9.

The things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ had to be believed, in apostolic times, before a person was a fit subject for baptism. Having obeyed the gospel, the subject then possessed the hope of the gospel, which was eternal life in the kingdom of God. And be it remembered, there is no other hope whatever—we mean no other gospel hope. Because "there is but one body, one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." The reason there is only one hope is that there is but one faith; and the reason there is but one faith is that there is but one set of promises to believe.

Let us see, now, if there be a hope outside of, or apart from the hope of the gospel. We hear a great deal about the "world's hope." Is there any such thing? If there be, what is it, and how is it to be obtained? Surely there must be conditions exerted of the world at large before a hope would be granted them, when the congregation of God have to strictly comply with conditions before they obtain the hope of the gospel. Let the reader closely read 1 John v. 19, "We know (John and his brethren) that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness." And we read that when the household of faith is chastened it is in order that we should not be condemned with the world. They do when they ought not to do even after being justified by faith, and are chastened, corrected as children with a view to reformation and forgiveness through the Mediator, —a purely household provision to prevent, after all, condemnation with the unjustified world. Take notice of the words, "not be condemned with the world." There is no danger of this if they walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit, for the same Paul says in our oft quoted text, "there is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus," showing all others were under condemnation; they had nothing to hope for, neither mortal nor immortal life. If this be questioned it can be settled by reference to the second chapter of Ephesians, where we learn that the members of that body were and are aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having NO HOPE (whatever) and without God in the world. They did not have a hope of any life after death at all, simply because God had never promised it. If Christ's death would have secured their freedom from the law of sin and death Paul knew nothing of it. We want our readers to make note of it. They were utterly without hope because of their ignorance, while the theory that so enthuses some people is based upon the idea that their ignorance ensures them another opportunity. The divine idea and the human are here placed in juxtaposition, and are seen to be diametrically opposed to each other. If they were to live because Christ died, they were not with out God.

We never read that the gifts of God are so said so, but "the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. This defines his office or work in the divine scheme.

Paul and his Ephesian brethren "were by nature the children of wrath even as others" (were), but God in his mercy quickened them together with Christ: see Eph. ii. 3-5, and then it is added, "For by grace ye are saved." Positively they were CHILDREN OF WRATH till saved by grace through faith. Positively wrath awaited both the Jew, Paul, and the Gentile Ephesians till they were justified by faith. Neither ignorance nor any thing else secured them life beyond, because of Christ's death.

By the help of God we hope to impress our readers with the tremendous importance of justication by faith, by reminding them, that not even believers could be justified through Christ's death. He was raised again for their justification, because being thus raised, he was the object on which justifying faith must be exercised. Had he died instead of us, his death would have justified, and his non-resurrection would have debarred no one of salvation.

The fact that Christ was raised from the dead through the blood of the everlasting covenant is most conclusive proof to us that his death was not substitutionary; because, if it had been, he would have had to die instead of himself, which would be ridiculous.

In opposition to the positions taken we are pointed to John i. 29, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world." As if he were to take away all the sin of the world; and to 1 John ii. 2, "He is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." This is part of the same Word we have so freely quoted from, and therefore must be in harmony with it throughout. No honest person would adopt a meaning of one passage which contradicts another. And as we have abundant proof that all of Adam's race will not be saved—some will certainly be destroyed, we must not treat God's Book unfairly. The words, "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life," and the words, "Them that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord" show that the words "world" and "whole world" cannot be taken in the most literal or universal sense. The fact that the proud and all that do wickedly shall be as stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, proves that the sins of all mankind were not taken away by the death of Christ; and to the Bible believer this proves that more is taken out of the words "sins of the world" than they were intended to convey.

This is further confirmed by the broad, far-reaching principle, enunciated by God that he "WILL NOT JUSTIFY THE WICKED." Ex. xxiii. 7. To raise from the dead in a mortal existence, the wicked dead, and put them upon probation would be to justify them and free them from the law of sin and death, and therefore to stultify himself. Thus does the spirit head off this latter-day delusion.

We have absolute proof that the death of Christ did not take away all the sins of the saved, even because "he ever liveth to make intercession for the sins of those who have received the atonement; that is, sin through weakness or inadvertance.

To talk about taking away sins thousands of years before they were committe is to prove that those who do so have been educated in, or influenced by the church of Rome who pretend to grant indulgencies and to forgive sins before they are committed. Does not Heb. vi. 4-6 furnish infallible evidence that the sin of the whole world was not taken away by Christ? It says, "It is impossible for those who were once enlightened. . . . if they fall away to renew them again into repentance, seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Also Heb. x. 26, "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries."

But when all else fails recourse is had to 1 Pet. iii. 18 "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God;" as if the whole work was done by a substitute; and Christ the just had died for us, that is instead of the unjust. Once more we reply a person may do a thing in behalf of another without doing it instead of him. This representative use of the word for is found in Luke i. 69, "God hath raised up a horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;" also in Rom. viii. 34, "Christ who also maketh intercession for us," not instead of us; and Rom. iv. 25, "Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification," but not instead of our justification, nor instead of our offences, but in order to put away the offences, and procure the justification. In the 9th of Hebrews we read that Christ is entered into heaven itself now to appear in the presence of God for us," not instead of us surely, but on behalf of his brethren. And what of Luke xxii. 20? Did Jesus mean that his blood was shed instead of theirs? And who will dare to say that Christ died instead of the ungodly? Rom. v. 6, when he declares that he laid down his life for the sheep? And when the apostle John says we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren as Christ laid down his life for us, does he mean that we should take their places and die instead of them? Read Col. i. 24; it is an infallible answer. The apostle says, "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and—and, what?—and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh, FOR his body's sake, which is the church." Positively, the sufferings of Paul in behalf of the church were of the same nature as were Christ's;—in fact were a part of them; and we leave it to our readers if Paul suffered instead of the church?

"But does it not say he took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses?" Yes; but not instead of us. We each have to take our share of these things, do we not? He took it by taking our nature. Again we appeal to the reader to say whether his sufferings in the flesh was instead of our sufferings in the flesh? If so, why do we still suffer them? He did rid many of their infirmities it is true, but he does not now rid people of their ailments as he once did,—and there are many Scriptures which show that his sufferings were exemplary, and resociatory, and also to qualify him for the high offices of heaven's appointment in the perfect state. And reference to Isa. liii. 37 will show that he himself was the afflicted one. Will substitutionists dare affirm that because he took our infirmities he became possessed of the demoniac spirits he expelled from others? If not, they are in a fair way to abandon their position,—do not have much faith in substitution after all.

We claim to have repeatedly shown that all men came under condemnation by the offence of Adam. And that the world was under that condemnation years after the death of Christ. His death did not justify them, or free them from that condemnation. Paul shows how he was made free, so that we may employ the same means, viz: "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus." Since the apostolic times, no other means having been instituted for justifying the world from condemnation, it is under condemnation still, and the doctrine that the death of Christ ARBITRARILY justifies debased fleshly organisms, which, despite original capability, are like the beasts that perish, is, in our judgment a towering delusion and a deadly snare.

But we are next met with the objection that Paul in 1 Tim. ii. 6 says that Christ "gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." If the Lord will we will show in our next that the Great Apostle of the "Broader Hope" has built his reputation, really, upon the revamped theories of satisfaction of divine justice, the reconcilement of an offended God, and the appeasement of divine wrath: all of which is most preposterous foolishness, a distortion of the truth, a misconception of the subject, and entirely misleading.

Saved by Law or Gospel Which? No. 9.

The Sabbatarian prophetess has gotten so far that she claims that every line she writes, even in a letter, is directly inspired by God, the previous rays of light shining from the throne. In Testimony 31, p. 63 she says: "It is God, and not an erring mortal that has spoken," and she states over and over again that those who doubt or oppose her are fighting against God and sinning against the Holy Ghost. These so-called, "Inspired testimonies" now embrace ten bound volumes, and the faithful are obliged to read the Old Bible in the light of the New one. She says, "I took the precious Bible and surrounded it with these testimonies. God has through these testimonies simplified the great truths already given." She claims to inspiration are fully believed by the faithful,—and among themselves they quote her as we do Paul and Peter and James and John; and a text from her is an end of all controversy. It is as common to hear them say among themselves, that when they give up her visions they give up the Bible too. We do not think it necessary for them to say that. When they accept those visions they virtually give up the Bible, which says, the "The Scriptures are able to make men wise unto salvation;" and also say, that the plagues written in it shall be added to those who add to it. Before us is a pile of books comprising 3330 pages which have been added to the Words of the Spirit; and as sure as God has spoken to us, Ellen White and her worshippers have no part or lot with Christ. And when a representative man of that Body visited us at our house we earnestly outlined the truth to him, and exhorted him to repent, as he was leaving.

When J. M. Stephenson left the Seventh Day People in 1875, Ellen White predicted in Testimony No. 1, p. 75, his "immediate destruction," whereas many of our readers know he was for some 15 or 20 years after, a powerful advocate of the Gospel of the Kingdom. Of course the prophetess takes no blame for these mistakes. Poor thing! She is obliged to write what the Spirit dictates, (?). But she sees and does abandon some of the teachings of the Spirit(?) after the mistakes are discovered. It is curious and interesting to compare the first edition of her writing with the revised and corrected version published in 1885, under the supervision of her son and a critical editor. Elder Canright says, "Four pages opened at hap-hazard, of Vol. 1 contained on each page, 20 changes from the first edition," and is it not madness to claim inspiration for matter that the experience of 40 years makes 20 changes a page necessary? If the changes averaged the same throughout they would amount to 63 720 changes in the revised and corrected version.

Mrs. White's first book was entitled, "A Word to the Little Flock," and published in 1847, and contained doctrines her followers do not now believe; and later editions omit 50 lines which the first contained. What can sensible people think of this for inspiration? We have a living witness in Eld. Canright that in composing these visions she would verily cut whole pages, and write them entirely different the next time. She used to read her manuscript to her husband, and he would change whole sentences, and our readers may well ask if he too was inspired, and if so, and also capable of correcting her visions, why did he not publish some that would need no correction?

The Sabbatarian prophetess contradicts the Bible, contradicts history, contradicts the plainest facts of science, and contradicts herself: and it is painful to see people sensible about everything but the most important thing of all to know the way of life, and placing an a par with the immutable Word of God, ten volumes of silly twaddle.

We want to say here that the Gospel of the Kingdom preached by Jesus and his apostles has no place whatever in the Sabbatarian community.

The preacher who visited us was asked, "What must a man do to be saved?" He in a hesitating and awkward way said, "he must accept Christ as his Savior," or to that effect, knowing at the time that Seventh Day observance is made the saving test of their community, and its non-observance constitutes the Mark of the Beast.

Shall he please to do as Brother Harris requests at the proper place.

Bible Times and Seasons. No. 3.

We herewith furnish more facts and figures relating to the end of the Age,—Rise of Papacy—Decree of Phocas 4598 A. M. Saints given in the hand of the Roman Horn, Dan. vii. 8-12 months Rev. xiii. 7-1260. Papal power abolished 5798 A. M., corresponding to our 1798, which we are witnesses of.

Supremacy of the Roman Bishop 606 A. M. Continuance of the Papal Abomination 1260 years, corresponding to our 1868 A. D. or 5868 A. M.

The accuracy of these astronomically true time-fixings being assured, and up to the present time they do not appear to have been questioned, we must be certainly nearing the great crisis of the world's history, and the termination of the misrule of man's self-government, and disregard for the Most High; and also of what so intimately concerns us as servants, waiting and watching for the return of their Master, the personal advent of our Lord Jesus Christ to complete our longed-for deliverance from weakness, sin, and death, and establish the throne of righteousness and peace in his Universal Dominion.

The Professor points out that the astronomical cycles establish the striking fact that each of the four events here named, occurred each on the same recurring day and month, in their several years, viz., the 15th day of the 7th month. Abraham left Ur of the Chaldees on the 15th day of the 7th month 2082 A. M. Abraham offered up Isaac on the 15th day of the 7th month 2132 A. M. Israel left Egypt on the 15th day of the 7th month 2513 A. M. The crucifixion took place on the 15th day of the 7th month 4029 A. M.

The "watchers" are turning to Dan. vii. 4, 10 with intense interest just now. It looks as if the seal of the book was broken, or at least being broken: the time of the end is upon us: "Many are running to and fro and knowledge is increasing"..... the wise shall understand." Oh, to be numbered with the wise, may it be our chief concern.

Report of Stockholders Meeting.

Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15, 1894. Pursuant to notice the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association met in Chapel Hall, with E. Bainbridge president of the Board in the chair. On motion L. E. Conner was chosen secretary of the meeting. By order of the meeting the roll was called, to which there were responses by the representatives of 233 shares of stock. This being a majority of all the stock it was ordered that the meeting proceed to elect a board of five directors for the ensuing year, which resulted in the election of A. R. Underwood, W. D. Thompson, J. H. Willey, Wm. Railsback, and E. Railsback. On motion J. L. Wince, A. R. Underwood and L. E. Conner were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on the death of Brother George Alleman, member of the Board of Directors of the Association. On motion said resolutions were considered as passed by this meeting, the same being ordered to be spread upon the records of the association, and a copy of the same to be presented to Sister Alleman, widow of the deceased.

On motion the meeting adjourned to meet at the call of the President.

L. E. Conner, Sec.

Whereas: In the course of human events, on March 6, 1894, Brother George Alleman died, and recognizing the ability and faithfulness of our brother as a member of this Association and as one of its officers, we in council assembled do hereby,

Resolve, That we acknowledge our great loss by the death of our beloved brother, and take this means of expressing to his beloved wife, who is left to mourn him, our sympathy in this her bereavement, and our own sadness in that we shall have him with us no more. Further

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of this Association, and that a copy be given to Sister Alleman.

Conference Report.

Pursuant to previous notice the Church of God in Indiana, met at Plymouth, Ind. Nov. 16, 1894, and continued over the following Sunday. Bro. Wagoner not being present, Bro. Wince took the chair. A committee of arrangements for the present meeting was appointed consisting of Wm. Railsback, Israel Roberts and W. D. Thompson. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved. The list of churches being called only two responded, Argos, and Plymouth. The church at Argos pledged itself to pay $30 into the evangelist fund, the church at Plymouth, $12.00, said money to be paid in quarterly payments.

It was ordered that the resolution passed at the last conference, that is, that unless the churches comply with the action of the conference they would not be recognized by the same, be rescinded on the ground that it was unconstitutional.

It was further ordered that an appeal be made through The Restitution to raise means to send an evangelist into the field of labor, also that the evangelical committee be discharged and the executive board be empowered to act instead.

Conference then adjourned to meet again on Saturday at ten o'clock.

Nov. 17. Conference called to order by Bro. Wagoner. He stated that he had written to the churches as ordered in the last conference, that the church at Ollo, Hamilton Co. Ind responded with a pledge of $4.00 with possibly more in the future.

The treasurer reported amount on hand at last meeting $104.22, received $25.00 paid out $12.00, amount on hand $207.22.

It was ordered the secretary under advice of the president make out a program for the next conference to be published in connection with the notice thereof.

The ministers present were J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, and L. E. Conner.

There were but few from abroad, and no additions were made; but there were earnest appeals made and we trust that the truth found lodgment in some honest hearts which may be reaped in due time.

Bro. Fred Austin, Sister Woodward's son of Michigan, attending school at Valparaiso was there and spoke for us one evening. He has talent and will do credit to the cause. Bro. Conner was called away on Sunday to preach a funeral sermon.

J. F. Wagoner, Pres.
A. C. Roberts, Sec'y.

(Read at ... meeting.)

Dear brothers and sisters:

When by grace of God have been permitted to assemble at Plymouth, Ind., to you I send this greeting: I write you, yet God knows how I have longed to meet with you, that you might know my faith and hope which is steadfastly anchored to the precious promises revealed to us in his Word of Truth. My prayers are with you that your meeting together may be a manifestation of his love, and that it may prove a blessing not only to you who have received his Spirit of adoption, but that the power of his presence in your midst, may carry conviction to the hearts of some of earth's children, that good may be done in his name.

Dear brothers and sisters, is not the prophetic fig tree putting forth her leaves? can we not see the unerring sign which shall precede the day dawn of earth's millennial glory. I truly believe the time is drawing near, and oh! how faithful we should be, how much we need the meek and lowly Spirit of the blessed Master.

Paul tells us Rom. viii. 9, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." Oh how wretched, and miserable and poor, and blind, and naked, we shall be in that day if we are none of his. If he should say unto us, "Depart, I never knew you." May God help us, that we may come to him and buy gold tried in the fire, that we may be rich, and have white raiment, that we may be clothed, and that the shame of our nakedness do not appear, that we may see and behold his glory at his coming.

Your brother in hope.

J. H. Willey.

Dear Restitution:

I see by the date on my paper that my time is out, and as I do not want to miss one I will renew at once. It is about all the preaching we have and we have learned to prize it the more.

Another year has rolled around bringing alike its sorrows, as well as its joys. During the past year we have been called upon to mourn the loss of two beloved sisters, but we mourn not as those who have no hope, for we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is. Enclosed you will find $2.00, $1.50 to pay for the paper for one year and the rest to use as you think best. It is a comfort to read the letters from the scattered ones and to learn that the truth is gaining ground and we hope that still more may see the truth, as the time is getting short. The night cometh in which no man can work. God bless us and may we all work together for our Master, is the prayer of your sister in hope of the kingdom.

E. M. Burton.

Editor Restitution:

Silver Creek has been favored the past week, the only time in eight or nine years, by the unfurling, once again, of the glorious gospel plan of salvation, seemingly so dear to all who do understand it. I began to see new beauties in it as the speaker, Bro. Hudler unfolded so Scripturally the redemptive scheme. First the called out ones who are now making themselves ready, through them national blessings will flow, the law go forth from Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

We have reason to anticipate more interest next time, and larger audiences, and greater advancement in the knowledge of the gospel truth, as the first impression made by Mr. Hudler was good and the instruction given by him well received. I entertain hopes of a better understanding of these instructions in order to be ready and go when the Master calls.

Thanksgiving Day.

The cold gray sky broods dark on field and hill,
The singing children of the woods have fled,
The hermit thrush's golden chime is still,
The happy hunters of the grass are dead;
The world is hushed with mock Nature's hush's chill.

But in the spacious farmhouse, lo! the glare
Of the hospitable hearth, and on the board
The rich abundance of Thanksgiving fare,
The yearlong savings of the housewife's hoard.

A harvest home though all the fields are bare:

Here sits the grandsire, and at his side
The youngest of his line, a prattling child:
And there the husband of the homemade bride;
And next the bowlhearted lily maiden mild.
The soldier son, stern-featured, eagle-eyed,
Fresh for they come of many storied wars
To meet once more beneath the ancient roof,
Ah! ever with the love of childhood's cause.
And here, past life's severed warp and woof
Are joined, and time's swift wing a space stayed.

And memory makes the old man young again.
He tells the oft-told tale, the unworn jest,
But hear the snow falls fast on hill and plain.
The distant clock tells half the hour of rest.
And thanks are offered Heaven not in vain.

Where is Paradise?

This word appears thrice in Scripture.

1. Thou shalt be with me in Paradise. Luke xxiii. 43.

2. The Tree of Life which is in the Paradise of God. Rev. ii. 7.

3. "Snatched away" (Rapture—Greek) or "caught up"—O. V. into Paradise. 2 Cor. xii. 14.

1. The Tree of life is in Eden—Genesis.

2. Eden was on the earth that perished in the flood. Gen. ii. Pet. iii. 5.

3. The Tree of Life is now in the Paradise of God. Rev. ii. 7.

4. Proceeding from the Throne of God in the New Jerusalem. Rev. xxii. 1. 2. 14.

5. The New Jerusalem or Paradise of God is to come down from God—out of heaven—to earth—and God himself shall dwell among men and abide with them. Rev. xxi. 1. 2. 3.

The "New Jerusalem," the "New Eden," "Paradise," and the "New Heaven and New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (1 Pet. iii. 13) are synonymous terms for the same place.

The heaven and earth of old perished. 2 Pet. iii. 5.

The heaven and earth that now exist will pass away, v. 6.

A new heaven and new earth will replace them, v. 13.

"For behold I create new heavens and a new earth and the former shall not be remembered nor come into mind. Isa. lxv. 17.

Paul calls the heavens, Paradise. 2 Cor. xii. 2.

Paradise therefore will be again on earth when Christ comes in his kingdom.

For this cause the penitent thief prayed "Lord remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom" and Jesus replied, "Verily I say unto thee this day (anticipating his award at the Judgment Day, Matt. xvi. 7; Rev. xxii. 12,) shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Luke xxxiii. 42. R. V.

About Voting.

To the strangers and pilgrims who are not of this world, whose citizenship is in heaven, who pray for that kingdom to come which is to brake all the kingdoms of this world to pieces: a few words to you my brethren. Can we build up and pull down at the same time? Our prayer is in effect for the destruction of the present order of things. Can we vote to preserve that which our prayers call upon God to remove? Should we entangle ourselves with the affairs of this world? May we not in so doing be found fighting against God? Doth he not rule upon earth and give the power to whomsoever he choseth? What can our puny arm do to stem the current of corruption? If it is his will that base men shall rule to prepare a condition for the coming of the great Emancipator, shall we strive to interfere with his purpose? To be neutral is safe for the Christian, for how do we know which side the Lord is on? Then again, how unseemingly for brethren to vote in opposite ranks? That of itself would show that at least one side was opposed to the Lord's choice, and what about the brother on the wrong side? Did not Jesus say, Ye are not of this world. Is he not shaping this world's affairs in reference to his coming to take the kingdom under the whole heavens? Yes, but still a brother, we must vote the ticket in the interest of good government. Another brother votes the opposite ticket for the same purpose. Thus brother is arrayed against brother. It is all wrong. The Lord's choice cannot be set aside, fight as we will. Does the Lord expect good government to exist when he comes? Nay, the reverse. The sighing of the needy, and the cry of the oppressed, will continue to ascend in the ear of the Lord of Sabaoth till he come to break in pieces the oppressor. Yes, my brethren, the desire of all nations will come. Will not God avenge his own elect that cry night and day unto him, though he bear long with them? What should be our cry. Come Lord Jesus come quickly.

John Goodliffe.

Editor Restitution:

I am home again and found all well, for which I thank God and take courage. As a result of my lectures in Illinois and Missouri I will give a brief outline. As I have no loaves or fishes to offer, neither silver nor gold, only a few are ready to enlist in the army of the Lord. At Ripley, Ill. we had a good attendance, and a better interest I never saw. Four put on Christ by baptism. From here I went to Mt. Sterling, and then to Blue Mound, Mo. Here we had a good house. On Sunday evening we broke bread at Brother and Sister McKerron's house. There we met an Advent preacher by the name of Day. He wanted me to go to Bosworth to debate with a Campbellite preacher by the name of Summers, who had ridiculed us and challenged the world for a debate. I said I did not believe that he would debate with any of our folks, and still believe so as he finally put it off until Aug. 1895. I went on Saturday before the third Sunday as I had agreed. I was told by one of their preachers that, two-thirds of their preachers believed as we did. One came out from the Christian Church and united with us on the last night that I was at this place. From here I left for Big Creek Church in Kansas. With all my 30 discourses, only three were added to our ranks. The Savior said, "Many are called but few chosen." If only these three will be chosen I will be well paid for all my labors. When I arrived at home I found a telegram asking me to go Carthage, to preach the funeral of our Sister Emma Webb. I left for this place the same night. How needful it is to be ready, for the Master is soon coming whether we are ready or not. I pray that not many of our brethren will have to taste death before Jesus comes.

I will be at Bosworth, Mo. on Saturday before the first Sunday in December. Will be at the Brown School-house until Friday night before the second Sunday. From here I go to Blue Mounds on Saturday, and remain one week. Then to Big Creek Church, Kan. the Third Sunday. Take notice.

John Fouke.

Dear Restitution:

As I am at Glenwell, Ohio, and expect to stay here two or three months, I wish to have my paper sent here as I do not want to do without my dear Restitution, for that is all the preaching I have except the Bible. I expect to hear Bro. Joblin preach. I send $2.00 to pay my subscription for another year and what is over put where you think best. I ask an interest in your prayers, and remain your Sister.

All Eyes on the Prince of Wales.

London, Nov. 17.—For the first time in his long and not overspleudid public career the Prince of Wales finds himself the object of zealous and even excited European attention. It is pretty late in the day for him to develop the tastes of a politician, let alone those of a statesman, but a much more utilitarian temperament than his might well be impelled to high ambitions by the situation in which he discovers himself. Vienna, Berlin, Rome, and Paris alike are watching him as the principal object of interest at St. Petersburgh, outvying in importance both the dead Czar in his coffin and the live Czar on his throne and the correspondents stationed in those capitals eagerly reflect the opinion about them in their long dispatches, hinting at hurried Cabinet councils, mysterious imperial couriers flying to and fro from palace to palace, and a general state of bewilderment and apprehension at the several headquarters of the continent's armed camps—all due to this amiable but shifty middle-aged Prince Charming.

What it all means is that the young Czar, throughout a week of incessant public ceremonial, has ostentatiously distinguished his uncle-in-law above everybody else. This began in Moscow, but was much more marked on the solemn state entrance of the funeral cortege at St. Petersburgh, where, by 100 court precedents, the Czar Nicholas should have walked alone in the street procession as a chief and solitary mourner behind his father's coffin. It was so arranged by the officials, and they were paralyzed with amazement when the Czar Nicholas beckoned the Prince of Wales to come and walk beside him. Before the day was over every court of Europe was figuring on its possible significance. Since then this demonstrative favoritism has been so marked and constant that nobody doubts that it was intended to be noticed. Naturally it is considered in connection with Lord Rosebery's Guildhall speech about the new and warm friendship with Russia, and the result is something almost like a panic in continental governing circles.

One could not wish a clearer revelation than this supplies of the quicksands and tottering piles on which the fabric of European peace continues to rest.

Europe's Immense War Funds.

Prof. Heinrich Geffcken, writing in the Nineteenth Century, says that Germany has a war treasure of $150,000,000 in coined gold lying in the Julius Tower of Spandau, a much larger sum than Cæsar deposited and Mark Antony extricated from the temple of Ops, and that the other great powers—France, England, Russia, and perhaps Austria—have each a like fund, more or less ready for instant use in the emergency of war. If we credit these powers with the same reserve as that possessed by Prussia, it withdraws from the commerce and currency of the world $750,000,000 in gold, which is after all only about 40 cents per capita for all the population of Europe, and is not so ruinous as at first glance it might appear to be. Taken altogether, it is only an inconsiderable fraction of the cost of our civil war, or the indemnity paid by France to Prussia after the campaign of Sedan and the downfall of the Empire. It is a good deal of money, to be sure, to be kept in idleness, drawing no interest, and making no figures in bank balances, but it is sure to get into circulation again some time, and warm up the arterial flow of the world's commerce, as it ought to do, instead of lying idle in the crypts of fortresses.

May Open the Dardanelles at Once.

London, Nov. 21.—The St. James Gazette this afternoon gives prominence to an article in which it says it is rumored a rapprochement has taken place between Russia and England and that it is possible the strait of the Dardanelles, which has been closed to Russian and other men-of-war since the signing of the treaty of 1841, which was confirmed by the Paris treaty of 1856, will shortly be opened to men-of-war of all nations. According to the Gazette this matter is the talk in the diplomatic circles of several of the capitals of Europe, in fact little else is talked about now.

The Gazette points out the opening of the Dardanelles to foreign warships would have a disastrous effect upon England; that it would necessitate a great increase in the British Mediterranean fleet. It would seem there is some basis for the report the Dardanelles are to be opened to the passing of Russian and other men-of-war, for a dispatch from Odessa to the London Times, cabled exclusively to the Associated Press last night, says a number of troops from the military district of Odessa have been ordered to proceed to Vladivostock and from the Russian war port to the northeast of Corea.

It was asserted these reinforcements are dispatched to the East entirely on account of the war with China and Japan. It should be added, however, this is not the first time vessels of the Russian volunteer fleet have passed through the Dardanelles on their way to Vladivostock.

Cruelty of Turks.

Hampartzoom D. Garabedyan of Cilicia, Asia Minor, has been sent here to make a special study of the higher educational institutions and the American Constitution in connection with international law. He made his temporary home in Washington, D. C. While in that city pursuing his special investigation he was elected a member of the Geographical Society of America, and he participated in the symposiums of the Anthropological Society of America. He was appointed on the Advisory Board on the Physical Science Congress of the World's Fair Auxiliary. While he was attending the congresses he took occasion to say a few words about the condition of his country and the persecution of the Turkish Government. This was reported to the Sultan and he is notified he cannot return home. His nephew is imprisoned at home and he has had no communication from his mother for four months. Now he is writing articles to the papers and speaking anywhere opportunity offers about the condition of affairs in Turkey.

Mr. Garabedyan is reluctant to talk of his personal affairs, but in reply to questions gave the following interesting facts in regard to the state of his countrymen in Turkey.

Since the close of the thirteenth century Armenia has been the subject of three monarchs. As is well known to you they are Russia, Persia, and Turkey. The country is divided into three portions. The division point is Mount Ararat. The last King of Armenia, Leon VI., was taken prisoner and carried to Egypt in 1375. After seven years of captivity he was exiled to Europe. After wandering two years he died in Paris in 1395 and a magnificent monument was erected over his remains in the chapel of St. Celestine. His wife Mary, who belonged to the family of Louis Charles, King of Hungary, died in Jerusalem. With him all their glory vanished.

The condition of Armenians in Russia and Persia is worse than that against which the forefathers of this great nation rose in arms. But they submit meekly, and no word comes from St. Petersburg or Teheran that they are seditious. It is only the unspeakable Turk, that heartless combination of Mongolian and Arab, who is able to devise cruelties and exactions so fiendish as to make them cry out in hopeless despair.

Armenians, from being 35,000,000 in number, have dwindled down to nearly 5,000,000 in the world. Six-sevenths of the race, not taking natural increase into account, have been murdered by foreign oppression, and their natural bent in the direction of literature and the refinements of the more happy civilization are crushed beneath the heel of the Turkish tax-gatherer, who comes not once a year, as with you, but every day. Our fairest daughters (on a certain occasion 2,000 of them) are captured in the fierce forays of the Kurds, with the thinly veiled connivance of the Turkish government, and sold to Moslem harems. To the Turk the Armenian is always and everywhere a "Christian dog," to be kicked and buffeted. He is set upon in mere wantonness in the streets by the Turkish ruffians, beaten, jeered, and cursed.

The main trouble with the Armenians is their being Christians. They are not permitted to serve in the army or in the police force, and are forbidden under heavy penalty to possess any weapons, though most of them live in districts where they are subject to constant depredation from fierce tribes of the Moravian Kurds. In return for the privilege of exemption from bearing arms the Christians had to pay a special tax not imposed upon Mohammedans. This military exemption tax is levied not only upon men of military age but it is levied upon even on the verge of the grave and the infants. From birth to death every Christian male must pay 40 piastres a year. When the child reaches the age of fifteen year the Turkish law assumes he is able to earn 1,000 piastres (one piastre equals four cents), whether he is really able to earn it or not. An additional 10 piastres is levied against this supposititious income. The income tax is increased year by year as the boy grows older. If by purchase or inheritance he comes into possession of any land he is taxed 30 piastres a year on each thousand piastres in its value. If he builds a house is taxed 30 piastres a thousand on its cost. If he cultivates any ground he must pay 30 piastres a year for every thousand in value of the ground cultivated and 10 per cent of the value of the crops. Orchards and vineyards pay a tax of 10 per cent on the value of the product, which product is estimated on the blossoms in the spring and collected in the fall on that basis, even though on account of an unfavorable season no fruit is raised. Cows, sheep, and goats are taxed three piastres each. If any two European nations go to war a special impost of 5 to 500 piastres is levied on Christians for the mobilization of the Turkish army. Every Armenian laborer who owns an implement, such as an ax or a pickax, is taxed five piastres.

Day by day the tax-gatherer, accompanied by one or more gendarms; goes from house to house. The delinquent is dragged unceremoniously into the street by the coat collar and the unpaid tax is demanded. Perhaps he is engaged in weaving a piece of cloth from the sale of which he expects to realize enough to pay the impost. In that case a few piastres dropped into the palm of the official will give him immunity for the time being. But if he has nothing with which to pay the taxes, or bribe the tax-gatherer with what is known "as tobacco money," he is trotted off to prison. Confined there, his wife or other relatives must feed him, for the government will not though he starve. Not infrequently the children must go hungry to save the father from starving in prison.

If the wife or other relatives cannot pay the amount of tax, then the officials enter the house and carry away everything portable, even the bedding and kitchen utensils, and sell them at the auction for whatever they will bring. Finally at the end of the year whatever part of the taxes remains unpaid is written as delinquent to the elders of the church of the district, who are compelled to assess the amount against those of the members who are able to pay. All of this, let it be remembered, is direct taxing by the Turkish government for which the Christians receive no returns, not even protection from private plundering, rapine, and murder.

For the support of the schools and churches and for the improvement of cities they must tax themselves. The government does not take any interest in that whatever. The Christian schools are the object of constant persecution. The Armenians are accused of "sedition" and thrown into prison on the most trifling pretext, and the treatment of the prisoners is beyond human description. The manner in which they are punished is so violent it cannot be described. As illustrations, prisoners are punished by putting live coals in their hands, having red-hot irons applied to their eyes, cold water showered upon their naked bodies. One young woman, 16 years of age, was put in prison by officers and, after satisfying their lust, was killed by a red-hot iron being forced through her body. Whenever an accusation is brought against an Armenian he is held in prison as guilty until he is proven innocent. But the same accusation brought against a Turk holds him innocent until he is proven guilty. In every case the Armenian is found guilty and the Turk is innocent.

A large number of Circassian emigrants are brought into Armenia and are practically told by the government to help themselves, and are let loose in all the provinces. The Circassians being well armed, and the Armenians unarmed, the former evict the latter from their farms and homesteads without ceremony. The Sultan, within the last three years, has organized the savage Kurds into regiments, furnished them with arms and government uniforms, and employed them as mountain police to keep order in the Armenian provinces. These Kurds for generations have been in the habit of pillaging and massacring the Armenian peasants, and keep it up now with more vigor than ever, under the direct patronage and protection of the Sultan. It is as if the United States government were to arm the Apache Indians, and to commission them to preserve order in Arizona, while it forbade the white settlers to possess any weapons. Religious fanaticism is so strong in Turkish courts a Christian cannot get justice against a Mohammedan, even for the most flagrant crimes.

Prof. Brice, author of the "American Commonwealth," traveled through Armenia. In his description of his journey, entitled "Trans-Caucassia and Ararat," he says: "Nothing can be more pitiable than the condition of those poor people. The Christians being without any means of legal redress are practically at the mercy of a neighbor who covets their vineyards, or an official who carries off their daughters. There is absolutely no security for life, honor, or property. At the time of the Congress of Berlin in 1878 the misgovernment and oppression in Armenia had become notorious, and a clause was inserted in the treaty of Berlin by which the Sultan bound himself to reform the abuses in the Armenian provinces, and especially to guarantee the Armenians security from the Circassians and Kurds. In 1880 a 'Collective Note' was addressed to the Sultan by the Ambassadors of six principal European nations, pointing out that nothing had yet been done to carry out this clause of the treaty."

Prof. Brice, in his speech in the British house of Commons May 28, 1890, said: "Everybody knows nothing has been done by the Turkish government to carry out any of the promised reforms. The present condition of the country is as bad as it has been at any time within living memory. Numbers of persons have been thrown into prison and some of them subjected to torture by Turkish officials. Others have been sent to languish in exile. I might recount hundreds of cases in which innocent people have been murdered, in which Christian girls have been carried off by force and confined in harems, in which churches have been defiled, and all without any effort or any wish on the part of the government to punish the guilty persons. Not only has the government made no effort to put down the evils which exist, or to check the proceedings of the Kurds, but it aggravates the disorders by depriving the Armenian people of weapons, while their persecutors are well armed. The whole action of the Turkish government would make one believe it was following out the policy of the Prime Minister when he said the way to get rid of the Armenian question is to get rid of the Armenian race."

If the people of Armenia are not discontented under these circumstances they are not human. If they do not demand and seek a change it is because oppression has destroyed their courage and independence that once made them a great nation. Ever since the Turkish government rule over the Armenians have not had freedom of thought, pen, or press. They are deterred in every step they would take forward in the advancement of the nation in civilization. Nevertheless, they read and make themselves acquainted with every progressive movement in Europe and America. As the world advances they wish to advance with it.

Cost of Armed Truce.

M. Jules Roche, reporter for the Budget committee of the French Chamber, furnishes in the Paris Matin an interesting comparison of the French and German military forces and expenditure. He says that the French ordinary war budget is about 518,000,000 francs, or 563,000,000 francs with the extraordinary war expenditure. The number of men provided for in 1895 is 500,000 or 31000 below the minimum fixed by the organic law of the army. The German ordinary war expenditure, he says, is fixed at 600,027,581 francs, and the extraordinary at 187,230,257 francs, the total being 787,258,838 francs. As it contains no extraneous expenses nothing has to be deducted from that total. That fact, however, is not, in M. Roche's opinion, the most significant difference between the two budgets. Compared with the war budget of 1894 France augments her ordinary war expenditure by 10,858,000 francs, and diminishes her extraordinary expenditure by 5,000,000 francs. The Germans diminish their extraordinary war budget by 24,000,000 francs, but it still amounts to the enormous sum of 182,000,000 francs, whereas in France it is 45,000,000 francs. What is more important, says M. Roche, the Germans increase the permanent ordinary war expenditure by 65,000,000 francs. By the financial law of March 20, 1893, this was fixed at 535,000,000 francs, but in March it was raised to 600,000,000 francs. Continuing the comparison, M. Roche declares that the effective strength of the army fixed by the German military law is amply provided for. The 2,408 companies of German infantry are maintained at a strength of at least 150 men, whereas the 2,425 companies of French infantry rarely reach the effective of 125 men each declared in the French organic military law to be indispensable. In France, he says, the military law is made subservient to financial necessities, whereas in Germany the military law is paramount, and is enforced regardless of cost.

The more a diamond is cut the brighter it sparkles, and in what seems hard dealing God has no end in view but to perfect his people's graces.—Dr. Guthrie.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Belle Plaine, Iowa, on Friday, evening at 5 o'clock, Nov. 16, 1894, George Edwin Moran, Son of Brother and Sister Edward and Ada Moran.

Little George was 4 years, 3 mo., and 2 days old. His disease was diptheria, which left his system very weak resulting at last in lung trouble of which he died.

I presented to those present the resurrection as the only hope of again seeing our dead, and we spoke words of comfort and advised trust in God's Word of promise at all times. We sigh for the time to come when there shall be no more death and mingle our tears of sympathy during the night of sorrow, that we may rejoice together in the morning.

The Tobacco Habit.

We often wonder how it is that men and women who are strictly honest can cling so tenaciously to their traditional errors, such as the immortality of the soul, and eternal suffering, and going to heaven and hell at death, and coming back in the future day of judgment, and kindred theories that seem so very unreasonable and unscriptural to us; yet, I would far sooner undertake to dispel all this mist and fog, which is a big task, than to undertake to dislodge the filthy monster tradicnal tobacco habit, that is so extravagant and unbecoming, that almost all of its devotees are ashamed of it, and stand self-condemned. We would kindly advise our religious neighbors to take the trouble to trace this immortal-soul theory, this satanic delusion back to its origin and originator, found in the garden of Eden, "Ye shall not surely die," and then be consistent by throwing this deadly poison back into the face of that old inventor of lies, by which invention he murdered our forepatents and most all of their children. And yet, strange to say, this wholesale killing instrument "Ye shall not surely die" is lauded to the skies, and fondly embraced by most of the sick and dying children of Adam's race. Just so prudence is heard modestly pleading that we be consistent and trace back the steps of this filthy highway robber called "tobacco" to its native home in the dark regions of heathendom, and leave it there, or which would be better, throw it to the moles and the bats and turn Zionward, and progress forward, and then come and except, and receive Christ the spotless Lamb of God as the way, the truth, and the life, and wash in the pure waters of regeneration, and have the blood of Christ applied, which cleanseth from all sin.

"Citizenship."

"For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ."—King James V.

"For our citizenship is in heaven etc." R. V.—Philp. iii. 20.

The word translated "conversation" in K. J. V. and "citizenship" in R. V. is in the Greek "Politeuma." The R. V. margin also gives "commonwealth" as a translation.

The word "Politeuma" only occurs once in this form but its meaning can be gathered from other forms of the same word quoted elsewhere as follows:—

"With a great sum obtained I this freedom." K. J. V.

"With a great sum obtained I this citizenship." R. V. Acts xxii. 18.

The Greek word here is "Politeian."

"Being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel." K. J. V.

"Alienated from the commonwealth of Israel." R. V.

"Tees politeias ton Israel." from the commonwealth of the Israel. Eph. ii. 12.

"But his citizens hated him." K. J. V. & R. V.

"Oi de Politai—but the citizens" Greek. Luke xix. 14.

"A citizen of no mean city." K. J. & R. V.

"Ouk asemon poleous." Greek

"Not of a mean city a citizen." Acts xxi. 39.

Politeuma—citizenship.

Politeian—citizenship.

Politelas—commonwealth—Polity. Wilson Dinglott.

Politai—citizens.

Politees—a citizen.

Poleous—a city.

The true meaning seems evident from these quotations.

The word "conversation" of the King James Translators seems unmeaning and unjustifiable—perhaps it was a politic deferring to the prejudices of that "learned fool" (as he was termed by a writer,) King James.

Where Christ brings his cross he brings his presence; and where he is none are desolate, and there is no room for despair. As he knows his own, so he knows how to comfort them, using sometimes the very grief itself, and straining it to a sweetness of peace unattainable by those ignorant of sorrow.—E. B. Browning.

Scientific Appliances in War.

It is interesting to note the important part played by electrical appliances in the war now being waged between China and Japan. The Japanese especially are quick to turn to account any advantage offered by scientific appliances, and in Corea they have materially strengthened their hands by taking possession of the lines and stations of the telegraph service. Their men are trained in construction as well as in actual manipulation, and can be trusted to keep the lines in working order as long as they retain control.

The Nihonko people have taken very kindly to the telegraph since its introduction in 1870. Their first installation of a couple of short lines, about forty miles long altogether, speedily grew into 1,000 miles, and now the wires devoted to the service measure close on 20,000 miles, including several submarine cables of various lengths, one of the longest being that connecting Nipon (the main island) with Tsoshiu, the largest island midway between Japan and Corea, a position which, as may be readily imagined, is just now of the utmost strategetical importance.

So well, indeed, have these clever copyists appropriated and utilized the telegraphic developments of Western civilization that there is now hardly a point on the coast more than a few hours distant from a telegraph office, so that a fleet runner could convey the news of a hostile descent to the adjacent outpost, and a defensive force be called to the threatened region in less time than it would take the Chinamen to determine upon their point of attack.

This was demonstrated very clearly in 1870, when the news of the Satsuma rebellion was brought by a boatman to Kumamoto in one night, and flashed to the capital almost before the insurgents' rear guard had cleared from Kagoshima. The consequence was that the rebel General Saigo was promptly met and snuffed out before he had reached the territory in which his forces might have become dangerous through being augmented by numerous sympathizers. But for the telegraph there would doubtless have been serious trouble, for it would have taken a fortnight for a runner to reach the capital, and the delay would have been all in favor of Saigo.

In the matter of field telegraphy, too, the Japanese are adepts, their portable instruments, etc., being modeled upon apparatus which they have imported from Europe. The posts are made in sections, with spiked bases to stick in the soil, and the wire runs out from reels on light hand-barrows. The Japanese are entirely undisturbed by any considerations as to patent infringement. When the first telephone receiver reached Japan from America it was received with delight and enthusiasm, and within a week or so there were some Edison receivers of native make being experimented upon. The police and fire brigade systems of telephonic alarms and calls now established in Japan are complete in every detail. Many of the Japanese vessels are furnished with the electric light, and it is stated that the manipulation of the projectors is remarkably efficient.

Notice has been given that owing to the outbreak of the war lights on the Formosa coast have been extinguished, and no doubt others, both in Japan and China, will also be put out or false lights substituted to suit the purpose of either. It will therefore be necessary for all steamers navigating those waters to be extremely careful, and a correspondent of a London daily suggests that one of the best precautions is to use the "submarine sentry," as by its aid a vessel going at ten knots can be assured that it has at least twenty fathoms of water under its keel, and warning is given on board if less depth is reached, thus giving ample time for position to be verified. The "submarine sentry" is a recently invented electrical arrangement for giving the warning mentioned.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all money for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel preachined in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

Christ is the whole of man's happiness; the sun to enlighten him; the physician to heal him; the wall of fire to defend him; the pearl to enrich him; the ark to support him, and the rock to sustain him under the heaviest pressure.

The Thanksgiving number of "Babyland," again in charge of its original editors, Mr. and Mrs. Pratt, and in a gay new cover. The November Babyland marks a new era in the career of the only magazine published for the delight of the Baby and the help of the Mother in entertaining and teaching her child. "The House of the Grandmothers" is the tempting title of a tiny serial tale by Mrs. Ella Farman Pratt which will run through the year. We are permitted to tell in advance the secret that there are six grandmothers in the "house" and only one baby. Somewhat in line with the famous "Finger Plays" in recent volumes, there will be a fascinating series of "Marching Plays" for nursery and kindergarten use, with many pictures by L. J. Bridgeman, who illustrated the "Finger Plays." A most curious and amusing series of little drawing lessons have been devised by "Daz" under the title of "The nimble pennies." And Mrs. Clara Doty Bates is writing some delicious "Sequels to Mother Goose," giving this time the newly-discovered adventures of Little Jack Horner. Babyland has been enlarged, but the price remains at 50 cents a year, 5 cents a number, as heretofore. Specimen copy free. Alpha Publishing Company, Boston.

Patrons of the Vandalia and Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh will be glad to know that an arrangement has been made, taking effect November 1st, by which portions of Mileage Tickets will be detached and accepted in payment of excess baggage charges. Commercial travelers and others will find that Agents of the Pennsylvania and Vandalia Lines at all principal stations have been instructed regarding this concession, which will no doubt become immediately popular.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God for the south district in Nebraska will be held, D. V. at the Fairview School House in Furnas Co. commencing Friday evening, Dec. 7th, and continue over Sunday. This meeting has been changed on account of the burden of taking care of the brethren falling almost entirely on one family.

We hope as many preaching brethren as can will be present. A large attendance of those of like faith are also urged, that we may receive encouragement and assist each other as we journey onward to the kingdom.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

To the South at Low Rates via Pennsylvania Lines.

The last of the series of cheap excursions over the Pennsylvania lines to enable land seekers and others to visit Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee have been fixed for Oct. 2, Nov. 6 and Dec. 4, also to points in the above states except Kentucky on October 8th. Tickets will be sold to all applicants at principal ticket offices of the Pennsylvania Lines, and will be good returning twenty days from date of sale.

It is necessary once more to call attention to the "important notice" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 5, 1894. NO. 45.

Original.

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 20.

1. And after the tumult had ceased, Paulos summoned the disciples and having exhorted them and given them a greeting he departed into Makedonia.

2. And passing through those parts and having exhorted them with many a word he went into Greece.

3. And after he had spent three months, a plot against him having occurred instigated by the Joudaians, as he was about to lead up into Suria he determined to return through Makedonia.

4. And Sopatros a Beroian of Purros, and of Thessalonians Aristarchos and Sekoundos and Gaios of Derbe and Timotheos; and Tuchikos and Trophimos Asiatics;

5. These going on before awaited us in Troas;

6. And we sailed out after the days of unleavened from Philippi and within five days came unto them in Troas, where we were away seven days.

7. And on the first (day) of the sabbatic rites (probably "first-fruits day") we having been gathered together to break bread Paulos was discoursing to them, being about to depart on the morrow, and he extended his discourse until midnight.

8. Now there were a considerable number of lamps in the upper room where we were gathered together;

9. And a certain young man by the name of Eutuchos who was sitting on the window-sill, weighed down by deep sleep while Paulos was discoursing over-long, being overcome with the sleep, fell down from the third story and was taken up dead.

10. But Paulos went down and fell upon him and embracing him said, Do not make a tumult: for his soul is in him:

11. And when he had gone up and broken the bread and tasted and held converse considerably until dawn, in this wise he departed.

12. And they led the boy alive and were comforted without measure.

13. And we going on before to the boat were conducted up to Assos intending to take up Paulos from there. For in this wise had it been arranged, he intending to go afoot.

14. And when he had joined us at Assos taking him up we came to Mitulene;

15. And sailing away from there, on the following day we arrived by a straight course at Chios, and on the next we turned aside to Samos, and remaining in Trogulion the following day, we came to Miletus.

16. For Paulos had decided to sail by Ephesos that it might not occur to him to spend time (lit. wear away) in Asia, for he was hastening if it might be possible that the day of Pentekoste should be spent by him in Hierousalem.

17. And sending from Miletos to Ephesos he summoned the elders of the church.

18. And when they had come unto him he said unto them: Ye know well from the first day I came into Asia how I have been engaged all the time in your midst,

19. Serving the Lord as a bondservant with all humility and tears and the trials that encountered me in the plots of the Joudaians:

20. That I have withheld nothing of the things to your advantage in declaring to you and teaching you in public and from house to house,

21. Going through the testimony both to Joudaians and Greeks of the repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesous Christ.

22. And now, lo, I am going my way bound in the spirit to Hierousalem not knowing the things that will encounter me therein;

23. Only that the Sanctified Spirit in every city going through its testimony is saying to me that bonds and tribulations await me.

24. But I account my soul of no value to myself so that I may finish my course and the diaconship which I have received from the Lord Jesous, to go through the testimony of the gospel of the grace of God.

25. And now lo, I know that ye all will never again see my face, ye among whom I have passed through heralding the kingdom.

26. Wherefore I am testifying to you today that I am clean of the blood of all.

27. For I have not withheld declaring unto you the whole counsel of God.

28. Give heed then to yourselves and to all the flock in which the Sanctified Spirit hath placed you as overseers, to shepherd the Church of God which he hath acquired through his own blood. ("the" and "his own" have as their antecedent here "the Sanctified Spirit" which of course makes "the sanctified Spirit" a cognomen of "Jesous.")

29. I myself know that there will enter in among you after my departure burdensome wolves not sparing of the flock.

30. And of yourselves there will arise men of influence talking perverted things to draw away disciples after them.

31. Therefore be wakeful and remember that for three years night and day I did not cease fostering each one of you with tears.

32. And now I am committing you to God and the Word of his grace, who is able to build you up and give you the inheritance among all those who have been sanctified.

33. I have coveted no one's silver or gold or fine apparel.

34. Ye yourselves know that these hands have served my own needs and those that were with me.

35. I have shown you in every way that it behooveth us toiling in this wise to intervene in behalf of the weak and to remember the words of the Lord Jesous how that he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

36. And having said this, kneeling he offered votive-prayer with them all.

37. And then there occurred a great deal of lamentation on the part of all them; and falling upon Paulos' neck they embraced him,

38. Being especially woe-begone at the word which he had spoken that they were destined never more to behold his face. However they sent him forward to the boat.

"Soul" here translated "life" R. V. It was his soul that he considered of no account, notice.
The "ministry" too that he received from the Lord Jesous he calls "deaconship" translated "ministry" R. V.
"To go through the testimony" instead of merely "to testify" R. V. The trouble with "ministers" now-a-days is that they never "get through" anywhere. It seems there is such a thing as "going through" the necessary testimony in a very short time.
"Heralding" instead of "preaching" R. V.
"Acquired" instead of "purchased" R. V.
"Fostering" instead of "to admonish" R. V.
"Fine apparel" instead of "apparel" R. V.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Have You Seen the Signs?

Will Bro. W. H. Wilson please answer this question in THE RESTITUTION: Are the prophecies of Christ to his apostles in regard to the signs of his coming so literally and completely fulfilled, that we may look for his coming for his saints at any time?

MRS. R. J. HILL.

To the above question I can without the least hesitation answer, Yes. A multiplicity of signs from entirely different lines are emphatic in proclaiming, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!" Time and space forbid their exposition at this time, and so will briefly call attention to the prophecy as found in the fifth chapter of James, "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are motheaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, the judge standeth before the door."

This prophecy is addressed to the capitalists who have grown immensely rich through foul dealing practiced upon their employees. They have "kept back by fraud," that which is their just due. This prophesy relates solely to the "last days," as you may learn from the phrases: "Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days." "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh," "behold, the Judge standeth before the door." That is, when this prophesy is fulfilled, we may know of a truth that we are in "the last days," when in fact "the Judge standeth at the door."

The present irrepressible conflict between labor and capital is an indisputable evidence of the literal fulfilment of this prophecy. Dire distress and poverty, yea, even starvation stalks abroad in a land where its granaries and storehouses overflow with rich and abundant harvests. The just "hire of the laborers," have been so reduced or "kept back by fraud," to an extent that it is perfectly unconscionable. The "wolf" has "lodged at the door, and has eaten the very vitals of its victims, while their cries for bread rend the very heavens, and the cries of them which have reaped (labored) are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth."

Think of thousands of homes in and about a city like Chicago, hasten to depend on charity for something to eat. Husbands grow desperate and crazed because they have neither money or food to supply their wants. Men have even snatched food from each other like hungry dogs on the street. For self-protection these poor people who have been crushed by rich capitalists have organized, and formed strikes; then the police, state troops and United States soldiers are hurled against them, and used to protect the property of their oppressors.

A bitter wail reads the heavens all over the civilized world, and their cries against the oppressor will not be in vain, because it has "entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth," and he says, "ye have heaped treasure together for the last days." And they are advised to "weep and howl," when you shall contemplate the miseries that shall come upon you; "your gold and silver is cankered," that you have wrung from the life blood of your "laborers," which "you kept back by fraud," "and the rust (signifying stored up and kept out of use) of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire."

It seems to me that the poor never were in such distress as they are today, hundreds of thousands of people are daily walking the streets piteously pleading for work to earn food and clothing for themselves and families. A man stopped me on the street a few days ago, and said: "Boss won't you give an old man a few pennies to buy a loaf of bread, I am so hungry, yes, I am hungry." Last winter hundreds of people crowded into the city hall on cold nights, and slept on the cold stone floors, with nothing to cover them, and many with empty stomachs. Another cold winter is approaching, may God pity the poor, many of them made so by the heartless oppression of the rich, "who have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton."

Now, Sister Hill, this prophecy of James is being literally fulfilled today. The bitter wail of the poor defrauded "laborer" from all over the civilized world pierces the ears of the "Lord of Sabaoth," and when this should occur James says: "Behold, the judge standeth before the door," and is about to enter.

The "brethren" are not to enter into these strikes, turmoils, and strife, but are advised to "be patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh," just at this very time. They are "the last days" for which the rich have "heaped" together very undesirable "treasure."

Right at this period of time we may daily, nay hourly expect the angelic reapers to be sent forth to gather in the elect," and none will be classed with the "elect" unless in the first place they are "overcomers," and "consecrators." We must positively overcome self, and every evil habit and passion, and come out of and forsake every unclean association, whether political or otherwise. A wearer of spotless white raiment cannot engage in unclean work, or associate with that which is unclean without soiling his garments. It is a serious thing to soil garments made white in the blood of the Lamb. We could not expect to be ushered into the presence of the King wearing soiled garments. They must have neither "spot nor wrinkle."

Take for example the dominant political parties of today, they are dirty and corrupt from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot. There is scarcely a vice but what is practiced among them from theft to murder, themselves bearing the testimony. Both of them have sold themselves to the liquor traffic for money and power; and when elected to office, legalize and protect the infernal traffic. In this country alone it is said that 200,000 people fill drunkard's graves sent there by a traffic legalized and fostered by these political associations. Think of it, annually murdering 200,000 people for money and power. Can a wearer of clean white robes washed in the blood of the Lamb, be a member of such an association which legalizes and protects a trade which not only fills annually 200,000 new graves but robs them of the life to come, without having their robes soiled with the blood of these victims? I for one say please excuse me. I simply mention this as a way in which clean robes may be soiled, and as we have already seen from the prophecy of James that we are on the verge of the coming of the Lord, so great care should be taken to have clean garments, for they that walk with him, shall "walk in white."

We have fallen upon serious and momentous times. Oh, how earnest we should be in our proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom that sinners may be warned. And let each one watch him or herself that we may be prepared to hail with joy the coming King.

W. H. WILSON.

Editor Restitution:

Inclosed please find a letter from Bro. G. A. Stella of Pomona, Cal. This letter was sent to my address at Scholls Ferry to be read in our conference; but right after I had written and sent out the notice of our conference, I came to California to spend the winter and it may be longer, so this letter failed to reach its destination. As it was forwarded to me, I will send it to THE RESTITUTION. I hope you will print it because it will cheer the brethren at home. Yours in hope.

ALMIRA BROOKS.

Brothers and Sisters in Conference assembled at Scholls Ferry Greeting:

Let the guidance for the love of God be the shining mark, and your thoughts and aims be on the work to be done. Lay aside controversies on theories and work earnestly for the Master. Jesus died for us that our sins might be forgiven and it behooves us to apply our might and means that we may have the right to enter into that rest. We can do no better than to praise the Lord and give thanks for the blessings bestowed upon us, not that we should be thankful in time of plenty only, but when dark clouds overshadow our path and when all seems sorrow and sadness. There is a silver lining to the darkest cloud when we look to and trust in him who is mighty to save. As I read the reports of the work that has been done in various places by the ones in the field it gives me joy to know that the good news is spreading. Brothers and Sisters, are we working earnestly? let us not falter by the wayside, but let us be ever ready and watching for the soon coming of our dear Savior.

We would dearly love to be with you in this meeting, but the distance is too great. Pray for us brethren that we may grow in grace and knowledge and tell to others the good news.

May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all is our prayer. Awaiting our Master I am yours truly.

A. O. STELLA.

Dear Restitution:

Inclosed you will find $2.00 and please credit it to us. Did not send before as we contemplated moving to California to call and so, waited.

We came overland, that is, we came with a team, that we could see the country better. We are glad that we did, for we know where we would like to make our home.

When we came through Rogue River Valley we thought Myrtle Creek a very nice place, but the best part of the valley we did not like. Ashland, Or., is a nice place, but the farming land around is not large. It is a railroad town. We started for Redding, Cal. but there we found the farming land not good, and the town seemed to be kept up by the mines close by, and we heard a man say that they were about played out. From here we came on to Cotton Wood, here we found a small town with three saw mills and poor land all around, so we thought it no place for us. Red Bluff the next town is a little better but we did not like the soil, could not raise anything without irrigation. From here we went to Lake Co. Found the soil better, but did not like to settle so far from the R. R. The farmers say in there that they do not want a railroad, because then they would have to compete with the rest of the world. Now they get good prices from those that have come in.

We started next for Calistoga about forty five miles from Lakeport, in Lake Co. It is in Napa Co. We liked it around there very well, did think of buying, but finally concluded to go on to Napa City. Liked the place well. It is one of the oldest towns in California. We bought a small place of ten acres two and one-half miles from Napa, in a little town called Coombs Ville.

Here we will welcome any of the brethren or former friends who would visit us.

We intend to stay if we like the country. We did not sell our home in Oregon and will not until we know whether we like it well enough to make it our home. I did not know that Cal. had so much waste land as it has, until we came over it in this way, although I had been over it on the cars before. One cannot tell by travelling that way. But this is all you will have room for, so I will say no more.

Hoping to meet all the brethren and sisters in "The good by and by" I remain as ever your sister in Christ.

ALMIRA BROOKS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Brother J. T. Prime of Edison, Neb. was with us and held meetings from Oct. 30th to Nov. 11, inclusive, and hoping that an account of the meeting will encourage and interest other lovers of Truth, I send it to THE RESTITUTION.

We had a fair attendance all the time and those who came seemed interested in the gospel as it was preached by Bro. Prime in all its purity and beauty.

Those of us who were already in the faith were refreshed and strengthened by hearing the Gospel Message; and a few others were convinced of the error of their way and turned unto the Lord. We rejoice to know that the gospel still has power, and that there are a few who are willing to forsake all and follow their Master.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

RENA M. GORDON.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a Christmas or New Year's gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

A crowd is not company and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no love.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the first resurrection of the dead; the immortality and reign of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel; repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisite to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final entrance into the kingdom.

To Our Patrons.

We wish you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, send the paper to all new names received before Jan. 1, 1895, till Jan. 1, 1896 for $1.50. Besides this we will send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Locomotives to Lay Pipes.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 15.—A great engineering scheme made a start toward success here today. The plan is to lay an eight-inch iron pipe under the Detroit River to bring natural gas from Canada to this city. On the American side is a trench running down to the river. This was lined with a wooden trough lubricated with soft soap. In the trough lay the main. At the river end of the main was a conical plug, designed to keep the water out and serve as a sort of plowshare for turning aside the soft mud of the river bottom for the main as it is hauled across. Attached to the end of the cone was the great steel cable which had been strung across the bottom of the river. On the opposite side of the river was a huge snatch block through which ran the other end of the cable, and was then attached to three locomotives. By means of tug whistles the signal for the locomotives to start was made. It took but a moment to hide 400 feet of it in the river. This afternoon a second section of 500 feet was attached and the engines again started, but they had not gone far before they stuck. Another one was then brought into play and the four moved along nicely. The weight of the pipe will be 150 tons or about twice the weight of the average locomotive.

The thought that we may ourselves be one day under the window should make us careful when we are throwing out our dirty water.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Justification by Faith. No. 10.

Some three months since a gentleman stood on the side walk in front of our place of worship one Sunday evening, and handed eight page tracts to those entering, entitled, "Do you know?" and comprised some 25 questions beginning in that way. One of the paragraphs on the 5th page, was as follows: "Do you know that Christ is the propitiation [satisfaction] for our sins, and not for ours [the church's sins] only, but also for the sins of the whole world? 1 John ii. 2."

The question preceding the above was as follows: "Do you know that our Lord Jesus paid the great price for all, to secure for all a FULL OPPORTUNITY to gain everlasting life by faith and obedience? 1 Tim. ii. 6; Act iii. 22, 23."

Our answer to the author is, "No; we know nothing of the kind; do you? If you do it would be kind of you to tell us how you know it. If it be knowable we want to know it." The writer no doubt thinks he knows it, for he has appended two references to prove it: they are taken as proof by him and offered as such to us. As we are enjoined to "prove all things," these statements must be proved; and if these Scriptures do not prove the doctrine just quoted, we will let go of the doctrine, and hold fast to the Scriptures. Let us see about this full opportunity. We are referred to 1 Tim. ii. 6. It says in verse five, "For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." We find nothing about a full opportunity here, although it must be admitted that the apostle, equipped as he was by the spirit to bear the name of the Lord before the Gentiles, and kings and the children of Israel, was far more competent to speak of it, if true, than the author of this tract.

Evidently our author has laid out work for Paul which the great commission did not include. It said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned." We do not believe the Lord Jesus would commission the eleven to go to the world with the message of life from the dead to inherit the kingdom, on condition of faith and baptism, and announce that unbelievers should be condemned; and then commission Paul to say that all who failed of an opportunity to gain everlasting life during their first mortal existence, should have a second mortal existence for that purpose. The writing of Paul abundantly proves that his commission, to all intents and purposes, was the same as that of the rest.

It is difficult to conceive for whose benefit such an announcement could be made. Suppose ten thousand millions of the human race never heard the gospel proper while living, and it were the Lord's purpose to raise them and for them an opportunity, they could not learn of it while dead, and would certainly know it if raised.

We believe it impossible to show any warrant for preaching any such doctrine, because it does not address and produce action suggested in previous conviction, and they would it the would. The human conception is first embraced, and then some Scripture is made to conform to it.

We take it that 1 Tim. ii. 6; and Acts iii. 22, 23 are the salutary of the Lord's Hope Scripture, and Hebrews just pen- ed for direction to one of them here. As these we call attention to the above and that our Lord became the price for all. Of course if that be true all belong to him, and in due time all people wherever he finds it that we must forget, that in order to such a transaction as here represented, three parties are involved. Taking mankind as one of the parties, we ask, OF WHOM were we purchased? TO WHOM did Christ pay the price for us? Who owned us, before Christ purchased us? Dare the so-called, but miscalled "Larger Hope" literal enough to furnish sensible answers to these questions? If it does we have never seen them.

Bear in mind, the modern idea presents to us a legal transaction and we have a right to know the parties to it. Did Jesus purchase all mankind of the God of this world? If he did he certainly by the transaction recognized the legal possession of the seller, and we would suppose that legal possession would make it optional with him whether to sell or not. We presume it will not be claimed that Jesus deposed of himself to the God of this world as an equivalent for the world of mankind.

It should be remembered that Jesus in prayer to his Father in John xvii. 6, says, "I have manifested thy name unto the men thou hast given me OUT of the world, thine they were, and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy word." How does this agree with the claim that Jesus paid the great price for all? If he paid the price for all, would not all belong to him? If they were all his by purchase how could it be given a select few OUT of the world? Might not his announcement that he laid down his life for the sheep (John x. 15) help us out here?

If, as claimed, Christ is the satisfaction for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world, then of a certainty salvation is universal; and it is ridiculous to talk about a full opportunity to gain everlasting life by faith and obedience; they need no faith and obedience, if Christ is the satisfaction for their sins.

We hope our readers will canvass this matter thoroughly. If Christ is the SATISFACTION for the sins of the whole world, the most debased specimens of humanity are on an equal footing with the most devout believer of the gospel of the kingdom; and repentance, baptism and a godly life are a farce. A just God could exact nothing more if the sins of the whole world have been satisfied for.

It is simply amazing to us that men who believe the covenants of promise can accept such a weak theory. Why do they not trace it back to its source? Do they not know that justification by faith is as wide as the poles apart from substitution that either one or the other must be false? The man who has done most to propagate this abominable doctrine also talks of the 1900 years, nearly, since Christ as the gospel age, just as do all the apostate churches, and claims that only those who have believed since then will reign with Christ; even Abraham who believed the gospel and was justified by believing it—the copartner with Christ and Father of the faithful, is relegated to a back seat with all the prophets and ancient worthies, and he has the effrontery to say that "the doctrine of election is for this age, and the doctrine of free grace is for the world in general, in the millennial age: and to this is added his denial that the body of Christ was ever raised to life, but that he assumed a body occasionally, that, together with his clothing, was created for the occasion to make the disciples believe he was really alive (he himself being invisible to mortal eyes) and then dissolved again. Think of him as commanding ARMIES to establish their rule, after seeing them be worth three days and three nights in the heart of the earth! In view of what Paul says, "if Christ be not risen, that he was buried, that he rose again the third day and was seen by so many," (1 Cor. xv. 3, 4) that "Christ hath died, and rose, and revived," is there any room to put a word under these circumstances. Does it not demand that Adam be raised to give Christ his Queen? Believe me, Dr. Russell is not the person to look to for comfort in the person of the precious faith in that wonderful end there it is exalted the gem of world's justify. Of course every case with had to be worth "ransom," "bought," "redeemed" and the like? We answer that they are not used in a legal sense is proven by the fact that no one can tell who we were ransomed from, or redeemed from, or bought off; and therefore they are used in a practical, not a legal sense,—are employed because the result of his work resembles what these words mean. This will appear more clear as we exhibit the work itself.

Saved by Law or Gospel - Which? No. 10

We started our investigation of this important question at Rom. i. 16, where it speaks says the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes. Before man cannot be saved unless he believes, and he must be justified, that is, have pardon given, pardoned, or else go back to dust and remain dead, for as we will find under these circumstances Divine justice cannot set Adam or any other person free without a ransom in full, that is, without his offence if he could since that is removed? Believe me. He cannot be set at liberty in the person of Adam's seed and from that second "in the person of faith in the gospel. To illustrate what we are trying to teach, let us suppose a child is commanded to do something. It refused and is chipped into obedience. Is the child morally improved by the treatment? Would he not be as disobedient as ever, only for fear of the rod? The whipping does not change the mind or disposition of the child morally he is no better although he obey to the letter. Let the parents of that child take it upon the knee and explain how wrong disobedience is, and how it grieved them to see their darling act so badly, and show him the dreadful result of disobedience at last, and big tears will fill the eyes, the resolve to be obedient is made, and the child's heart is changed the child is converted, and as the result is eager to know what will please his parents. That is now and ever has been. God's way of converting people,—that is, changing them morally. "Being justified freely by his favor." "By grace (favor) ye are saved through faith." "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." This is the rock upon which we stand. We are saved by gospel, then, not by law.

All truth is in harmony, and it follows that the gospel which is not able to save without law, is not the gospel of Christ,—which is all powerful to save all who believe. We now propose to compare the gospel of Sabbatarians with the gospel of Christ. We will agree on every point possible before we take issue. Sabbatarians have renounced the pagan notion of inherent immortality. The wonder is that this wonderful key does not open for them the whole week. It is not the fault of the key. There is not an essential truth in the Book of God that this Key will not unlock if properly used. Of course it has to be turned or lifted or it will unlock nothing. If they see that the GIFT of God is eternal life, is it not strange that they try to earn it or deserve it, by gold or silver or precious stones, or houses or lands or anything else—themselves even? Why a gift is a gift! It is nothing else; a voluntary transfer from one to another without an equivalent, a benefaction. There is no need of anything but gospel to save. "He that believeth" is the way it reads. The Sabbatarians can not be so low down that they need law besides gospel to save them.

It takes a smattering of the gospel and a law of commandments to form a new sect: but there was a swarm of sects—too many of them before 1846, and there was no need of another. It was several months after they were married before the Whites commenced keeping the seventh day although in their ecstasy, zealous Christians, preaching, praying, and exhorting everywhere, and yet, their doctrines being true, as Sunday Keepers they had the mark of the beast, and surely needed converting if any one did. We challenge any one to show in all their volumes where they were ever converted over again. Christians, mark you, but carrying about that damning mark. How did they get rid of it, by repentance, belief of the gospel and baptism? No! they quit Sunday keeping.

But what is the gospel of Christ? It is God's Good Message concerning his coming kingdom and life to inherit it delivered by Christ,—the kingdom to be established on the land pledged to Abraham and his seed, the kingdom of Israel restored under David's Great Son. In the Kingdom the saints are to reign with him in, over the twelve tribes of Israel and all the nations of the earth, and as the means of filling the earth with the glory of God.

The Sabbatarians are looking for the speedy coming of the Lord the second time. Is that good news? That all depends upon what he is coming for. No one is called to answer that question who does not know the object of his coming. We enquired of the minister he once mentioned what he was coming for, and we understood him to say he was coming to immortalize 144,000. Sabbatarians, mortalize 144,000 of who is now common unity, take them off to heaven or some other sphere for a thousand years while all the rest of the human family are destroyed and the earth's surface destroyed by fire. When again fitted up for them the 144,000 return to earth and reign [?] here forever; every one of them kings and priests and no subjects! We asked him if the coming of the Lord for that purpose was good news? He replied, hesitatingly, that it was good news for the 144,000. Well it gives each one over 1300 square miles of territory plenty of room no doubt. But we told the gentleman the trouble about his kingdom was that God had never promised it, and that if God fulfills what he has promised, the Sabbatarian hope would never be realized—they were practically without hope, and therefore without God.

How can one who believes the gospel of the kingdom promised, try to graft into it an extinct, or obsolete law? Oh, what a human bubble this is. In Romans iii. 28 we learn that God has a Fixed Plan and works to it. It is called an Eternal Purpose,—there is nothing haphazard about it. The plan of salvation is a plan, and the Great God never changed it in the year 1844, nor 1846, or any other time. Sabbatarians have not been called according to that purpose, but according to a scheme of their own.

Bible Times and Seasons. No. 4.

Below we subjoin more extracts from Prof. Dimbleby's works "New Era," and "All Past Time."

"When was the Beginning of Gen. i. 1? Was it when the material substance of the heaven and earth was first formed? or was it not at a subsequent period, even at that time when "the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep, and the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters? In this there was direct relation to man, for if appertains to the existing constitution of things in, upon, and concerning the earth on which God located him. "God said, Let there be light; and there was light. And God saw the light that it was good. And God divided the light from the darkness. And God called the light day, and the darkness he called night, and the evening and the morning were the first day." This being so, darkness and light were manifested upon earth for the first time on what we call Sunday. On the fourth day we learn that "The sun and moon were SET in the firmament for signs and seasons, for days and years," in the positions we find them, establishing momentous evidences of the beginning of the present motions of the earth and the moon."

"Thus the date of creation is an unmistakable astronomical fact, that Sunday the first of the first month of the year B. A. M., was the first day of the rotation of the earth. This is proved by the five separate and united cycles, each and all. The Solar, Lunar, Eclipse, Transit and Meteoric; and before creation or relubrication, the earth had no seasons. Our improved telescopes find no evidence of several other planets having seasons, or alternate day and night, as we have shown." "We find the earth revolving on its axis in twenty-four hours, which is called a day; but we have no reason for thinking that this has been the case before creation. On the contrary, we have reason for believing that, prior to creation the earth only turned once upon its axis in the course of a year. First, because we now find that the revolution of a planetary body upon its axis is naturally and commonly but once during its passage round its primary and secondary, because we are told that on first twenty-four hours, comprising the evening and the morning, or from sunset to sunset was the first day. . . If all bodies had an axial revolution shorter than the period in which they accomplish their journey round their primaries, the case would be different. But now that our telescopes are greatly improved and the science of astronomy is advanced, we find that the old opinion and it was only an opinion, and not an ascertained fact—has no support. We have, perhaps, no closer observer of the heavens than Schiaparelli, of Milan, and according to his published observations, the rotation of the planet Mercury on its axis in twenty-four hours is a myth, the period being eighty-eight of our days, which is almost identical with the time of its revolution round the sun. Schiaparelli also declares that Venus, which is so near the size of the earth, rotates in 225 days, the period of its annual revolution. We know this is the case with the moon, and it is said that observation also shows that it is the same with the four observable satellites of Jupiter, owing to the periodical diminution of their brightness. We have our conclusions upon what we really know, and so far as the evidence goes, there is no analogy in respect to the other planets for showing that a diurnal rotation is common or natural. On the contrary, it seems to be exceptional, and therefore we have no warrant to believe that Sunday, with which the Antediluvian 5-fair Lunar Cycle begins, was not the first day. All Past Time p. 3.

It is the astronomical character of the first day which marks it as a natural day of twenty-four hours, that forbids us to imagine that the seven days of creation-week were long periods of time. Its character and its certainty are proclaimed by the laws of the universe. The same is declared from the character of the fourth day. We know, also, that historically and practically the seventh day was one of twenty-four hours. No solar cycle can work or exist without weeks of seven days. To lengthen the days given us in the first chapter of Genesis, the year would have to be lengthened. To remove them, the Solar and Lunar years would be shortened seven days, and the earth and the moon would have to stand still. More than this, every eclipse would be delayed seven days. In a word, these seven natural days are seven days of motion scored by the earth and the moon." All Past Time," p. 3.

(Concluded next week.)

"There is a store of energy somewhere, surely the Bible first reveals God as the Eternal "All"—Power. He is the source "out of which" are all things and "in him all things consist." He is eternal power,—not "blind force" but force associated with intelligence and beneficence. He it is who has given energy and motion to created things, and their duration depends solely upon his will."

ARNOTT says the presence of the poor is like the necessity of labor, a blessing to mankind, it provides a field for the exercise of affections which are necessary for the perfection of human character. When material acquisitions are great, and benevolent efforts small, the moral health cannot be maintained: when much flows in and none is permitted to flow out, wealth becomes a stagnant pool, endangering the lives of those who live on its brink. The slave which now opens to pour a stream on the needy sweetens all the store."

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

"No view of Christianity which does not make it supreme is any honor to its author; and to fail to regard it thus is to fail to appreciate the wisdom and love and justice of God."

"STRENGTH of character consists of two things—power of will, and power of self restraint. It requires two things for its existence,—strong feelings, and a strong command over them. A man who bears all before him and before whose fury the household quakes, is thought to be strong, but in truth he is weak. It is his passions that are strong, and being mastered by them he is weak. You must measure the strength of a man by the power of the feelings he subdues, not by the power of those that subdue him. Hence come sure is the highest result of strength."

IT seems to a publisher that the very meanest thing one he has trusted can do, is to quietly leave his residence, leaving no address behind, and after some weeks are gone, let the Post Master give notice to stop his paper as it is not taken out, reason being "left town, present address unknown." We have had a few such, and are glad to say that only occasionally one is so lost to honor as to act so. We have a case in hand now where a brother wrote only last spring, he knew he was far behind, (since Jan. 1886) but if we would trust him till this fall he would pay all up. We trusted him and now his whereabouts are "unknown." How would you like it?

Jerusalem's Prosperity.

The British Consul at Jerusalem, in his latest report gives some interesting details respecting the present condition of the Holy City. It appears that buildings of various kinds continue to be erected in the vicinity, and that the city is far outgrowing its former limits. On the western side, houses have been increased so rapidly the last few years that quite a large suburb has arisen where formerly there were fields and vineyards.

Every available piece of land is now being bought by private persons, or by benevolent societies and missions, and already the name of "Modern Jerusalem" has been given to this new quarter. Last year the first public garden was completed outside of the Jaffa Gate, and the trade is generally increasing, especially that in Jaffa oranges, olive wood work (now an important local industry) and olive oil. The export of colocynth declined in consequence of a tithe levied on it by the authorities. It is gathered by Arabs in the neighborhood of Ginza where it grows wild.

An interesting enterprise which has recently been commenced, is the collection of bitumen which rises to the surface and floats about on the Dead Sea. Two sailing boats were taken by train from Jaffa to Jerusalem, and then conveyed on carts to the Jordan, where they were floated down the river to the Dead Sea and are there engaged in picking up the bitumen, which is in much request in Europe. The Consul thinks it would be advantageous to trade with the inland districts, if a steam launch and several lighters were placed on the Dead Sea to ferry across the produce of Moab, which is a country rich in cereals, fruit and cattle. At present it is conveyed by caravans round the north or south end of the Dead Sea, entailing a journey from four to five days. Kerak, the chief town of Moab, is now garrisoned with Ottoman troops, and authority is established there, so that if rapid communication were established, the whole produce of Moab would find its way to Jerusalem and the coast.—London Times.

The Best Things.

"Pleasure is not all, nor the only things
In people's lives and things that are best worth having, never grow old."
Pleasure come in bird-hood's sunny
One her wings with beauty gilded,
Showering sweets of life on children,
Wreaths the oldest sorrow-stricken,
"Come with me," she ever pleading,
"Page of joy in my hand:
I the best of all gifts offer you,
Join, oh join me, merry band."

Old fond Pleasure, I'll not trust you
Your wild heart is not all true
Vain you
65
Not Bought
Never reach the Heed
Lips
Lured Smile
Than Soothing
Blood with your rich wine is Death
Surely there is something better
That may not be like
In my purpose, strong endeavor
Aided God and working plan
"Best is Heaven while she lives in."
Wisdom's jewels perish not,
Virtue's treasures all are
Toil for God is never forgot.

If we seek what's worth the having,
God will still increase our store:
Hold our hearts while open and trending,
Give us candles that are sure.
Crown and palm in future ages,
Wait for him who battles long.
"He who to the end
Taketh part in victor's song.

Faith and Wisdom, Truth and Virtue
Things like these grow never old;
Home's pure joys are living well-spring,
Friendship's truth is memory's gold.
Cultured mind gives lasting favor,
Peace of God, no darkness know,
Seed of Kindness can by sociable
Fairies bloom and beauty show.

The Kingdom is Future.

The kingdom of God is the great theme on which our Lord and his apostles constantly preached, Matt. ix. 35; xxiv. 14. Therefore, to have unscriptural ideas of that kingdom is to miss the meaning of their preaching. Many say that the kingdom is the church as now existing on earth. For example, Prof. A. A. Hodge, D. D., speaking of "entering the kingdom" and of "the keys of the kingdom," says, "In this latter sense the phrase 'kingdom of God,' or 'of heaven,' is synonymous with the word 'church.'"—Outlines of Theology, 1878, p. 430. This assertion of Hodge voices the sentiments of thousands who would "pervert" the gospel of the kingdom. But the truth is that the kingdom of which the gospel speaks is future, as abundantly proved by the following fourteen reasons.

1. It is not the church but the reward of the church. "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Lu. xii. 32.

2. The kingdom, as well as the crown of life, is a blessing which the Lord "hath promised" (not hath given) to them that love him. Jas. i. 12; ii. 5.

3. The church, the little flock, is told to seek and to pray for the kingdom,—"Seek ye the kingdom of God;" "Thy kingdom come." Lu. xii. 31; Matt. vi. 10.

4. "Flesh and blood," that is, man in his present mortal state, "cannot inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. xv. 50.

4. To those highly gifted ones who were already in the church Paul and Barnabas said, including themselves, "We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." Ac. xiv. 22. Plainly enough the church must pass "through" the tribulation (or "afflictions," Diaglott) of this life before she can enter the kingdom. Now we suffer; then we shall reign 2 Tim. ii. 12.

6. Entrance into the kingdom is promised the church as an event that "shall be," not that has been. 2 Pet i. 11.

7. When eating the last supper our Lord clearly taught that the kingdom was then future, saying, "I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come." Lu. xxii. 18.

8. Not before his second coming and the judgment will the church "inherit the kingdom." Matt. xxv. 31, 34.

9. "His appearing and his kingdom" are joined together; not put sixteen centuries asunder. 2 Tim. iv. 1. "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Mark x. 9.

10. The coming and kingdom of Christ must be simultaneous because the very same signs are given us to show that both events are "nigh at hand." Lu. xxi. 27, 31.

11. Not until the Noblenman's return from the far country does he give his servants the "authority" to reign and "possess the kingdom." Lu. xix. 12 to 19; Dan. vii. 22.

12. It is not on entering the [illegible] but at the resurrection, that they begin to "reign with Christ." Rev. xx. 4.

13. The kingdom will be set up upon the destruction of the [illegible] the image in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, i. e., on its feet and toes of iron and clay. These divisions were not developed until the fourth century after the first advent, and they will be torn at the second advent. Dan. ii. 31, 35, 44; Rev. xvii. 12, 13, 14.

14. The throne of David and seat of Canaan are covenanted to Christ as the irradiating center of his world-wide and eternal kingdom. Lu. i. 32; Gen. xiii. 15; Gal. iii. 16; Zech. ix. 10. Therefore, while now on the Father's throne, he speaks of ANOTHER his own throne—on which he will take his seat when he "cometh in his glory" to set up the kingdom and receive the church into it as "joint-heirs with Christ." Rev iii. 21; Matt. xxv. 31; 1 Cor. viii. 17.

FAULTS.

Who is there among us that is without fault? We all have them and should try to overcome them, but there are so many who try to correct every one's faults but their own, and if any one should chance to call their attention to their own shortcomings they are highly offended.

Before you discuss the shortcomings of others, look into your own heart and see if you are without fault. Do you remember an instance where Jesus said, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone?" If people never discussed the infirmities of others until they could truly say they were without fault in the sight of God, I am sure no one would suffer from disagreeable things being said of them. If your friend has a disagreeable fault does it help matters for you to tell some one and discuss it with scorn when no doubt you have a number as bad as his. If any thing must be said, say it to him in a kind, friendly way, and perhaps you may help him to overcome it. It is a grand thing to be able to overcome our faults and a grand reward is offered to the overcomer. Some of us have faults and habits which are very hard to overcome, but, remember, the reward is only promised to the overcomer. Our Savior said, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." It will be a grand thing to sit with Christ in his throne.

Let us all overcome our faults, and help our brother to overcome his but not by discussing them with some gossip-loving neighbor, but by kind exhortation.

Dear ones, take these lines for what they are worth. May we all be able to overcome our faults is the prayer of a "Sister" striving for the kingdom.

Dear Restitution:

As we are always glad to read in your pages of the success attending the preaching of the Word of Life I will give a short account of what has been done here in Plattsburgh the last two weeks.

On the 15th of November Brother and Sister Woodward commenced a series of meetings at Baker Union Church, with a good attendance which was kept up with an ever increasing interest till the 29th. Bro. and Sister Woodward are noble defenders of the faith once delivered to the saints, and withal such earnest workers for the Master. They are strong in their position having the Blessed Word of God the Sword of the Spirit as their trusty weapon wherewith to fight the battles of the Lord against the evil that is in the world, and the traditions of men in the church, but they are so careful to stand by the Bible that even the enemies of the truth can neither resist or gainsay. They have helped us here very much. We have been hiding what little light we had by meeting from house to house for breaking of bread. But one result of their coming is that we will meet at the church hereafter. Another result is two precious ones were led to give themselves first to the Lord and then to his people according to his Word. On Friday, the 30th, Brother W. H. Elton, son of our late Brother Thos. Elton, and Sister Mattie, youngest daughter of our Brother Daniel Elton were baptized into the precious name, henceforth to walk in meekness of Eve, after which we met at the home of D. Moyer, and gave them the right hand of fellowship. What tears of joy were shed over these trophies of redeeming love. Thus ended two weeks of earnest, loving work for the Master. Others are almost persuaded and God in his Word declares that my Word shall not return unto me void. Our brother and sister have given their testimony for the dear Master, which will witness against us at his appearing if it is not believed and practiced by us. Many were anxious to have our Brother and Sister stay longer, but they had an appointment in Indiana and were obliged to leave us. May the good Lord be with them is our earnest prayer.

THOS. MEMBREW.

Editor Restitution:

I have not been idle. No! No! I have said but little in the last twelve months, but still I have been at work in my Master's cause, and my labor has not been in vain, for some have become obedient to the faith. On the 17th of January last I immersed one obedient one into the all saving name of Jesus Christ, and since then I have immersed 13 more. So, in the last eleven months there has been 14 buried in baptism.

Please say through THE RESTITUTION that my regular appointments are as follows in each month. The 2nd Sunday in each month, part of the time at Sciercleville and part of the time at the Plummer's school house. The 3rd Sunday in each month at or near Brother John Rogers, north of Colfax three miles. The 4th Sunday in each month at Argos, all to commence on Saturday night and continue as long as thought best.

J. S. HATCH.

Editor Restitution:

I have written once before for this good paper, and as I read the good and encouraging words it helps me in my Christian life. I am glad I can say that I am on the Lord's side, and am trying to become more like him. I ask him each day to help and strengthen me in the duties of the day whatever they may be.

We know we have not much time to labor for the dear Savior who has done so much for us. Let us who have just started out in the Christian course be faithful and have our lamps all trimmed and bright to meet the Bridegroom when he shall come. Let our lights shine out to others, that they may see our good works and be led to glorify our Father which is in heaven. May the Lord guide and keep us is my prayer.

I remain your Sister in Christ.

GERTRUDE EVEN.

Dear Restitution:

I have never written anything for the letter drawer, but it may not be right to withhold my mite because others can do so much better. I have thought so much of late of the necessity of more earnest effort to overcome sin. Will not a closer walk with God help us to overcome temptation more than anything else? James says, "draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you." Christ says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Paul says "Abstain from every appearance of evil."

Let us be humble; let us be prayerful. He has promised to help all who put their trust in him.

When we see strife, envy and jealousy around us, let us look carefully to our own walk and conversation, for we must account for ourselves, and not for others.

We often hear people say, in speaking of Christian work, "It is not much that I can do." Dear brothers and sisters, let us, (who feel that we have not the ability to help others as much as we would like) look earnestly at our own hearts, and, with the help of God, drive out the evil tendencies that are always ready to find a lodgment there, so as to give more room for the Christian graces that will make us better followers of the blessed Savior; better husbands and wives; better fathers and mothers, and better brothers and sisters in Christ.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Are our hearts pure? Do we show forth the fruits of the Spirit? love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance? or do we show more of the works of the flesh?

If after careful investigation we do not find some way in which we can improve our lives, if unfruitful there is so much conceit (which is not a fruit of the Spirit) in our characters that we cannot see our own short-comings. This should be removed.

In Rev. 2nd and 3rd chapters we find many promises to him that overcometh, so we see that we must overcome sin if we would inherit those promises. Do not let us be satisfied with ourselves because we see others falling below the standard Christ has laid down. He is our example.

Never do I expect to be satisfied with myself until I awake in his likeness, but I want to always press towards the prize and strive to walk in the way that leadeth to everlasting life.

Draw me nearer Heavenly Father,
Draw me nearer day by day,
That I may not shrink nor falter,
In the straight and narrow way.

Your Sister in hope of eternal life.

CARRIE JAQUITH.

Dear Restitution:

Find enclosed $2.00 for the dear RESTITUTION. We are a year behind the 3rd of this month. When our time runs out for the amount our last years subscription you may know that we cannot renew if we do not send a renewal by that time. Times are so hard here in Worlington. I do not see how we can do without the paper as it is all the preacher we have, as we live in an isolated place, and all the members are too poor in this world's goods to have a preacher come to us.

We read Sister Wince's letters and it gives us such comfort and cheers us so much to read letters from other dear ones of like precious faith. My husband and I were baptized into Christ over a year ago, by Bro. J. W. Dickenson, an uncle of ours. We earnestly ask the prayers of the brothers and sisters that we may continue faithful unto the end and that we may gain life eternal. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly.

Your brother and sister in Christ.

REFORMATION.

But men are saved by being reformed. Reformation is a matter of growth, not of instantaneous change. Nothing lasting is produced in a moment; it requires time for its formation. Men become bad, not all at once, but by gradually putting aside those things which make for righteousness, and allowing their opposites to come in and usurp their place. Weeds, as well as flowers, must have time in which to grow. Men are much like gardens—in the best the weeds will grow the rankest. A garden which will not grow weeds, will grow no flowers. I have seen men who could not be very bad—the soil was not rich enough to grow even weeds. Such amount to but little, not being a positive force in any direction. A man who has never done a wrong act, if such there be, is not necessarily the most virtuous; perhaps he hasn't done any right ones. Virtue consists in doing right things, not in doing wrong ones! It is a positive force, not a mere negation! I wish all to remember that. The world is altogether too full of negative virtue, and is sadly in need of the positive. There are a great number of men who go through life without acting at all. Such are the poor gardens, in which nothing grows. A good, thrifty weed is an encouragement; it, at least, shows where something better can grow, where the positive force is. The force which moves the world is the positive; either up to a higher and better, or down to a lower. The man who commits the worst crime, does the lowest act, is not necessarily the most degraded. He possesses most positive force, and expending it in the downward direction, it carries him farther; were it directed upward, it would take him correspondingly higher. The largest weeds bespeak the richest soil. There are many persons who are hardly worth reforming, just as there are gardens which are hardly worth cultivating; there isn't positive force enough in either, even though properly directed, to yield more than trivial results. The expenditure of energy required in their case, applied in other ways, would yield to the world many fold more "good results." The benefit of humanity, as well as the individual, should be sought. Of course, the two cannot be entirely separated, for what benefits the individual will necessarily, in some measure, benefit humanity, and vice versa.

Now, the question is, how to reform? There are two kinds of reformers, both seeking the same good, but trying to reach it in different ways. The one expends his energy on the flower-plants, nursing and training them, only considering the weeds as they come in his way and interfere with the other plants; the other giving his attention to the weeds, pulling up and destroying them and taking note of the flower-plants, only so far as to allow them to remain and grow. Both recognize the fact that there are flower-plants, as well as weeds, in every garden. And that is the cardinal fact. No matter how many and rank the weeds, there will always be found, in some state or condition, these flower plants, in every human garden. No man ever sunk so low in vice and crime, as to have lost all germs of truth and righteousness. Now, which of these reformers will succeed best? Which will accomplish most? I know that those belonging to the latter class are the more numerous; but we must not argue from that, that they are right and the others wrong. On the contrary, the minority is usually nearer right than the majority. This is a general rule, and it certainly applies in this case. If you want a man to be honest, deal with him as though you believed him honest, and vice versa. If you show by your actions that you expect to be cheated, you will be, for a rogue would not disappoint. So, also, with a man's sins—with the weeds in the human garden. If you simply pull up the weeds and do not otherwise protect the flower-plants, the scorching rays from the sun of a guilty conscience is almost sure to kill, not only the weeds, but also the tender flower-plants, leaving nothing but a dead, barren waste, from which no good can come. But if you cultivate and nurse the flower plants, making them not the sole, but the dominant occupants, they will develop to such proportions, as to drive out all else. A wound is not healed by being continually exposed to view; neither is a sin outgrown or conquered by being continually held up to the gaze of conscience. As the garden is made beautiful by developing its flowers, so man is reformed by developing germs of righteousness within him. He must be shown that they are there, and capable of making him true and noble; not that other things are there which will hinder. These last, kept always in view, but disheartening, while the others, so kept, give strength and courage. If two positive forces, the stronger always governs. Make the positive force in the germs of righteousness, stronger than that in the sin weeds, and reformation is assured. Righteousness or unrighteousness is a matter of the comparative strength of inherent forces. Jesus was tempted by the devil, which shows that he had in his nature, that upon which evil might act; but he also had in far greater measure, that over which evil had no power. Every human being has in his nature more or less of this same divine sin destroying element, and it is that which, if properly nourished, cultivated and brought out, can and will reform him.—Clarence G. Cook, in Word and Works.

Doorkeepers at the Tomb.

One of the most incongruous sights at the holy sepulchre is the Turkish divan just inside the entrance, on which a couple of indolent Moslems recline, gazing with apparent indifference at the devout pilgrims who pass through the gate, but really scrutinizing them with a view to soliciting backsheesh. These men may be styled the jailers of Christendom, for they possess the right of opening and closing the basilica.

When any one of the three communities living inside the Basilica wishes the gate to be opened a servant is signaled to call the representatives of the two families. The gate can be unlocked only in the presence of the two, the old regulations prescribing the attendance of both, as the one holding the key is not allowed to open the gate, and vice versa.

Charcoal and coffee have to be furnished by the fathers, besides a stipend of money, the price of all reaching about $1 for each opening.

On festivals when any of the patriarchs make their solemn entrance both wings of the gate are thrown open and the price for this ranges from $5 to $20, Consuls and other distinguished visitors being expected to give extra backsheesh.

Before the Crimean war these hereditary janitors exacted fabulous sums for opening the door, the consequence being that it often remained closed on the communities for months at a time.

Pilgrims who could not pay the entrance fee were detained for six months or a year awaiting the arrival of some rich traveler who would pay their way into the basilica, and many a one has returned to Europe without ever having seen the tomb of our Lord, although he has stood before its gates.

If any one of the fathers died the janitors levied another and higher tax on the poor friars, besides which a special permit for burial had to be obtained from the government, which was generally given in the following terms: "We hereby allow a damned Frank dog to be buried."—North American Review.

Horrible Atrocities of War.

It makes one's blood run cold to read of the horrible atrocities of the war between China and Japan. The New York World's correspondent, who is on the ground, and who sends to his paper a vivid description of the battle of Ping Yang, tells how scores of Japanese heads were found strung on cords after the execution of the city. An order from the Chinese officer-in-chief, offering a reward of 30 taels for every Japanese head, was found. In the quarters of a Chinese General thirteen heads were piled up in a corner, showing that the commander had an eye to business. There was blood on the walls, in the rippling river, on the green hillside, in the flowering valleys. Blood trickled over gravestones, blood dashed against the walls of the ancient temples, blood on the rocks, blood on the roof-tops, and blood everywhere. Ugh!

Quite a large amount of work has been done among the Hebrews in the city of Warsaw in Poland, where it is said that there are one hundred and twenty thousand Jews. One missionary alone, the Rev. Dr. Ellis, working under the auspices of the London Missionary Society, has baptized no less than 236 Israelites in the last three years.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a Christmas or New Year's gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Secret of Turpin's Extermination.

The specifications of Turpin's patents, which placed in the hands of the fortunate patentee an engine of such destructive power as to render him the Master of the world, were published yesterday. Strange to state, there was no great upward jump in French rentes nor was there a panic on any of the bourses of the powers of the triple alliance. The simplest thing is to give M. Turpin's description of of what he calls "L'Exterminateur."

"The artillery system of Eugene Turpin consists of a cannon with light tubes mounted and articulated at the base on a special carriage, carrying, loading, and motor arrangements, whose object is to give to the gyroscope projectiles a rapid motion on their axis, to insure precision in their directions. The mitrailleuse constructed on the plans annexed to the patent can discharge sixty-seven projectiles to a discharge of about 3,000 meters and cover a surface of 30,000 square meters, with 35,000 dangerous explosions within a radius of 200 meters from the point of explosion. The total weight of the apparatus loaded is about 1,800 kilogrammes. The ordinary cannon of ninety millimeters bore weighs, with its carriage, 2,030 kilos, and the gun of eighty millimeters 1,935 kilos, and fires twenty-six shots.

"In the next war the country which can throw the largest quantity of missiles and explosive bombs within a given time will have the greatest chance of success. It will therefore be necessary, to attain this object to create a new mitrailleuse firing shells of a special kind, which cannons, on account of their weight, cannot do, no matter what may be their caliber. With a quick firing gun a man can fire ten shots a minute without aiming accurately. With a caisson mitrailleuse 33,500 bombs can be thrown over 3,000 meters at one shot, which is equivalent to a volley from 8,350 men firing with repeater rifles for a minute. From this fact can be seen what a tremendous attack can be made with the simple apparatus which will give pro rata as good results as excited lirers.

The caisson mitrailleuse ought, to my mind, to accompany troops of the line, in front of the artillery, and be ready to concentrate its fire on any point so as to bring its aid to bear instantaneously or support a retreat. Two batteries of mitrailleuses, containing twelve exterminators, can thus in a moment do the work of 40,000 men. It need not be said that apparatus of this kind can be constructed of every caliber for lighthouses, men-of-war, etc., with a larger number of tubes, because they will be fixed tubes."

M. Turpin concludes his specifications by stating that his invention can also be applied to coast defense.

M. Turpin's projectile consists of a shell fixed to a metal tube called a cartridge, which contains a charge of powder which projects the whole. The projectile and tube are so arranged that they can be set spinning with great rapidity, thus giving the precision the want of which has led to the abandonment of military rockets. M. Turpin claims the effect of this rotation is also to increase the speed of the missile up to the point of its fall and the consequent explosion.

Before any opinion can be formed as to the value of the invention this point will have to be determined by practical experience.—N. Y. Herald.

Religions of India.

It would appear from the recent blue book on Indian affairs published in England that the Christian religion is making an appreciable impression on the population and now claims rather less than 1 per cent of the whole. The total population is given at 287,223,431, of whom at the last census, there were 207,731,727 Hindoos, 57,321,164 Mohammedans, 9,820,407 aboriginals, 7,131,361 Buddhists, 2,284,380 Christians, 1,907,823 Sikhs, 1,416,-038 Jains, 80,904 Parsis, 17,194 Jews, and 48,703 of other religions. Of the Christian population 1,815, 203 were certified to be Roman Catholics and 205,016 Church of England.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

In Ossahage, Missouri, Oct. 1st, 1894, Mrs. Emma I. Webb, aged 31 years, 8 mo. and 8 days. She was the daughter of our late Bro. S. S. Hayden. She was married to E. T. Webb, of Webb City Mo. May, 23, 1883. To them was born one son, little Earnest. She was brought up by good religious parents, her father being a minister in the Church of God. He was formerly a Baptist, but when he heard the gospel of the kingdom of God, he was baptized in the all saving name of Jesus Christ, in which faith he lived until he fell asleep in Jesus. On the 24th of Aug. 1884, I baptized Emma and her sister Lula, afterwards married to H. G. Garton, and who died March 2nd. Our sister Emma had many hard trials for the faith, even to the giving up of her infidel husband, and who afterwards married, but our dear sister never married again. Her death was caused by Typhoid fever, and trouble, and but few could have gone through what she did for the faith. We preached the funeral in the 1st Presbyterian Church, Oct. 31, from 1 John xii. 24; 1 Cor. xv. 38. The large number present, and the beautiful and costly offerings of flowers was evidence of the high esteem in which she was held. She was a n worker in the Sunday School and a model woman. She always upheld the truth, and her work will go on while she sleeps. She wanted to live to raise and educate her little boy, who will now fall into other hands. She will be greatly missed by her mother, her little boy and the church, but she now sleeps beside her father and sister.

JOHN POORE.

Died, Oct. 19, Mary L. Herron, wife of Isaac Herron. She became obedient to the gospel and was baptized by the writer in '71, and has ever since been a zealous and firm believer in the name of Jesus Christ and the kingdom yet to be set up on the earth. Her husband was an older brother of the writer and embraced the faith in Indiana, and afterwards convinced and baptized my wife and myself. I had been a campbellite evangelist for 23 years but when he came to Kansas he showed me that I did not have all the faith. He said God had covenanted to give Abraham all the earth in the future, so I with my wife demanded baptism at his hands. And afterwards it took me six months to straighten up all four of my churches. I baptized over 150 and finally Sister Herron came and I baptized her. Brother Isaac and Sister Mary both died in the one faith and no doubt the resurrection will bring forth many of their sheaves.

Sister Mary leaves one daughter one son and many grandchildren. she died at the age of 74 years, at the home of her son in Jackson Co Mo. She dearly loved THE RESTITUTION, which she received free, and she requests that it be sent to some seeking for light.

C. W. HERRON.

Mrs. Sarah Chesebrough, whose maiden name was Sarah Hand, was born in Rochester, N. Y. Nov. 30, 1834, and died in Galesburgh, Mich. Oct. 11, 1894. With her parents she moved to Colchester, Vt. residing there until about twenty years of age when she came to Leonidas, Mich. to visit her uncle and family. Here she secured a position as a school-teacher. While thus employed she became acquainted with Lyman H. Chasebrough, who she married Dec. 27, 1851.

Rev. A. Wiesner, pastor of the Baptist Church in Athens, officiating.

They made their home in Leroy, Calhoun Co. until 1868, when they moved to Galesburgh, where they lived until her death.

She was a member of the M. E. Church for a number of years, but after she heard the gospel of the kingdom and the second coming of Christ she gladly received the truth and was baptized into the all-saving name of Christ, since which time she has been a consistent and devoted Christian, a loving wife, and a kind neighbor, always ready to dne all she could to help others. She had been in failing health nearly two years caused by LaGrippe, since which time she had not been able to attend church. Gave her attention quite extensively to studying the Bible. She was hopeful to the last.

She leaves a husband, three sisters and four brothers to mourn their loss, but we sorrow not as those without hope.

After a brief service at the home on the morning of Oct. 18, relatives and friends followed the remains to the Baptist Church in Athens, where the funeral was held. The M. E. minister preached from the text which she had previously selected. Thess. iv. 13, 14, after which we laid her to rest in the beautiful cemetery near the church where she sleeps in peace awaiting the resurrection of the Just, and may it be my happy lot to meet her there.

L. H. CHESEBROUGH.

Dear Restitution.

By request of her friends, I send for publication in the paper three letters written by Sister Ida B. Burner, to be left for her children.

Sister Burner whose maiden name was Doolittle was born Apr. 27, 1853, married to Isaac H. Burner in Crawford Co. Ill. Dec. 9, 1877, died Sept. 12, 1894, aged 34 years, 4 months and 25 days. Sister Burner was a firm believer in the gospel of the kingdom and the truths advocated by THE RESTITUTION. She had been a great sufferer with that lingering disease, consumption. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to the friends and a large assemblage of people after which and in the midst of a storm we laid her to rest in the tomb until the coming of the Life Giver. Sister Burner was buried in the Butternut cemetery, Sept. 24, 1894.

JOHN CLAYTON.

THE LAST ADVICE OF A CHRISTIAN MOTHER TO HER SON.

ARTIE,—I expect I will be sleeping the sleep of the dead long before you can read this, but some one will read it to you. You will be a good boy and be ready to meet me in the morning of the first resurrection. I hate to leave you but it is the lord's will. He will take care of you and when you get old enough to read the Bible and understand it, then you must believe, repent and be baptized, do his commandments and hold out faithfully and when he comes it won't make any difference whether we are living or dead we will be like him. Be ready Artie, and God grant that we will meet in his kingdom. Don't forget to pray and trust everything to the lord. Keep this and read it. Don't forget you had a mother once, and take my last words as good advice and obey them that take care of you. Don't never drink anything that will make you drunk, nor use tobacco, nor swear, but go in good company. Be truthful and honest and be good to Early and always be a good brother to your little sister. May God bless and keep you while I am gone. God bye.

Your loving Mother.

THE LAST WORDS OF A CHRISTIAN MOTHER TO HER ONLY DAUGHTER.

AMIE, MY DEAR LITTLE GIRL,—I feel that you will soon be without a mother and I don't know who will take care of you, but I trust to God that aunt Viva or aunt Dolley will, and I hope you will never do anything that they would regret of having taken you, but try to repay them for raising you, remember it is your mother's wish. I hope that you will always listen to your aunts or any good woman that loves you and my prayer is that God will keep you. Learn to pray, trust him, study the Bible and prepare to meet me. You are little now but I hope that they will keep this for you until you get big or old enough to understand it. I have written each of the boys one because you may all be separated and I want whoever takes you children to take each one's letter and keep it for you until you are all big enough to take care of it yourselves. Always keep them and read them, they will be like me talking to you when I am in my grave. You have a bad temper but I hope you will try to overcome that, and I hope you will never have to go through the sickness and trouble I have, but if you should, do like your poor mother, trust in God and never give up hope and faith and prepare to meet me in the good world to come. Believe, repent, be baptized and do his commandments. He says, "Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me. Blessed are they that have part in the first resurrection." That is when I hope to meet you dear children. I hear your childish voice now singing when he comes. O may you always be as happy and innocent as now. Be a good sister to your brothers and do all you can for them. Good bye.

Your loving Mother.

Patrons of the Vandalia and Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh will be glad to know that an arrangement has been made, taking effect November 1st, by which portions of Mileage Tickets will be detatched and accepted in payment of excess luggage charges. Commercial travelers and others will find that Agents of the Pennsylvania and Vandalia Lines at all principal stations have been instructed regarding this concession, which will no doubt become immediately popular.

Where Men may secure Work.

Do you wish to know where you can secure employment at good wages and at the same time have an opportunity to get and pay for a good home of your own? If you do, write a letter to Frederick Abbot, Land Commissioner, Wisconsin Central Railroad at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and he will send you a little pamphlet which will give you the information.

Change of Address.

On and after Sept. 25, 1894, my address will be Rossville, Illinois, instead of Plymouth, Ind. Correspondents will please take notice.

L. E. CONNER.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a Christmas or New Year's gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God for the south district in Nebraska will be held, D. V. at the Fairview School House in Furnas Co., commencing Friday evening, Dec. 7th, and continue over Sunday. This meeting has been changed on account of the burden of taking care of the brethren falling almost entirely on one family.

We hope as many preaching brethren as can will be present. A large attendance of those of like faith are also urged, that we may receive encouragement and assist each other as we journey on toward the kingdom.

M. D. NEWELL, Pres.
J. J. CADY, Sec'y.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

To the South at Low Rates via Pennsylvania Lines.

The last of the series of cheap excursions over the Pennsylvania Lines to enable land seekers and others to visit Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee have been fixed for Oct. 2, Nov. 6 and Dec. 4, also to points in the above states except Kentucky on October 6th. Tickets will be sold to all applicants at principal ticket offices of the Pennsylvania Lines, and will be good returning twenty days from date of sale.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 12, 1894. NO. 46.

Poetry.

I Shall Find Rest.

There will be time I shall find rest sooner;
Thus do we say, while eager youth invites Young hope to try her wings in wanton flights,
And nimble fancy build the soul a nest
On some far crag; but soon youth's flame is gone
Burned lightly out; while we repeat the jest
With sadder confidence I shall find rest
A little farther on.

A little farther on
I shall find rest; half-timidly we moan
When noon beats on the dusty road, and care
Crowds to unjoint our armor, and the glare
Thrills with the pulse of battle, while life's best
Flies with the flitting stars; the frenzied brow
Pants for the kind more than for the breast
Where love soft-nestling waits. Not now, not now,
With feverish breath we cry, I shall find rest
A little farther on.

A little farther on
I shall find rest; half sad, at last, we say,
When sorrow's settling cloud blurs out the gleam
Of glory's torch, and to a vanished day
Love's palace hath been turned. Then all depressed,
Despairing, sick at heart we may not stay
Our weary feet, so lonely then doth seem
This shadow-haunted world. We — cease to rest.
Weep not to see the grave which waits its guest;
And feeling round our feet the cool wet clay,
We speak the failing world farewell and say,
Not on this side alas I shall find rest
A little farther on.

The Conditions of Salvation.

W. H. Wilson, Dear Brother:

Please give a strong article on baptism for Jew and Gentile, for the remission of sins. Some in Kansas teach that Gentiles are not sinners. Your efforts are highly appreciated. Fraternally,

T. E. ADAMS.

The whole world is under sin, whether Jew or Gentile, and such being the case they all need the pardon of sin, that they might be saved. Let me quote a proof from Paul's letter to the Romans, which was a Gentile church. See Rom. iii. 9: "What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin; as it is written, there is none righteous, no not one."

Here Paul an inspired apostle affirms, that he has "proved" the fact that "both Jews and Gentiles," "are all under sin," and "not one," either Jew or Gentile are of themselves "righteous." 1 John v. 11, says: The whole world lieth in wickedness." In Acts xxvi. 20, we read: "The Gentiles that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance." If they "are not sinners," what is the need of repentance, and following it up with "works meet for repentance?" The Bible abounds with like testimony, that both Gentiles and Jews are both sinners alike, but what we have already quoted is enough to prove the point. Now, this being the case, they must both of them submit to the same conditions of salvation, if they would become a part of the glorious Bride of Christ. See Rom. i. 16: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." (Gentile). Then the "gospel" is "the power" that can save both "Jew" and "Greek" (Gentile). It is "the gospel" alone which has this power, the man-made gospel of the apostasy is utterly devoid of this "power?" Paul says: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you, let him be accursed." He further says that some in his day "would pervert the gospel of Christ." but in our day, they pass a "counter" gospel entirely. There is no similarity between the glad news of the coming glorious reign of Christ and his saints over Israel and the nations, and a sky-kingdom filled with immortal souls. Take the covenants of promise relating to the commonwealth of Israel out of the gospel, and there is no saving virtue left in it. See Eph. ii. 12: "Wherefore remember, (and don't forget it) that ye being in times past Gentiles in the flesh, that at * * * that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world."

Jew and Gentile must each embrace the same faith. See Rom. x. 11, 12: For the Scripture saith, whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. For there is no DIFFERENCE between the Jew and Greek: (Gentile) for the same Lord is rich unto all that call upon him."

Paul, in Rom. xi. shows that Gentiles "being a wild olive tree" must be "grafted" into "the olive tree," that they may partake of its "root and fatness," or in other words must become "Abraham's seed." See Gal. iii. 28, 29: There is neither Jew nor Greek, (Gentile) there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye (Jew and Greek) be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Then it is a necessity to become "Christ's" if either "Jew" or "Greek" would be "Abraham's seed," [illegible] to be "Abraham's seed," if we would be "heirs according to the promise." "Know ye therefore that they which are of faith the same are the children (or seed) of Abraham." "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all."

Jew and Gentile must both alike "walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham," and having that "faith," are prepared to become "the seed" or "children of Abraham," by being "Christ's." Gal. iii. 27, says: "And as many of you (either Jew or Greek) as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

Let me call especial attention to Peter's discourse to the Jews on the day of Pentecost, as recorded in Acts ii. See verse 36: Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye (Jews) have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Here is something that must be assuredly known, and that is, "that same Jesus," is made "both Lord and Christ." That is equivalent to saying, that he was made Jesus "Lord of lords, and King of kings." The Jews needed no instruction that the phrase, "Lord and Christ," related to the long-expected King of Israel, but they doubted that he had made Jesus that "Lord and Christ." But when convincing evidence was given them that God had in truth made that very same Jesus, whom they had crucified both "Lord and Christ," they were pricked in the heart and said, Men and brethren, what shall we do? They had been convicted of a grievous sin, and they were deeply interested in the way out of the difficulty. There was no way only that which is provided for every gospel believer, who has become convicted of sin, and that is, "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins."

The jailor (a Gentile) who had Paul and Silas in charge, demanded of them what he should do to be saved. They told him to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," and he should be saved. We read that after confessing his belief, that he was baptized that same hour of the night.

We have a remarkable testimony in Acts viii. 5, 12, as to what it means to believe in, or preach "Christ" or "Jesus as the Christ." "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them." Now, refer to verse 12, and we will learn just what Philip preached when he preached "Christ unto them." "When they believed Philip preaching (Christ or) the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."

Another of Philip's auditors at Samaria, was the eunuch, (a Gentile) "And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, if thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still, and they both went down, both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him."

To analyze this confession, we have first, the word "Jesus," which means Savior. Next, "Christ," an official title, which according to Luke xxiii. 2, is defined as "Christ a king." Mark xv. 32, defines the word as "the king of Israel." So when Philip preached "Jesus" to the eunuch, and "Christ" to the Samaritans, he preached him as "the king of Israel," and Savior of [illegible] preached him as "the King of Israel," he must of necessity preach the restoration of "the kingdom to Israel," which will be the re-organization of "the commonwealth of Israel," and the fulfillment of "the covenants of promise." If these grand truths were omitted by Philip, according to Ephesians ii. 11, 12, his preaching was of little value, because he would still leave his auditors "without Christ," having no hope, and without God in the world." A preacher who leaves his hearers in that condition, had better stay home and study until he learns what the gospel is himself, before he attempts to teach others.

Cornelius "called together his kinsmen and near friends" (all Gentiles) and sent to Joppa, for Simon, (a Jew) and when he came, he said: "Now therefore we are all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." Peter then told them about "the word which God sent unto the children of Israel." "That word ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached." Now, what "word" could this be? Notice the place, it began from was "Galilee," the time, "after the baptism which John preached." Refer to Mark i. 14, and we will learn exactly what it was: "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." Hence Peter preached to these Gentiles the "gospel of the kingdom of God." He then told them how Jesus was crucified and rose the third day, and that he "was ordained of God to be the judge of the quick and the dead," and also, "that through his name whosoever believeth in him (Jew or Gentile) should receive remission of sins." When they believed, the Holy Spirit fell on them, and Peter said: "Can any man forbid water these (Gentiles) should not be baptized?" "And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord."

All who refuse to believe the ancient Gospel, and be baptized, surely "reject the counsel of God against themselves," no matter whether they be Jews or Gentiles.

W. H. WILSON.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 21.

1. And when it occurred to us to be separated from them and embark making a straight course we came to Kous and on the next day to Rhodos and from there to Patara.

2. And finding a vessel that was crossing over to Phoiniko we embarked and weighed anchor.

3. And having sighted Kupros and left it on the left hand we sailed on toward Suria and arrived in Turos. For there the vessel was to unload its cargo.

4. And looking up the disciples we remained there seven days. And they were saying to Paulos through the spirit that he should not embark for Hierosoluma.

5. And when the days had elapsed for us to be fitted out we departed and went our way they all sending us forward, they along with women and children as far as outside of the city, and kneeling upon the sandy shore they offered votive-prayer.

6. And fearing ourselves from one another we embarked in the vessel and they returned to their own affairs,

7. And accomplishing our sailing-course from Turos we arrived in Ptolemais and greeting the brethren we stayed one day with them.

8. And on the morrow departing we came to Kaisarria; and going into the house of Philippos the evangelist who was of the seven [illegible] and this place; and besides he hath led Greeks into the temple and made this sacred place common.

9. And this man had four daughters virgins who were prophesying.

10. And while we were staying more days a certain prophet Agabos by name came down from Joudaia.

11. And he came unto us and took up the girdle of Paulos and bound his own feet and hands and said, Thus saith the Sanctified Spirit, The man whose girdle this is, the Joudaians will bind in this wise in Hierousalem and will deliver him up into the hands of the nations.

12. And when we heard this, we and the people of the place besought him not to go up to Hierousalem.

13. Then Paulos answered and said, Why are ye making a lamentation and breaking my heart? For I hold myself ready not only to be bound, but even to die in Hierousalem for the name of the Lord Jesous.

14. And as he was not to be persuaded we became silent, saying, May the Lord's will have come to pass.

15. And after these days getting ready we went up to Hierousalumn.

16. And there came together also some of the disciples from Kaisareia along with us, leading to Mnason a certain Kuprian an early disciple with whom we were being entertained.

17. And when we had arrived in Hierosolama the brethren received us gladly,

18. And on the following day Paulos went in along with us unto Jakobos (James so-called) and all the elders came then;

19. And greeting them he related one by one each thing that God had caused among the nations through his deaconship.

20. And when they had heard they glorified God and said unto him, Thou beholdest, brother, how many myriads there are of those who have experienced faith among the Joudaians and they are zealots for the law.

21. And they have been taught as Katechumins concerning this that thou art teaching all the Joudaians throughout the nations apostasy from Mouses, saying that they should not circumcise their children nor walk according to the customs.

22. What then is this? It is certainly befitting that a multitude should come together for they will hear that thou hast come.

23. Do thou then this which we tell thee: here are four men of ours who have a vow upon themselves,

24. Take these and do thou become purified along with them, and do thou spend (the requisite money) upon them, that they may have their heads shaved, and all will know that the things concerning thee which they have been taught as Katechumins are naught, but that thou art exacting and thyself art watching to guard the law.

25. Concerning the nations that have experienced faith moreover we have decided to enjoin that they watch to keep (or observe) no such thing only that they be on their guard against the sacrifice to an idol and against blood and anything strangled and against fornication?

26. Then Paulos taking the men to himself on the following day purified himself along with them and entered into the temple, announcing the fulfillment of the days of their purification to be until when the offering for each one of them had been brought.

27. And when the seven days were about to be fulfilled some Joudaians from Asia who saw him in the temple got together all the mob and laid violent hands upon him,

28. Shouting, Men, Israelites, to the rescue, This is the man who is teaching [illegible] and this place; and besides he hath led Greeks into the temple and made this sacred place common.

29. For they had previously seen Trophenies the Ephesian in the city along with him, whom they supposed Paulos had conducted into the temple,

30. And the whole city was stirred up and there occurred a running together of the laity; and laying hold of Paulos they dragged him outside of the temple, and straightway the doors were closed.

31. And while they were seeking to kill him a report went up to the kilinrch of the cohort that all Hierousalem was confusedly assembling.

32. And straightway taking soldiers and centurions (rulers of hundreds) he ran down against them: and when they saw the kilinrch (a ruler of a thousand) and the soldiers they ceased smiting Paulos.

33. Then the kiliarch drew nigh and laid hold of him and commanded him to be bound with two chains, and enquired who he might be and what he had done.

34. And in the multitude some were vociferating one thing and some another: and not being able to learn the certainty because of the tumult, he gave directions to lead him into the camp.

35. And when he got upon the steps it came to pass that he was being carried by the soldiers because of the violence of the crowd,

36. For the multitude of the laity were following, shouting, Away with him (lit. "lift him up" meaning crucify him).

38. And as Paulos was about to enter into the camp he saith unto the kiliarch, Is it allowable for me to say anything to thee? And he said, Dost thou know Greek?

38. Surely thou art not that Egyptian who before these days stirred up sedition and led out into the wilderness the four thousand man of the Sicarrii?

39. And Paulos said, I am a Joudaian a man of Tarsus, a citizen of no mean city of Kilikia, and I pray thee, allow me to talk to the laity.

40. And when he had given him leave, Paulos standing upon the stairway, made a motion for silence to the laity with his hand, and a great silence having occurred, he addressed them in the Hebrew dialect.

COMMENT.

"Embark for" instead of "set sail for" R. V.

"To be hired out" omitted by the R. V.

"And leaving ourselves from one another" omitted in the R. V.

"Moses" (Moses) "an inspired seeker" same root as "Musa" a muse in the Latin, "muse" in the Greek.

"Koos" a "six-throw" with the dice.

"Rhodon" (Rhodes) "a rose."

"Patara" so-called from Patarus son of Apollo meaning "a striker."

"Phoinike" "a place of dates."

Ptolemais so-called from Ptolemaios meaning "a warlike person."

"Tursos" a place of "wickerware."

"Tarsean" an inhabitant of Tarsos.

Kilikia so-called from "Kilix" a brother of "Kadmus" who brought letters to Greece according to tradition. Kilix from an obsolete verb in the Greek meaning "to put into harbor." So the place of harbor called "a kilikia" and the country or province so-called from its noted seaport of this name—all of this "way-back" of regular history.

"Who" instead of "which" referring to "daughters" as an antecedent R. V.

"More days" instead of "many days" R. V.

"The Sanctified Spirit" instead of "the Holy Ghost" "no ghosts"

"Became silent" instead of "ceased" R. V.

"Getting ready" instead of "taking up our baggage" R. V. which is most too free a translation. Don't think Paulos had much "baggage."

"Leading" or conducting us "to Mnason" instead of "bringing with them one Mnason" R. V.

"With whom we were being entertained" instead of "with whom we should lodge" R. V.

"Came there" instead of "were present there" R. V. They probably didn't all live with Jakobos.

"Through his deaconship" instead of "wrought through his ministry" R. V. Too general a term to apply to Paul's work.

"Myriads" instead of "thousands" R. V. It is only a difference of ten times which wasn't much evidently to "the revisers."

"Taught as Katechumins" is stead of "informed" R. V. Quite a difference this, if you know the difference.

R. V. omits entirely the 2nd clause of the 22nd verse.

"Exacting" and "watching to guard" instead by "walkest orderly" and "keeping" R. V.

"Have decided to enjoin" instead of "wrote giving judgment" R. V.

"Be on their guard against" instead of "keep themselves from" R. V. The reason to omit the clause "that they watch to keep no such thing." We have here a good illustration of the exoteric and esoteric "watch to keep."

"Until when" instead of "until" R. V.

"Had been offered" instead of "was offered" R. V.

"Laity and law" instead of "people and law" R. V.

"Camp" instead of the "castle" R. V.

"Sicarii" people of Sicily engaged in fig-raising instead of "Assassins" R. V.

We learn here that Paulos spoke both Greek and Hebrew and as he quoted freely from the Septuagint and never from the Hebrew Scriptures, it is a fair inference to draw that he knew the Greek version to be correct.

CHAS. GARDNER.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION precedes the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, its ordinances, and its teaching in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as prerequisite to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as preparation for immortalization.

Dear Restitution:

I have read THE RESTITUTION ever since it has been published and would rather go on half rations long enough to raise the $1.50 than to do without the paper. My time expires the 4th of December. I will send post office order for $1.50; $1.50 to pay my subscription another year and $3.00 to be used in sending papers where you think they will do the most good. I am very sorry that it is necessary for you to tell people that they have promised to pay. I hope none of the brethren promise to pay, and don't pay when they agree to or before. Any person that is good enough to like to read THE RESTITUTION and don't pay when or before they agree to, please read Romans xiii. 8, and if you forget how it reads read it over till you can remember it. I have got some good neighbors that are sabbatarians. In a talk with one of them I asked, why is it that your people have more to say about the sabbath than any of the other commandments. And he said the sabbath was more imposed on than any of the rest. I told him I thought not for Rom. xiii. 8 says, Owe no man any thing. Oh, he said, that is not a commandment. I cited him to Col. iii. 9, where it says, Lie not one to another and said, if you buy a load of hay of a man and say I will pay you Monday morning and don't pay until Tuesday, what then? Have you broke a commandment? After a little hesitation he says, it looks that way. If a church member does that way and ain't a stumbling block I don't know who is, you would be doing nobody any injustice. Custom makes law and it is customary to not do just exactly as we agree. Suppose the person we are obligated to is not very particular about our being prompt, does that excuse us? I think not. I have found no place in Christ's or the apostles' teaching where they say or even hint that it is all right to owe. If you think you can make a speculation by it, or if you want a new buggy, a new harness, a new suit of clothes or even a fresh supply of tea, coffee and tobacco. I don't think our Savior used any thing that was not necessary. O what a good book the Bible is, if we only live up to what it teaches we should do to gain the prize. We are surely not running any risk, for we are well paid in this life. We rest better at night, feel better satisfied through the day and live longer. Is it not nearly time for our love feast again? I like to have it last a long time, it is very nourishing, and I feel as though I need nourishment. Your brother in hope of the soon coming King.

G. W. CALDER.

Dear Restitution:

At our meeting in Clinton Co., Ill, Sunday in November, two more yielded obedience, husband and wife were buried in baptismal waters, as we trust rising therefrom to walk in the new and living way. The husband was the last of a household that has become obedient to the faith. As ever in hope.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 12, 1894.

☞ The address of any correspondent of the paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

To Our Patrons

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your own, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see the accomplished. As we are situated at present we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, send the paper to all new names received before Jan. 1, 1895, till Jan. 1, 1896 for $1.50. Besides this we will send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

"To this man will I look, saith the Lord, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word." •

"No man ever set the Lord before him and made it his concern to please him, yet lived to say, What a fool am I! What a wasted life is mine. What vanity and folly! Had I only my career to begin anew, I would seek another Master and a higher end." •

THE pomegranate was one of the pleasant fruits of Egypt, and blessings of Palestine, often alluded to in the Old Testament; and its abundance is testified to by the frequent occurrence of its Hebrew name, "Rimmon" as a town. Blood oranges are produced from an orange branch grafted on a pomegranate stem.

EMERSON'S advice to writers is good. "Expression is the main fight. Search unweariedly for that which is exact. Do not be dissuaded. Know words etymologically. Pull them apart, and see how they are made, and use them only where they fit. Avoid the adjective. Let the noun do the work. The adjective introduces sound,—gives an unexpected [illegible] and so often mars with an unin[illegible]nal false note. Most fallacious [illegible] language. Defin[illegible] a deal of debate. •

"THERE must be a hopefulness in our hearts for one that has fallen. Without trust in him it will be impossible to lift him up. We must have faith in his efforts after amendment, even though they are weak and faltering. There is great power for good in taking the hopeful view. The confidence we show in another reflects itself in his heart, and carries encouragement with it, just as your look of sympathy brightens the weary, downcast face and is reflected there." •

IT seems to a publisher that the very meanest thing one he has treated can do, is to quietly leave his residence, leaving no address behind, and after some weeks are gone, let the Post Master give notice to stop his paper as it is not taken out, reason being "left town, present address unknown." We have had a few such, and are glad to say that only occasionally one is so lost to honor as to act so. We have a case in hand now where a brother wrote only last spring, he knew he was far behind, (since Jan. 1880) but if we would trust him till this fall he would pay all up. We trusted him and now his whereabouts are "unknown." How would you like it?

Justification by Faith. No. 11.

We were last examining the 6th verse of the 2nd chapter of 1 Tim. to see if it was a firm foundation for the so-called "Broader Hope" we saw that while the result of the work and offices of Christ resembles what the word ransom means, it is not used in the sense of an equivalent for something else. We have many times disproved the doctrine of satisfaction by the Word of the Spirit. It is not only untrue, it is dishonoring to God, it is morally wrong; it is revolting to common-sense; and we know therefore that the word for in the verse under consideration is used in the sense of, in "behalf," or "on account of" all, and instead of all. If there were not scores of other Scriptures which clearly define the terms on which the all can be benefitted by the gift of himself, there might be reason for the insistence that for means instead of and ransom means literally a price paid in full for the redemption of something.

In Millennial Dawn, vol. 2, p. [illegible] it is taught that Christ's body having been our purchase price, it could not live again, or else if the price was taken back, we would be under the condemnation of death, and without hope. It adds: "Whether it (the Lord's body) was dissolved into gases, or whether it is still preserved somewhere . . . No one knows. . . . It will not surprise us, if in the kingdom, God shall show to the world the ransom given on their behalf. It is at least possible that John xix. 37, and Zech. xii. 10 may have such a fulfilment." How does he know it is possible? We know he does not know that possibly the Lord's preserved body is referred to in John xix. and Zech. xii. that he not been blinded by his own invention he would have seen that the words he quotes to prove it, positively DISPROVE it. He says our Lord "was put to death in the flesh but quickened in spirit." This says our LORD was put to death, and our LORD was made alive in spirit. An intelligent belief of this would have prevented the preserved-body-theory. That theory [illegible] the Lord lived the Lord himself, who never died, and was never raised formed no part of the price; for it continues, "It was his flesh, his life as a man, his humanity, that was sacrificed for our redemption." So this is the way it stands: his humanity was sacrificed for our redemption, and was never resurrected to life. The Lord himself never died, and was never buried and never raised; while we have the apostolic Word for it that he both died and rose and revived; and we have his own word for it after his ascension in Rev. i. 18 that he is the one that was dead and is alive again, and ever lives.

Here we have a ripe specimen of substitution—substitution gone to seed, surely. The irresponsible tenet that the Lord lived in, sacrificed for our redemption,—and then for aught he knows it may have been "dissolved into gases," although in value it was equivalent to that of the whole human family; or, it may be preserved for exhibition in the future age. But our readers will see a slight difficulty in the way of this, for the passage referred to in the 12th of Zech. shows that the preserved body (?) is able to answer when questioned, "whence came these wounds." Rather a singular thing for a lifeless body to do,—after being preserved for 2000 years; but no more singular than to find the redeemed hosts singing to the preserved body thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood and made us kings and priests to God." Rev. v. 10.

Evidently this popular author has not learned that Christ is the first fruit of the great harvest of dead ones; and that the faithful Christian is to have a resurrection like his Lord's. Rom. vi. 5. According to this fallacious theory the mortal body will never put on immortality—something else is the real person, and this something survives the death of the body, and the resurrection is a universal myth if it was a myth in Christ's case.

It is alledged that "the humanity" of Christ was equivalent in value to the humanity of the whole race, and yet it seems it might have been dissolved into gases as "it no further use to humanity. Or, possibly, it may be preserved for exhibition in the age to come. Now, since redemption has been degraded to a business transaction, and a body and clothing especially created and dissolved to assure his disciples that he was resurrected and changed, when no such things had taken place, is it worth while to preserve the body? If the disciples could not detect the fraud we may be sure the resurrected Jesus could not if a body and clothing were made for the occasion. Oh, the presumption and crookedness of their thinking!

If full value was paid for the whole race of man, where does God's great love and favor come in?

If the death of Christ (as the popular idea of the atonement makes it appear) made a proper for God to remit the penalty, he and the people he met their wa hell fire.

Eph. ii. 3 and Rom. v. 12-21 prove that 30 or 40 years after Christ's death all were born children of wrath, dead in sin. The wages of sin is death, all die in Adam. Jesus in John iii. 36 exclaims what the wrath of God is,—not an ebullition of temper,—but the penalty of the law—death. He says, "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life." What then? Ans. "But the wrath of God abideth on him." If the Breaker Hope be true, Paul was not true. Men could not be BY NATURE children of wrath, if Jesus paid the full price for them. It was not a commercial transaction.

Justification is the opposite of condemnation, just as righteousness is the reverse of disobedience: and if Christ had died instead of us, his death would have justified us; but it alone did not justify us; he "was raised again for our justification," Rom. iv. 25; and this sets heaven's condemnation upon substitution. The author we have been criticising unwittingly shows what a human structure he has been raising when he practically denies the resurrection of Christ after the apostolic statement that if Christ [illegible] faith is vain: ye is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept."

As none will claim the resurrection of one who neither died nor was buried, we squarely charge the author of Millenial Dawn with setting aside the death, burial and resurrection of Christ and representing him as deceiving the apostles by creating a body and clothing for that purpose. A man who would represent him in whose mouth was no guile, as capable of such abominable trickery in order to sustain his own, or some borrowed human subterfuge, ought to be closely watched.

All this folly grows out of want of faith in that great and glorious truth—justification by faith. And we want our readers to see the truth about life because of Christ's death. It is this,—a dead Christ is as good as a living Christ, if that theory be true. It is not true; justifying faith must take hold upon the once dead, but raised Christ; so it must be, for he himself said, "Because I live, ye shall live also."

But let us examine this matter from another point of view. We read in Rom. vi. 3, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death." We see by this that in the very act of putting on the name of Christ in order to the remission of past sins, and to secure the promised blessings, we get, also, into his death. This is partly explained by Gal. v. 24, "They that are Christ's have crucified (put to death) the flesh with the affections and lusts." And again in Rom. vi. 6 "Our old man was crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed. He was made in the likeness of sinful flesh, and that likeness had to be destroyed; and it is of this the apostle speaks when he says he died unto sin once. He knew no sin at all,—and could not die to sin of his own. It is of this the spirit speaks when he says he was made sin for us, who knew no sin. He was rid of it; he was freed from our nature by death. In being baptized into his death men partake of his crucifixion or death. But upon what principle? In reply we point to the fact that he was made lower than the angels for the suffering of death. But why for the suffering of death? A full answer is not practicable here; but Heb. viii. 3 shows us one most important reason. He sent his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and by a sacrifice for sin, condemned sin in the flesh. Here is [illegible] begotten Son in our exchanged nature, and such is God's hatred of sin that he determined that no righteousness, and the inexorableness of his law of sin and death should be exhibited to the world by condemning sin in the flesh of Jesus, who, was himself free from sin; but was made in the likeness of sinful flesh for this impressive exhibition God's love for the world induced him to make the gift and Jesus of his love was a party to it. [illegible] gave him up [illegible] the suffering of death, because involved in fashion as a man, was of man's nature. It was one of our race that "the iniquity of us all" was laid upon; him the penalty of the law was executed upon him because possessed of our nature, and [illegible] of all men. But we repeat, he was a party to the arrangement; for the joy set before him endured the cross and despised the shame; hence his present exaltation and greater future glory.

Let us look at this great moral fact, where the sin of man and the righteousness of God by contrast are exhibited to us. Here was the living provided and spotless lamb dealt with as the REPRESENTATIVE, NOT THE SUBSTITUTE of his race; as such he receives the condemnation of sin in his flesh, so that men while looking at God's transfixed lamb can at once see the righteousness of God and the exceeding sinfulness of sin; with the result that the boundless love of God, begets love to God in them.

Now we should be able to see that in being baptized into his death we acknowledge that we are death-doomed and morally submit to be condemned with Christ—die with him, so as to sever our connection with the first Adam ("for he that is dead is free from sin." obtain forgiveness of our sins, and put on the new man, who, because of his sinlessness was raised again and now lives by God, and death can no more lord it over him. "And if we be dead with Christ we believe that we shall also live with him,"—be made partakers of him,—share his divine nature of existence. Thus we die by means of Adam because we are in him. How can we live by Christ if in Adam?

The other capital proof text for the Larger Hope is Acts iii. 20, 21. We firmly believe in "the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." If there be one passage in all the prophets which says ignorant heathen of all ages and climes are to have a full opportunity to obtain everlasting life by faith and obedience, that is the passage which should have been quoted, and not Acts iii. 21 which no one disputes.

In our next we expect to show that guilt cannot be transferred from one person to another. •

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 11.

We are asked to show what we must be obedient to under the new covenant. The broad, or general answer is, "The law of Christ." Gal. vi. 2. If it be asked what the nature of the law of Christ is we reply, "The law of liberty," Jas. ii. 12, in contradistinction to an arbitrary command. As we are to be judged by this law of liberty, it might be well to say that a law of liberty is a law we are not obliged to obey; a law we obey in obedience to faith and love. That is to say, we love the law-giver because he has manifested his love to us, and obedience is the fruit of love.

If it be asked what the law of Christ is? We have the general answer in Matt. xxviii. 20, in his own words,—"All things whatsoever I have commanded you;" so that the law of Christ comprises all the rules of life and conduct found in apostolic writings besides those which fell from his own lips. We suggest that it would be well for those interested to catalogue all these commands and keep them on short notice. We [illegible] would be well to classify them so as to be able to find the information needed quickly. Who will carry out these suggestions? Whoever it be let him or her be careful not to omit the command to "hold fast the profession without wavering," because it has vanished away.

Again it is asked, "Does not obedience imply something to do?" We [illegible] If the proper taker of the pains to do it can suggest a way in which [illegible] the work to be done, [illegible] believing in the gospel. He has [illegible] and [illegible] by the [illegible] of sinning does not [illegible]

It is being the active power in [illegible] and to [illegible] or [illegible] The New Testament is void in [illegible] power that will have power over the nations. The commands are a [illegible] of these works, James says, chap. [illegible] and [illegible] of the Word, and not "hearers only, deceiving your own selves." [illegible] God [illegible] see also verses 24-27 with all [illegible] In Matt. vii. 21 Jesus teaches that only those who do the will of the Father in heaven will enter the kingdom. God has spoken to us by his Son in these last days, and [illegible] the commands he gave [illegible] of a model.

Second. Col. ii. 16 [illegible] who would refer us to the [illegible] To [illegible] correspondingly to the fourth command of the Decalogue. It says, Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath." This is taken in connection with Rom. xiv. 14, in the course of which it says, "One man esteemeth one day above another, another esteemeth every day alike: let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind," etc. fully explains. If the law had not been changed with the priesthood could such language as this have been used?

Thirdly. We see in the last night's paper that several persons were lately arrested at Detroit for smuggling goods from Canada; and we ask, is there any thing [illegible] or morally wrong in buying goods in one country and transporting them to another where they can be sold at a profit? All must admit that there is not; and yet the consequences to the arrested party threaten to be very serious. How is this? What has made this a crime? The answer is, a statute of the United States. With a change of administration or of public opinion this law might be repealed before long and its violation be impossible. It was not essentially and morally wrong to work seven days a week. It became wrong to do so when God forbade it. And that law was not known to Israel till they were nearing Sinai. See positive proof Neh. ix. 14, "And madest known unto them thy holy sabbath." •

Bible Times and Seasons. No. 5.

"We are drawing close to the end of this dispensation—the Gentile Times. I feel absolutely certain that the New Era begins at Easter, 1898. So certain that my belief about it is like my expecting that at the point of noon tomorrow the clock will strike twelve, because I have heard it do so many times; knowing as I do, how all other prophecies, step by step, have been fulfilled with precision, I cannot feel any hesitation whatever in my belief that the last and concluding step in the prophecies of Daniel will also be completed at the point of time I have mentioned.

The Bible is all composed of scientific time—that is, pure planetary motion; and every part of it yields to measurement.

When we submit to this we give the Bible a fair field. Our opinion stands aside, and we go where we are led. Besides this, there is no other way of dealing with the subject correctly, and by following it on the lines of actual duration, everything works it out clearly. If this method had been adopted in former years, and men had closely adhered to the words of Scripture, there would not have been the blundering which has occurred.

Respecting the end of this age, measurements have been taken, and there is no room for doubt. What I now feel is,—Let all the world know it. If they do not believe, let them investigate the subject, but let no man make a fool of himself by disbelieving what he has not investigated. By doing this he will be setting up his own opinion as a piece of truth. He is not [illegible] If I work out a sum of arithmetic and a man doubts whether I am correct or not, I shall [illegible] to discover the correctness in a moment. For the reason I am [illegible] of any person finds an error [illegible] of my calculations [illegible] to be properly [illegible] I should in every such [illegible]

Will God be [illegible] Looking [illegible] Christ, in our faith [illegible] God's infallible all [illegible] is [illegible] exchange! [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] lieve [illegible] that the [illegible] will not [illegible] tomorrow, [illegible] suppose that heaven [illegible] pass away. What is coming and what [illegible] are the crowning [illegible] of all [illegible] ism. Are we to be [illegible] in [illegible] the New Testament?

We will say again [illegible] the definite time [illegible] of God. Besides this, that we do not endorse it any more than we do [illegible] of Tatton, as I again say that in our humble opinion, the same brain power and energy expended in another direction—that of telling God's people what to do to be saved—would be far more in accord with the command of our Lord "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is [illegible] shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." There is enough in this to take all our time and all our energy.—ED.]

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. READINGS.

PRAISE THE LORD.

Praise ye The Lord. Praise the Lord, O my soul.

While I live I will praise the Lord; I will sing praise unto my Lord while I have my being.

Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord God:

Which made heaven, and earth, the sea, and all that therein is; which keepeth truth forever.

Which executeth judgment for the oppressed; which giveth food to the hungry. The Lord looseth the prisoners.

The Lord openeth the eyes of the blind; the Lord raiseth them that are bowed down; the Lord loveth the righteous.

The Lord preserveth the strangers; he relieveth the fatherless and widow; but the way of the wicked he turneth upside down.

The Lord shall reign forever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the Lord.

PROMISES OF A SAVIOR.

Unto you that fear my name, shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings.

God shall send forth his mercy and his truth.

He shall send them a Savior, and a great one, and he shall deliver them.

And his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.

Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end.

For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper.

To give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death; to guide our feet in the way of peace.

A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

Behold a King shall reign in righteousness.

He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth.

In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.

His name shall endure forever; his name shall be continued as long as the sun.

And men shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed.

Blessed be his glorious name forever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen, and amen.

CHRIST'S BIRTH.

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the King, behold, there came wise men, from the east to Jerusalem, Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him.

When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

And they said unto him, in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judea, are not the least among the princes of Juda, for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men inquired of them diligently what time the star had appeared.

And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

When they had heard the king, they departed; and lo! the star, which they saw in the east, went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was.

When they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him; and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts, gold frankincense, and myrrh.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night.

And, lo! the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying;

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it they made known abroad the sayings which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

JEWISH REJECTION OF THE MESSIAH.

How has it affected the individual and national interests of Israel? There are those who teach us that in consequence of the rejection of the Messiah by the Jews, and their consequent scattering by God; there is an end of God's dealings with them in a special sense, and that the only hope for them now is that which is common to them with the Gentiles. Such teaching results from a failure to see the difference between the unconditional promises made four hundred years before the law was given, and the conditional promises which were affected by the law. Israel's special blessings are on the basis of the former promises.

It is also important to note the difference between the blessings of the individual Jew and that of the nation as such. The Old Testament deals largely with their national history and prospects. It is there we have their choice from among the nations to be the special people of God and the teachers of the nations concerning the one true and living God. They were put in the place of pre-eminence above the nations, and destined to be the source of their blessing and the [illegible] tion then was national in character, and largely ceremonial in its method. There was a place of meeting; in the wilderness it was the tabernacle with its sacrifices and services; in the land it was the temple with its glory. The contrast to all this is now found in that spiritual worship which is independent of place and a matter of spirit as well as truth.

The national history and hope of Israel were bound up with the coming of their Messiah. They looked forward to a golden age of glory and perfection when he should appear. The character of the coming One was clearly defined by the prophets, the work he should accomplish clearly made know, and the offices he should sustain towards them were ever kept before them in their priesthood, services and national polity. In accordance with all the predictions of the prophets, in the fullness of time he came. But they were ignorant of their own Scriptures, and finally fulfilled them in condemning him. The result of this was the crucifixion and as a consequence the setting aside of the nation; and judgment upon their city. Since then, prophecy has been fulfilled in their scattering and affliction and their own words: "His blood be upon us and our children," have been signally fulfilled in their history.

This has affected the national and individual interests of Israel, for, instead of a kingdom set up under the reign of their glorious Messiah, they are without a king, wanderers everywhere, a scoff and a byword of the people. They are the wandering Jews, less understood and less cared for than any other people in the world, and yet marvellously watched over and cared for by God, in order to the future fulfillment of the teachings of their prophets concerning them, and to perform their part in the world's redemption.

Messiah's rejection has not changed the purpose of God. His purpose was expressed long ago to Abraham and had to do with a land as well as a seed, and still abides. "The gifts and callings of God are without repentance." He hath said and he will surely do it. Though broken off, Israel is not to be finally cast off. They are still beloved for their fathers' sake. So far from the purpose of God being affected by Israel's rejection of Jesus, an opportunity has been given for its larger revelation. Other purposes must be accomplished, and in order to this, Israel must reject Jesus. This is just as much a matter of prophecy as the glory of the kingdom, which itself was to be the result of the sufferings of Messiah. It has not altered the Covenant Relation. They have not forfeited the [illegible] and unconditional promises made to them in Abraham. Neither have these promises been transferred to the church, so that they never can be fulfilled in any spiritual sense to Israel. Those who [illegible] these promises spiritualizing and applying them to spiritual Israel, the church, have done violence to the right to which the prophecies relating to the first coming have to be so understood. When Jesus came it was not to transfer the promises made to the fathers to the Gentiles, but to confirm them as the minister of the circumcision. It has changed the character of their opportunities and blessings during the present time. Their rejection of Messiah put him where a new election became possible, and is now being developed. The Messiah of the Old Testament was to be a resurrection man. (See Psalm xvi. with Acts ii. 25: ii. 36,) and he session at the right hand of God makes him head over all things to the church which is his body.

Since the death and resurrection of Christ, God deals with men as individuals and no longer nationally. During this dispensation, Israel must come into blessing on the same ground that the Gentiles do, on the basis of a common ruin felt and acknowledged by them. This larger blessing is now open to them as individuals and spiritual in character, as the result of union with Christ in heavenly places.

There is a three-fold election which we must understand if we would have clear ideas of the [illegible] mankind, viz. 1. Israel as the elect nation, chosen from the rest of the nations; 2. An election from among the nation of Israel, "the remnant according to the election of grace;" 3. The election from among the Gentiles of a people for his name. On believing in Jesus Christ, the last two lose their distinction as Jews or Gentiles, and are together incorporated into the body of Christ, the church. It is this larger blessing which is now offered to individuals among the Jews. See Eph. ii.

The rejection of Israel by God has developed this new election, composed of Jew and Gentile who have believed in Jesus Christ. Larger blessings have come to its members through the setting aside of Israel, and, in turn, Israel has a claim upon the church for the gospel which has come to us the result of their disbelief. David was crowned king twice, first by the tribe of Judah, and seven years afterwards by all Israel, so Christ now raised to the right hand of God in resurrection glory is owned by the election of grace of the present dispensation, and will be owned by and by as king of the whole earth. The blessings we have thus received from the Jews, have given them a claim upon us in connection with the preaching of the gospel during the present age. They have, not only the claim which springs from the fact that they are part of the world needing the gospel, and of the nations from whom the bride is to be gathered, but a special and prior claim, we having received so much through them. Our debt to the Jew is one of gratitude as well as common responsibility. Their rejection of Messiah has brought upon them judgment, scattering, prejudice and blindness. They are broken off, scattered and peeled, enemies of the gospel for our sakes. God has most strikingly fulfilled his prophetic word to them as it is written in Deut. xxix. (which chapter read) a prophetic word full of hope for Israel in their present desolation and suffering. As we have already seen, this is but temporary and part of the purpose of God for the nation and for the world.

Their national blessing is yet to be secured in connection with the coming of their Messiah, and the time of trouble they will have to pass through under the antichrist, when they will be dealt with by God on account of their sins, and be led to call for his interposition in judgment and deliverance. Their Messiah will answer by coming for their deliverance, and they shall rejoice in the reception of him as they cry out: "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." As they look at him and see the wounds in his hands they will ask the question: "What are these wounds in thine hands?" He will reply: "Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends," and thus will the mystery of the cross will open out to him, and they will see by the Holy Spirit's teaching that the one whom they crucified eighteen hundred years ago was their true Messiah. The kingdom will then be set up in their midst, and their Messiah king shall administer judgment and justice in the earth. He will judge the nations in righteousness and his people with his truth.—The Rider's Christian.

Prepared by W. H. Rudy.

From an Odd Colony.

Perhaps the nearest approach, in actual contemporary human experience, to the ideal community depicted by William Dean Howells in his "Traveler from Altruria" is the little religious colony in Jerusalem usually referred to by travelers who have visited the Holy City as the "American Colony." Chicago will for a few months claim a branch of that interesting colony, as nine of its members are now located at 1084 West Monroe street, where they expect to remain for several weeks and perhaps months, awaiting the adjustment of two estates, from which it is hoped that their material resources will be increased to the amount of $70,000.

The entire colony numbers 27 souls and have been in existence for thirteen years. Information concerning its affairs and its personnel has always been difficult to obtain for the reason that they are to speak of themselves, their work and private affairs. It was only when urged that friends in America would be interested to know more of the true purpose and workings of the colony that its members would consent to talk for publication with a reporter for the Evening Post, who visited them there.

The little company now in this city includes Mrs. Amelia Gould, Mrs. Mary E. Whiting, Miss Ruth Whiting, Master John Whiting, Mrs. Anna Spafford, Miss Bertha Spafford, Miss Grace Spafford, Jacob Eliahu, and W. H. Rudy. Those still remaining in Jerusalem are 15 in number.

Nearly every member of the community, even to the youngest child, speaks at least three languages, and one of the elder members discourses fluently in seven tongues.

Those who were to day interviewed are "Brother" Jacob Eliahu and "Sister" Anna Spafford, who seem, by common consent, to be regarded as the spokesmen of the company. From them it was learned that their purpose in going to Jerusalem, rather than remaining in Chicago or any other city which might chance to have been most convenient, was not, as has commonly been supposed, to wait and watch for the literal reappearing of Christ, but to be at the vital point of observation for outlook upon the signs of the times by which the progress of the prophetic re-establishment of Christ's true kingdom shall be signalized. The progress of the occupation and rebuilding of Jerusalem upon the lines of Scriptural prophecy by the Jews is taken by this community to be indicative of the real progress of Christ's rule upon earth, and when that occupation is completed upon the specifications laid down in Jeremiah and Ezekiel then will the reign of Truth, according to these devotees, be inaugurated throughout the earth.

The passage of Scripture most frequently referred to by them is to be found in Jer. xxxi. 38–40.

Regarding this Scripture Brother Eliahu said:—"Now, in regard to the fulfillment of this prophecy, Jerusalem has lain in desolation since its destruction under Titus. Never have more than 2000 Jews been allowed to live in the city at a time until within our day. When we came there, in 1881, the Jewish population of the holy city was about 20,000; now they number between 40,000 and 50,000. Again, Notwithstanding the destruction has the city extended beyond the present wall, which is 400 years old. Many men now living in Jerusalem can remember when there was not a single dwelling outside these walls, while now the population outside is more than five times that inside.

The first improvements made were at the Jaffa gate. From here roads to the seaports and to commercial points throughout the country began to be built a little over twenty years ago, and from there the streets inside the walls began to be repaved, the sewers to be relaid and improvement inaugurated that has not been discontinued for ages. The first carriage drove up to Jerusalem twenty years ago.

Right inside this gate the foundations of the tower of Hananeel were unearthed in 1890. Around this gate and from there toward the east buildings were put up. These extended and covered the hill Zereh, lying due west, and compressed about to the hill Ophla, which slopes into the valley, literally honeycombed with rock-hewn tombs, at the entrance of which the very imposing heap of sacrificial ashes is located.

"Is it true," asked the reporter, "that the members of the colony give freely of their hospitality and labor to those who ask it, without asking any return for it?"

"Yes, that is true, we try to meet every demand that is laid upon us, whether it is entertainment in the home, for instruction in the languages, music and painting; for nursing the sick, taking care of children or doing the meanest kind of manual labor."

"Are any of the present number of your community those to whom you first rendered some personal service?"

"Certainly," replied Mr. Eliahu. "Take the case of Brother Elias. He was a young man who had graduated from the schools and was taking up the trade of a cooper with us. He was very appreciative and began to investigate the motives and principles of our life. Finally he became so impressed with the spirit of our family that he forsook the prospects that he had before him and asked to be allowed to become one of us. The disinterested spirit in which the work is done always has its effect, and sooner or later begets the same spirit in those who are its witnesses. We find this almost invariably true, and it is a permanent source of encouragement to us."

Regarding the division of labor and the nature of the service rendered to those about them by members of the colony Mr. Eliahu, in response to questions, explained that there was no effort to avoid humble or disagreeable tasks on the part of any one, as a principal object always in mind is that of learning the lessons of service and humility, and to even wish to avoid discomforts would be to lose the most valuable part of the service. He laid emphasis on the fact that there is no one in authority in the family and that natural fitness and circumstances always dictate the service to be done by each.

The house occupied by the Americans was built by a Turkish officer who was promoted to a more important post. While it is ancient and imposing in its exterior appearance it is comparatively modern inside, and is of liberal dimensions.

How long the little branch of the colony will remain in Chicago depends only on how long will be required to appeal to the law and bring about a test as to whether the executor of Mrs. Mary C. Whiting's estate shall be compelled to pay Mrs. Mary E. Whiting the $5,000 in controversy.—Chicago Post.

Conference Report.

The N. W. Conference of the Church of God, commenced on Friday evening, Oct. 12, 1894, with preaching by Bro. W. L. Skeels. On Saturday there was social meeting, preaching, and business meeting. By vote Bro. W. L. Skeels was elected evangelist for the following year, but he declined to serve, therefore the executive committee will dispose of the funds raised as they may see fit in sending ministers to new places to preach. On Sunday Bro. E. Groat preached to a large audience on the Birth of the Spirit. One young man was immersed by Bro. W. A. Prosser. At night Bro. W. A. Prosser spoke on the coming of Christ, and requested all those that would to read one verse about the same or speak as they choose. This was made interesting because of the number that took part. Meetings were held of evenings during the following week by Brothers W. A. Prosser, and W. L. Skeels, and good sermons were preached by both. On the Sunday following W. L. Skeels preached an able discourse on the Birth of the Spirit, after which two became obedient by baptism. There was good attendance all through the meeting. A goodly number of brothers and sisters from Washington and other places were present, and seemed to enjoy themselves. With what pleasure we look forward to a meeting like this. Laying aside all the cares of life for a short time to enjoy the company of those that have the same hope with us. Each meeting may be the last for some one of us and for this reason we should try and come. If we can enjoy ourselves here with care and trouble all around us, what will it be to be there, one great company, with no care, no sorrow, and nothing to molest or make us afraid. Even the most vivid imagination can hardly picture the joy and peace of a time like this, with Jesus in our midst, which will be the best of all. We were very much disappointed in not seeing our much respected Bro. Corbaley with us during this Conference. This is the second time this year that we have looked for him to come but have been disappointed. The other time being at our June meeting, his absence being on account of ill health, and this climate does not agree him. It would afford us much pleasure to hear words of truth presented by him once more. Another year is numbered with the past since we last met in conference. How swiftly the time is flying, we can hardly realize that each year is one less to live, one less to wait for Jesus to come. In this busy world and hurrying we are growing old, oh, so fast, and if Jesus does not soon come, in a short time life will be over for many of us, and we shall be missed from the number that gathers here from time to time. Knowing this to be true, let us try and live nearer to the teachings of our Savior in the year to come, for perilous times are upon the earth, all around us, and if we wish to be worthy to escape these things, let us pray always and trust in God.

OBITUARY

Mary Alice Taber was born April 9, 1868, and died at Plymouth, Ind. Dec. 7, 1894, aged 26 years, 7 mo. and 28 days. She was the only daughter of Cyrus and Rachel Taber, was born four miles south of this city, and has resided in Marshall County her entire lifetime. She leaves her mother and two brothers, Thomas of Argos, Ind. and John, now in California, besides numerous other relatives, and hosts of friends to mourn their loss. Alice was immersed by Elder S. A. Chaplin in the spring of 1878, and though a great sufferer with consumption, has ever lived as becomes the humble follower of Christ. Never complaining, though desiring life for the good of loved ones, her life has been a beautiful example of Christian faith, and those left behind can well emulate her. She will be missed—yes, she will be missed—most by those nearest to her by nature's ties. But the Church and Sunday School, relatives, and friends will miss her sadly. Words fail and seem weak when the heart is full. More cannot be said than "Alice was a good Christian girl." She looked forward with the bright eye of faith to the morning of the resurrection when she will rise from the cold grave, together with the faithful who have gone before, and those who are to follow, and be with her loved ones and with Christ. Till then farewell.

The funeral was largely attended, services being conducted by Elder L. E. Conner and J. L. Wince, at the family residence, on Sunday, Dec. 9, after which she was laid away to rest in Oak Hill Cemetery.

What is Man?

A compound of spirit, soul, and body, 1 Thess. v. 23.

Soul and spirit can be separated, Heb. iv. 12.

Body and spirit can be separated, Ps. civ. 29; John xxxiv 14, 15.

Body and soul synonymous, (Gen. Gen. ii. 7, xiv. 21; (Mark viii. 36, Luke ix. 25; compared.)

Man is a soul. Abraham took Sarai and Lot, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran. Gen. xii. That soul shall be cut off from his people Gen. xvii. 14; xlv 15; Ex. xii. 19.

Man has a Spirit. Received not the spirit, (Ruach) by the works of the law, Gal iii. 2. The spirit (Ruach) that dwelleth in us, Jas. iii. 5. There is a spirit, (Ruach) in man (Ruach) Job xxxii. xxxiii. ix.

The spirit is put in man by God. Thou sendest forth thy spirit, (Ruach) they are created, Ps. civ. 30. The spirit (Ruach) shall return to God who gave it, Eccl. xii. 7.

The spirit (Ruach) gives life. The spirit (Ruach) of God hath made me and the breath of the Almighty has given me life, Job xxxiii. 4. Son of man can the bones live? O Lord thou knowest. Behold I will cause breath (ruach) spirit to enter into you and ye shall live, but there was no breath (ruach) in them, and the breath (ruach) came into them (the corpses) and they lived and stood up, Ezek. xxxvii. 3 10.

The spirit withdrawn, man dies. Thou takest away their breath (ruach) they die and return to their dust. Psa. civ. 29. His breath (ruach) goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that day his thoughts perish. Psa. cxlvi. 4. If he gather unto himself his spirit (ruach) and his breath, all flesh shall perish together and man shall turn again unto dust. Job xxxiv. 14, 15. Lord Jesus receive my spirit, Pneuma, Greek, Ruach Hebrew, and he fell asleep, Acts vii. 60.

The spirit returns at death to God.—Then shall the dust return unto earth, (Earth) return to God who gave it. Eccl. xii. 7. Thou takest away their breath (ruach) they die, Psa. civ. 29.

All animals have this spirit as well as men.—Yea, they have all one breath (ruach) so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast. Eccl. iii. 9. All flesh wherein is the breath (ruach) of life. Gen. vi. 17, vii. 22 15.

The Soul, Nephesh Heb. Psyche Greek.

Souls are beasts as well as men. —Great whales and every living soul, Gen. i. 21. Man became a living soul. Gen. ii. 7. Let the earth bring forth the living after his kind, Gen. i. 21 29 20; ii. 19; Gen. ix. 15 10-12.

Souls are born. These she bare unto Jacob, sixteen souls; Gen. xlvi. 18. All the souls which came out of his loins, verse 20.

Souls eat and creep. The soul that eateth it shall be cut off. Ex. xii. 16; Lev. viii. 25. Every creature, nephesh, soul that creepeth on the face of the earth. Lev. xi. 46.

The soul is blood. The soul of all flesh is the blood thereof, Lev. xvii. 14. The blood is the life, nephesh, Deut. xii. 23.

The soul can die.—The soul that sinneth it shall die, Ezek. xviii. 20, 4. They smote all the souls with the edge of the sword. Josh. xi. 11. None can keep alive his own soul Psa. xxii 29; lxxxix. 48; xci. 20. My soul chooseth strangling and death rather than life. Job viii. 15.

The soul goes into the grave. His soul draweth near unto the grave, Job xxxiii. 22 28 30. To bring back his soul from the pit, Sheol. Thou wilt not leave my soul in sheol, hell, Psa. xvi. 10; Acts ii 27. Hades. God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave, sheol. Psa. xlix. 15. For unless the Lord had been my help, my soul had soon dwelt in silence, Psa. xciv. 17, R. V. Hades, Septuagint.

The soul can be resurrected.—Thou wilt not leave my soul, Psuche, in Hades, the grave. Acts ii. 27. R. V. And I saw the souls Psuche of them that were beheaded Rev. xx. 4.

Soul may live forever.—He shall save his soul alive, Ezek. viii. 27. What shall it profit a man—if he lose his own soul, Mark viii. 36. Soul and self the same. For what is a man advantaged—if he lose himself, Luke ix. 25. He that hateth his soul in this world shall keep it unto life eternal, John xii. 2. This identifies the soul as man.

Soul can be destroyed. Able to destroy both soul and body in (the) hell. Matt. x. 28.

SYNONYMS.

Man consists of a soul and body vivified by the Spirit of God. Soul and body are indifferently used to signify man. Animals as well as men are souls. Animals as well as men have a spirit. The spirit from God gives life to all living creatures. The spirit returns to God and all creatures die. The soul born, eats, creeps, can be slain by the sword, dies, goes into the grave, can be raised, endowed with immortality or destroyed. When the spirit is withdrawn man (soul and body) dies returns to dust and consciousness is lost. The process the same with animals and all living creatures. Man however, through Christ can be restored to life again and again be made immortal.

Soul in Scripture, is translated from Nephesh, Heb. Psuche, Greek.

Spirit in Scripture is translated from Ruach, Heb. pneuma Greek. The words are never confounded or used interchangeably.

Nephesh Heb. Psuche Greek. Ruach Heb.

Poetry.

The Dawn of Light.

We wander here in earth below,
We have not found the rest
Our daily path is often dark
With winter's dreary gale
A ray doth come, and brings to light
As gazing on the blue.
We hunger for the land to burst,
The glory streaming through.

Our weary feet keep toiling on,
We hope for on the prize;
We run not there by the way
Waiting for sun to rise.
Each bend a brighter beacon light bear,
Dawn is just before the light;
The night of time doth mean us on,
With sun and tender might.

The wanderer sighs for o'er the sea,
Land is the nation's tear;
There is a heaving lea and fro,
Of peace we know no more.
The struggle, hard for each to bear,
The sight's unbroken still.
The raging darkness will not cease,
Till dawn of light with glory fill.

We cast aside the picture drear,
Of sin and sorrow here below,
A glimmer of the light we see,
We feel the faintest glow;
It seems to come into our hearts,
And leave a footprint there;
Its heavenly calling sound us now,
And breathe rapture everywhere.

We bow in prayer to him who gives
The light upon our way;
We're waiting for the faintest dawn,
To usher in the glad some day.
Then all the earth from every clime,
The starry heets up in the sky,
Will all refrain in one glad song,
To praise the King on high.

The Kingdom of God.

"Then Samuel told the people the manner of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the Lord." 1 Sam. x. 25.

There is perhaps no theme in the Holy Scriptures, that is more widely discussed, or a greater diversity of opinion, than the subject of the kingdom of God. It is claimed, however, by some that there are some religious bodies that make a hobby of the subject, and cause all other questions to become subservient to this; but it is questionable whether a hobby can be made of this topic, from the fact that all other questions concerning our ultimate salvation merge into this; for it is the realization of hope, the substance of that for which we are seeking, the home of the redeemed, our eternal abiding place. It was the burden of our Savior's ministry, and "Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house preaching the kingdom of God and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ."

Among the views entertained by different people, (and no doubt they are honest and sincere in their convictions) are these: The kingdom of God is "in our hearts;" it is "beyond the realms of time and space;" It is "entirely spiritual;" it was "established on the day of Pentecost simultaneously with the Church. Therefore church and kingdom are one and the same; and the terms are used synonomously wherever found in the Scriptures." And yet others, that the kingdom of God did at one time exist upon the earth, but through the gross sins of its rulers and subjects, it was overturned, but will be restored again at the second coming of the Lord who will be King of kings and Lord of all, with all the kingdoms of this world subject to it; therefore a universal kingdom. Now as there is but one Faith, one Lord, one Father of all, who is over all, it is evident that all these theories cannot be true. If there are two theories upon any subject, and one is right the other must be wrong; or, they both may be wrong, but they cannot both be right. The question then very naturally arises, how may we know when we are right? "All Scripture is given by inspiration," and is sufficient for our instruction unto salvation; and while we will offer a few thoughts for the benefit of earnest seekers, we will not attempt a learned exegesis of the matter, acknowledging our inability to do so in the first place, it not being required in the second, for we think God's plan of ultimate salvation is so plain, that a "wayfaring man though a fool may not err therein." If it is admitted that the Bible was written under the direct supervision of the Holy Spirit, it must be in perfect harmony with itself. Therefore any position that harmonizes with the Word of God, and has a "Thus saith the Lord" to support it must be the correct one. To obtain a clear understanding of this subject, it is necessary to go back to the early Scriptures and learn whether there was ever a kingdom called God's kingdom upon the earth. By reference to Deut. xvii. 14, 15 we find these words: "When thou art come unto the land which the Lord thy God hath given thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say I will set a king over me like as all the nations that are about me; Thou shalt in any wise set him king over thee whom the Lord thy God shall choose." Here, then is a prediction that these should be a kingdom, located upon the territory that God had given them and ruled by a man of God's choosing, which prediction was verified 350 years later. See 1 Sam. x. 24. God chose Saul to be king over Israel, and Samuel by virtue of his official position wrote the "manner of the kingdom in a book." The manner of the kingdom was the laws and rules and statutes, for the government of the kingdom in accordance to that given by the great lawgiver Moses. See Deut. 14th chap. This kingdom was to continue so long as they should "fear the Lord and serve him in truth;" but if they should do wickedly, "they should become a proverb, and a byword among all nations whither the Lord should lead them." But it is affirmed that this was only a temporal kingdom, as were other kingdoms existing at that and subsequent times. Let us see what the record says. David was the second man that God chose to be king over Israel, and Solomon the son of David was the third; and we find this promise to David in regard to the throne and its occupant. When thy (David's) days are expired, I will raise up thy seed after thee which shall be of thy sons. He shall build me an house, and I will stablish his throne forever; and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee. But I will settle him in my house and my kingdom forevermore. 1 Chron. xvii. 11-14. But objector again says, we cannot take those statements literally, for now there is no kingdom of David in existence. Partly right and partly wrong. The Word of God is immutable. The promise to Israel was that the kingdom should continue as long as they should "serve him in truth." The individual promise to David was that it should be everlasting. The children of Israel violated the contract by "doing wickedly," which culminated in the wicked reign of Zedekiah the last king, to whom God said: "Remove the diadem, take off the crown; this shall not be the same. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ezek. xxi. 26, 27. In the first clause of the 27th verse is shown the execution of the judgment passed upon them for disobedience. The last clause shows by the adverb "until," that it was temporarily overthrown, until one worthy should come to whom it should be given. Although the decree of the Almigaty has scattered these people among the nations of the earth, and thrown down the tabernacle of David, yet he has promised to restore them again, and to rebuild the tabernacle of David, for he says, In that day. (What day? When the Lord shall appear in glory, Psa. ii. 9; after taking a people out of the Gentiles for his name, Acts xv. 14) will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old. Amos. ix. 11. Thus as the kingdom was literally overthrown through transgression, just as literally may we look for its restoration through obedience. As to the one found "worthy" to sit upon this restored throne, Luke bears the testimony that his name shall be called JESUS. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 31, 32, 33. This then is the worthy person who comes to receive and set up the overturned kingdom of Ezek. xxi. 26 and of which Isaiah says there shall be no end, Isa. ix. 7. He is the one that should be glorified, and should sit upon the throne of glory, the throne of David, the throne of restored Israel. But there is much controversy as regarding the time in which the kingdom should be set up. This is a hopeful sign that men are seeking the truth. The truth will bear investigation, while error is seeking a subterfuge hand which to cover up its sophistries. The disciples were interested in this same question, for Peter says, "Behold we have forsworn all and followed thee: what shall we have therefor? And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt. xix. 27, 28. At one time after Jesus had passed through Jericho on his way to Jerusalem he met a man by the name of Zacchaeus and held a conversation with him. The people that were with him overheard it, and evidently formed a wrong conclusion in regard to it, and because they were nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought the kingdom of God should immediately appear, he hastened to disabuse their minds of their error, by adding a parable that they could easily understand. He said therefore, "A certain nobleмen went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them 'Occupy till I come.'" Luke xix. 12, 13.

We believe the instructions given in Matt. iv. to the disciples in force today as fully as they were before the crucifixion. It was the only time Jesus ever taught them how to pray. There is more concentration of thought in that short prayer, covers more ground of vital import, and teaches a greater lesson of humility, of forgiveness, of penitence and love, than could have been crowded into volumes by an uninspired mind. In view, then, of the importance of that teaching, does it not seem unreasonable that it should become obsolete in two or three years? After the resurrection of Jesus, it was evident that the disciples had a hope that the kingdom would at once be restored to Israel, and asked, "Lord wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom again to Israel." Acts i. 6. And he said unto them, "It is not for you to know the times or seasons which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power when the Holy Ghost is come upon you." This was a direct answer to the question: it was more. There was a very important promise made, that was verified on the day of Pentecost. See Acts ii. 2. Luke xxiv. 49; John iv. 16, 26, etc. If the kingdom was to be set upon that day, why was the Savior silent upon a subject of such vast importance? In further refutation of the Pentecostal theory we refer the reader to Dan. ii. 31-45. Comment is unnecessary. Though Christ built his church upon the Rock of Peter's confession of him, yet the kingdom was held up before the church as something to be hoped for. Paul says "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers." Acts xxvi. 6. "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." Acts xxviii. 20. It was this hope that induced the apostles to endure afflictions of every kind, that they might receive a crown of glory when? "At his coming and kingdom."

When the disciples had gathered at Antioch, after being persecuted, and Paul had been dragged out of Lystra and left for dead, they "exhorted one another to steadfastly continue in the faith, for it was only through much tribulation that they could enter into the kingdom of God." These faithful ones were already in the church, and Paul says at the end of his ministry, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also, that love his appearing." 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8. He further charges Timothy, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. 2 Tim. iv. 1. But the stronghold of the advocates of the Pentecostal kingdom, the very citadel of their strength is in the following words: "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness and translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." Col. i. 13. The promises of God are so sure, that Paul says, "God calleth those things that be not, as though they were." To show that the language of Col. i. 13 is allegorical, compare it with Gen. xvii. 5 wherein God says, "Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee." This promise caused Abraham to "hope against hope:" though he knew in reality he was not a father of many nations, yet he had faith that he would be, because of the promise, and it was accounted to him for righteousness. In various places throughout the Scriptures, we read that "we have eternal life;" "we have redemption," etc. None can deny, but that we have these by faith and not at present realized. In the marginal reading of the passage under consideration we have "into the Son of his love." To our minds this appears to be the most consistent rendering, for it is in harmony with the whole book. John says "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him, that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. 1 John v. 20. By the above quotation it is evident that by obedience to the gospel, we are admitted into the Son of his love; into him that is true; through the gospel we are brought out of darkness into light; translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the body of Christ; into the church; into the hope of rewards to come, heirs to the kingdom that we will be permitted to share when he comes.

Paul says, "We are saved by hope; but a hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth (or hath) why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we in patience wait for it." Rom. viii. 24, 25. Note the analogy between Col. i. 6 to 9. The Revelator in writing to the seven churches who have in Asia, says: "I John, who also am your brother and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ; Who hath washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God his Father." Let us inquire, When we enter the church do we not have trials and tribulations? Is it not a constant warfare with the old man of the flesh? Is not a Christian held in scorn and contumely by the world? True a Christian life is enjoyable, but only because he is buoyed up by the hope of better things to come, and patiently watches and waits. If you are in the kingdom can you show to earnest men and women, evidences of your priesthood or kingship? Where are the joys that never end, the bloom of immortal youth, the crown of glory, the songs that incessantly float upon the perfumed air? Let us not deceive ourselves, but patiently wait for the time when our Lord will be revealed from heaven.

In unity with the evidence submitted, we hold that the kingdom can only be set up in connection with the coming of our Lord to judgment. We believe it will be a literal kingdom with Jesus Christ as king and the saints as co-rulers with him. Daniel says "But the judgment shall sit; and the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominion shall serve and obey him. Dan. vii. 26, 27. Let us bear the toil, and endure tribulations a little longer, that we may have a right to the tree of life and be permitted to drink of the crystal waters that flow from the throne of God. Let us have faith in the unfailing promises of omnipotence, that we may enter into those mansions where sickness, sorrow and pain can never come; where we may join in the anthem of that innumerable throng, and feel that for faithful continuance in well-doing, we have at last reached our eternal home. Submitted in love of the truth.

MERRITT ELLIOTT.

Knowledge, Faith, Opinion. No. 4.

After so long delay, for reasons I need not here state, I will proceed with our topic, the sentence pronounced on the serpent, Gen. iii. 15. Different opinions are held by good men and scholars as to what Jehovah meant by the words used—"I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed, it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." Now what is meant? Is it a matter of knowledge, faith, or opinion? I think I may say, no one can say he knows what is meant absolutely, nor that he believes a certain idea is the right one, but we can all say we think it means this or that. Of course we all believe the sentence in some way, that it is true, but just in what way we have our opinions and they differ. I will mention two or three different opinions. The first may be called, the general or orthodox idea, that the serpent is not primarily meant, but the devil, supposed to be a fallen or rebellious spirit or angel, and those who fell with him and wicked people are his seed, and that the woman and her seed are in a secondary sense Eve and her descendants, but primarily and chiefly the Virgin Mary and her Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Those holding this opinion look at the words as a promise, and very frequently speak of "the promise that the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head," by which is understood that Jesus as the Seed of the woman without a human father, will conquer satan and all his hosts, and put wickedness out of the world, and this view may be subdivided, but we leave that and mention the second view. It is this, that the serpent is on one side. The woman, Eve, on the other, "the serpent's seed are the wicked people, the woman's seed are the righteous people, Son Cain and Abel though both born of the woman yet Cain was of the serpent's seed, and so on down, the wicked being the seed of the serpent, and the righteous being the seed of the woman, that there was, and is yet, enmity between the two. That at last Jesus was born like other men. Joseph being his father, but that he was obedient in all things to God, he was righteous all life long and lived without sinning, and though he was slain, yet because he was righteous God raised him from the dead, and then he became the Son of God, and God highly exalted him and that made him head of all things under him, and he with all his saints will save the world and rid it of evil, destroying all the wicked, thus bruising the serpent's head. This second opinion also may be subdivided as while all believe Jesus to be the Son of God, now, one holds that he was God's Son from, or before the beginning, another at or from his birth of a virgin, another that he became God's Son at his baptism, and last at the resurrection. Now both those who hold the first view and those who hold the second view maintain that the sentence pronounced on the serpent is a promise that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. But third there are those who hold that there is no promise in that text, Gen. iii. 15, that the words mean just what they say, nothing more, nothing less. That if God wished to make a promise to the woman he would have done so, and made the promise to her and not have put it in the sentence on the serpent. This third view may be called the natural or literal view. Those holding this opinion point to the fact that such enmity between mankind and the serpent-kind has, and does exist. The seed of the woman does still crush the head of the serpent-kind, though he may often bruise his own heel in the operation, and that though some of the woman's seed may be killed by the serpent or serpent's seed yet the seed or descendants of the woman very largely prevails, and a very large portion of the earth suffer but little from the serpent's offspring. But, to look at opinion number two, that the two seeds mean simply the righteous as the woman's seed, and the wicked as the serpent's seed, then the serpent's seed have very largely prevailed, so much so, that nearly all mankind, though descended from the woman had become the serpent's seed, and God drowned them all leaving but one family of the woman's seed, and yet how soon was the earth full of the serpent's seed again! and instead of the woman's seed bruising the serpent's head it was the other way—the serpent's seed, Cain, bruised the woman's seed, Abel, and so it has been all the way down to the present. The wicked predominate. And as to the first or orthodox opinion who understand it as a promise that the woman's seed should bruise the serpent's head in a spiritual sense, meaning the devil etc. The naturalist says there is no such promise that the woman's seed should do any thing of the kind, and that even if there were that Jesus is not in any peculiar sense the seed of the woman. That Jesus is not the seed of any woman even the Virgin any more than every other person, is the seed of woman, that he is less the seed of the woman Eve mentioned in the text, than are we all, that the peculiarity of his birth was not on the part of his mother, but on the part of his Father. God was his Father! He was the seed of the woman only on the part of his mother, and that he was as much so as we are, so far as stated. Moreover, these, the naturalists, do not find it stated that any woman's seed should conquer or destroy the serpent, meaning the devil or fallen angel. They read that God, "shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly" and that the "Son of God was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil." 1 John iii. 8. Also see Heb. ii. 14. They see nothing as to the woman or human side of our Lord, nor, so far as the old serpent, dragon, or devil's destruction is stated, does it seem that even Jesus does it actually. Rev. xx. 1, says, "I saw an angel come down from heaven having the key of the abyss and a great chain in his hand, and he laid hold of the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil and satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, (abyss) and shut him up and set a seal upon him, etc., for a thousand years, after which he is to be loosed a little season, when he is again to deceive the nations, and he will gather his armies around the camp of the saints when fire shall come down from God out of heaven and devour the armies, but the devil is to be cast into the lake of fire, etc., but not a word here about any seed of woman bruising or crushing the head of his majesty, the serpent, dragon, or which ever name you [illegible] rejects the whole of the spiritualizing theory, and takes it literally that the sentence on the serpent as expressed means what it says, no more, no less, the same is true in the sentence on the woman and on the man, which will come in my next paper. Now let me say to my readers, use your own judgment and hold the opinion you in your own judgment think the most probable, but dont dogmatize and insist that all must agree with you on pain of being disfellowshipped. Whether you hold to number 1st, 2nd, or 3rd opinion it is only an opinion, and there is room for doubt, since others who are just as learned, good, and conscientious as you are hold one of the other opinions. Let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind. There is one faith in which I think all or nearly all the writers of our paper, THE RESTITUTION, agree, but there are many opinions amongst us, the holding of which will neither damn nor save us. As to which of the three above opinions I hold myself I will not say here, for I do not wish to press my own opinions on my readers, further than to say, I do think we are generally safe to take the Scriptures just as they read. I have heard so many things contended for, that I feel like calling in question nearly everything till I can verify by the Word of God. In my next we will look into the sentence passed on the woman and the man.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked, eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the Gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, send the paper to all new names received before Jan. 1, 1895, till Jan. 1, 1896 for $1.50, besides this we will send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Bro. S. R. Clinkenbeard of Texas, tells of having been at work lately, and as a result one more was added to the body of Christ.

Bro. Conner with Brother and Sister Woodward is holding meetings in Rensselaer, Ind., and we learn that three persons made confession on last Friday evening.

WORD FROM BRO. Pettigrew says that Bro. N. H. Geiselman will hold a series of meetings at Manatee, Fla. soon, and that Bro. and Sister R. S. Dwiggins were at that place now.

A Little too Long.

Some brother or sister sends us the following from The Sunday School Times, and in printing it here we wish to most emphatically say "Amen" to the sentiment expressed. We plead guilty to having published many articles that are "too long." We have articles that we cannot publish for the same reason. Why not "boil it down," write short articles oftener. Following is the item: "How much easier it is to write or speak at length, than to write or speak briefly! Greater ability and greater experience are requisite to put a thing compactly and comprehensively, than to spin it out unduly, or to take twice or ten times as many words for its expression as are absolutely necessary. In a prayer-meeting talk, in an anniversary address, in a written article, there is always danger of saying too much; there is almost never a danger of being too brief. A hundred writers and speakers err by overdoing, where one errs by cutting short. It is a great thing to keep always within due limits; and it is worth any man's while to strive to that end. An old minister, reviewing his pastoral labors before his people, said modestly: 'My friends, I am sure I've done many foolish things in my lifetime, and I know I've done some very wrong things; but by the grace of God I've never done a long thing.' It would be well if more of us were watchful, as we go on in life, in order to make such a record as that good man's."

Ingersoll Rebuked.

Brother Robert McLauchlan delivered a lecture at The Church of the Blessed Hope, Cleveland, Ohio, Sunday, evening, December 2nd, to a good audience, in reply to Robert Ingersoll's recent attack on the Bible, and chose as his text Psalms l. 21, "Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such a one as thyself, but I will reprove thee."

"And Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God, for with God all things are possible." Mark x. 27.

Thus spake he who was divinely commissioned the reveal the Father unto us, and his words were always with power.

The folly of finite man with his limited knowledge, and circumscribed capacity, setting bounds to the Almighty, and pronouncing this, and that, impossible, ought to be apparent to all.

How can puny man with his ten feet measuring rod fathom the boundless depths of the Infinite? That is the question for us to settle here tonight, and the problem should not be difficult, nor the issue uncertain.

Among other things Brother McLauchlan said:—

"Ingersoll very wisely made no reference to the Acts of the Apostles and the epistles, in which are recorded the great sufferings the apostles endured in bearing testimony to the resurrection and ascension of Christ, and the doctrines he gave them to promulgate. In the history of the world it has never been known that men would endure persecution, cold, hunger, nakedness, stripes, bonds, imprisonment, banishment, and death itself, to bear testimony to what they themselves knew to be a lie. To believe that, would require a larger amount of credulity than is necessary to the acceptance of miracles which throw all infidels into spasms.

It is a dreadful thing that a man should deliberately set himself to the work of destroying the historical verity of divine revelation, a revelation that has done so much toward humanizing and civilizing the world, apart from its still greater power in making eternal life available to those who believe and obey its divine teaching.

Although agnostics have no faith in miracles themselves, the position they take that miracles are impossible is an unwarranted assumption, and ought to be resented by all who profess the religion of Christ, who in his own personality was a miracle, and his teaching was attested by miracles which God did by him not in secret, but before all the people, even his most bitter opponents.

All who are well acquainted with the world's history ought to know there are three things which have been so fully proved and firmly established that they cannot be overthrown by all the infidels in the world, namely: First, that there is a God, the supreme ruler of the universe. Second, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and third that the Bible is the word of God. If the agnostic will open his eyes he will see abundant proof all around him to sustain these three propositions.

In Ingersoll's tirade against the prophets of Israel he very wisely avoided making any allusion to the predictions of the ruin of Nineveh, Babylon, and Tyre long before their overthrow. So long as ancient Tyre is submerged by the waves of the sea, so long as Idumea is a desolation and Jerusalem lies waste, and her children scattered in every nation under heaven; so long have we enduring monuments to the authenticity and divine inspiration of the Scriptures.

In speaking of the prophets Ingersoll asks, 'What are these inspired books to man? Is one of them as entertaining as Robison Crusoe, or the travels of Gulliver?' We answer, that may depend on the intellectuality of the man, how childish he is.

It is true they are of no use to a man who reads to scoff and scorn; but in them the God of heaven, whom he despises, has stooped down to man with a revelation of his will, and graciously made known his plans and purposes a long way in the future, and has described the unbeliever, and the bold blasphemer correctly, and given the presence of such men as characteristic of the age in which we live, and warned all right-minded persons against them, and for such counsel they are invaluable.

It was very unbecoming in Ingersoll to speak of Elijah and Elisha as a 'couple of prophets who were working for profit.' We never read of their traveling over the country giving lectures and charging their audience fifty cents a head. On the contrary we find the prophets at that time reduced to great straits, and instead of stopping at first class hotels, and enjoying many luxuries, they had to take shelter in dens and caves of the earth, and were fed on bread and water, and were reduced to this extremity by their opposition to a wicked king and his more wicked idolatrous wife. Do you think bad men, 'working for profit' would have so incurred the king's displeasure? Bread and water was frugal fare, and caves have often been the homes of God's people, but they endured as seeing him who is now invisible, but who ere long will be manifest, and then God's prophets who are now reproached will receive an abundant reward—a crown of life that fadeth not away.

Ingersoll said, "There are millions of people who regard the Bible as a revelation from the breast and heart of God to man. There are millions who consider it as their guide. They remember this, and forget the dark abyss, and the dungeon of eternal pain. This forgetfulness poisons the soul, and makes enemies of liberty." He professes to be very brave, but why did he not meet Allen B. Magruder in open debate, who accepted Ingersoll's challenge years ago and twice sent him an acceptance once by registered letter. It was his own challenge, and when accepted he would not appear. Had he met Mr. Magruder he would have encountered a foeman more than worthy of his steel, and he might then have learned, as he undoubtedly did afterwards from Magruder's published reply, that the Bible is not responsible for the eternal pain dogma taught in its name. Mr. Magruder was a public barrister in Baltimore, a man of culture, and of wide reputation as an author.

Eternal torment is good capital for Ingersoll to trade on. He can gain people's sympathy thereby, and it is greatly to be lamented that the religion of Jesus Christ should be charged with such a stigma that does not belong to it, and is utterly opposed to the spirit of its teaching. Not that we believe the Bible teaches universalism, far from it, but it does teach in plain and positive terms the destruction of the wicked: Psalms 145, 20; Philippians 3, 19; 2 Thessalonians 1, 9; Ezekiel 18, 4. 'The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Romans 6, 23. And this is in perfect harmony with the character of a righteous and just God. He offers pardon to the penitent who seek the ways of God, but evil doers shall not dwell with him, nor sinners stand in his sight.

If those who profess the religion of Christ were better enlightened as to what the Bible teaches regarding the nature and destiny of man, they would learn that immortality is no attribute of his nature: that immortal soul, or deathless spirit, or anything equivalent is not once mentioned in connection with his present existence in the whole Book of God. It is of Pagan, not Christian origin. Socrates and Plato taught it to their followers; Christ never. He everywhere and on all occasions speaks of man as mortal—perishing. He tells them his mission is to save them from perishing and to give them eternal life. It is inherent in man, but is the gift of God, and in his word he has made known the conditions on which it will be bestowed. The conditions are faith and obedience. Faith in the promises God has made relative to eternal life and this is the chief reason why God stooped down to man with a revelation of his mind and will. The future life necessitates a resurrection of the dead. Christ recognized this and promised, "I will raise them up at the last day." John vi. 40. Paul recognized it and reasoned if there is no resurrection then they who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished, 1 Corinthians xv. 18. Believers are not yet in possession. They are only 'heirs according to the hope of eternal life,' Titus iii. 7. 'This is the promise that he has promised us, even eternal life.' 1 John ii. 25. Resurrection involves miracle, and infidels and scientists denounce miracles as impossible, and so they cap the foundation of the Christian religion. A miracle is supernatural, that is above nature, but the God who made the world is above nature and cannot he suspend the laws of nature at his pleasure? 'Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?'

The knowing ones who claim that supernatural events are impossible, rule miracles out of the question. Think of the cool effrontery of those men, and the credulity of their followers. 'Supernatural events are impossible,' what presumption! How do they know? It ill becomes the children of a day who know comparatively nothing to talk so arrogantly. All nature attests the existence of an all-wise God, the designer of the universe, who created and upholds all things; and if such a God exists, he is a supernatural being, that is, he is above and beyond nature which is the product of his will. That being the case it is just as reasonable to expect him to do supernatural things, as it is for us, his creatures, to do natural things. If nothing supernatural exists, then God does not exist, and no revelation of his will can exist. This says the foundation of all revealed religion, leaves man in hopeless orphanage, without the moral and spiritual instruction of his father—God.

It is related of George Lyttleton, an English baron, and Gilbert West, LL. D., both skeptics, that they agreed between themselves to write against Christianity. Lyttleton was to expose the conversion of St. Paul, and West was to expose the resurrection of Christ. Each one applied himself to the task before him, but as they advanced the evidence of the truth of both narratives became so convincing that each unknown to the other, had to relinquish his task: Lyttleton hastened to inform West of his conversion to the truth of Christianity, and judge of his amazement when West exclaimed, 'and I have found a risen Savior.' Notwithstanding that Ingersoll calls the resurrection of Christ a fable, it is the best attested fact in the history of the world.

It is the knowledge which this book of books imparts, that shows man his true relation to God, to nature, and to his fellow men; it sheds a heavenly light where otherwise there would be thick darkness. It produces the sweetest harmony where otherwise there would be nothing but discordant sounds.

Ingersoll cannot be regarded as anything but a superficial Declaimer. There is no depth to him. His capital is bold denunciation and reckless assumption: he uses no subtle argument which requires philosophic reasoning or metaphysical disquisition to overcome, and hence he is less likely to gain converts and do harm, than the man who coming under a friendly garb—would say, "The first disciples may have been fascinated by a shadowy promise of the overthrow of their heathen conquerors, and the establishment of a Jewish kingdom under a national sovereign, but we may reasonably suppose that the language was typical, and capable only of a metaphorical fulfillment." These are the men who are most to be dreaded, who while professing religion, make the Bible of none effect by putting a metaphorical meaning upon language of the plainest import, and who have the daring presumption to speak of God's oath and promise of future glory as shadowy promises, by which the first disciples may have been fascinated.

What stronger proof can we have of the divine origin of the Bible, than its survival amidst the cruel torturing to which, for ages, it has been subjected by the boldest of enemies, and the erroneous conceptions of its professed friends and misguided defenders.

Notwithstanding that miracles are attacked alike by the professed friends and avowed enemies of Christianity, the truth still remains the same that the Bible and miracles must stand or fall together.

The history of the children of Israel is a history of miraculous intervention on the part of Jehovah in their behalf. Their signal deliverance from Egypt was an epoch in their history never to be forgotten, and the observance of the passover from that time down to the present by the Hebrew nation ought to silence forever all doubt on the subject.

The dividing of the Red Sea to allow a people liberated from slavery to pass over dry shod is not a fiction, or an allegory, but a narrative of fact recorded in the nation's annals.

A people just escaped from a bondage the most oppressive are brought to the extremity of desperation, hemmed in on every side, the Red Sea before them, and Pharaoh and his hosts in pursuit in the rear. No wonder that they exclaim to Moses, "Because there were no graves in Egypt hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness, wherefore hast thou thus dealt with us? And then in bold and striking contrast to this unbelief, listen to the profound and abiding faith of Moses, when he replied, "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the Salvation of the Lord which he will show you today, for the Egyptians whom ye have seen today, ye shall see them again no more forever. The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace. And the Lord said unto Moses, "Wherefore criest thou unto me, speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward: but lift thou thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea and divide it, and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea." And we read "The waters were a wall unto them on their right hand and on their left."

The law of gravitation was at that moment suspended, and why not? Is it not reasonable to believe that the God who made the laws of nature can suspend them at his will?

No wonder that the Royal bard of Israel in lofty strains, again and again, made this deliverance the theme of his sublime and reverent song. "The wondrous works which God did in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red Sea."

The encompassing of the walled city of Jericho and blowing with ram's horns as they made the daily circuit of the city, may provoke a derisive smile on the part of the unbeliever, but with all the boasted achievements of the nineteenth century, and the power of dynamite, no military strategem was ever so effective as this.

The secret of success lay in the Ark of the Lord, and in obedience to his commands.

Then again after many years residence in the land when Sennacherib, king of Assyria reproached the living God, and brought dismay to the heart of king Hezekiah. God again manifested his power for the defense of his people, and in one night, without one uplifted sword, one hundred and eighty-five thousand of the Assyrian army are destroyed.

You see God was defending his witnesses; and the Hebrew nation today, notwithstanding its backsliding and dispersion, is a witness to the truth of divine revelation, and the unity of the God of Abraham.

The predictions of the prophets as to the destruction of Jerusalem, and their dispersion among all nations has been literally fulfilled, and by the same authority their restoration will in due time be accomplished.

After referring to the miracles of New Testament times, and the sympathy of Jesus towards the Widow of Nain, in contrast to Ingersoll, who in his recent lecture only mentioned the word widow once, and then it was to raise a laugh at her expense, Bro. McLauchlan closed by an earnest appeal to all honest skeptics to carefully read, and impartially consider the claims of the Bible as a divine revelation.

How the Czar's Death Affects Europe.

Sergius Stepniak, the Russian Nihilist, has contributed to the North American Review a singularly interesting paper upon the manner in which the Czar's death will be likely to affect Europe. As Stepniak is something more than a Nihilist, being a man of letters and an observer intimately acquainted with the internal affairs of Russia, his discussion of the subject has unusual significance, while at the same time it is free from any suspicion of sensation or gossip. The writer reasons from facts so far as the facts are accessible, and in this case he freely confesses that the facts are few, since "all the heirs to great crowns are more or less blanks," while as to the new Czar even the scantiest hints are wanting. As Stepnaik says:

The Russian army and officials and the millions of people in towns and villages have been summoned by the toll of the church bells to their places of worship, there to take the solemn oath of allegiance to the new Czar, promising to blindly, implicitly, and unreasoningly obey every order of his, regardless of their own feelings, natural affections, or interests. And yet not a single one of them has an idea of the man, or rather the boy, into whose hands they put their destinies, and they will not ask from him any pledge or promise in return.

While Stepnaik declares that no one can tell what the new Czar has in store for Europe, he still is of the opinion that he will follow his father's example and play the role of peacemaker. While he believes that Alexander III. had none of the qualities of a statesman, and that he used his enormous power for obstructing the natural progress of Russia, he still gives him the credit of having been the peacemaker of the nations and of having made the preservation of the status quo his ideal. He believes that the new Czar will follow in his steps. One reason for this belief is the hostility of the educated classes to the autocratic system. During the last thirty years, notwithstanding the stagnant immobility of its political institutions, Russia has made an enormous advance. Its economic institutions have assumed the European type and the educated class is European in its culture, and hence autocracy is absurd to it. Says Stepnaik:

For one man who joins the revolution there are thousands of men who are secretly in sympathy with the efforts to have done with the present regime, and to obtain for their country freedom and representative government, which would make the Russians masters of their own destinies. And behind them there are hundreds of thousands and millions of people who, not having logic enough to fully adhere to a constitutional programme in the European sense, are dissatisfied with the present regime and want changes in the constitutional line.

A second and still stronger reason for his belief is that Russia's finances could not stand the strain of a great war. With its huge population and system of universal conscription Russia could put into the field as many soldiers as Germany, Austria, and Italy together, but the State finances would not admit of it. They would not warrant an army larger than that of Germany, and for a war of invasion not more than one-fourth of that force. Stepnaik, in defense of his surmise, makes the following interesting statement:

While in the war of 1870-71 Germany hurled upon France over two-thirds of its nominal forces, Russia in 1877 could send against the Turks only about 300,000 combatants; and the effort exhausted her finance so completely that she was compelled to stop midway without accomplishing her historical task. Since that time things have not improved, but have gone from bad to worse; Russian finances and credit being equally shattered. On the eve of the Turkish war, when her credit was naturally at a low ebb, the government of Russia was able to obtain a loan of eighty-seven and one-third million rubles at the premium of eight and three-tenths per cent. Since 1890, notwithstanding the glamour of Vyshnegradsky's schemes and the enthusiasm of her French allies, the Russian government had to pay a premium of about 20 per cent (194)—a fine upon its poverty which is exceeded only by that imposed by the financiers upon insolvent Turkey. And even at that price Alexander III. could not get the money he wanted. The loan of last autumn has not been covered yet and is not likely to be, although the French subscribed to it eight times over. The great famine of 1891, the result of many years of mis-government, was a blow to the Russian finances as well as to the prosperity of the people.

For these reasons Stepniak does not believe that the new Czar will consent to embark upon a great war unless he loses his mind. He is convinced that Russia must adhere to a peaceful policy and that the real danger lies with Germany, whose young Emperor he believes would not hesitate to give the signal for butchery were it not for the cordial understanding between Russia and France. If that understanding should be disturbed then every thing must be left to conjecture. Everything would depend upon the personality of the autocrat.—Chicago Tribune.

The Lord's Prayer.

The prevalent belief doubtless is that in whatever exact words it was originally spoken, it was wholly the creation of Jesus himself, and therefore of divine origin. The facts seem to show that such is not the case. In Conway's "Sacred Anthology," which is a selection from the sacred books of all religions, will be found the following ancient Jewish morning and evening prayers, with which Jesus was, of course, familiar, and of which the Lord's prayer is evidently largely a condensation: "Our Father who art in heaven, proclaim the unity of thy name, and establish thy kingdom perpetually and reign over us to all eternity. Our Father who art in heaven. Thy will be done on high; vouchsafe to bestow a peaceful and tranquil mind to those who honor thee on earth, but do, O Lord, what seems good in thy sight. Give me only bread to eat and raiment to put on. Forgive, O Lord, those who have offended me. Let us, O Lord, not fall into the power of sin, transgression, or iniquity, and lead us not into temptation. Subdue our inclinations that they may be subservient to thee. Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, power, glory, and majesty."

"He sendeth his rain, and maketh his sun to shine upon the just and the unjust;" but he doth not send wealth, nor shine honor and virtues upon men equally; common benefits are to be communicate with all, but peculiar benefits with choice.

Poetry.

In the Heart.

If no kindly thought or word
We can give some soul to bless;
If our hands, from hour to hour,
Do no deed of gentleness;
If to lone and weary ones
We no comfort will impart—
Though 'tis summer in the sky,
Yet 'tis winter in the heart.

If we strive to lift the gloom
From a dark and burdened life;
If we seek to lull the storm
Of our fallen brother's strife;
If we bid all hate and scorn
From the spirit to depart
Though 'tis winter in the sky,
Yet 'tis summer in the heart.

Iniquity Abounding, and the World of the Ungodly Ripening for Judgment.

"And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Matt. xxiv. 11 to 13.

These words are a part of our Lord's great prophecy concerning events that were to precede his second coming. Instead of "the love of many" the Am. Bible Union translates, correctly, "the love of the many." And by "the many" the commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown says is meant "the most, i. e., the generality of professed disciples." Now observe 1st, Iniquity abounds, exactly as our Lord foretold. This was afterward enlarged upon by his apostles who command us to "know" that in the last days "perilous times" would come when men would be "lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers," etc., and would "not endure the sound doctrine," but after their own lusts would "heap to themselves teachers" and turn away their ears from the truth, and be turned unto fables. 2 Tim. iii. 1 to 5; iv. 3, 4. Those heaps of false teachers were to "bring in destructive heresies" (R. V.), and "many" were to follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of "the truth" was to be evil spoken of and scoffed at, as it is in these last days. 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2; iii. 3, 4.

And such times are truly "perilous," for thousands though sincerely desiring to find the truth are perplexed and discouraged by the multitude of conflicting sects and false teachers that abound in the world; and thousands are ensnared by the other multiplied forms of iniquity that were to characterize these times.

Modern statistics prove that iniquity already abounds. Pagans, Mohammedans, Jews, Greeks and Roman Catholics, all combined number about 1,348,000,000. Protestants number about 110,000,000. Deduct from these Protestants all the lukewarm, hypocritical, heretical, and otherwise unworthy, and what a little flock would remain! "The British and Foreign Evangelical Review," July 1886, says, "The number of Mohammedans and heathen now in the world is vastly greater than when Protestant missions began a hundred years ago. The heathen and Mohammedan population of the world is more by two hundred millions, while the converts and their families do not amount to three millions." That is, although the percentage of increase of converts was greater, yet the actual increase of heathen and Mohammedans combined was seventy times greater than of Protestant converts. Dr. Strong, General Secretary of the Evangelical Alliance (U. S.), says, "Fully one half of the population of the United States, or more than 32,000,000, never attend any church service, Protestant or Roman Catholic. The situation in England seems to be the same. . . not more than two per cent of the English workingmen attend any place of worship, Papal or Protestant." He further remarks, "Mr. Moody said a few years ago that the gulf between the church and the masses is growing deeper, wider, and darker every hour." A military officer estimates that in 1869 the armies of Europe were 6,058,000 men; and that the present military laws would make them in 1882 a host of 22,120,000.

Now iniquity has long been permitted to exist in a growing state. The profane and vain babblings of the wicked have been allowed to "increase unto more ungodliness," their word to "eat as doth a canker" (or, spread as a cancer), and the mystery of iniquity to "work," from Paul's day till now. 2 Tim. ii. 16, 17; 2 Thes. ii. 7. Thus "the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah," the Amorites were spared till their iniquity became "full," and the tares are allowed to "grow" until the harvest. 1 Pet. iii. 20; Gen. xv. 16; Matt. xiii. 30. But this growing process implies a ripening at last. Therefore, also observe

2nd. "The world of the ungodly" is ripening for judgment. It is compared to tares ripening for the harvest, and grapes for the vintage. Read Matt. xiii. 30, 40; Isa. lxiii. 1 to 6; Joel iii. 12, 13; Rev. xiv. 14 to 20.

These four testimonies show that burning the tares, trampling the wicked in "fury," assembling the nations "to judge" them at Jehoshaphat, and casting the vine of the earth into "the great winepress of the wrath of God," are judgments inflicted on the wicked at the coming of the Lord. And Isa. xxvi. 9 says, "When the judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness;" that is, the remnant of inhabitants left after those judgments. Read Psa. lviii. 10, 11; Zec. xiv. 16; Rev. xv. 4.

In view of all this, what must Christians do? "Be diligent that ye be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." 2 Pet. iii. 14. Be zealous to save sinners; "pulling them out of the fire," as brands from the burning; trying "by all means to save some." Jude 23; 1 Cor. ix. 22. Our Lord came "to save sinners." "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." 1 Tim. i. 15; Phil. ii. 5. And what must sinners do? "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call upon him while he is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." "Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways." Isa. lv. 6, 7; Ezek. xxxiii. 11. "Save yourselves from this crooked generation." "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Ac. ii. 40; Eph. v. 14. These are words of prophets and commands of apostles; "to mindful" of them. 2 Pet. iii. 2.

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 22.

1. Saying, Men, brethren and fathers, May ye have given ear unto my defence just now unto you.

2. And when they heard that he was addressing them in the Hebrew dialect, they kept quiet all the more.

3. And he saith, I am a Joudaium man of influence, begotten in Tarsos of Kilikia, brought up moreover in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, instructed according to the partinlity of the law of the fathers, being a zealot for God, even as ye all are today.

4. And I persecuted this way unto death, binding and delivering up to prison both men and women,

5. As even the chief-priest will bear testimony to me, and the presbytery; from whom also when I had received letters unto the brethren, I was going my way to Damaskos, about to lead also those who were there bound to Hierousalem to be punished.

6. And it came to pass as I was going my way and drawing nigh to Damaskos about midday suddenly from out the heavens there shone a sufficient light round about me,

7. And I fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to me Saoul, Saoul, why persecutest thou me?

8. And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me I am Jesous the Nazoraine whom thou art persecuting.

9. And those who were along with me beheld the light, and were frightened, but they did not hear the voice of the one who was talking to me.

10. And I said, What shall I do Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, go thy way unto Damaskos and there it will have been told thee about all the things which it hath been appointed thee to do.

11. And when I did not see because of the glory of that light, led by the hand by those who were going along with me, I went into Damaskos,

12. And a certain Ananias a man of prominence reverent according to the law, testified to by all the Joudaian inhabitants,

13. Came unto me and standing before me said, Brother Saoul, see: And I at the same hour saw (lit. looked up at) him.

14. And he said, The God of our fathers hath preferred thee to comprehend his will and to see the just (lit. justified one) and to hear a voice from out his mouth.

15. Because thou will be a witness for him unto all men of the things which thou hast seen and heard.

16. And now what dost thou intend to do? Arise and may be have baptized thee and washed away thy sins whilst thou dost invoke his name.

17. And it came to pass when I had returned to Hierousalem and was offering votive prayer in the temple that I was in an ecstasy,

18. And saw him saying unto me, Haste and depar, quickly from Hierousalem, because they will not accept thy testimony concerning me.

19. And I said, Lord, They know well that I was imprisoning and flaying throughout the synagogues those who were putting faith in thee.

20. And when the blood of Stephanos thy prophet was being shed I also was standing by and consenting and guarding exoteric watch to keep the outer-garments of those who were taking him away.

21. And he said unto me, Go thy way, because I am going to send thee to nations afar off.

22. And they listened to him as far as this word and lifted up their voice, saying, Take such an one from off the earth, For it is not befitting he should live,

23. And as they were shouting and rending their outer-garments, and casting dust into the air,

24. The kiliarch commanded him to be led into the camp, saying that they should give him a preliminary examination with scourges that he might learn for what reason they were clamoring against him in this wise.

25. And when they had stretched him forward with the thongs, Paulos said unto the centurion standing by, Is it permitted you to scourge a Roman and him uncondemned?

26. And when the centurion heard it he approached the kiliarch and told him saying, What art thou about to do? For this man is a Roman.

27. And the kiliarch approaching said unto him, Tell me, Art thou a Roman? And he said, Yea.

28. The kiliarch answered, I acquired this citizenship for a vast sum; And Paulos said, But I was even begotten so,

29. Then straightway those who were about to give him a preliminary trial stood away from him; and the kiliarch became afraid when he learned that he was a Roman and that he had bound him.

30. And on the morrow desiring to know the certainty of what he was being accused by the Joudaians, he loosed him and directed the chief priests to come together and all the sunedrion, and leading Paulos down he stood him in their presence.

COMMENT.

"The presbytery" instead of "the estate of the elders" R. V.

"The chief-priest" instead of "the high priest" R. V.

"A sufficient" instead of "a great" R. V.

"And were frightened" omitted in the R. V. although in the best text.

"Did" instead of "could" R. V.

"And now what dost thou intend to do?" instead of "And now why turriest thou?" R. V.

"Arise and may he have baptized thee and washed away thy sins" instead of "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins" R. V. Both these verbs here are active voice and the construction is idiomatic—the aorist infinitive used as the softened imperative. This changes the whole thought of the C. and R. V. The "baptism" here spoken of is the baptism in spirit and the "washing" the "washing of regeneration."

"An ecstasy" instead of "a trance" R. V. This was a "vision ecstasy." The term translated "ecstasy" is the same always used in the Scriptures of the Old and New to express the state or condition of vision and is not a natural state or condition as is a "trance." The person in this condition is taken out of the natural for the time being and sees and knows as God sees and knows, and becomes God's witness to what he sees and hears and is given to know, in a spiritual way.

"Know well" instead of "know" R. V.

"Thy prophet" instead of "thy witness" R. V.

"Camp" instead of "castle" R. V.

"Stretched forward" instead of "tied up" R. V.

"Gamaliel" a name properly applied to a piece of land and meaning "earth made friable with mercy."

"Saoul" "crazy conceit."

"A Nazaraios" was an inhabitant of "Nazaraia" and this place was so called because "Nazara" or "Nazarites" or those who had taken the vows of Nazara dwelt there.

"Ananias" "one without sorrow."

Conference Report.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God met at Fairview school house, Furnas Co., Neb., Dec. 7th, and continued over Sunday. Those from abroad were Elder T. G. Bartlett, St. Paul, Bros. Newell, Schultz, Grimm and Steadman, of Moorefield. The preaching was done by Bros. Bartlett and Prime, and was earnestly proclaimed from a practical standpoint. Bro. Bartlett is making a tour to this part of the state bearing his own expenses. He visited Moorefield when I was came out on the Lord's side.

The business meeting was presided over by Bro. W. D. Newell, president of conference. All officers present, minutes of last annual conference read and approved. Report of evangelist, amount received $82.95, expenses $20.01, discourses 33, baptized 3. Treasurer reported the amount on hand and received $218.00, paid out $102.45, balance in treasury $115.55. An excellent verbal report of the condition of the church at St. Paul was given by Bro. Bartlett. Bro. Newell also reported for the Moorefield church, and Bro. Cady for the congregation at Blair. At all of the above named places social meetings are kept up and all moving along in harmony. Moved that the secretary of each congregation send in a report to the state secretary either by letter or delegate at each quarterly and annual conference. Carried.

Brethren, the falling away time has begun. Perilous times have come. Men have become lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud.....Traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure, more than lovers of God, having the form of godliness but denying the power thereof, from such turn away, always bearing in mind that a crown is given only to the overcomers, and to those who continue firm unto the end. Yours, waiting for his coming.

Editor Restitution:

I am sorry that the Ministerial meeting failed to materialize. I am having good meetings, and people pay good attention, and a few accept the truth. My prayer is Father, thy kingdom come, the veil to be taken from off the face of all nations, the earth to be filled with the knowledge of the truth. Amen.

Your brother in hope of the coming victory and glory.

The Hidden Life.

Paul to the Colossians writes to the saints and faithful brethren at that place, (chap. i. 2) and says among other things, Set your minds on things above, not on things on the earth, on divine things, not on carnal things. The reason given us is because ye are dead, and your life is hid, hidden with Christ in God, ch. iii. 3, 4. How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein? Rom. vi. 2. God forbid that we should continue in sin. v. 1. Do you not know that so many of us as were baptized into Christ are baptized into his death. Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up by the glory of the Father, even so we should walk in newness of life. v. 3, 4.

When he who is our life shall appear, that is when Christ shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. Col. iii. 4. Because of fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affections, evil concupiscence and covetousness, which is idolatry the wrath of God cometh, v. 5, 6. The Christian must put to death those fleshly tendencies with the passions and lust. Gal. v. 24. He must be led by the spirit. (verse 18) The fruit of which is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law. verses 22, 23. When the chief shepherd shall appear then those who have been led by the spirit will receive the crown of life which God has promised them that love and serve him, that bring forth the fruits above enumerated. The Christian soldier needs to be vigilant, watchful and prayerful, in patient continuance, seeking for glory, honor, immortality. God will render eternal life. Rom. ii. 7. As believers of the things of the kingdom of God, and the things concerning Jesus the Anointed, we must cease from anger and forsake wrath, put away malice, blasphemy, filthy communication, banish such from our minds. Our faith should be such as to eradicate carnality from our hearts. The faith that works by love purifies the heart. The pure [illegible] Jesus' hope. That there shall be a resurrection of the dead. Acts xxiv. 15. That look for Jesus to come again. To those looking for him he will come unto salvation. Heb. ix. 28. But to the pious and the non-pious scoffers he comes to judgment. Then both classes the immaterial and the materialistic infidel will have a grand prayer meeting. They will pray for the rocks and mountains to fall on them, and hide them from him that sitteth upon the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb.

Democracy in all its forms and phases will pale, will fall beneath the stone that is cut out of the mountain without human aid. The theocracy, the restored kingdom of God to Israel is destined to supplant all the governments of men, will grind them to powder and the wind shall carry them away. Seeing we look for such things. What manner of men ought we to be in conversation and conduct. The friendship of the world is enmity to God. Submitted in Christian love.

LETTERS.

I cannot forego the pleasure of writing and receiving letters. It makes such a pleasant break in the monotony of life.

How often I say, when the mail comes in, "No letters? Nothing but papers?" The papers are good enough and I like them. I want them to come, but they are not warm with the love of the hearts that I know. They do not speak to me in the living, loving homo-tongue, letters do. They burnish the golden links in friendship's chain. They tear the cobwebs down that the great spiders of forgetfulness have woven over memory's door. They bring up all the pleasant reminiscences of bygone times, travel with me into green forests, follow the creek where the fiverworts grow, and wind about the prairie where the tall grasses sway.

They peep into school-rooms where young faces are ranged in smiling rows, dance over playgrounds and romp through shaded lanes. They show in the saintly bands that gathered to worship God in the days of my childhood, talk of dear prayer-circles around the household hearths of friends, and point to bridal pairs, and funeral palls. They mingle the smiles and the tears, the grave and the gay, the crosses and the losses, the toils and the crown.

They come with loving, sympathetic messages, penned by feeble hands. They take weights of lead from my heart, and make me laugh in the valley of tears. The repining days are forgotten, the evil thoughts are chased away. I am better, more loving, more hopeful.

Thank God for the flowers of thought, for the frankincense and the myrrh!

The Broken Ladder.

I had occasion some time ago to ascend to the upper story of a warehouse which I was visiting on business. I had ascended story by story, and only the highest remained to be visited. There was access to it at one end by a lift, and at the other by a ladder, and when the friend who was with me asked me which I preferred, I said, "It does not matter; take the one that is nearest."

On our way to the foot of the ladder, however, the foreman in charge overtook us, and said, "You can't get up that way."

"Why not?" inquired my companion.

"Because the ladder is broken?"

And so we found it. A heavy puncheon had accidentally rolled over it and had broken out every step of the ladder. There was nothing left for us but to walk to the other end of the warehouse and avail ourselves of the lift.

As I rode homewards, I said to myself, "I have found a parable today in my experience of the lift and the ladder."

There was a ladder once that led up to life eternal—a ladder of ten steps. "If thou wilt enter into life keep the commandments." But, alas! the ladder is broken. We cannot obtain eternal life that way, for "all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." "By the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin." Thus it will be seen that we cannot ascend by the ladder of the ten commandments.

If we are to ascend it must be by the lift. But is there any lift by which sinners can get into the kingdom of God? Assuredly there is. As I trusted my body to the lift, and was safely landed by it on the topmost floor, so am I to trust my soul to Jesus Christ the Savior, and he will exalt me to life eternal with himself, "In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins."

Reader, I trust that you have been so far enlightened by God's Word and Spirit as to know that you need salvation. Are you asking the way of life, and earnestly enquiring, "What must I do to be saved?" There are only two possible answers that can be given to such a question. It must either be by the lift or by the ladder. But the ladder is broken, so hopelessly broken that no one can be saved that way. There only remains the lift for you. You must trust yourself to Jesus,—to Jesus only, "For there is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved." "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."—English Leaflet.

Look at Things.

Look at things, look at that farm. It may be a good farm, it might be a bad one. Buying things "unsight, unseen" is a bad plan. A poor man living in Iowa traded for a home in Wisconsin. After a tedious trip with his goods and family, he came to some barren bluffs and rocks, just as are to be seen along the upper Mississippi, sometimes on one side and sometimes on the other. The cheated man sat up all night trying to persuade the trader to change back, but in vain; he was out of a farm, he must begin life again. Look at things, and look sharply, look at doctrines: they may be true. But what if otherwise? Think of the fruitless hills, and don't trade the truth for the fancies and vain speculations of men. It is an awful thing to let go of the real diamonds, that will shine for eternity, to find only cut glass imitations in our hands. There would be no infidels, no agnostics, if the searching scrutiny of God-given sight, and time were used in weighing truth against error. God's Word against man's theories. Be careful not to throw away truth, new views may look absurd, broader landscapes may seem wild and weed-grown. But dig, throw on the light, tread the ground thoroughly, use the prophet's glass. Take the apostle's measuring line, buy the historian's chart, what appears but a cumbering pebble may be a precious stone. We are prejudiced, we don't want our fences tumbled down. God has set us to guard some particular truth, and we intend to be faithful sentinels. But did he intend us to stand still when the battle was on somewhere else, and the call made to shoulder arms and move against the enemy? It is well to hold fast that which we have. But we have need to learn, we do not yet know all of our Father's will. We must prove all things. The crisis is at the door, let no humble truth-bearer be turned away. His warning may be the very one needed for the hour, look at your neighbor's messages as you would have him look at yours, and God bless you all.

OBITUARY.

The Church at Andover, S. D. with sad hearts were called upon to lay away in the silent grave, our dear Sister, Mabel B. Bigelow, on Monday last, Dec. 3, 1894, there to remain until the Life Giver shall come.

Mabel Stewart was born in Stewartville, Minn. May 17, 1874. In March 1890, together with Arthur Bigelow, her now bereaved husband, after a hearty belief of the gospel and repentance they were baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. In whom she remained steadfast until death. They were united in matrimony July 18, 1893. She fell asleep in Christ, Dec. 1, 1894, leaving an infant of 10 days, a dear husband with five surviving brothers and sisters.

She was highly esteemed among all her acquaintances. Much loved by those in the faith, and will be greatly missed in the assemblage.

In attestation of regard her funeral was attended by an unusually large number of people where they listened to the hope of resurrection, and change from mortal to immortality at the coming of Christ.

May we share with her in the blessed change.

D. T. HAILSTEAD.

Died, at Stewart, Ky. Nov. 21, 1894, Zella M. Carpenter, daughter of brother and sister John F. Carpenter. Little Zella died of diptheria. The little one had lived to enjoy only three happy summers when the relentless enemy who respects not the hoary head of the aged, or the innocent beauty of infancy, put forth his hand and snatched the little one from the parent's fond embrace, tearing the heart-strings, breaking the cords that held the little one so dear. Is there no help? Must all bow to this powerful enemy? the high the low, the rich, the poor? He stands not aside for kings on their thrones, the cry comes again, is there no help? The flowers bloom, but they wither and die before the winter's chill. The snow falls in its purity, the ray of the Sun comes forth and it passes away. The day comes forth with its rosy dawn, but soon passes away never to return. In all nature death has the victory. Let us go to him who healeth the broken-hearted and bindeth up their wounds. He who has promised help in the time of trouble. He tells us that the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. Hear the shout, thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. He will swallow up death in victory, and the Lord God will wipe all tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off the earth, for the Lord hath spoken it. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then will be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory. But I would not have you to be ignorant brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, then we which are alive and remain shall be be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Hear the shout, awake and sing ye that dwell in dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. O how many are waiting for that great awakening? For that time when a nation shall be born in a day, and to hear the joyful singing again of those loved voices which have been silent in death so long. And they sung a new song, saying, thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred and tongue and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. How grand and glorious to hear those voices now hushed in death, sing the new song with immortal tongues, and to hear David strike the harps of gold, with immortal hands that shall never more be cold in death, and sit down in the kingdom of God with Abraham Isaac and Jacob, who all have had their trials and sorrows, and have passed through the valley of death, and can die no more. No, death will have no more dominion over them. There will be children there, the sucking child shall play on the hole of the aspand the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice den, they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. The child can play with the lion, or sleep in the woods, there will be nothing to make them afraid. There will be no fear of death. They shall not say, I am sick, for the tree of life will be there for the healing of the nations, and above all else the lord will be there, whose face will be the light of the city. Thanks be to God who gives us the victory, he gave us more in the second Adam than we lose in the first.

When the enemy comes into our home and takes our dear ones from us, and we have to lay away the garments they have worn in suffering and sorrow, let us take comfort in the words of Paul while we lay away the garments that will never be worn again. There is a crown laid up for the dear ones which the Righteous Judge shall give at his appearing and kingdom, and robes of righteousnes which will never grow old. Be patient therefore brethren unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth and hath long patience for it, until he received the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient and stablish your hearts for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. As a comfort to any brother or sister who may have dear ones who have fallen asleep in death before reaching the years of accountability, we refer you to 1 Cor. vii. 14.

Yours in hope of immortality.

SADIE SKEELS.

H. P. Elliott, died of paralysis at his home southeast of Emporia, Kansas, Friday morning, Nov. 23, 1894, aged 78 years, 11 months, and 13 days. He leaves a wife and six children, besides many friends to mourn his loss. Funeral services were held at Fowler Chapel, Sunday morning. The Rev. Joseph Brown of the Baptist Church, spoke words of comfort to the assembled friends, from Job xiv. 14.

Deceased was a firm believer in the soon coming of Christ. He always been a supporter of THE RESTITUTION in its various forms since its first number was issued.

Traveling brethren always found a warm welcome at his home.

MRS. H. P. ELLIOTT.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a Christmas or New Year's gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you through out the year.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can corresbond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

Previously published,	$135.00
Previously used, for S. C. Oliver, to go to Oklahoma,	$15.00

The Phrenological Journal and Science of Health for December contains a variety of excellent features. The frontispiece shows thirty-six intelligent faces, comprising the graduating class of the Phrenological Institute for 1894.

Prof. Sizer continues his interesting series, How to Study Strangers; and Mrs. Wells reviews the life of a phrenological philanthropist.

The brilliant lecture by Prof. J. S. Van Cleve upon musicians and poets is concluded with fascinating sketches of Whittier, Cowper, Byron, Burns, Holmes and James Whitcomb Riley.

Much instructive and entertaining matter will also be found in the reports of the closing addresses of the Institute faculty.

The departments of Child Culture and Hygiene are exceptionally good, and the editor devotes several pages to Clairvoyance and four "graduates" of the Elmira Reformatory.

Price 15 cents, $1.50 a year. Address The Fowler & Wells Co., 27 East 21st St. New York.

Patrons of the Vandalia and Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh will be glad to know that an arrangement has been made, taking effect November 1st, by which portions of Mileage Tickets will be detatched and accepted in payment of excess baggage charges. Commercial travelers and others will find that Agents of the Pennsylvania and Vandalia Lines at all principal stations have been instructed regarding this concession, which will no doubt become immediately popular.

Change of Address.

On and after Sept. 25, 1894, my address will be Roseville, Illinois, instead of Plymouth, Ind. Correspondents will please take notice.

The Place Where Farmers Make Money.

There is one part of the country in which farmers have made money during the past year, and that is northern Wisconsin. There has been a demand for every product they can raise as well as for the timber and cordwood which they cut, at good cash prices. Any man who is industrious can get and pay for a farm in northern Wisconsin in a few years and get employment at good wages while he is doing it. If you would like to know something about the country drop a postal to Fredrick Abbot, Land Commissioner, Wisconsin Central Railroad at Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Brethren:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

THE SUBURBAN EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a preacher of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Holiday Excursions via Pennsylvania Lines.

Poetry.

The Closing Year.

Bend, O Christian, low in prayer,
While the closing year departs;
Search your hearts with anxious care,
Heal its sorrows, calm its smarts.
Let the blessed Spirit's power
Fill your souls with heavenly light,
Lead you through the dying hour
Into realms of endless light.

Master, the reapers call!
The fields grow white, the weary reapers
Gird on the armor—and now is time,
Last to his call;
The faithful helpless at the feet
Of Him who died for all the world to meet.

Master, the year is past!
Those with omniscient and unslumbering eye
Have marked its good and evil passing by.
And now at last
The servant looks confidingly to thee,
And pray 'in mercy, Lord, remember me.'

The Church, its Gifts, and Officers.

Dear Bro. W. H. Wilson:

Will you please give through THE RESTITUTION a reason why the blessings and gifts of the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians are not enjoyed to-day? Are not they needed, or is the church not in existence as a collective body?

M. T. ASLAKSEN.

The reason why the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit are not with the church today, is found in 1 Cor. xiii. 8: "Charity (love) never faileth. (but what shall fail?) but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; (gifts of prophecy) whether they be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away."

Why should these great gifts "vanish away?" Because they have fulfilled the object for which they were given. See Mark xvi. 17-20: "These signs shall follow them that believe: in my name they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents: and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them, etc." "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with the signs following." These "signs" do not follow now, notwithstanding the claims of portions of the apostate church that they do. The Word of God says: "Whether there be tongues they shall cease," and that settles it with Bible believers. Not one of those apostate preachers dare "take up serpents," or "drink any deadly thing" for fear that it may "hurt them." They dare not test their preaching by practice, not one of them. Inspiration says they were given for the purpose of "confirming the Word." The volume of inspiration being completed, the object for which the "signs" were given ceased. At this day we have evidence confirming the authenticity of God's Holy Book which far exceeds that of the "the signs following." "If they believe not Moses and the prophets neither will they believe though one should rise from the dead." Men at this day perform wonderful lying tricks calculated to deceive, and during the coming reign of antichrist will perform lying wonders so cleverly done, that were it possible would deceive the very elect. But no one can utter prophecies clustered about with numerous details and show from profane infidel history a fulfilment in every minute detail, which is the case with the Holy Scriptures. This defies their power of imitation for deception.

Now suppose these "signs" or "gifts" are removed, what remains? See 1 Cor. xiii. 13: "And now abideth faith, hope, charity (love) these three; but the greatest of these is charity." The phrase "And now abideth," signifies that something remains after that previously spoken of "shall vanish away" and that we are told is "faith, hope" and "love," a glorious trinity indeed. First we have "faith." "The Word of faith which we preach," and this faith is by the gospel preached unto us, and is the element of "hope" which cheers and lights up the pathway of the recipient of the "Word of Faith," while they cheerfully walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham as they joyfully journey to Canaan's land.

Next, we have "love," which warms the heart toward God and man, and makes the recipient of "faith" and "hope" joyful even in adversity.

Bro. Aslaksen asks if these "gifts" are not in existence, "Is the church not in existence as a collective body?" In answer I would say, the "gifts" bear no relation whatever either to the existence or non-existence of the church. The things which "abide" are the only essential elements necessary to its continued existence:—"Faith," "hope" and "love." The church of God does exist both in a local and universal sense, and we have Scripture evidence that they will continue to exist until gathered by the angelic reapers.

Now, I wish to add a word with regard to the officers of local churches. Every Scripturally organized church, is governed by elders and deacons. The elders are variously styled in the Scriptures "overseers," "bishops," "shepherds," "rulers of the household," and "pastors." I have clear Scripture authority that they will be found in charge of their several flocks, some faithful to their duty in guarding the church from "grievous wolves" which bring in false doctrine, and others will be off their guard. Saying: "My Lord delayeth his coming," when the cry is heard: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh."

The great apostle to the Gentiles, with his prophetic eye, peered into the future and said that "grievous wolves" shall "enter in among you, not sparing the flock," and even among the "overseers" "shall men arise speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them." Therefore, "take heed unto yourselves and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood."

Many argue that the phrase, "over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers," limits the "overseers" to the apostolic age, as the Holy Spirit does not act in a specific manner now as it did then. Let us examine the matter and you will find the above argument faulty.

To illustrate we say the United States made Grover Cleveland its president. How did the United States make Grover Cleveland president? Did it create special enactments, etc., just on purpose to make him president? No, not by any means, he had to comply exactly with the rules and specifications as found in the constitution of the United States, which was written by the founders of the country. Nevertheless the United States did make him its president. So in like manner, the Bible is composed of words written by the holy men of God who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit, and among the things which the Holy Spirit revealed through them, are specific rules governing the selection of men to be elders and deacons of the Church of God: the Holy Spirit does not operate specifically in the case of each man chosen to be an elder of a church, but he must comply with the requirements given by the Holy Spirit in the Bible. Hence, it can be truly said: "Which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers," as if it the Holy Spirit made Grover Cleveland president. This view is confirmed when we find that the Bible-up to date of these editors is being found feeding the flock of God when the Lord comes in his glory. See Luke xii. 42-44: "And the Lord said, who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom the Lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath."

See also Matt. xxiv. 45-47: "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods."

There could be no "ruler over his (God's) household," when Jesus comes unless the "household of faith" existed in their congregated capacity at that time.

Jesus is also spoken of in the Scriptures as being "the Chief Shepherd," and that all who are faithful to the trust imposed in them by him, will receive a crown of glory when "he shall appear." Now every reasonable mind must admit that there could be no such thing as a "chief Shepherd," unless at the same time there should be other shepherds over whom he was the chief, otherwise there would be no force in the comparative word "chief."

We are now living in the days described by the last part of Matt. xxiv. They are like the days of Noah; when that faithful servant called upon the world of ungodly to flee from impending wrath. God's fiery indignation is once more about to descend upon the world of ungodly—Oh where are the servants whom the Lord hath made rulers over his household? If ever there was a time when the "household" needed "meat in due season," it is now. "Grievous wolves" still "enter the flock," and "evil servants" among those who have been made rulers over the household, depart from the faith and say: "My Lord delayeth his coming," and the flock is put off their guard, and that day comes upon them unawares. Read Matt. xxiv. and Luke xii., and you will observe that the main duty of him whom the "Lord hath made ruler over his household," seems to be to keep the "household" posted about the near coming of the Lord, and teach them how to live so that they may be prepared for that great event. Does this look as though God had deserted "the household" in its infancy, and left them without "overseer," "elder," "bishop," "pastor" or "ruler of the household," to warn and guide them in these the most trying days that even visited the church? No, not by any means.

Says one, they have the Bible, that is sufficient. But we must remember that all are not "apt to teach," and one of the qualifications of a bishop or elder is "Holding fast the faithful Word as he hath been taught, that he may by sound doctrine, both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers. For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, especially they of the uncircumcision; whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake." In our day there are any amount of "vain talkers and deceivers," "whose mouth must be stopped," because they "subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not. For filthy lucre's sake," and this can only be done by men "apt to teach," "holding fast the faithful Word."

There can be no protection to the "flock" against "vain talkers and deceivers," who handle the Scriptures in a deceitful manner, wresting them to suit their fancy, unless they are met by men "taught in the Word," "apt to teach," "holding fast the faithful Word." No man can be an elder in the Church of God, unless he has these qualifications.

No one knows the labor and anxiety of a faithful ruler of the household, unless they have engaged in the work themselves. They need the sympathy and support of the "household." The apostle says: "Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the Word of God; whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation." "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: For they watch for your souls (lives) as they that must give account." Considering the lateness of the hour, and the trying times in which we live, "let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed (in baptism) with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith (for many depart from the faith) without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised;) and let us provoke unto love and good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, (on the first day of the week to remember the Lord) as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the (joyful day) day approaching." Heb. x. 22-25.

"Sing, O sing, ye heirs of glory;
Shout your triumph as you go:
Zion's gates will open for you,
You shall find an entrance through."

W. H. WILSON.

Acknowledging Christ.

"Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the Holy Angels." Mark viii. 38.

Probably the majority of professing Christians would indignantly resent any imputation that they were ashamed of Christ or his word.

"Have we not" say they "professed him before all, joined a church and accepted the duty of sustaining Christianity in the face of a perverse generation?"

"Have we not, time and again, given our testimony at prayer-meeting and revivals, or elsewhere openly acknowledged Christ?"

But Peter did all this and more, amidst daily peril, and under much more disadvantageous circumstances. He was equally confident in his faith yet finally denied his Lord thrice when most needing a friend.

Who could have expected this of the fiery, bold, and energetic disciple who promptly left all he had at the Master's call, followed his wanderings, shared his crust, lay beside him on the bare earth, witnessed his miracles, felt the force of his divine love, toiled, sorrowed and rejoiced with him and at last resisted his arrest by a force of arms?

How much stronger and more faithful are you than Simon Barjonas? How has your love been tested?

It does not require much courage, either moral or physical, now-a-days, to "get religion,"—join a church—or even to rise in meeting, surrounded by a highly respectable, sympathizing throng of "professors" and feebly assert that you are yet "holding out"—as if momentarily expecting to "give in"—or that you "are not ashamed to confess Christ"—as if astonished at your own magnanimity in condescending to admit as much—and finally to solicit "the prayers of the congregation" as if it was the last desperate resource to avert an impending fall from grace.

Whilst it may be highly interesting to the church to know that the brother is not ashamed of Christ, to the brother himself the real interest centers in the question, is Christ ashamed of me? And probably in the majority of instances the question is not in doubt.

Friends, all this is not Christianity. The quasi-christian that needs continual praying for and coaxing and threatening to shore him up in the path of duty is of no value to himself or the cause of Christ any more—he is a hindrance. Like the wounded on a retreat, that have to be carried, guarded, and cared for and can do nothing in return, he is a camp follower of the army of Christ and about as valuable and respectable.

Christ needs men and women of character and strength to lead, sustain, resist, and persuade—Christians who are as light in dark places, who can stand alone, firm in faith, hold for right and capable, if need be, to hold up the banner of the cross amid the sneers of the worldly and the gnashings and howlings of a host of foes.

Do you believe that Christ the Omniscient, who has his choice of mankind, will be satisfied with anything short of the best and noblest to reign with him as kings and priests? If so what chance is there for the double-minded man, unstable in all his ways?

Men and women are wanted who are willing to sacrifice themselves, and let me add, their money as well, who are willing to renounce all, to live in poverty, neglect, and obscurity if duty calls, who, like Paul have learned in whatsoever state of life they may be therewith to be content.

Christians who have learned by faith to stifle the yearnings for fame, comfort, and the refinements of life, to patiently see their talent apparently wasted, their capacities for good and usefulness unknown and unappreciated, their longings for a larger sphere of work disappointed, their natural gifts allowed to lie undeveloped for lack of opportunity.

No half-hearted Christian, spurred by fear, and propped on crutches, can run this race set before us.

To succeed the aspirant must learn to follow Christ because he loves him, to shun evil because he hates it, to renounce the world and its pleasures because he no longer lusts after it, to deny himself because he realizes the value of self-abnegation, to feel that he is a soldier of the cross, with his position in life appointed by God for wise reasons, and that therein lies the path of duty which is also the path of love.

You acknowledge Christ in the church, do you acknowledge him in the store, on the streets, in the drawing room, among the worldly, in the face of open attacks by foes, or insidious assaults of false friends? You can defend Christ in the love-feast, can you do as much surrounded by unsympathizing crowds in the enemy's stronghold?

You object to the Salvation Army and the race of "Tramp-preachers" and their rowdy methods. Honestly, is this because their methods are a standing reproach to your own want of courage and manliness, and that they set an example you are ashamed to follow, or is it because you are too pure or fastidious to consort with the vulgar and minister to lepers and the unclean?

What was Jesus of Nazareth but the friend of publicans and sinners? "Simon I have somewhat to say unto thee."

Many Christians are not ashamed of Christ during a popular church revival participated by the most wealthy and fashionable citizens and endorsed by our leading divines. They may even be temporarily proud of it, especially if honored by the conversion of some of the leading citizens or their families.

Nevertheless they might be dreadfully embarrassed were they called upon to confess him openly in a social gathering, card party, or private dance at their own homes.

When you are good enough to admit that you are not ashamed of Christ in the prayer-meeting, does this hold good for the other six days and on unconsecrated ground?

Paul says, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ," Rom. i. 16. Are you?

There are no doubt some quasi-christians who really patronize the Deity. Who honestly feel that they do Christ a favor and are giving him the benefit of their influence when they condescend to "get religion and join church," who are convinced that among the "many mansions" the best will undoubtedly be set apart, and screened off from the intrusion of Lazarus, Mary Magdalene, and the rest of the vulgar horde, for their use alone, but these are probably and you are not one far, such never read THE RESTITUTION.

You however are a Christian, you have studied the Bible, you know what Paul calls "My Gospel," that which Christ preached, you are better posted than the general run and would be quite unfitted to fill the modern pulpit, and point the way of happiness to be-jeweled Christians, that is to say, if you had the courage of your convictions and spoke out.

Where do you stand? Does your trumpet give forth an uncertain sound? Do you speak the Word of God faithfully? Are you a dumb dog that barketh not? Some day you will have to answer all these questions to Christ Jesus. Has your talent been wrapped in a napkin and buried in the ground?

"Well you see it is just this way, there are no others that believe as I do. I am a limp-backed Christian. My faith is of the variety unsuitable for rough usage and every day work. I feel a need of Christian sympathy and support, I have united with the church, they know my views and tell me it is all right so long as I keep my mouth shut. The fact is, if I don't join some church I shall fall from grace; and if I do, politeness requires that I subscribe to their rules and get along without hurting their feelings. No doubt the Lord will permit me to bow down in the House of Rimmon and so make things comfortable. I feel I can do more good in this way than as an outcast and Pariah from orthodoxy. Christ would not have been crucified had he followed this course. Are we not admonished to be as wise as serpents? All the wealthy and respectable people attend our church and this gives me of course a chance to influence them."

You poor, cowardly, miserable sinner!!! You are simply deceiving yourself and mixing with those who make a tool of you to your hurt.

You have neither strength or courage enough to influence a mouse or deceive any but your own feeble self.

If the views you hold are right it is your duty to cry them aloud and spare not, and you are guilty of deceit, both to Christ and your fellow men in subscribing to and endorsing views you do not believe in.

You are a traitor in camp unless you openly state your opinions and offer to withdraw, and if induced to remain on sufferance, you accept a bribe to be silent and deny the Lord. The church that retains you is wicking, and overlooking your (to them) heretical views, for the sake of expediency, for your influence, vote, or money.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. VIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 20, 1894. NO. 48.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of restoration that God hath restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

If you are right the church is wrong, there is but one doctrine of Christ. It may or may not be our part to judge other Christians, but it is undoubtedly our duty to see that we do not consent with, aid and abet them in disseminating doctrines we believe to be erroneous, and both Paul in Galatians and John in his second epistle have sounded a trumpet-blast on this point that had best ever be ringing in our ears.

The chances are if you know the gospel and remain affiliated with those teaching otherwise, that in reality, you are ashamed of Christ and his word, of the gospel of Christ, because it is unfashionable, despised, and unpopular and that to come out and be separated would injure your worldly prospect and lose you money, friends, and influence, or social status.

Possibly there are some weak enough to believe they can worship both God and mammon, we of course being so much more advanced and wiser than those of the Savior's time. It is not difficult for erring man to deceive himself, but it is to be remembered, that while it is easy to deceive ourselves and possibly under favorable conditions to deceive our neighbors, it is assuredly impossible to deceive God.

Stripped therefore of your paltry subterfuges and ridiculous excuses you stand naked before the Omniscient Christ, Heb. iv. 13, a weak, cowardly, self-deceptive lover of the world, who so far from boasting that he is not ashamed of Christ, should dread rather lest Christ be ashamed of and deny him before his Father which is in Heaven, Mark x. 33.

As for the minister who knows the Truth, but judges it inexpedient to proclaim the same, what power shall be his stay, when the Lord of the Household calls him to account for his stewardship?

There are points on which the advanced student of the Word may do well not to touch on in his public utterances. Christ did not introduce the Birth of the Spirit into his Sermon on the Mount, but in a private audience at night to a wise man, an advanced theological student and teacher.

There is such a thing as casting pearls before swine and giving that which is holy to the dogs.

But the Gospel of the Kingdom was the first thing Christ opened his ministry with and it was the last charge committed to his followers, Mark xvi. 15, 19, and it figured largely in his Sermon on the Mount, where he taught the people to pray that it might come, that God's will might be done on earth as in heaven and that all should not enter therein.

The prophet therefore who knows these things and refuses to prophesy because of expediency or fear of losing his charge is surely in danger of the Judgment, he is strengthening the hands of the evil doers, and scattering the sheep of the Lord's pasture.

Surely they are the "dumb dogs that bark not,"——"The priest's lips should seek knowledge and they should seek the law at his mouth, for he is the messenger of the Lord of Hosts."

"Behold I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the Lord and do tell them and cause my people to err by their lies."

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time. Because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some or other, but put love enough on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

"THE body thrives according to what it feeds on; so does the mind." •

"CHRISTIANITY is love in action, having its center in Jesus, and, for its field, humanity. •

MANY of the waves of trouble, like those of the ocean, will, if we await them calmly, break at our feet and disappear. •

WHILE life is regarded as the greatest and sweetest of blessings, yet we are assured that God's loving-kindness is better than life. •

WE should never forget that sin, no matter how small it may appear, brings us into direct conflict with every attribute of the divine character. •

As long as the sea was calm his disciples suffered Christ to sleep; but when they were like to be drowned, they awoke him with a "Master save us; we perish." •

"A MAN without knowledge of the Scriptures is as a soldier without weapons, a horse without a bridle, a ship without a rudder, a writer without a pen, a bird without wings." •

"HE who sedulously attends, pointedly asks, calmly speaks, coolly answers, and ceases when he has no more to say, is in possession of some of the best requisites of man." •

WE are all apt to be irritated by opinions that differ from our own. If we were to stand off a moment and calmly consider the best thing to do in such circumstances, would we not decide, to test those opposing opinions with a view to their rejection or acceptance according to the evidence? •

MADAME Guyon once wrote, "I must confess that the will of God whenever or wherever made known brings out to my mind more distinctly and fully the idea, and presence and fulness of God, than anything else. This is so much the case, that, whenever I meet with the will of God, I feel that I meet with God: whenever I respect and love the will of God, I feel that I love and respect God; whenever I unite with the will of God, I feel that I unite with God. So practically and religiously, although I am aware that a difference can be made philosophically, God and the will of God are the same to me. He who is in perfect harmony with the will of God is as much in harmony with God himself, as it is possible for any being to be." •

The Dying Year—1894.

How rapidly time flies! It hardly seems true that 1894 is about to expire,—but it must be so; we are preparing matter for the last number. Slowly and surely its last days are ticking away, and presently it will be reduced to hours, then to minutes, and then turned with its predecessors into the grave of years,—the past.

Shall we stop a moment on the verge of the dying year, turn on the search-lights, ascertain precisely on what course we are sailing, see how we have occupied this year of the Lord's absence, what progress we have made in divine knowledge, what success we have had in applying divine truth—demonstrating its transforming power in our lives,—whether we have starved out any or pampered them,—whether the Word of Christ has dwelt in us richly, or whether the things we have heard have been leaking out, whether we have more habitually than ever been in communion with the Father and the Son,—or whether we have been trying to be so independent of them as possible by managing our affairs till so tangled up through blundering or cross-purposed by carrying our own burdens instead of casting them upon the Lord.

God knows how we stand at the close of the year; and we can know if we will come in out of the bubbub for a little while, and look over our accounts and post our books. We trust our readers will not thrust aside these seasonable reflections. God cannot be mocked either with a traditional faith, or a voluntary service of humility, or a half-hearted allegiance, and it would be the height of folly to try our everlasting welfare should lead us to ask each one for him or herself, oh, am I clinging more tenaciously to the covenants of promise than I was a year ago? Is my hope more sanguine? Is my love more ardent? Is my obedience more perfect? If not I have been retrogressing instead of progressing. There is no such thing as standing still; we are rising higher and higher in the divine life,—or sinking lower and lower. The flesh is ever on the alert to regain the mastery over us, and the utmost vigilance is required to keep it in subjection.

We are a year older than we were last year this time! Older, and our time is shorter! Older and more worn! Older, and one faculty after another reminding us that we are tending downward; that our that our time at the longest is limited, that we are of few days and even they full of trouble. Yes; from our life, and from the lives of all our readers another year of this brief span is gone beyond recovery.

The question is, what have we done? We have no doubt been busy enough; but for whom have we been working, and for what have we worked? As far as the interests of ourselves, and families and friends are concerned we may not have been remiss in any duty. But what about God, and truth and right? The apostle says "we love him because he first loved us;" and "the love of Christ constraineth us," (to love him). And Jesus says,

"IF YE LOVE ME,

keep my commandments," this is the only proof of love to Christ that counts. What labors of love have we performed for God and Christ during 1894? What sacrifices have we made? When means were limited, how did we divide them? Did we first supply all our needs, or as many of them as the means would allow, and leave God out of the reckoning, or did we have the moral courage to divide and then suffer a little, when there was occasion? What has our love for Christ constrained us to do for him during the year 1894? Each must answer for himself or herself in this matter; not forgetting that absence of work done for Christ indicates for him. Does this solemn fact have its influence upon our conduct? Do we realize our responsibility as the members of God's household?

The conduct of some after assuming the name gives painful evidence that they think themselves safe for glory honor and immortality, and can take matters easy,—can work in God's vineyard when they feel like it, and when they do not, can leave it for others who do. They seem to act as if God had made a profitable transaction by adding them to his adopted children, and might actively employ others of less importance. It looks that way; and we can account for their attitude on no other supposition. But what deluded souls they must be to think and act thus! What a fatal delusion to labor under! It will result in consternation, and despair, and utter exclusion from the kingdom of God, and their life will go out in the blackness forever.

One of the things most clearly revealed in the Word is the great truth, variously stated, that intellectual assent to the truth and baptism will save no one man believes unto righteousness. If a person begins with heart-work he will not be apt to forget that he has to work out his own salvation with fear and trembling, and at the same time is expected to illuminate others with divine truth—be in fact the light of the world. He will not soon forget that it is he who doeth the will of the Father who will enter the kingdom,—he who keeps the works of Jesus to the end, who will receive power over the nations—he who overcometh that will sit with him on his throne,—he who occupies till the Lord comes, who will hear the welcome plaudit.

The-do-nothing-baptized-believer is making a fearful mistake; he has to make some sacrifices in any event, but what will they amount to if he fail to work out his salvation. If we have read the Book correctly the do-nothing-believer will be everlastingly condemned because he ought to be, and is expected to be a living, active representative of Christ.—

A WINKING FOR CHRIST—

but is not! The Word of the Lord Jesus for it, every branch in him that bears no fruit the Father takes away, see John xv. 2; see also the 6th verse, when he says, "If a man abide not in me he is cast forth as a branch and is withered, and men gather them (withered branches) and cast them into the fire and they are burned." We see no way to escape this doom but by bearing fruit.

THE INDOLENT BELIEVER

does not realize that he is not his own, and therefore owns nothing. He does not realize what a debt of love he owes for having been invited to God's kingdom and glory, or else he would be anxious to win others out of the way to destruction into the way of life. The indolent believer is not worthy the name of a believer. The great Householder makes no provision for drones. "Occupy till I come" is the standing order, and the do-nothing-professor of the religion of Jesus is directed for his doom to Rev. iii. 15, 16. The great Head of the church shows that he is cognizant of all that transpires in his household, and knows the spring of every action. He says to the church of Laodiceans, "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would that thou wert cold or hot." Observe that the works tell the whole story and decides the status; then follows the abhorrence in which is held by the Head of the church. He prefers coldness to lukewarmness, and threatens to vomit the lukewarm ones out as most nauseating things; and then he shows what a delusion possesses them; they think they are rich and need nothing, but all the while they are wretched, and miserable, and poor, and naked, and blind. There is no evidence whatever to show that they had not entered by the door; no evidence of a defective faith, or of a failure to comply with the conditions of pardon and peace; but they failed to live as becometh the heir to the kingdom,—did not live the truth they had espoused. Something had they no longer lived for God but for themselves. But we see mercy lingers around them still, and they are counselled to buy of the Living One, who was dead, gold tried in the fire that they may be rich; and white raiment that they may be clothed, that the shame of their nakedness do not appear, and to anoint their eyes with eye-salve that they may see. And, as if this faithful statement and warning from the faithful and true witness be not enough, the ejected one,—he who was once a welcome resident with them, appears in the roll of a humble suppliant, and so loth is he to lose one for whom he died, saying, "Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Blessed Jesus. Opening the door to him would be proof of genuine repentance, and then it is that the promise of a seat with him upon his throne is renewed; "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." The Laodiceans were being overcome instead of overcoming; from him who died for them and rose again is made to induce them to repent, so that they may yet share the great salvation. If these things should come under the eye of any Laodicean professors we pray God they may be induced to stop, and think; think of Gethsemane and Calvary where redeeming love consecrates; think of the great and precious promises, the life everlasting and the unfading crown, and think, too, of the doom of the lukewarm and repent before it be too late.

THE LUKEWARM PROFESSOR

CHOKED THE WORD;

KNOCKS FOR ADMITTANCE,

The year 1894 has been one of trial and anxiety to all, in some respects, but especially to those in large manufacturing centers who depend upon their daily wages to secure bread to eat and clothes to wear. It has been one of peculiar trial to the publisher of this paper; and while the usual supplies of hundreds of our subscribers have been cut off so that it was next to impossible for them to pay for the paper, this by no means accounts for all the slackness. We are in the last times, and the truth of the prophetic Word is verified. The love of many is and whenever that takes place the cause of truth is sure to suffer. Yes; the last times are upon us, and the marked mental activity everywhere observable, manifests itself among some of those having embraced the truth, by tacking new theories on to the gospel, as if a part of it, thus causing strife and divisions. This brings urgent appeals for articles in review of such subjects that are sure to offend some. Would to God our teachers would prevent all this by confining themselves to the gospel of the the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes it. In view of the rapid flight of time, and the shortness of the remaining time to labor, and the certainty that all who have been entrusted with the Word of life will be held responsible for the manner in which they have used it, let us resolve to make soul-saving the object of every effort in 1895, if permitted to enter upon it; if one and all do that God will give the increase and glory will redound to his name.

God has been better to us than all our fears; the hearts of certain faithful ones have been opened so that the publisher has been able to bridge over and reach the end of the volume. The Lord reward them in his own good time and way. As the labor and cares of another volume loom up before us we ask every lover of truth for its own sake to give THE RESTITUTION their hearty support. Especially would we bespeak the earnest co-operation of the sisters who are everywhere a power for good, and in desperate circumstances most resourceful.

The signs of the times tell us that what we do must be done quickly; the Lord is at hand to come. In a little while, it may be before the close of 1895, we do not know,—the Lord may call for those who are his. It will be worth something to be ready when he calls. And to be certainly ready we must be always ready. We are living in a most eventful period of the world's history. The crowning events of six thousand years converge in these last times. To be ready for them may it be our great concern. We may almost faint at times and think the Lord delayeth his coming; but

HE SAID HE WOULD COME

and he surely will. He that shall come will come and will not tarry beyond the appointed time of the Father. Weary ages passed before the first appearance of our Lord, and those weak in faith doubtless thought Jehovah had forgotten his promise. But no! Faith at last was turned to sight, and hope to glad fruition. Men at last looked upon the Son of God. Simeon took him in his arms: Mary sat adoring at his feet: Peter pressed close to his side: John rested on his bosom: Jews and Gentiles saw him and put him to death: but he lives and ever lives and is coming again. Again the ages have been long and weary: and

and an apostate church may sneer at our hope: but unknown to them, the end draweth near, and that coming is our polar star, because the Scriptures reveal this as a divine certainty. They make it the powerful motive to every virtue and duty. They use it to strengthen faith, encourage hope, promote humanity, fortify patience, mitigate sorrow, incite watchfulness, impel obedience and awaken joy. What wonder that Paul moved by its grandeur and awful importance should call it

THAT BLESSED HOPE.

Oh, let us cherish it more and more that we may hear the dear voice of him who died for us and rose again, say, well done! We wish you all a happy New Year. •

OBITUARY.

Died in Chicago, Dec. 17th, 1894, Jared C. Burdick aged eighty years and five months.

A generation ago Bro. Burdick was a successful and prominent business man of New York city, but it is nearly thirty years since he left his native state to make his home in California. His long life record is one of great consistency and beauty; he was strictly honorable in his dealings and faithful to every business trust reposed in him, but he especially endeared himself to the family where his gentleness, tenderness, patience and courtesy were his strong characteristics. Being the husband of Lucinda S. Burdick (formally Mrs. John Howell) he has belonged to our family for nearly thirty years, and we have always found him a faithful, loving brother—affectionate in all the relations of life. Many years ago he was immersed on a profession of his faith, and his beautiful life has shown how deeply the good seed of the word had taken root in his faithful heart.

During a long illness lasting for several months, he was still gentle patient and cheerful. Only a few days before his death, in relation to the resurrection hope he said:

On this solid rock I stand.
All other ground is sinking sand.

Long after it appeared as if his voice could never again be heard in song until it rang out over the plains of a glorified earth, he sang one of his favorite hymns ("Jesus, lover of my soul") and sang it to the end.

The man's funeral services were conducted by dear Brother Collins who is himself past eighty-three years of age. He spoke briefly of the resurrection hope and read a few of those comforting promises which never fail the heart which trusts in them—promises which reach down into the very depths of the grave and hold our dear ones in loving clasp, until earth's golden morning shall irradiate a broken tomb.

A quartet beautifully rendered the comforting hymn beginning thus:

Ever hath the morning broken,
Ever hath he comfort spoken;
Better than our fears
Hath he been for years.

and also "Jesus, lover of my soul."

Our brother was laid away among the hills of Greenwood in New York City and there he will sweetly rest until his best friend shall come—come to sweep back the tidal waves of wrong and suffering—come to open the prison houses of his loved ones—come to call from their dusty beds the brave soldiers who are sleeping on their armor awaiting the voice of their King—come to glorify the new born earth with the tabernacle of God which shall be with men. "And they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts in that day when I make up my jewels."

ELIZABETH A. REED.

Address of Treasurer of Ladies Evangelical Aid Society, Miss Emma Jackman Box 384. Grand Rapids, Mich.

A Word to Young Men.

Young men make a sad mistake when they think it necessary that they should have a personal acquaintance with the dark and seamy side of life. Many a man who has peered into the abyss "just to see what it was like," has lost his balance and fallen almost hopelessly. A young man was talking to a pilot on one of our big steamers. "How long," he asked, "have you been a pilot on these waters?" The old man replied: "Twenty-five years; and I came up and down many times before I was a pilot." "Then," said the young man, "I should think you must know every rock and sandbank on the river." The old man smiled at the youth's simplicity, and replied, "Oh, no, I don't; but I know where the deep water is." That is what we want—to know the safe path and keep it.

A New Alliance.

The Triple Alliance, composed of Germany, Austria and Italy, relied upon to keep the peace of Europe is showing signs of dissolution. The course of the new Czar is suggestive of a new triple alliance of Russia, France and England. The Russian press is intimating that if England will take satisfactory ground on the Eastern and Egyptian question a new alliance may be formed of England, Russia and France.

The Review of Reviews contains in the December number an article entitled, "How to Reconcile France and Germany," which the Universal Peace Union is widely circulating. It declares that the natural solution of the Franco-German question is as follows: Let the French-speaking part of Alsace-Lorraine be restored to France; let the German-speaking part be retained by Germany.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

FIVE COPIES.

Of the "Gospel of the Kingdom," for one dollar! (This is a special offer for the holidays.) Send your orders at once to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished.

As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, send the paper to all new names received before Jan. 1, 1895, till Jan. 1, 1896 for $1.50. Besides this we will send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

We—[illegible]
God pity me! through all the future years
Shall I be loved from afar!

Peter's Estimate of Christian Character. 2 Peter i. 5-8.

ADD TO . . . . TUE KNOWLEDGE.

Peter here adds another important item to those already mentioned—knowledge. A person must be acquainted with the truths revealed in the Old Testament Scriptures regarding the Messiah and his kingdom before he can possibly have acceptable faith. A true Scriptural faith is based upon knowledge. Genuine Christianity knows nothing of, and has no connection with, any system of religion which leaves out the understanding, or which supplies nothing for reason to take hold of. Revelation is addressed to thinking intelligent beings. Jehovah, by his prophet, says, "Come, let us reason together;" and he has ever appealed to the understanding of his erring creatures, in order to bring them into alliance with himself. Solomon said, "for the soul to be without knowledge is not good," and this will especially apply to God and his revelation. A knowledge of God and his Christ cannot be dispensed with without serious loss to the individual; for said Jesus, "This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." No one can get this knowledge of the true God, or of his Son Jesus, apart from the Bible. Hence the positive necessity of knowing what is contained in the Scriptures of Divine truth on these topics. This knowledge is necessary to faith, and to an enlightened obedience.

Thus a Christian life begins in knowledge, for knowledge must precede faith. But it does not end here. We cannot for a moment suppose that an individual who is only commencing the Christian life is perfected in knowledge. By no means. This is not to be expected. Enough may have been learned of the Word of the Lord, which is the gospel preached to us, to beget us or to bring us to the birth, and thus constitute us new creatures in Christ Jesus; but then, though we have "put on the new man, which is renewed by knowledge," yet we are only counted as babes which require to feed upon the sincere milk of the Word, that we may grow thereby. There is no perfection here. All is infantile weakness. The apostle says, that these babes, who use a milk diet, "are unskillful, or have no experience in the work of righteousness." Heb. v. 13. Of course growth is expected, and even commanded. "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The "sincere milk of the Word" if properly received, has all the nutrient elements in it to cause growth, and the attainment of spiritual strength. There is no food so good for infants as milk. And nothing can compare with the pure, simple, unadulterated Word of the living God, for encouraging growth and producing strength in the Christian. To feed a babe with what is only fit for an adult is highly injurious. Its nutritive powers are not able to digest and appropriate such food—hence it would induce weakness, a puny and sickly state of health, and often disease, or premature death. So also is it true with the newborn Christian. Let him feed upon the "pure milk of the Word"—such as the philosophic fancies and reasonings of men give—and want of growth will soon be manifest, and not only this, but premature decay or apostacy will follow. And yet how much of such food as this is given to babes in Christ! According to Paul it is improper for such to be fed with the "strong meat" of the Word even, because this belongs to those who are of full age. The "milk" is that which is called the "principles of the doctrine of Christ," and the "first principles of the oracles of God." These principles are defined to be the teaching concerning repentance, faith, baptism, and resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. See Heb. vi. 1, 2. The "strong meat" includes the more abstruse and fruitful doctrines of the Word. The apostle wished to discourse to the Hebrews on the Melchizedek priesthood of Christ, "of whom," says he, "we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing;" but he deplored their infantile state, and that they were more in need of milk, than of strong meat. So also to the Corinthians he wrote—"And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat; for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able." How applicable is this language even now! Where do we find that advancement in grace and knowledge indicative of a healthy Christian character?

Peter says, add to "virtue knowledge." As this word virtue would be better rendered courage, we can see a great propriety in those who have added courage to faith, to add knowledge to both. Knowledge will regulate and temper courage. Courage may embolden one to proclaim the truth, and be very zealous in maintaining the faith, but unless it is according to knowledge, it may be actually a damage. Perhaps the idea of prudence or discernment covers the meaning of the apostle in this place more fully than the word knowledge; though we know that an increase of knowledge of divine things is also recommended. See 2 Peter iii. 18. A proper and judicious action is always regulated by knowledge, prudence or discernment. Impetuosity is generally blind, or lacking in foresight, and frequently causes disastrous results. We love to see a wisely directed courage. Those who will be able to speak "a word in season, and out of season." Their words "will be seasoned with salt, and minister grace to the hearers." If such "suffer for righteousness' sake," they are said to be happy; and are exhorted to be not afraid of the terrors of their enemies, nor to be troubled; "but sanctify the Lord God in your hearts; and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope of that is in you, with meekness and fear," or reverence. Let every Christian then add knowledge to faith and courage. This will save from many an error and false step, and give much comfort. The knowledge spoken of is divine knowledge of course. Worldly learning is good in its place, but that is not included here. Mere worldly learning is that kind of knowledge which "puffeth up," but this begins in the fear of the Lord, and gives ability to teach divine things. Hence Paul writing to Romans says, "I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another," Rom. xv. 14. Solomon says, that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge," or wisdom. Again he says, "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom. If thou seek for her as for silver, and search for her as for hid treasures, then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God; for the Lord giveth wisdom; out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." To obtain the knowledge of God, and our Lord Jesus Christ, can only be done by reading and studying the oracles of God,—those words of "knowledge and understanding" which have been communicated from the Divine mind. It is no use to seek it from any other source. Here in the Bible we may find treasures of wisdom and knowledge—enough to enlighten, guide, direct, save, and bless all who will enrich themselves with its riches.

Then let every Christian add to faith and courage, knowledge, in order to grow up into the Divine likeness, and be conformed to the image of Christ, our living head, who is "the wisdom of God." And thus being filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, may we walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God." Gospel Banner, 1887.

It Cured Him.

A little girl was once instrumental in curing a famous American preacher of an afflicting pompous air.

His habit was to pause at the end of each division of his discourse, look impressively upon the pews, take a breath so very long that he seemed to increase his size, and then go on with an air of the utmost importance.

One Sunday this good man paused after his "firstly" for an unusually long time. Little Jane, who had been trying to keep awake, moved as though greatly relieved.

But the clergyman had not finished! He was about ready for another "head" when little Jane audibly whispered, "Oh, mamma, he's going to blow himself up again!"—Youth's Companion.

"I Call it Rest."

I wish to add a word more to the fitting notice written by our worthy Sister, Carrie Anthon with regard to the death of Bro. Elias Siple, of Hammond, Louisiana. Brother Siple was one of God's true noblemen. During our sojourn in Louisiana we learned to esteem him highly on account of his sincere, honest, and upright life. He adhered to the ancient faith of the gospel unflinchingly and honored his faith by his practice. He had a good report from those who were without, the whole community respected him on account of his correct walk in life. He will be missed so much by the faithful few in Hammond. After our departure he took charge of the services when they met on the first day of the week to remember the dear Lord, and his work and labor of love, will not be forgotten by him when he comes to make up his precious jewels.

We have just received a letter from Sister Siple, and she feels her bereavement, and the responsibility which has fallen upon her, of rearing a young family, and asks our prayers that she may guide them right. She says Brother Siple's sufferings were so great, that he was willing to die, but regretted having to leave his family to battle with the world alone.

While it is sad to part with such good men, yet they leave an influence behind which is fittingly described by the poet as follows:

"Behold the western evening light!
It melts in deepening gloom.
So calmly Christians sink away,
Descending to the tomb.

The winds breathe low; the yellow leaf
Scarce whispers from the tree;
So gently flows the parting breath
When good men cease to be.

How beautiful on all the hills
The crimson light is shed;
'Tis like the peace the Christian gives
To mourners round his bed.

How mildly on the wandering cloud
The sunset beam is cast;
So sweet the memory left behind
When loved ones breathe their last."

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

Pay for The Restitution to be sent to some friend as a Christmas or New Year's gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Dear Restitution:

I would say for the information of my brothers and friends that at last I have secured a foothold in Wichita, Kan. Having been able to hire a store room for a hall, at my own expense, and fitted it up plainly. I had 18 hearers the first night, and have preached seven nights with an increase every night but one, and now have an interesting congregation of 75 attentive listeners. I give privilege for questions after each sermon or lecture, and already one is talking of being baptized, but I wish him to count the cost first, as the Master advised. I think many are baptized in too much haste. Two others are talking of leaving their home church as they find out their preacher is not preaching the whole gospel. I never saw a better interest in so short a time. I hope will God's help to build up in this city a people for the Lord, before his coming. O pray for me brothers and sisters that I may be able to preach a whole gospel. The gospel that Christ and the apostles preached. That I may build up a congregation of true believers and doers of the Word. I feel my weakness.

I have had a debate with a Christian preacher, so-called, and four of his brothers say I showed up his weakness very plainly. I have had one or two preachers out nearly every night. One night a Come-outer preacher got up and said before all, that I had taken the whole foundation from under him. Another man about 35 years of age who was studying for a preacher of another gospel, is going to study under myself. O that I may be humble, meek, and lowly. I hope by God's Word to teach him first the true faith, and that baptism comes after. O what a responsibility is before me. Brother T. E. Adams let me have your prayers, also Bro. M. Joblin, and Bro. Woodruff forget me not, for I am very weak. I wish to be the clay and God the potter.

Brother Lehman and wife and Brother J. A. Moyer and wife are the only ones here that seem deeply in earnest. There is one other but he works with another body. I find a number in this city that are partly in the faith. O that I may be an instrument in God's hands to increase their faith.

I have started a Bible School in which we have a good interest. I also expect to start a reading room and would say if any brothers or sisters have reading matter that rings with the true gospel, that they can spare, and are able to pay postage themselves, I would be glad of the same, as I wish in every way possible to get the seed of truth before this city. It is costing me all that I have to do what I am doing, or I would offer to pay postage.

Your brother in patient waiting for the coming of our Lord and Master.

Charles S. Allen.

Dear Restitution:

My paper expired this month, but I was unable to renew, and now only send 50 cents and hope I can send the dollar by the time this is out. I feel as if I could not do without it as it is all the preaching we have here that is Bible Truth. I wanted so much to send $3.00 this time as a dear sister paid for me last year, but times are so hard it is impossible. I have quit using coffee which cost me 25 cts. a month so I can have The Restitution. I cannot get any subscribers here. I have given my papers to neighbors, but they will not even read them, and will not talk to me about the one faith. God pity them. Hoping this will reach you all right, I am truly your Sister in the one faith.

Mrs. C. P. Randolph.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Would you allow us to send a letter of gratitude through our dear paper to our brothers and sisters who have been so kind and generous to us during these hours of trial, and especially Sister Denton. When disease is of such a nature that people shun the house how many times our dear sister has cheered us with encouraging words when she visited us, as did also Brothers Turney and Elvey. Those were the hours we enjoyed the articles The Restitution contained, more than ever. Especially those of dear Brothers B. Wilson, and M. Joblin. How we long for our Blessed Christ to return when our loved ones are stricken down with disease and those in authority are ready to snatch them from our bosom and our care. How sad it is when we are not allowed to bury those whom we love, but thanks to God who raised up the wife, and spared her. That this evening we enjoy the family circle with the exception of one, which we did not a few weeks ago. It is hard to say sometimes as Paul did, "in everything give thanks." But we can say as Job did, "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, blessed be his name." We would say to you dear brothers and sisters of both Austin and Chicago, we thank you for your kind remembrance of us. And our dear Sister Denton, may the Lord bless her for the many times she came and especially the day after wife and baby had been taken away. One of the many promises that Jesus left was "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." How true it is "Cast thy burden on the Lord and he shall sustain thee."

May the Lord bless you dear brothers and sisters, and preserve you until his kingdom, where there shall be no sin and the consequences which is sickness and death. Are we ready for that day? "Because now is our redemption nearer than when we first believed." Can we say as John said, "Come Lord Jesus, Come quickly." This is written by Mary Aslaksen, for her father.

Dear Restitution:

It has been some time since I have written anything as I thought I would let the scattered ones know that I am still in the faith once delivered to the saints, although surrounded by sects, but I put them all to flight with the Word of God. O how it cheers me to hear the testimonies of the brothers and sisters, and the good pieces written by different ones. We still get The Restitution by the aid of some good person, for which I am thankful.

Written by a little girl 10 years old, for my blind father, Isaac Foster.

Tura Foster.

Editor Restitution:

As I read the many letters from the brothers and sisters, I feel that there is nothing that I can write that will be of any use, still, though my mite be very small I feel I must add it. I have often thought of the coming of our Lord. What a glorious, happy hour it will be for all those who are ready, clothed in white spotless garments.

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." What a beautiful thought, that we shall see him in all his glory and shall be like him. Free from sin and temptation. To be pure and spotless. "And every man who hath this hope purifieth himself even as he is pure."

If we would be accepted by the Lord we must not only fight against but conquer all our bad habits what ever they may be. Anything that will spot our white robes. Let us strive to keep ourselves pure even as Christ, who is our pattern is pure. Surely he was tempted as we are in every way, and there is no need of our failing if we try hard enough to conquer and ask him for help.

He has shown us the way and if we wish to reign with him we must follow in his footsteps now every hour of our lives and be very careful we do nothing that will cause us to lose our crown. We are being tried now in the little trials and temptations that comes to us every day of our lives, so we need to be always on the watch. That we may so live that we will be welcomed by our Lord when he comes for his own is my prayer.

Carrie Anthon.

Dear Restitution:

I send $2.00, $1.50 to pay for another year, and the balance to send the paper to some aged brother or sister who is too poor to pay for it.

I see there is an urgent call for money at the office. I hope I am not one of the delinquents, if I am behind please let me know, I believe in owing no man anything. I have been taking The Restitution for two years and have sent the money to pay for it. About twenty years ago I took the paper for five years, and then took it no more until two years ago. I am much interested in it. It is by far the best preaching I can find.

J. R. Shockey.

Editor Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 to pay for the paper for another year, as I cannot think of doing without it. It is an old friend. I have taken it in its different changes since 1865. I am 76 years old and lame and not able to get around, and my dear husband was called away by death, the 15th of Oct. He had been a great sufferer for over four years with heart disease, but the All-wise Father saw fit to call him to rest, and I feel to say "His will be done, not mine." May we be worthy to meet with all the dear ones, that have gone before, and all the dear household of faith, and hear the welcome plaudit of "well done." Pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end.

Your Sister in the one faith and hope.

Mrs. Polly M. Spencer.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find 50 cents for what we are indebted to The Restitution. Times are so hard with us, you will have to stop the paper until we have better times. We do thank you very much for what you have sent the paper. We will miss it very much. We have taken it in its various forms for 25 years, and in its lines we find many good and cheering words, but amidst all the hard times I hope God will protect and keep the paper moving on and doing good wherever it goes.

Mrs. D. P. Miller.

Dear brothers and sisters:

To each and every one of you. Let us examine ourselves and see if we continue in brotherly love, that grace may abound. Now is it not just as necessary that we love one another, as God teaches, yes, and commands us to do. To hold to that spirit of loving kindness, one toward another, just as necessary as it to hold fast to the faith. Oh how sad it is to see hard feeling existing and harsh and angry words spoken amongst brothers and sisters, Children of Christ by adoption, when God tells us in so many places, and commands us to love each other. Now let us look through the blessed Word of God, and see what he says. We find in Lev. xix. 17, 18, "Thou shalt not hate thy brethren in thine heart, thou shalt not avenge or bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, I am the Lord."

1 John ii. 10, 11, "He that saith he is in the light and hateth his brother is in darkness even until now. He that loveth his brother abideth in the light and there is none occasion of stumbling in him, but he that hateth his brother is in darkness and knoweth not whither he goeth because that darkness has blinded his eyes."

1 John iii. 13-15, "Marvel not brethren, if the world hate you, we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Now how are we to know that we have passed from death unto life? God's word says, "because we love the brethren." It does not say because we love some of the brethren. No there is none left out. But because we love the brethren, and if we do not love our brethren we will just as sure know that we have not passed from death unto life. "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him. If a man say I love God and hateth his brother, he is a liar. And this is his commandment that we should believe on the name of his Son, Jesus Christ, and love one another as he gave his commandment. Now dear brothers and sisters, many of you I have seen, and so many that I have not, but I would love to meet all of you face to face, and hear words of encouragement from you. How kind words help to build us up and make us stronger, and yet they cost nothing. They are easily spoken. Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and let brotherly love continue. Let us strive to carry with us that spirit of loving kindness for in this was manifested the love of God toward us, because he sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him, and to be the propitiation for our sins. If God so loved us we ought also to love one another.

So let our lips and lives express,
The holy gospel we profess;
So let our works and virtues shine,
To prove the doctrine all divine.

Thus shall we best proclaim abroad
The honors of our Savior God;
When the salvation reigns within,
And love subdues the power of sin.

Our flesh and sense must be denied,
Passion and envy, lust and pride;
While justice, temperance, truth and love
Our inmates; they approve.

Love bears us on and on,
While we expect that blessed hope,
The glorious appearing of our Lord,
And faith stands leaning on his word.

A Sister in hope,
A. L.

Editor Restitution:

If there is any room for me, I would like to say a word for Jesus. I have found him very precious to me and I try each day to become more like him.

Christians have a hard road to travel. We have things to vex and discourage us, but as we get a glimpse of the cross it gives us more courage to fight the battle of life. But Christ has promised to be with us even unto the end of the world, and he will not give us too heavy a burden under which we are not able to bear.

He says "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Oh what a blessed promise that is. Let us that have just started out in the straight and narrow way be ever kept from the sinful things of this world that when the Lord shall come, he may say to us "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Oh may we be more faithful and let our light shine out to others that they may see our good works and be led to glorify our Father in heaven, and at last when Christ is done with us here may we be gathered home where there is no sorrow pain or death. Is it not worth working for? And if we will only ask him he will be sure to answer, for he says, "anything that you shall ask in my name, I will give it."

May we be strengthened and be kept in his love, and the Lord bless and keep us is my prayer.

Your Sister in Christ.

Gertrude Syer.

The Columbia Desk Calendar.

For ten years the desk calendar issued by the Pope Manufacturing Company has held a unique place among business helpers. Each daily leaf during that time has taught its quiet lesson of the value of better roads and outdoor exercise, and especially the benefits of bicycling. The calendar for 1896, which is just issued, is even brighter than its predecessors in appearance, as clever artists have added dainty silhouette and sketch to the usual wise and witty contributions that have heretofore given this popular calendar its charm. It can be had for five 2-cent stamps from the Pope Manufacturing Company, Hartford Conn., or from any Columbia bicycle agency.

Any one desiring my services to hold meetings during the winter may address me at Galien Mich.

4. And Paulos looking steadily on the Sunedrion, said Men, brethren, I have served God's state with all good consciousness until this day.

2. And the chief-priest Ananias directed those standing by him to smite his mouth.

3. Then Paulos said unto him, God is about to smite thee, thou white-washed wall; and dost thou sit judging me according to law, and while evading law command me to be smitten?

4. And those standing by said, Dost thou scoff at God's chief-priest?

5. And Paulos said, I was not aware, brethren, that he was a chief-priest. For it hath been written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy laity.

6. And when Paulos became aware that one part was of Sadducaioi and the other of Phariasioi, he shouted in the Sunedrion. Men, brethren, I am a Phariasion a son of a Phariasios. Concerning a hope and resurrection of dead ones am I being judged.

7. And having said this, there occurred a standing of the Phariasioi and Sadducaioi and the multitude were divided.

8. For Sadducaioi say there is no resurrection nor angel nor spirit. But Phariasioi confess both.

9. And there became a great shouting, and certain of the scribes of the portion of the Phariasioi fought for him saying, We find no evil in this man, only a spirit or an angel hath talked to him.

10. And when a great standing had occurred, the kiliarch fearing that Paulos would be torn in two by them, directed the soldiery to go down and snatch him out of their midst and lead him into the camp,

11. And the following night the Lord standing by him said, Be of good courage. For as thou hast gone through the testimony concerning me in Hierousalem, even so it behooveth thee to have testified also in Irome (Rome).

12. And when it had become day, the Joudaians forming a gathering anathematized themselves, saying that they would neither eat nor drink until they had slain Paulos,

13. And there were more than forty who had taken this joint-oath,

14. Who going to the chief-priests and elders said, We have anathematized ourselves not to taste anything until we have killed Paulos.

15. Now do ye make it clear to the kiliarch along with the Sunedrion, that he is to lead him down to you, as though ye were intending to ascertain more definitely the things concerning him, and we are ready before he has drawn nigh to take him away,

16. But the son of the sister of Paulos heard of the ambush and entered into the camp and told Paulos:

17. And Paulos called one of the centurions and said, Lead this young man to the kiliarch. For he hath something to tell him.

18. Then he took and led him to the kiliarch and he saith, The prisoner Paulos summoned me and asked me to conduct this young man to thee as he hath something to say to thee.

19. And the kiliarch taking him by his hand and withdrawing by themselves enquired, What is it thou hast to tell me?

20. And he said, The Joudaians have agreed to ask thee to lead Paulos down tomorrow to the Sunedrion, as though intending to learn something more definite concerning him.

21. Do thou then not be persuaded by them, for there are lying in wait of them more than forty men who have anathematized themselves not to eat nor drink until they have destroyed him, and they are ready awaiting the Intelligence from thee.

22. Then the kiliarch dismissed the young man having enjoined on him, Tell no one that thou hast made known these things to me.

23. And summoning a certain two of the centurions he said, Make ready two hundred soldiers to go their way to Kaisaraia, and seventy horsemen and two hundred spearmen at the third hour.

24. And provide beasts of burden that they may have Paulos mounted and conduct him safely to Phelix the leader,

25. He having written a letter in this form,

26. Klaudius Lusias unto Phelix the best ruler, greeting:

27. This man who had been seized by the Joudaians and who was about to be slain by them, as I was standing by with the soldiery, I delivered having learned that he was a Hromaios (a Roman).

28. And wishing to know fully the reason why they were calling him to account, I led him down to their Sunedrion,

29. And I found that he was being called to account about questions of their law and that he had no accusation worthy of death nor of bonds.

30. And it being disclosed to me that there was going to be a plot against the man, I straightway sent him to thee and enjoined on his accusers also to speak against him before thee.

31. The soldiery then taking up Paulos according to the directions given them conducted him during the night to Antipatris.

32. And on the morrow letting the horsemen go on along with him they returned to the camp.

33. And when they had entered into Kaisaraia and delivered the epistle to the leader they presented Paulos also to him,

34. And when he had read it and enquired from what eparchia he was and learned that he was from Kilikia,

35. He said, I will hear thee through whenever thy accusers also have arrived; and he directed him to be guarded in the praitorion (pretorium Latin) of Herodes.

COMMENT.

"Have served God's state" instead of "have lived before God" R. V. The word means to act as a citizen of a city or a state and not merely to live.

"Consciousness" instead of "conscience" in the ordinary metaphysical sense R. V. There is a vast difference between the two concepts. In the latter sense "conscience" is judging you as an obedient or disobedient subject, while in the former you are judging yourself in a state of consciousness or conscious knowledge.

"Evading law" instead of "contrary to law" R. V. adds the sin of hypocrisy to his other wrong-doing.

"Laity" instead of "people" and "chief-priest" instead of "high-priest" R. V.

"Only" instead of "what if" R. V.

"Gone through the testimony" instead of "testified" merely R. V.

"Anathematized themselves" instead of "bound themselves under a curse" R. V.

"Had taken this joint-oath" instead of "made this conspiracy" R. V.

The World's Gold.

Few persons realize the enormous quantity of gold there is in the world. Much of it is distributed in such a way that it does not pay for mining by any process now known, but the deposits in some of the mining regions are simply enormous. For instance, the Witwatersandt mines in South Africa, which have been twice examined by experts, are found to contain about (XXXXXXX) ounces of gold. It is worth notice that the second estimate, the figures of which are here used, is considerably larger than the first, which was made several years ago. That was by Hamilton Smith; the recent examination was by Herr Schmeitzer, Counselor of the Mines in Germany, who was sent out by the government to conduct this inquiry.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a Christmas or New Year's gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Girls, in treating dissipated young men as equals, do a wrong they can scarcely realize. Such young men should be made to feel that until they walk with correctness and honor in the paths of right, good people stand aloof from them. Girls who respect themselves will not be seen with such men, and will decline to receive them on the familiar footing of friendship. It is a mistaken kindness to politice when caustic is needed, and I am inclined to think a little sharp decision on the part of girls of to-day would go far to correct the general looseness of morality among young men.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able pecuniarily to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

The Phrenological Journal and Science of Health for December contains a variety of excellent features. The frontispiece shows thirty-six intelligent faces, comprising the graduating class of the Phrenological Institute for 1894.

Prof. Sizer continues his interesting series, How to Study Strangers; and Mrs. Wells reviews the life of a phrenological philanthropist.

The brilliant lecture by Prof. J. S. Van Cleve upon musicians and poets is concluded with fascinating sketches of Whittier, Cowper, Byron, Burns, Holmes and James Whitcomb Riley.

Much instructive and entertaining matter will also be found in the reports of the closing addresses of the Institute faculty.

The departments of Child Culture and Hygiene are exceptionally good, and the editor devotes several pages to Clairvoyance and four "graduates" of the Emira Reformatory.

Price 15 cents, $1.50 a year. Address The Fowler & Wells Co., 27 East 21st St. New York.

Patrons of the Vandalia and Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh will be glad to know that an arrangement has been made, taking effect November 1st, by which portions of Mileage Tickets will be detached and accepted in payment of excess baggage charges. Commercial travelers and others will find that Agents of the Pennsylvania and Vandalia Lines at all principal stations have been instructed regarding this concession, which will no doubt become immediately popular.

Change of Address.

On and after Sept. 25, 1894, my address will be Rossville, Illinois, instead of Plymouth, Ind. Correspondents will please take notice.

L. E. CONNER.

How badly do you want a Home of your own?

If you are really in earnest in desiring to get a home of your own write at once to Frederick Abbot, Land Commissioner, Wisconsin Central Railroad at Milwaukee, Wis. for a pamphlet which will tell you how and where you may get work at good wages and a home for yourself.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Register'd letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Holiday Excursions via Pennsylvania Lines.

On December 24th, and 25th and 31st, 1894, and January 1st, 1895, excursion tickets will be sold from ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh to points on those lines, valid to return January 2d, 1895. For details apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line ticket agent.

Holiday Excursions via Vandalia Line.

For the above occasion the Vandalia Line will sell on December 24th, 25th, 31st, 1894, and January 1st, 1895, excursion tickets from all stations; not only to local points on the Vandalia Line, but also to points on connecting lines, with return limit of January 2nd, 1895. The New Year.

"The acceptable year of the Lord."

O year of God, that prophets once foresaw,
Bringing earth's chains with its mildew-hues,
Whose pulsing tide obey His Spirit's law,
Whose meeting is by heavenly watchers seen:
Come quickly, and this weary earth restore
With Love's life-elixir of Peace for evermore!

Too long have greed and guile the nations ruled,
Debasing nature from its primal aim;
Too long have men their brutal instincts cursed,
Till crowds have felt no touch of shame,
And selfishness grew strong beyond control,
And froze the genial current of the soul.

The years of man have been the years of pain,
Long years of hatred and unbrotherhood,
The race pursued by fratricidal pain,
Till God's new Time shall bring the promised good,
And from the past a grander epoch rise
Where joy shall spring from mutual sacrifice.

The years of men have been the years of sin,
Molded by human passions from their birth:
O year of God with newer life begin,
And shed thy bounties o'er this hate-cursed earth!
May slavery, war, and kindred evils flee,
And a new manhood all thy glories see!

New Year of hope and blessing for mankind
Come with your tidings of a glorious spring!
Freedom for slaves whose social hatreds bind
And joy for broken-hearted mourners bring.
So shall thy dawn be sung by souls forborn,
And all earth's joy-bells greet thy natal morn.

—W. Evans Darby.

"What Shall the Harvest Be?"

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Gal. vi. 7.

No grander truth was ever announced to mortal man. It is also of universal application, as indicated by the word "whatsoever," covering everything both in a natural, physical and moral sense, and relates both to this life, and that which is to come. Therefore "Be not deceived: God is not mocked." He who chooses to sow "to his flesh," will certainly "reap corruption," as a natural and legitimate harvest from the seed he has sown. It is an unchangeable law of nature that the fruitage must be like the seed sown. What is the inevitable result of "sowing to the flesh," or in other words, giving one's self over to the indulgence of fleshly desires and appetites? take for instance that of tobacco and intoxicating drinks? a tobacco user in time looses self-control, an essential grace which should adorn every Christian character. As he looses self-control he becomes a slave, a slave to a dirty, obnoxious habit, which ruins the nerve force, and the brain being but a continuation of the nerve-substance is sensibly affected by it. In time he is unable to perform mental labor as he should, unless under the direct influence of the narcotic. By thus "sowing to the flesh" he is gradually unfitting himself from becoming a lively stone, which was originally designed to occupy an honorable place in that temple in which our Lord will be the foundation corner stone. A defective stone would spoil the superstructure, and therefore can have no place in it.

Likewise with intoxicating drinks, a man looses self-control rapidly, and speedily unfits himself not only for the affairs of this mortal life, but is absolutely ruined for the life to come. No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God. This is the result of "sowing to the flesh," he "shall reap corruption." He cannot "sow to the flesh," and "and sow to the Spirit," at the same time, the same soil cannot germinate and sustain life in both kinds of seed. Each kind of seed must have the soil adapted to it. In the natural world, we know that different kinds of seed need a different chemical composition of soil to sustain the life of the plant.

The gardener exercises care to purchase good seed. To sow seed in which there is no life-germ will lead to disappointment. There are those who are deceiving the people by recommending seed in which there is no life. They are led to believe they will reap as a harvest eternal life if they sow that seed, but grievous disappointment awaits all such. Go with me to the storehouse and I will show you seed that is good, and is warranted not to disappoint. It yields from thirty to one hundred fold according to the culture it receives. See Matt. xiii. This seed is labelled "the Word of the kingdom," and none other is genuine. This seed when sown broadcast, some falls by the "wayside," some in "stony places," and some "among thorns," as well as upon "good ground." That which falls by the wayside is represented as falling into the heart, and before the recipient is fully aware of its import, "then cometh the wicked (vender of spurious seed) and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." All sowers of seed labelled "the Word of the kingdom," have seen this.

Sometimes "the Word of the kingdom" seed, falls upon "stony places," where the earth is shallow, and consequently there is not depth of soil enough to enable it to become "rooted and grounded," and when "tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the Word" of the kingdom, he cannot endure its heat.

"He also that received seed among the thorns is he that heareth the Word (of the kingdom) and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches choke the Word, and he becometh unfruitful."

"But he that received that seed (the Word of the kingdom) into the good ground is he that heareth the Word, and understandeth it; which also bear fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty."

It is a well-known law in nature, that the harvest in kind, will be like the seed sown; if a man sows wheat seed, he will never reap turnip, if a man "sows to the flesh," he will never reap "life eternal," (as Universalists affirm,) he will harvest in kind, just what he sows.

If a man sows "the Word of the kingdom" seed in good ground, and properly cultivates it, he will reap the kingdom as an harvest. "Fear not little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure give you the kingdom." How can a person expect to receive the kingdom as an harvest, by sowing seed that bears no relation to the kingdom? "The Word of the kingdom" seed (Matt. xiii. 18, 19) is the only seed that can be depended upon for life eternal, because it alone has in it the life-germ, it is incorruptible seed. Corruptible seed will produce a harvest like it—corruptible. Like produces like every time. Sow incorruptible seed, and you will produce an incorruptible harvest. It could not be otherwise. Examine 1 Peter i 22-25, and you will learn that the seed called "the Word of the kingdom," (Matt. xiii. 18, 19) is incorruptible seed, and will eventually produce incorruptible people to inherit an incorruptible kingdom. "Flesh and blood (corruption) cannot inherit the kingdom of God."

Peter says: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth (sins forgiven in baptism) through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently; (this is sowing to the Spirit) being born again, not of dam," relates primarily to the restoration of the kingdom to Israel, with Jesus upon "the throne of David" reigning over "the house of Jacob forever." This being the case, there is some reason why "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise," are spoken of as "having no hope, without God in the world," because they have not in them the "incorruptible seed." 1 Pet. i. 23, which is "the Word of the kingdom" seed, the precious seed "a sower went forth to sow."

"What shall the harvest be?" the answer is, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that also shall he reap." If he sows the wind he will reap the whirlwind. Job says: "They that plow iniquity and sow wickedness, reap the same. By the blast of God they perish, by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed." The harvest from sowing this seed as you observe, is utter extermination. But if you wish salvation seed, go with me to the seed house again. See Luke viii. 1: "He went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and the twelve were with him." Verse 5; "A sower went out to sow his seed, etc." Verse 10: "And he said, unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God." In verse 11, he commences to unravel the "mysteries," he says: "The seed is the Word of God. (Matt. xiii. "Word of the kingdom".) Those by the wayside are they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the Word (of the kingdom) out of their hearts lest they should believe and be saved." The just inference is, that if this seed sown in the heart was allowed to germinate, the result would be, they "should believe and be saved."

It would be impossible to sow the entire Scriptures in any one's heart, therefore it must be that portion of "the Word of God," Matthew calls: "The Words of the kingdom."

Sow the kingdom seed, and you will reap incorruptibility, because it is the incorruptible seed, and this seed is "the Word of the Lord (which) endureth forever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you." 1 Pet. i. 23. Hence, Peter says, "the Word of the Lord," is that portion of the Scriptures known as "the gospel," and Jesus and his apostles preached "the kingdom" as "the gospel." Sow immortal-soul, sky-kingdom seed, and you will be disappointed, it will never germinate. "The seed is rotten under their clods, the garners are laid desolate."

On the contrary, "they that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

The time of harvest is at hand, my brethren. What kind of seed are you sowing? "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

W. H. WILSON.

The Advent Premillennial.

Read Rev. xx. 1-4; Isa. ii. 2-4; xi. 6-9; Jer. iii. 17; Zech. xiv. 16. "Millennium" (from the Latin words mille thousand, and annus year) is the name given to that period of a thousand years mentioned six times in Rev. xx. Its leading features according to the above testimonies are (1) that the righteous dead will rise and reign with Christ on earth, (2) Satan shall be imprisoned in the abyss, (3) wars will cease, (4) all wild beasts and poisonous reptiles be harmless, (5) the earth will be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, (6) all nations will be converted, and unite in worshipping the Lord then reigning in Jerusalem, and so "be blessed" according to the gospel preached to Abraham. Gal. iii. 8.

That there is to be a millennium on earth is a truth generally admitted. I lately found in a common daily newspaper the following paragraph:—

"The Bible speaks many more times of the kingdom of God in this world than it does of heaven for those who have passed away. It is more atheistic and infidel to disbelieve in the millennium than it is to disbelieve in heaven."

Bishop Newton (born in 1704,) a celebrated writer on prophecy, says, "That there shall be such a happy period as the millennium, that the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, Dan. vii. 27, that Christ shall have the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, Psa. ii. 8, that the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea, Isa. xi. 9, that the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and all Israel shall be saved, Rom. xi. 25, 26, in a word that the kingdom of heaven shall be established upon earth, is the plain and express doctrine of Daniel and all the prophets, as well as of St. John, and we daily pray for the accomplishment of it, in praying Thy Kingdom come."—On the Prophecies, page 587.

Eusebius (born in Palestine about A. D. 270,) tells us that Papias said, "That there will be a millennium after the resurrection from the dead when the personal reign of Christ will be established on this earth."—Eccles Hist. iii. 39. Papias was called "the hearer of John, and a companion of Polycarp."

While these opinions are pleasant readings, it must be remembered that the Bible only is authority and proof in matters of faith.

A popular error concerning the millennium is that it must occur before the coming of the Lord, and is to be brought about by missionaries, Bible-societies, and a union of churches.

Now, that we can have no true millennium and no complete unity of mankind before the personal coming and reign of Christ on earth is evident from the following ten considerations:

1. The purpose of God in sending the gospel is not in said Scripture to be the conversion of all nations, but "to take OUT OF them a people for his name." This requires a separation instead of a unification of mankind. It is sending "not peace but a sword;" for, in the present dispensation, "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Ac. xv. 4; Matt. x. 34; 2 Tim. iii. 12. But the millennial dispensation brings a change in this law, for there is no persecution where no persecutors exist.

2. If the apostles with inspiration, doctrinal union, gift of tongues, and other miraculous aids, did not convert or millennialize one heathen nation, how can we expect modern missionaries without these aids to convert all nations? That the nations were not converted in the Apostolic age was because they did not believe, not because they had not "heard" the gospel. See Rom. x. 18; Col. i. 6, 23.

3. The great tribulation and wrath upon the blind and unconverted Jews is an un-millennial condition of things that has been going on for 1800 years. But it is "IMMEDIATELY" (not 1000 years) after this tribulation, that "they shall see the Son of Man coming." Hence, there is no room for the millennium between the existing tribulation and his visible coming. The coming must, therefore, occur before the millennium. Connect Luke xxi. 23, 24 with Matt. xxiv. 29, 30.

4. Certainly we cannot have the millennium while the "little horn" or "man of sin" is prevailing against the saints. And he will prevail against them until he is destroyed by the brightness of our Lord'S "coming" ("presence," R. V. margin.) Dan. vii. 8, 21, 23; 2 Thess. ii. 3, 8. Hence, the coming or presence will occur before the millennium.

5. The great image of world-powers must be smitten and swept away to make room for the millennial kingdom of Christ. But the image is not smitten to powder except by the descending stone at the second advent. Hence, the advent is before the millennium. Dan. ii. 31, 35.

6. The Lord does not find the world in a converted and millennial state of peace and unity at his coming, but "filled with violence" as in days of Noah, scarcely any of "the faith on the earth," and "the kings of the earth and their armies" gathered to make war against him. Gen. vi. 13; Luke xvii. 26; Rev. xix. 19.

7. Why should "all the tribes of the earth mourn" at his coming, if they shall be found in a converted state? What is all this mourning for? Matt. xxiv. 30. Christians will rejoice to see him; their mourning ends where the sinners' mourning begins. "Can the children of the bridechamber mourn as long as the Bridegroom is with them?" Mat. ix. 15.

8. The relative positions of his coming and millennial reign are clearly shown in Zech. xiv. 5, 9, 16, where the coming is first in order.

9. The Gog issuing from "the north parts" and devoured by beasts and birds before the millennium must be distinguished from the Gog and Magog gathered from "the four quarters of the earth" and devoured by fire after the millennium. And as the earlier or northern Gog is to be destroyed at the "presence" of the lord, it follows that the lord's presence or coming will occur before the millennium. Ezek. xxxiii. 15, 20; Rev. xx. 8, 9.

10. The risen righteous must reign during the entire millennium; but how can they unless those two inseparable events, the advent and their resurrection take place before it? Rev. xx. 4-6.

These truths ought not to lessen but should rather increase all missionary efforts, in order that we "might by all means save some" from the perishing masses before it be too late. 1 Cor. ix. 22. Knowledge of the awful judgments about to fall upon the unbelieving portion of their hearers did not prevent Noah from preaching to the antediluvians, nor the apostles from urging the inhabitants of Jerusalem to repent.

Report.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to give you a report of a discussion, held at Eagle Grove, Ia. between Bro. A. J. Eychaner of Hubbrook, Ia., and J. F. McDowell of Harlem, Ia., of the Latter Day Saints.

The following questions were discussed:

1. Does the Bible teach that the kingdom spoken of in Dan. ii. 44, and Luke xix. 28, 30, will be set up at the second personal appearing of Jesus the Christ? Brother Eychaner affirmed this question, and proved conclusively from the Word of God, his position.

2. Does the Bible teach that man is dual in his makeup, body, and spirit, and at the death of the body the soul or spirit remains a living, conscious entity. McDowell affirmed this one. Bro. Eychaner showed forth in his clear and logical manner the inconsistencies of the positions McDowell took upon this question, he was on the run from the very first, and all because Bro. Eychaner kept showing him that he believed the devil's lie. McDowell brought extracts from Cardinal Manning and several other Divines of the same stamp, but when Bro. Eychaner placed extracts from Moses and the Prophets, and Apostles beside his eminent Divines they paled into insignificience. It was a grand effort on the part of Bro. Eychaner to place the Truth before the people. The interest was intense, people coming for 10 or 12 miles. Attendance was large, the best of feeling prevailing throughout the discussion.

We believe much good has been done, many are investigating to see if these things are so. Our position is new to most people, especially to those who do not make a careful study of the Word of God. We expect a good harvest in the near future as the seed sown has found lodgment in some good and honest hearts. All that is necessary is a little time to bring forth fruit. Pray for us brothers and sisters.

Yours, waiting for the coming kingdom.

O. J. ALLAIN, Sec'y Ia., Conf.

Preach. What you Believe.

This every one should do. No one should hold a faith that he is ashamed of, or that should not be proclaimed by him. To cover up one's sentiments is hypocritical. To hold what one believes is a scriptural doctrine, and fear to advocate it, indicates a lack of moral courage, and a policy that, at least, is far from being commendable. There are doctrines now held privately, both by ministers and laymen, that they are unwilling to advocate. One is the eternal torment of the wicked after death. Now if this is believed by them to be a doctrine of revelation, why should they not proclaim it, make it prominent in their preaching and exhortation? If it is a divine truth it is a tremendous one, and should be uttered in the ears of every ungodly human being.

The time has been when this terrible doctrine was proclaimed by those who believed it. One hundred and fifty years ago it was preached by all the evangelical ministers of that time. The men who then believed it were bold and fearless in declaring it; and sinners were warned to flee from the torments of hell. This was one of the great points in their preaching, and by which they made a deep impression on the minds of their hearers. These were independent and God-fearing, awfully impressed by their belief in the final condition of the wicked. And so they preached the fiery, eternal torment of the lost in hell.

Now this very doctrine is believed or not believed by all the ministers of the evangelical denominations, so called; but where is there an open advocacy of or dissent from the doctrine by them? Those who believe that the wicked are to suffer eternal conscious pain, declare it not in their ministrations, holding it, apparently, as a private opinion; while those who do not believe in hell torments are silent as to their convictions. Now neither class is honest before God; for the final condition of the unsaved should be pointed out by every minister as he understands the Word of God to teach it. This is a part of the gospel which he as a minister of Christ, is to preach, and no withhold.

The end of the ungodly should be declared by every servant of God. He is not faithful who does not preach what that end will be. Is there not a policy in the withholding this doctrine of the Bible from one's hearers? There is an eternal life in misery, or an everlasting death awaiting every wicked human being. Whichever you believe—preach and be honest.—New Zealand Bible Standard.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 2, 1895. NO. 1.

THE RESTITUTION announces the final restitution of all things which God has spoken of by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

IN the report of the Scholls Ferry, Oregon, Conference, we are notified that a mistake occurred. On Sunday night it was Bro. W. W. Jaquith who spoke on the coming of Christ, instead of Bro. Prosser.

IT is passing strange that so many who see, and remark on the folly of the kingdom being in men's hearts, will still adhere to the erroneous punctuation of 2 Pet. i. 19, "Until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." Is it not self-evident those who so punctuated this passage had no correct idea of the day about to dawn, or who is represented by the day Star? Why should we not at once and forever abandon so obvious an error and read, "Until the day dawn, and the star arise; knowing this in your hearts (that is, being fully persuaded) or having this as a settled conviction, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. This makes the passage luminous, and in accord with other passages of Scripture.

THE late Rev. James Robertson of Kilmarnock, Ayrshire, Scotland, made himself master of at least six languages, and was a great student. When in London at one time he went with two friends, Dr. Jermont, of the United Secession church, London, and Mr. Thomas Hart, of Glasgow, to see the modern Jewish mode of worship, as conducted in the London synagogue. Mr. Robertson being an excellent Hebraist, lent his ears with the most marked attention, visible in his countenance, to hear whether the highpriest, who actually presided, read according to the received meaning. Mr. Hart observed to Dr. Jermont, "I fear Doctor, from Mr. Robertson's manner, that he is about to speak." "Oh, surely not," replied the Doctor. Immediately afterwards Mr. R. addressed the high priest, and challenged the correctness of his reading. The descendant of Levi asked whether the person who had interrupted him could read Hebrew, when Dr. Jermont replied in the affirmative. The Hebrew Scriptures were immediately handed over to Mr. R. who received the sacred volume, and turning up the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, read a portion with great propriety, and even elegance, to which the highpriest paid great attention, and appeared to be much surprised. Mr. R. then improving the opportunity commenced exposition, when the priest interrupted him and told him, that he could not be permitted to offer any comment. Mr. R. then returned the volume, and taking his leave, shook hands with the priest, a tear gathering in his affectionate eye, and remarked, "The day is coming when Jew and Gentile will be of one mind in the interpretation of this passage of the prophet."

WHILE it is true that the just shall live by faith, it is also true that faith must be accompanied by works. There can be no doubt about this in the minds of those who read the words of the Spirit in the fifth chapter of James:—"What doth it profit, my brethren, if a man say he hath faith but have not works; can faith save him?"

"CHARACTER has been spoken of as the heraldry of man, that is, his distinguishing badge. In bygone days it was customary among men of note to select certain emblems to be engraved and fitted to their helmets as crests, so that each might be readily known. So character is the crest or heraldry of each one of us. Like a crest it marks us out as separate from all other individuals. We have all, no doubt, been struck at some time or other with certain peculiarities we may have noticed in ourselves or our intimate friends, with regard to either our thoughts or actions, or speech. A combination of these peculiarities is, in one word, "character." Character is unique, no two are exactly alike. Each has to form his own character. By giving heed to our characters we may cultivate them in a variety of ways. We may develop the good or bad in our characters, just as by exerting our arms, or by continual walking we may enlarge the muscles of the arms and legs."

A New Year's Greeting.

The instant the old year died the New Year was born—born yesterday. We have entered "on a fresh period of mercy, of privilege and of duty." God only knows how long our journey may be. "Passing away" is written upon everything. In all probability 120,000 have fallen before the enemy of our race already since its birth,—and if our immediate circle has not been invaded as yet, it very soon may be. The sting of death is sin; and while the sting has been extracted from those who have believe unto righteousness and are walking worthy of

of God in Christ Jesus, death is an enemy for all that. When he lays his icy hand upon us, we can lay up no more treasures in heaven where moth and rust doth not corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal; we can no more plend with sinners nor commune with saints; no more comfort the mourners nor relieve the distressed, and hence the lesson of our own mortality so constantly and vividly taught us, brings to our minds at this season the solemn injunction of the Spirit to do with our might whatever we find to do, "for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest."

If every adopted one would listen carefully at the beginning of the year we think he would hear the Master say, "Go work in my vineyard." There is something for every one to do; and it would be well for each to consider what he is best adapted to do.

MANY WELL MEANING BRETHREN

never accomplish anything for God or truth because they never seem to know what their own sphere of labor is; and having no plan or fixed purpose, no systematic effort can be made.

Taking the apostolic teachings as our guide we cannot fail to see that in order to work together with God so that he will set his seal to our work, we must live a life of faith, of prayer, of humility, of honesty, of sacrifice, of benevolence, of separation from sinners; a life of virtue, of knowledge, of patience, of temperance, and of persistent labor growing out of and Christ. Being thus equipped we shall be ready for every good word and work. We do not mean that every individual will be ready for every work; but that every department of God's household affairs will move forward steadily if every member does with his might what he is best adapted to do; and the glorious outcome will be that it will be said of all—"they have done what they could." Depend upon it, there is something for every one to do, and it is for each to decide what that something is. Every one can do something better than some one else. The body has no superfluous members.

We wish all our readers

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

It is a heartfelt greeting; and these words are accompanied with the earnest desire that each and all may so order their lives as to ensure a happy New Year. This assumes that it is largely in our power to make it a happy New Year. We are persuaded that very many of our trials result from our failure to take God into our confidence, and the failure to do this implies that we do not fully recognize his authority over us, and

HIS CLAIMS UPON US.

This is a sad state of things, but how else can we account for it? Is not the promise that all things shall work together for good to them that love God, and are the called according to his purpose, as true as any other in the Book? If so, there are two conditions on the part of those who would appropriate it that must be present. They must and they must be those having been invited according to God's purpose. To love him because they imagine God is going to take them to heaven because they want to go there, gives men no claim upon the promise that all things shall work together for their good. Those who have accepted the call to God's kingdom and glory, and love him for the gracious offer him. And so when they see the injunction "commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him and he shall bring it to pass;" "delight thyself also in the Lord and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart;" they are ready to take him at his word; they walk out on that with a firm step, and the full assurance of faith. Those who can implicitly trust God thus stand upon a wonderful elevation. They are in touch with heaven and things divine; they are in communion with the unseen. On wings of faith they rise above clouds, above difficulties, above doubts;

LOVE GOD

ARE READY TO OBEY

GOD HAS SPOKEN

and that's enough. His Word answers all objections, and solves all difficulties, and conquers all enemies; it is their chart, their guide, their passport, their guarantee, their assurance, their song.

Beloved, this unwavering trust in the Word of our God and Father will arm us with divine strength. It is an irresistible an all-conquering power—the very beginning of the song of Moses:

"THE LORD IS MY STRENGTH and song." It will enable us at all times to say, "I will love thee, Oh Lord, my strength." And this is surely the privilege of the Household of faith, yes: they are invited to "take hold of my (God's) strength."

The history of the church shows that faith in God is stronger than the combined powers of evil, so that they could sing, "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." If permitted to live and labor through the year on the threshhold of which we now stand, let us have it will bring us close to him. It will warm our hearts and nerve our arms, and impel us forward, FORWARD, FORWARD to the feet of the divine distributor of palms and crowns at the end of the race. It will lift us above reason, above imagination, and enable us to nestle alone in the Holy oracles, so that we can look upon the tumults of humanity and sing, "I know in whom I have believed."

But we were almost forgetting what we intended to say. We thought to glance a moment at things in the political, moral and ecclesiastical world as they exist at the beginning of the year 1895. While at present there is something of a lull in the

as if either surfeited or exhausted, we hardly know which, it is undeniable that there are many millions of armed men waiting for the word to commence an onslaught that will make blood flow like a river; the outcome—the grand and final outcome is only known to those who give head to the sure Word of prophecy. The very fact that political writers, and statesmen of note eagerly grasp at the least thing that inspires hope that war will be averted, shows how deeply seated the uneasiness and fearful foreboding are,—literally, men's them for fear, and for looking after the things that are coming on the earth, but they know not that the great controversy between God and the governments of earth is about to be settled.

And what of the moral conditions of the world? Is it not such as to give us unbounded confidence in the God by whose Spirit it was said near 1900 years ago, "In the last days shall come;" and that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." The record of crime presented to us in the daily papers is such as to prove the moral atmosphere is reeking with pollution. In city and country alike, murders the most shocking and daring are perpetrated so frequently that few feel safe from attack. Assassination, suicide, burglary, arson, forgery and other vile crimes are so rife that thoughtful people begin to think that the very foundations of society are being sapped.

CITY GOVERNMENTS ARE ROTTEN

to the core when aldermen can obtain fifteen thousand dollars a year by corrupt methods, and when captains of the police force can pay fifty thousand dollars for their offices and then make themselves rich in protecting the most infamous traffic on earth for enormous sums, and when judges are bribed and witnesses swear falsely for money. Is we not loudly need a change of administration? How much longer can society hold together under such rulers? The contagion is affecting almost every branch of industry and avenue of trade, and the man who is determined to do justly has an uphill road to travel, surely. But when he whose right it is to reign shall come down like rain upon the mown grass, so refreshing and fructifying "in his day shall the righteous flourish." Amen and Amen.

A BETTER DAY IS COMING:

But what of the world religiously? The mother of harlots is making desperate attempts to bring the Anglican and Greek churches into her fold again, as if by so doing she might avert some impending catastrophy. Late English magazines plainly shows that the tendency is TOWARD ROME.

The High Churchmen since the new departure of Dr. Pusey a few years ago, have increased in numbers rapidly; and besides that, other Romish practices are being introduced, and scarcely anything remains to be done to make one church of the two except to acknowledge the Pope as the head, and give up the salaries received from the state. Our idea is that if the Liberal party were to disestablish the Church of England, three-fourths of the clergy would go over to Rome. Be that as it may, the prophetic Word being true it will not be long before that system of iniquity will as a mill stone cast into the sea. As a rule Protestant denominations make a boast of increasing numbers and try to make themselves believe they are about to take the world for Jesus, while they must be conscious of their utter inability to stem the tide of iniquity that rolls down our streets. And when to this it be added that the "Liberal Spirit" which allows science so-called to take the first place, and relegate the Scriptures to the second or third, and to cut and cull at pleasure from what is not UTTERLY REJECTED, it must be evident to all that they are laboring under a strong delusion through want of faith in the divine programme, that worse and worse instead of better and better shall mark the closing days of Gentile times.

If we want additional proof that the apostles and Jesus himself have faithfully depicted the last times, let us think of what has transpired in in about forty years. A society of skeptics has sprung up that boasts of no less than twenty-five millions of believers, and one of whose educators has the effrontry to say that licentiousness is an out-cropping of the God-element in man. It says: It seems somewhat difficult to make plain to all that vice may be virtue and discord, harmony; we say, however, that virtue is one condition, vice another, but both equally commendable in the sight of God."

When we think of fleshly tendencies, and add to this 35,000,000 of such fleshly teachers, is it any wonder iniquity abounds? We allude to the Spiritualists.

This cursory glance at the condition of the world will suffice to show that we are on the track of truth.

THE GOOD TIME

will never come under man's conduct of affairs. If we are looking for Jesus we are looking in the right direction. His coming again to bring salvation is the crowning truth of all Revelation. Then will open out to an astonished and joyful world the last and grandest chapter of redemption's story. Let us strive to live in this world of trial as not of it. In reaching out the arm of faith and bringing the future near to us, cross much as possible to live in its atmosphere. Let us contemplate

Abraham [illegible] at his feet, and all the saints and angels of God making earth vocal with their song of victory." Let us think of the general assembly, the innumerable company on, on every clime who will make the arch of heaven ring with their ascriptions of praise to him who sit upon the throne and unto the Lamb forever. In this way we shall be able to look beyond the clouds and storms to the and joy and peace beyond. Behind us all is dark, around us all is gloomy, but blessed be God, beyond the storms and tempests there lies in peacefulness and rest, the glory to be revealed, the kingdom of the Most High, the joy unspeakable, the life eternal, the rest that remains for the people of God.

These are the objects of our hope, oh so bright, so glad, and so gloaing, that we are constrained to say with the prophet, "Oh, that thou wouldst rend the heavens and come down." Isa. lxiv. 1. Like the apostle and his brethren we love Christ's appearing. Like the Thessalonians we from heaven: like John we cry, "Come Lord Jesus," and with the whole church of God we pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

WE WAIT FOR GOD'S SON

Tribulations, if he tarry wait for him. With such prospects as these you can afford to wait. The parting word of this New Years greeting is: He who cannot lie has promised.

THE GOOD TIME

is sure to come, and it is surely near become; then will be inaugurated the time of no wars, no disease, no want, no drouths, no floods, no insect pests, no nipping frosts to blast men's hopes, no chills or fevers as heroes from dishonesty, no corners in wheat, or flour, or provisions of any kind. No wonder in view of all this the psalmist should shout, "Let all the people praise thee oh, God, let all the people praise thee." The grand consummation of Jehovah's purpose is, "There shall be no more curse." That sponges out all evil and makes all things new. Hail, happy day, soon may it come. Amen.

PROFESSOR Chas. Gardiner, who has kindly furnished our columns with his translations for some years, sends the following letter regarding an error in translation that is brought out in the article by Bro. Geo. Elton. It puts us altogether new light upon the text, and is well worth consideration.

Editor Restitution:

If Brother Elton, who writes "Knowledge, Faith, Opinion," in Dec. 10th issue will examine the text of Gen. iii. 15, he will see that there is nothing said about "bruising" in the passage. The word "tereo" — (τηρεω) — is the same word used by Paul where he says, "I have kept the faith." "Watched to keep" it should read—the esoteric watch is meant. When used in regard to watching an enemy, it means "to guard against" or "to watch to keep oneself from." "Bruise" was one of the awful and many blunders of the early translators.

This fact you will perceive introduces another "opinion" into the category named by Bro. Elton, and changes the whole trend of orthodox theology, but will be found to harmonize with the teaching of the Scriptures Old and New as a whole.

There is no variation in the text on this point and no room for a difference of opinion on the fact. It simply remains to work out the harmony of the divine teaching according to this note in the score.

The translators carelessly mistook τηρεω for τρεω. The former means primarily "to pierce" or bore and very remotely "to bruise." The mistake probably occurred originally in fooling with the Hebrew without any accurate knowledge of the language, or it may have been one of the intentional rabbinical tinkerings in the second century of the Christian era, when they undertook to befuddle all the Messianic prophecies under the excuse of perfecting the vowel-pointing of the text.

This is probably the truth of the matter. But thank God the true text in the Greek escaped their cunning malignity. Please call Brother Elton's attention to this.

Very truly yours,

CHAS. GARDNER.

I Never Pray.

In the year 1827 a young man, then studying for the ministry, was requested to preach in a town in Kentucky. The meeting was held in the evening, in a private house. Knowing that two or three infidels were present some remarks were made upon the authenticity of God's Word. The president of an infidel club arose and interrupted the speaker, who mildly said to him,

'Sit down, and after meeting I will talk with you.'

When the services were closed there was hardly time for conversation, and an appointment was made that the parties should meet at the house of a friend on the following morning. At the appointed hour the president, with several infidel books under his arm, and a large handkerchief full of pamphlets an papers, made his appearance, in company with two members of his club. No sooner were the parties seated, and the large table covered with his religious dissecting knives, than the infidels began, with much warmth, to pour forth his contempt for the Bible.

'Stop, sir, stop,' said the student; 'let us commence right, and then we shall read well. Do you believe there is a God, who made all things?'

'God, who has a mind?'

'I do.'

'Do you believe He created you, feeds, clothes, and watches over you and yours, without any reward?'

'Certainly I do'

'Well, sir that we commence right, please lead in prayer. Ask the God in whom you believe to direct us as to the rejection of that Bible, if it is false, and if it is true to receive it. We do not want to be deceived.'

The man hesitated, and said: 'I never pray; I do not believe in prayer.'

'Never pray, sir! do you not believe in prayer when your God has done so much for you? never thank Him for His goodness? Have you a father?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Do you never thank him? If you had a child whom you had blest, would he not thank you when you bestowed upon him some little trinket?'

'I suppose he would.'

'Well, sir, compare right. Just pray; pray, and thank God.'

'I can't pray.'

The student then turned to his infidel companions and asked them to pray, and they both declined.

With indescribable feelings he knelt, and with great freedom poured out his whole heart to God. As he finished they all three arose from their seats. The president passed his fingers through his hair, and as he gathered up his books, said:

'I think we will talk no more. It will do no good.'

The student waited on them at the door, and in a short time heard that the club had disbanded.—Louisville Journal.

Prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament, adversity is the blessing of the New, which carrieth the greater benediction and the clearer revelation of God's favor.

Friend, What are You Living for?

Are you waiting to welcome God's Son from heaven, for he will surely come, and in such an hour as you think not?

And when the Christ comes back to this earth, it will be to raise the dead Christians from their long unconsciousness, for "the dead know not anything" (Eccl. ix. 5), and to change the living Christians, so that neither the resurrected nor the changed can die any more; then he and they will bless this troubled earth by reigning on it for 1,000 years in righteousness and irresistible power.

This is the kingdom of God we pray for when we pray Thy kingdom come."

Then the rest of the dead will arise, and any who have died in unbelief will be "destroyed," "burnt up," "perish," and "be as though they had not been," for "the soul that sinneth it shall die," but "the God doeth the will of God abideth for ever." Mal. iv. 1; Obs. xvi.; Eze. xviii. 20; 1 John ii. 17.

Oh, believe that Jesus died for your sins, obey him, and be ready to meet him when he appears.

Dividing the Gold.

Sovereigns are a very small part of wealth. There are only, in Great Britain, 220 of them for every nominal £1,000. While the United Kingdom alone produces £1,300,000,000 a year, the whole world, in the same time, yields gold and silver to the amount of £38,000,000 only. We, for our share, have only one new sovereign for every nominal £325 of new riches. It is clear, then, that wealth and money are not interchangeable terms. Whosoever would realize the difference may do so by imagining himself a social reformer heading a company of 500 progressive thinkers in the enterprise of nationalizing, among themselves, a mansion which, with all it contains, is worth £200,000. Each of the 500 should, if the advanced expectation were correct, become richer to the extent of £400, but the expectation is illusionary, and the results of the measure would be disappointing. The company might find wine enough to keep them in good cheer for a week, food enough to give thirty of them a day's meals, and bedclothes for thirty virtuous progressive couches. Those things however, would account for only a small portion of the £200,000. Where would the bulk of that great sum be? An exhaustive search might lead to the finding of £30 in coin of the realm; but at least £100,000 would be represented by pictures, books, and other works of art, furniture, china, guns, and fishing rods. Now, if the nationalization of wealth were going on in the same manner all over the land those things would be practically valueless. The reformer who, having expected £400, found himself possessed as his share of the booty with a Sevres broth basin or a portrait of a Dutch Burgomaster, would feel himself poorly used; and the five humanitarian philosophers whose share was a build cabinet in joint stock would be in even more evil plight. All the 500 would discover that affairs are not as they seem, and that it would have been well if, before quitting the old order to make things new, the community had been quite sure that it understood the deceitfulness of riches.—The Quarterly Review.

We are living in stirring times, and with the prospect staring us in the face that we have not reached the worst. Surely there is a dark cloud hanging over this world which is about ready to burst. In the great and coming conflict only those who have their names in the Lamb's Book of life will be delivered. Let us watch and pray.

The Jews can now reach Palestine from South Russia at the nominal cost of only about five dollars per head, and are able to go direct without change of any kind from Odessa to Beyrout or Haifa. The cost of the land after they arrive there is about one-third or one-fourth of that which must be paid in America.

Men seldom improve themselves when they have no other models than themselves to copy after.—Goldsmith.

Poetry.

An Old Favorite.

A wonderful stream is the river Time
As it runs through the realms of tears,
With a faultless rhythm and a musical rhyme
And a boundless sweep and a surge sublime
As it blends with the ocean of years.

How the winters are drifting, like flakes of snow,
And the summers like birds between,
And the years in the shoal, as they come and go
To the river's breast, with the ebb and flow,
As it glides in the shadow and sheen.

There's a mystical isle on the river of Time
Where the band of the reapers are playing,
Forever a rainbow arch and a tropical clime
And a song as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the name with the singers are straying.

And the name of that isle is the Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures there;
There are brows of beauty and bosoms of snow,
There are heaps of dust—but we love them so,
There are trinkets and tresses of hair.

There are fragments of songs that nobody sings,
And a part of an infant's prayer;
There's a lute unstrung and a harp without strings,
There are broken vows and pieces of rings,
And the garments the mourners wear.

There are hands that are waved when the fairy sloop
By the mirage is lifted in air,
And we sometimes hear through the tumultuous roar
Sweet voices we heard in the days gone before,
When the wind down the river is fair.

O, remembered for aye, be the blessed isle,
All the days of our life until night,
When the evening comes with its beautiful smile,
And our eyes are closing to slumber awhile,
May that "greenwood" of soul be in sight.

Bro. Underwood:

I have been waiting for a long time with anxious hope that the health of myself and wife might so improve, that I could make my financial position good enough to send you the money for THE RESTITUTION for the coming year.

But alas, our infirmities are growing upon us daily, and our inability to gratify the desire of our hearts, although it be ever so precious is becoming a constant sacrifice. We both of us, watch the approach of the postman with intense interest to receive our RESTITUTION. The articles have of late been so attractive, so well founded upon our Father's plan of salvation, so instructive to Bible students, so forcible upon Bible facts, so weighty in their arguments against theological errors, and so consoling to all lovers of Scripture truth, that to us it has become both marrow and fatness. The articles by Bro. Joblin on the "Law or the Gospel—Which" is to me one of the finest specimens of Scripture analysis and profound logic that it has ever been my privilege to read. I pray it may win its way to many hearts, to the honor and glory of God and his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

My sincere thanks to our friends who so love the Lord, and the weary pilgrims of his flock, for the welcome messenger of peace and good will to men,—our own paper, —THE RESTITUTION.

I am your humble servant.

SAMUEL FREELAND.

Editor Restitution:

As the time on my paper has about run out, please drop my name. Times are getting so hard I cannot get the means to pay for it. I am poor, but if you can send it to me free for one year I would feel thankful. I have taken it for a long time.

I remain your brother in the faith.

R——

Editor Restitution:

We have been having some good meetings at Yankee Hollow, Union Church, and the Hicks School House, by Bro. D. M. Hudler. He is an incessant worker, and his congregations are always interested in the truth. They want to hear more preaching. Dear brethren, let us be up and about our Father's work. The prophecies are fulfilling fast and he who is our life will soon appear, then we shall appear with him in glory.

Bro Hudler has gone home to spend the holidays with his family, after which he will renew his labors with us. His appointments for January and February, 1895, are as follows:

Dixon, Jan. 3rd to 7th.
Ashton, Jan. 8th to 13th.
Leaf River, Jan. 14th to 18th.
Adeline, 19th to 21st.
Yankee Hollow, Jan. 26th to 27th.
Stockton, Jan. 28th to 31st.
Union Church, Feb. 1st to 5th.
Plum River, Feb. 7th to 17th.

Your brother waiting for the King in his Beauty.

SIMON P. RENNER.

Dear Restitution:

For quite awhile I have been thinking of taking this step, but until now could not get courage sufficient to carry out my intentions. It is with great grief of heart that I wish to tell you my feelings when opening my dear friend, THE RESTITUTION, and see your earnest, although sympathetic appeal to subscribers in arrears. I ask myself, "And must we part company? How can I give thee up? From thy pages I have learned so much. Thy instruction with the literature advertised in thy columns have shown me the way to him who is the way, the truth, and the life. But paper and labor cost money. An article that I am not allowed to possess, having had no work for the last 18 months, nor any prospect, for they invariably tell me when asking for it, that I am too old. I am about 70 but could work yet if I could get it to do, so for this reason I suppose I must bid you good-by, and may God's blessing go with you. I can not bear the thought of going in debt. I do not know whether or not I paid up to the end of '93, but I do know that I have not paid any for this year of '94, but if ever I should get work I will send the amount. With my best wishes, and that God's blessing may accompany my old friend, I wish you good bye.

[Here is an appeal that we cannot help but respond to. Does it touch you? It cannot help but touch some one who has money to spare, and will spare it to send to our aged brother his paper. Do not fret brother, the paper will go to you free of cost to you. The good Lord will provide means. He will not let us suffer for money to send your paper.

To the brother or sister who has it to spare we present this appeal. Who will respond?—ED.]

Dear Restitution:

While renewing my subscription I thought I would write a little, for it has been a year since we last wrote. We are poor in regard to this world's riches, but we cannot do without THE RESTITUTION. I tried to secure some subscribers but the best I could do was to get three trial subscribers.

If there are any of the preaching brethren that are not cumbered with houses and lands, that would like to make Southern California their permanent home, and would like a good field to labor in we would like to have them come and preach for us, and if it was left to us to make our choice we would select Bro. D. M. Hudler.

I wish Bro. Joblin would put his articles now going through the paper in tract form.

We are still strong in the faith once delivered to the saints, and looking for the Master to come to make up his jewels. We certainly believe we are living in the last days. The field is almost ready for the reapers, who will gather the wheat into the granary, but the tares will be bound in bundles to be burned.

Your brother in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

CHRIS ARNOLD.

Dear Brother Underwood:

THE RESTITUTION is the only preaching I have in this city of over a hundred thousand inhabitants. It is truly encouraging to read its contents, and it gives me renewed strength to press on in the way of life amidst the evils that daily surround me. I would like to do more for the cause of Christ, but circumstances will not admit of it at present. I would be glad to hear a sermon on the truth as revealed in God's Word, but this privilege I have not had in over ten years, so you can see how welcome the paper is every week. We have plenty of apostate preaching, but what is that to me?

C. P. ALGIER.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I like THE RESTITUTION so much that I cannot get along without it. We read so many good letters from brothers and sisters that comfort us. I am glad there are so many heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ by being adopted into the family of God by baptism. Dear brothers and sisters are we ready to meet the soon coming King? Have we put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil? Eph. vi. 11. "Therefore, we wrestle not against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places, but thanks be to God, that we are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the Chief Corner Stone." So brothers and sisters let us be up and doing while it is called today, for the night cometh when no man can work. I think God will not suffer this wicked world to stand much longer. The thought of the coming of the Lord is most sweet and joyful to me.

Your Sister in Christ, waiting for the soon coming kingdom.

The Resurrection.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

As I was looking over THE RESTITUTION this morning, and saw so many encouraging words from those of like precious faith, I thought that though I could not say much, and that in the most elegant language. I might say a few words for Christ and his cause, and will in brief words express to the best of my ability, my views in regard to the "Resurrection" and will try to stand by the Bible as my guide.

The majority of the world of today do not believe that the resurrection has anything to do with our salvation, and therefore, teach that it is an unimportant subject. I am taught by the Bible that without it, we have no hope of life beyond this mortal one.

I have a hope beyond this life and believe that the Lord will carry out his plans and promises. Having this hope, I am looking forward to the time when I will reap my reward. Some will say, how are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?"

Paul says in answer to this, "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die, and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare fruit, it may chance of wheat or some other grain, but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. This body is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption, it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power, it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." So the questions are answered, not by the word of man, but, by the Word of God.

Again, Paul says, "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So this body is not now immortal, no indeed, it is not, for if this body was now immortal it could not die, for immortal means, "never dying."

We can all see very plainly then, that this body is mortal; from the very fact that there are people dying every day, and their bodies are returning to dust, where if they were immortal they could not corrupt. But, dear brothers and sisters, if we are faithful to the end, which the times indicate is not very far off, we may attain to immortality, and have a part in the first resurrection, or the resurrection of the saints. Then we hope to meet those who are asleep in Christ, for Paul says, that if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that are asleep in Jesus will God bring with him, for this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep, for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first.

Then we which remain, shall be caught up together with them, in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, brethren, comfort one another with these words." Yes, for they are indeed comforting words to those of us who believe them in sincerity and truth. So let us comfort one another with them, for how dark and gloomy this life would be without the comforting words of this Book the Bible, and of one another.

Although we do not know just the times and the seasons of this great event, we know that it cannot be far off, therefore, we are constantly looking for the time to come when we are to receive our rewards whether it be eternal life or death. May we all be found with our lamps trimmed and burning and be ready and looking for our Lord at that great and final day when all shall be judged.

Let us spread the tidings and proclaim abroad that the judgment day is near at hand, and let us watch continually for the appearing of our Lord and Savior, not with dread, or fear, for if we are living righteously, and are expecting a crown of immortal life, we will not dread to see our Lord coming in the clouds of heaven, but will rejoice at the sight of him, knowing that he has promised to give to those whom he finds watching eternal life at that day, and to those he finds watching he will give to be kings and priests in the kingdom of God.

Let us ever keep in mind that great day and be found ready and worthy of eternal life when he comes. May we grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, overcoming the evils of this world, and be made rulers in the kingdom of God. Then there shall be no sad partings, no troubles of any kind, everybody will be of the same mind. There the bitter tears of regret will never flow, and all will be peace and harmony. People will not say, "I am sick," and the tree of life will bloom forever.

How sweet and comforting to think of these blessings, and to know that we have the privilege of enjoying them. This mortal state of being cannot, in its weakness, comprehend the joys and immunities of that kingdom, and how grand that they have been placed in humanity. But, sad to say, that out of the many that are called but few heed the call, and but few will be ready when he comes, but remember brethren, that Christ said, "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." So although the number be small, still they do not fear, knowing that Christ hath said these comforting and encouraging words. Let us press on in the good fight of faith, never tiring of doing good, and at that great and final day may we all hear that welcome call, "Come ye blessed to my right, inherit the kingdom prepared for you since the foundation of the world."

Your sister in patient waiting for the kingdom.

Bro Underwood:

The following essay was read at our Christmas entertainment, at the Park Hill church, in Gladbrook, Ia., by Sister Henry Baker. It was so universally approved of that we thought it would be read with interest by the readers of THE RESTITUTION, so send it for them.

A. J. EICHANER.

Mankind was placed in this world to do good. This great mission is not confined to the few, but to the whole human race. The "still voice" of God is whispering through the portals of the mind of every living soul, bidding them work in his vineyard today. Every one, be he ever so humble has an important part to perform in the advancement of the world.

As we are assembled here tonight to celebrate the birth of him who was sent to us, as our example and our guide, let us for a moment consider the lowliness in which the shepherds found this Christ child. Born of poor parentage, with no pretty cradle, no soft blankets, but lying in a rude manger found they the heavenly babe, the most precious of all gifts, the Savior of the world, "the bright and morning Star." As the shepherds left the manger they made known abroad the good news and what had been told concerning the child.

Wise men, it is said, came from the East to worship Jesus; and to show their love and gratitude they gave precious gifts unto him,—gold, frankincense and myrrh.

Time passes swiftly by, the child grows to manhood, he becomes strong in spirit and is filled with wisdom, so much so, that the doctors and great men marvel at his questions and understanding.

His ministry was one of love, meekness and humility. His death one of perfect submission to the Father, his resurrection the glorious victory over the grave. Though centuries have passed since the birth, death and resurrection of our blessed Redeemer, still he is the same tender, loving Jesus, sitting at the right hand of the Father, making intercession for you and me: that we through his death and suffering might have life everlasting. If we will but come to him in a right and acceptable manner, he has said he will not turn us away. Old and young, great and small, rich and poor, he has love in abundance for all. Even the little children received his attention, for he blessed them and said, "Forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of God."

These dear little children, perhaps think they can give no gifts to Jesus, as the wise men did, but you can give even greater than these; your little hearts filled with love for him and his Word. They are the greatest of all gifts. If you want Jesus to love you, you must love and obey your parents, be kind to all and strive to make every one happy; and as we receive our Christmas gifts, let us remember the greatest gift of God, the child Jesus, our example and our life.

His work for us to do is not yet ended: there are duties for each of us that will engage our time from the cradle to the grave. There are poor, sick and afflicted all around us who deserve our attention. There sits the aged father or mother that longs for words of comfort and consolation, in their declining years of life, while all around us we find the little hearts to be moulded and fitted for the indwelling of the love of Jesus.

Every human soul has a germ of some flower within, that would open and bloom if the right material was furnished for its development. Let us have sunshine with our influence for good that our children may grow to pure manhood and womanhood. Let us strive by our example to lift up out of the darkness into the divine and marvelous light, for one bad example spoils many good thoughts. Whatever place is allotted to us by Providence that for us is our post of honor and duty. God does not estimate us by the position we are in, but by the way we fill it. Let us strive then to make the most of the remaining moments of life, while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work.

MRS. HENRY BAKER.

The Law.

We find in Gen. xii. that the promise made to Abraham, where the Lord called him from his kindred unto a land which he should afterward receive for an inheritance was 1921 years B. C. Now we will turn to the law given at Sinai, Ex. xx. which was 1491 years B. C. Now we will subtract 1491 from 1921, and we have just 430 years which Paul is talking about in Gal. iii. 17-19, which he calls the added law till the seed (Christ) should come, and in verse 21 he says, "Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." The 24th verse reads, "Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a school-master." (or that added law.) This evidence proves positively that the added law in Gal. iii. D. is the same law given at Sinai; which Paul says we are not under. Reader, do you want to be under the added law regardless of consequences?

M. L. ADAMS.

Advice to Little Ones.

"A good tree bringeth forth good fruit, and an evil tree evil fruit." A good tree is sound, clean, healthy, handsome. An evil tree is scraggy, loaded with vermin, having decayed or rotten limbs, hollow at the heart, scarred by hacking, by fire, or by other evil influences—as men are scarred by fighting and by bad habits.

Does one smell of beer, bourbon, or tobacco? He is like the evil tree, which brings forth evil, his breath is pestilential and blasts, or taints all it touches. Boys and girls you are now growing—soon you will be clean, pure, handsome, healthy men, and—or you will become objects of pity or contempt, depending on how you live and how you grow. You who can read must know what is wise and best, and what is unwise and bad. Oh, be wise and good.—Selected from Dew Drops, by T. E. Adams.

The Columbia Desk Calendar.

For ten years the desk calendar issued by the Pope Manufacturing Company has held a unique place among business helpers. Each daily leaf during that time has taught its quiet lesson of the value of better roads and outdoor exercise, and especially the benefits of bicycling. The calendar for 1895, which is just issued, is even brighter than its predecessors in appearance, as clever artists have added dainty silhouette and sketch to the usual wise and witty contributions that have heretofore given this popular calendar its charm. It can be had for five 2-cent stamps from the Pope Manufacturing Company, Hartford Conn., or from any Columbia bicycle agency.

Causes of Jewish Persecution.

Much of the anti-Semitic legislation of the present day is brought about, not because of the religion of the Hebrews, but because of the open and flagrant neglect of their religion and the spread of infidelity among them. So writes one of their own learned rabbis, recently. We thought as we read this sentiment of the many and oft repeated warnings God gave the nation concerning this very thing, and can but look upon their present condition as the fulfillment of some of the predictions which was to follow upon their sinful disobedience. Not until Israel forsakes his idolatry and "returns unto the Lord" can his condition be materially improved. And says Jehovah: "I will yet be inquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them." It is for this we hope and pray and work.

"There is a strange mixture of Christianity and Judaism," writes a correspondent to Regions Beyond, "in the customs of the Abyssinians. Circumcision is universally practised and an ark is placed in the center of every church. There are about 200,000 Falashas—or "Black Jews"—of whose origin scarcely anything is known in this country today. Work was begun among these people by the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews in 1870, and later by the Scotch Society. It is estimated as the result of this labor, that there are at the present time about one thousand converts to Christianity in their midst.

A letter to the Jewish Missionary Intelligencer, from a missionary in Amsterdam, reports that he came across a number of Jews returning from America to Russia, who said they "would rather live under the iron rule of the Russians than starve in America." However true this may be, one thing is very certain: there is no permanency to be found for the Jew anywhere outside the borders of the land of his fathers, towards which he will be forced at last to turn his wandering footsteps.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Change of Address.

On and after Sept. 25, 1894, my address will be Rossville, Illinois, instead of Plymouth, Ind. Correspondents will please take notice.

L. E. CONNER.

Address of Treasurer of Ladies Evangelical Aid Society, Miss Emma Jackman, Box 384, Grand Rapids, Mich.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, send the paper to all new names received before Jan. 1, 1895, till Jan. 1, 1896 for $1.50. Besides this we will send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, express money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of these ways is at our risk, money lost in letters is at the risk of the sender.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts, neither should preserve a copy for ourselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of this paper you have, and order only what are mentioned in that.

When ordering your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 24.

1. And five days afterwards the chief-priest Ananias with certain elders and a certain Tertullos, an orator came down and put in an appearance before the leader against Paulos.

2. And when he had been summoned, Tertullos began to accuse him, saying,

3. Since we are attaining much peace through thee and acts of uprightness that have occurred to this nation through thy forethought in every way and every where, we are content, most excellent Phelix, with all gratitude;

4. And that I may not weary thee overmuch, I pray thee to hear us briefly in thy forbearance.

5. Having forsooth found this man a pestilent fellow and one who is stirring up seditions among all the Joudaians throughout the inhabited, and a chief-instigator of the sect of the Nazornies;

6. And one who had attempted to desecrate the temple, we seized him and purposed to judge him according to our law.

Verse 7 not in the best text.

8. And when thou hast given him a preliminary examination, thou wilt be able to learn from him about all these things which we are accusing him of.

9. And the Joudaians also agreed with him professing these things to be in this wise.

10. And Paulos, the leader having signified by an inclination of the head that he was to speak, made answer as follows. Knowing well that for many years thou hast been a judge for this nation, I gladly make my defense as to the charges concerning myself.

11. Since thou canst learn that it is not more than twelve days since I went up to Hierousalem to worship,

12. And neither in the temple did they find me discoursing with any one nor stirring up a multitude to sedition, nor throughout the city,

13. Nor are they able to substantiate the things of which they are just now accusing me to thee.

14. This though I confess unto thee that according to the way which they call heresy even so am I serving the God of our fathers for hire, putting faith in all the things according to the law and the things that have been written in the prophets.

15. Having a hope in God which they themselves are awaiting, that there is going to be a resurrection both of the justified and the unjust,

16. And in this also am I diligent mainly that I may have a consciousness void of offense toward God and men constantly.

17. And for more years have I been coming with the purpose of doing acts of mercy and making offerings for my nation.

18. In which acts certain Joudaians from Asia found me purified in the temple, not with a mob, nor with tumult.

19. And it is befitting that they should be present before thee and bring accusation if they had aught against me.

20. Or may these themselves have said what wrong-doing they found when I stood before the synedrion.

21. Other than this one cry with which I cried unto them as I stood, It is about a resurrection of the dead that I am being judged today in your presence.

22. And Phelix put them off as he knew the matters concerning the way more accurately, saying, Whenever Lusias the Kilinrch shall have come down I will make myself fully acquainted with the matters relating to you;

23 And he directed the centurion to watch to keep him and let him have recreation and to prevent none of his own people from ministering to him,

24. And some days afterwards when Phelix had arrived along with Drusilla his wife who was a Joudaian he summoned Paulos and heard him concerning the faith in Christ.

25. And as he was discoursing concerning righteousness and continence (lit. control from within as opposed to the law of control from without and not merely self-control, as the Scriptures teach [we all need the divine help in being about self-mastery. This is the word all through the New translated "temperance." Latin "Temperantia." "Contenentia" would have been the proper Latin word to translate ἐγκράτεια the Greek word,) and the verdict about to be, Phelix became frightened and answered Go thy way for the present, when I get a favorable opportunity I will invite thee.

26. Hoping at the same time that utilities would be given him by Paulos, and therefore sending for him more frequently he cultivated his society,

27. And when a years' time had been fulfilled, Phelix took as successor Porkios Phestos and Phelix desiring to curry favor with the Joudaians, left Paulos bound.

COMMENT.

"And five days afterwards" instead of "after five days" R. V. a difference of one day.

"Put in an appearance against" instead of "informed against" R. V.

"Are attaining" instead of "enjoy" R. V.

"And acts of uprightness that have occurred to this nation through thy forethought in every way and everywhere" instead of "and that by thy providence evils are corrected for this nation in all ways and in allplaces" R. V.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Re-Institution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

☛ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bill in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 9, 1895. NO. 2.

Poetry.

"It is I."

[illegible]

Original.

Zion and Jerusalem.

Zion and Jerusalem are soon to become the royal seat where Christ, who was born in Bethlehem, will personally reign over all nations.

"And thou Bethlehem in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Matt. ii. 6.

The literal birth of Christ according to prophecy is proof that he will also literally reign according to it. The part literally fulfilled is an earnest that all will be. Now, his was the birth of a king, — he was "born king of the Jews."

Therefore we may ask, "As a king, where is his kingdom?" Let no one evasively reply, "No matter where, so that we get there;" for this is but a form of scepticism, trying to smother and suppress the light. If the Word of God tells us where, we must gladly and thankfully accept his Word, even as "Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness." Gen. xv. 6. "O send out thy light and thy truth: let them lead me." Psa. xliii. 3. That Word says, "His dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth:" that a time is coming when it shall be said, "The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ:" and when "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." Zec. ix. 10; Rev. xi. 15; R. V., Matt. xiii. 41. As nothing offends or does iniquity in the pure and spotless heaven above, it must be the earth that is here called "his kingdom." By the surest of all titles, even by divine right, the whole earth is his; for the Father has promised, "I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Psa. ii. 8, R. V. Now, a kingdom implies a throne; the two expressions are correlates. Let us, therefore, proceed another step in the argument and inquire, In what part of his kingdom will he his throne? The answer is not left to human imagination or conjecture, but is clearly stated in Scripture. The Father who promised him the whole earth has made special mention of that central portion called "Canaan" (Gen. xiii. 15 with Gal. iii. 16), and has called it, by way of eminence, "The Holy Land," "the glory of all lands," and "Thy land, O Immanuel." Zec. ii. 12; Eze. viii. 8. In the Revised Version of Eze. xxxviii. 12, it is called "the middle of the earth." And the place of Immanuel's throne in that land will be Jerusalem, the capital city where David reigned. "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David," Lu. i. 32. "For the Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest for ever: resting place, R. V.] for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it." Psa. cxxxii. 13, 14; ii. 6, "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great king." Psa. xlviii 2. "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever." Psa. cxxv. In this text, by these who "trust in the Lord" is meant the church, and by "Mount Zion" is meant the place of that name the literal mountain. And the one shall endure "as" the other, that is, both shall abide "for ever." Could we ask for any stronger assurance of Mount Zion's perpetuity?

I say Zion and Jerusalem will soon become the royal seat because we are now in the last part of the fourth human empire, as symbolized by the feet and toes of the image in Dan. ii. and by the fourth beast in Dan. vii.

When will he occupy his throne? "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. xxv, 31. Then he "shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Isa. xxiv. 23. And "they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart." Jer. iii. 17. It will then be "the new Jerusalem" and "the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it." Rev. xxii. 3.

Then will be here "the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him," a kingdom which will be their eternal inheritance and home, as joint-heirs with Christ. Jas. ii. 5; Rom. viii. 17.

Therefore we cease to wonder that the kingdom is so prominent in the Bible, and that the gospel is called "the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. ix. 35.

And since it is by the blood of the crucified Son of God that we are washed from our sins, and qualified to inherit his kingdom, we cease to wonder that the blood also is so prominent in the Bible, and that preaching the gospel is called preaching "Christ crucified." Rev. i. 5; 1 Cor. i. 23. Neither the blood nor the kingdom can be omitted without perverting the gospel. See how faithfully both are kept in view in the "new song" of the redeemed,—"Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood.....and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9, 10.

Moreover, the gospel teaches the necessity of faith and repentance, because without these we should perish.

Recapitulation. Jesus Christ the Son of God will reign personally on the throne of David in Jerusalem, over the land of Canaan and the whole earth; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. He died to redeem us by his blood, and give us eternal inheritance in that kingdom, as joint-heirs with himself, on the conditions of our obedient faith and repentance.

This is that "great salvation" preached by our Lord and his apostles. How shall we escape if we neglect it? Heb. ii. 3. By nature man is in a state of ruin. Isa. liii. 6. God "gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Jno. iii. 16.

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 25.

1. Phestos accordingly after he had come to his eparchia, three days afterwards went up to Hierosolyma from Kaisareia,

2. And the chief-priests and chief men of the Joudaiaes put in an appearance against Paulos,

3. And besought him asking as a favor, against him (Paul) that he would summon him to Hierosolyma while they should form an ambush to destroy him by the way.

4. Then Phestos answered that he was keeping (esoteric watch to be) Paulos in Kaisareia, and he himself would go his way out speedily.

5. Accordingly, saith he, let those who are able among you go down along with me and bring accusation against him, if there be any thing out of the way in the man.

6. And when he had passed (lit. worn away) not more than eight or ten days in their midst, he went down to Kaisareia and on the morrow took his seat upon the bema and commanded Paulos to be led.

7. And when he had arrived the Joudaians who had gone down from Hierosolem stood about him, and were bringing many and weighty charges against him which they were not strong enough to substantiate.

8. Paulos offering as a defense I have not been sinning at all either against the law of the Joudaians nor against the temple nor against Kaisar.

9. But Phestos willing to show favor to the Joudaians, answered and said unto Paulos, Art thou willing to go up to Hierosolyma and there be judged before me concerning these things?

10. And Paulos said, At the bema of Kaisar am I standing, where it behoveth me to be judged; I have not wronged Joudaians as thou thyself better knowest.

11. If then I am doing wrong and have done aught worthy of death, I am not asking to be acquitted of death; but if there is nothing in these charges which they are making against me, no one can give me up as a favor to them. I appeal to Kaisar.

12. Then Phestos after he had had a talk with the synedrion answered, Thou hast appealed to kaisar: unto kaisar shalt thou go thy way.

13. And when some days had passed, Agrippas, the king, and Bernike arrived in Kaisareia to greet Phestos;

14. And when they had passed (worn away) more days there, Phestos presented the matters relating to Paulos to the king, saying, There is a certain man of influence left as a prisoner by Phelix,

15. Concerning whom when I got to Hierosolyma, the chief-priests and the elders of the Joudaians put in an appearance, asking against him in a legal way,

16. Unto whom I replied, that it was not customary for Romaioi to surrender any man as a favor, before the accused had had his accusers face to face and had taken a place of defense concerning the charge.

17. Accordingly when they had come together here making no delay, on the following day I took my seat on the bema and directed the man to be led;

18. Concerning whom, his accusers when they had been put on the stand, brought no charge in respect to things which I conjectured to be bad;

19. But they maintained against him certain disputed questions about their own dread of demons and about a certain Jesous who was dead, and whom Paulos professed to believe was alive,

20. And being in doubt about the investigation of these things I said, Would he be willing to go his way to Hierosolyma and there be judged concerning them.

21. And as Paulos appealed to be kept to the decision of Sebastos, I commanded him to be kept (watched to be kept, esoteric watch in each case) until I should send him to Kaisar.

22. And Agrippas unto Phestos I would like myself also to hear this man. Tomorrow saith he, thou shalt hear him.

23. And on the morrow when Agrippas and Bernike had come with much pomp and had entered into the auditorium along with kiliarchs and men of influence throughout the city, and Phestos had given directions Paulos was led.

24. And Phestos saith, King Agrippas and all ye men of influence present with us, ye behold this man concerning whom all the multitude of the Joudaians entreated me both in Hierosolyma and here, vociferating that he ought not live any longer,

25. But I myself did not apprehend that he had done anything worthy of death, and as he had appealed to Sebastos, I had decided to send him.

26. Concerning whom as I have nothing definite to write my lord, I have therefore had him led before you, especially before thee, O king Agrippas, so that after a preliminary examination hath occurred I may have something to write.

27. For it seems to me an unreasonable thing to send a prisoner and not to indicate the charges against him.

COMMENT.

"Eparchia" or "provincial rule" instead of "province" R. V.

"Put in an appearance" instead of "informed him against" R. V.

We have a good illustration here of the use of the word "bema" as "a judgment-seat" but in its literal and true sense of a "step" to the throne, the throne itself being the true judgment-seat or the final place of appeal, or the criterion or judgment-seat. If the culprit could not get justice at the "bema" he had the right of appeal here asserted by Paul to the judgment-seat.

"Better" instead of "very well" R. V.

"Give up as a favor" instead of "give up" R. V.

Same error in the 16th verse R. V.

"Sebastos" means in Greek the same as "Augustus" in the Latin.

"The revered one" namely.

"Would like to hear" instead of "could wish to hear" R. V. Of course he could if he should try.

The Ten Commandments.

As Brother T. E. A. has taken out "Six Props" from under the sabbath, I propose to remove the seventh and let the delusion fall. In the first place we will notice when the sabbath was first given, and to whom given. In Ex. xvi. we have the sabbath first mentioned in the Bible, and the 22nd verse reads, "And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man; and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses." 23rd verse, "And he said unto them this is that which the Lord hath said, tomorrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the Lord," which proves that it was new to the rulers. See for that the Lord hath given you the sabbath, 29th verse. Our seventh-day friends claim the sabbath in force since creation, also, the rest of the ten precepts, but we find it went work, for Moses in Deut. v. 3, says, "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers," and in Deut. iv. 13, we find it is the ten commandments covenant he had reference to. Let us now go to the 20th of Ex. where the ten commandments were first given, and see who they belong to. We will suppose the lord for instance, takes the ten precepts written out, and takes them to Adam, and says, "Here, Adam, is some laws I want you to observe," and he commences to read, "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." Ex. xx. 2; Deut. v. 6. What could Adam say only, "Lord, I never was in Egyptian bondage, they do not belong to me." Well, the Lord takes them to Noah and says, "Here Noah are some laws, I desire to find who they belong to," and he commences to read, "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." Noah says, "they do not belong to me for I never was in Egyptian bondage." Well the Lord takes them to Abraham and says, "Abraham, I have here some laws and I want to find who they belong to, and he commences to read, "I am the lord thy God which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." "Hold on," says Abraham, "I never was in Egyptian bondage, they do not belong to me." And he takes them to Isaac and Jacob with the same result. Finally he takes them to Moses, and says, "Moses, I have here some laws and I want to find who they belong to," and he commences to read, "I am the lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." "Why, yes, those laws belong to the children of Israel," says Moses. Which we find true by the Bible record. We will suppose the Lord brings these laws to Christ, and the lord commences to read, "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." Jesus says, no! as "Lord, I never was in Egyptian bondage." So every one that wants the truth can easily see to whom those laws belong.

Now we will notice Ex. xx. 5; xxxiv. 7. "For I the Lord, thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me."

Do you believe that to be the case now, under the gospel? Nay, verily. Let us see, Rom. xiv. 11, 12. "For it is written, As I live saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give an account of himself to God, for every one that asketh receiveth, and he that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." Matt. vii. 8; Luke xi. 9, 10. "Let every man prove his own work." Gal. vi. 4.

"And behold I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Rev. xxii. 12.

I might give more evidence in the New Testament to prove that every man has to answer for his own sins, and under the gospel the Lord will not visit the iniquity of our fathers unto the third and fourth generation. To him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins, Acts x. 43. The same Lord that commanded the sabbath to be kept, forbid any fire to be kindled on the sabbath day, Ex. xxxv. 1, 2, 3. Our seventh day friends are loud in calling the ten commandments, God's law. While separate from the rest of the laws given to the children of Israel, they are never called God's laws. While the Book of the Law, which our seventh day friends call the Law of Moses, is expressly called the law of God. Please read, Neh. viii. 1, 3, 8, 14, 18; ix. 3; x. 28, 29. Also called the Law of Moses.

We have proven that when the Lord gave the ten commandments to the children of Israel, at Mount Zion, that the first words he uttered proves positively they do not belong to us, Ex. xx. 2; Deut. v. 6. That the 5th verse, or second commandment which our friends call God's Law, does not belong to us. Also that the Book of the law of Moses, is called the law of God.

Dear Restitution:

A happy New Year to you, and to all concerned in the faith, hope and love.

Please find enclosed my subscription for the paper for another year as we cannot do without it. I have been a subscriber and reader of it for over 30 years, through its different changes and forms. It was published by Brothers Marsh, Newman, Stephenson, Reed and Wilson, and down to present date.

Myself and wife both upwards of 60 years of age still read with pleasure the contents of THE RESTITUTION every week, for this is all the company that we have pertaining to matters of faith, as we are isolated from any of our churches, although we have no less than ten churches in Columbus of the different denominations, of which we are always welcome to visit so long as we do not correct or interfere with their doctrine, but as soon as we touch them there we are out, for none will debate with me on questions of Bible, they will say it will do no good, only gender strife. So we let them mostly alone.

We would say if any of our brethren would come along this way to call on us and see us as we only live a little over two miles north-west from Columbus, and any one that comes in the name of Jesus is a welcome visitor and find room under our roof. For all we have not raised hardly anything last season on our farm on account of drouth, but thanks be to God we do not need to suffer, as we still have plenty to live on. It is said where there is a will there is a way, yet many of our neighbors do not know where they will get their seed from for next spring, such as corn and oats. It is impossible for us to contribute to all whoare in need. No wonder Jesus says, "The poor ye have always with you, if ye will ye can do them good." So we have our share right at home. I would say to our brothers and sisters at large, with Jude of old, "Let mercy and peace and love be multiplied. Beloved when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you and exhort you that ye shall earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." Jude 2nd and 3rd verse.

I think this exhortation is as much needed now in our days as it was then. So my dear brothers and sisters, let us fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, that when Jesus comes we all may hear these welcome words, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Respectfully yours,

JOHN W. SISSLE.

Dear Restitution:

Brothers and sisters the time has arrived for our love feast. I feel very thankful to be able to say, "Bless the Lord oh my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy name." I would like to say right here that among all the things that have come to me along the way-marks of fifty years that I can truly thank the dear Lord for THE RESTITUTION. How good our heavenly Father has been to me to permit me to be one of those that participate in the wonderful light it throws on the holy word. I have tried to get people to read them and feel so disappointed when they did not ask for more to read. How hard it is to deal with the ignorant careless mind. We have tried to hold prayer meetings in our home but we could not speak of our hope that is within us, or even quote the Scripture but they were offended and would not come again. I believe in standing by the Word of Truth. I did when I belonged to the Methodists. I had respect for God's Word, not to receive anything that did not correspond with the Word. God has respect for the willing mind and the understanding heart, for these are surely precious gifts from him. I must close else my letter will be too long. Pray for us brethren, that we may endure to the end.

MARY FORSYTHE.

Editor Restitution:

Again I am so glad to be able to send for the dear, old paper. We watch for its coming as we do for a dear friend. It is past time for us to renew but as we work for the R. R. Company we have to wait sometimes for our pay. I have been quite busy trying to get some new names, for we love the paper so much that it seems as though if others could read it they would never do without it. We are trying to keep our Mission Sunday School. We were greatly strengthened here by Bro. Eychaner's discussion with a Latter Day Saints man. J. F. McDowell. Brother Russell has preached for us. My prayer is that we may have work to do that we may be able to pay for the gospel to be preached to us, and be able to pay for the paper.

It is hard and trying times. Pray for us that we may be able to do his will, for we read, "Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the Tree of Life, and eat and live forever," or rather, be amongst those who will help to bless the nations of the earth when Jesus comes.

Your sister, striving for eternal life.

MRS. JOHN ALLARD.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I have never written for THE RESTITUTION, and thought perhaps you would like to hear from this part of the country. Brother S. C. Oliver has been with us again. He commenced meetings Dec. 12th and continued to the 16th, preaching the glad tidings of the coming kingdom of God.

With a well-filled house and good attention we believe that his work is not in vain, for some have said, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Wife and I are the only ones of the Abrahamic faith in this part of the country, and we are looking for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile bodies that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious body.

Yours in hope of eternal life when Christ comes.

THEO. DILLOW.

Dear brothers and sisters:

This is my first letter, and it seems hard for me to write, although I love to read the many letters that appear in THE RESTITUTION. Oh how many there are that have not tasted of the precious faith. Brother Almus Adams baptized me last June. It is a pleasure to know that so many are living close to the Savior. Seeing that years are flying fast, should we not be up and doing. Let us not be deceived, Jesus is soon coming to gather his dear ones home. Be faithful brethren, in love and good works. Let us think from this time on that we will try to gain for ourselves a position in the new earth, to take our place with all who are worthy when he says, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Your sister in the blessed hope of eternal life.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." And means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as inhabitants of it, this by the processes of the ages; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as prerequisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

WHAT are you doing Reader? Do you realize that the time is hastening on when you can no longer do anything. •

"THERE is nothing stranger to youth than the persistency with which age proffers its experience; there is nothing more trying to age than the determination of youth not to accept it. The fathers, mothers and guardians who have learned their hard lessons, would be glad to impart their knowledge without its ruinous price, to those they love, but the youngsters will have none of it. No; they must buy their own wisdom, "dree their own weird," "pay the piper" themselves. No yearning affection can shield them from the trials and temptations, the rush to meet. •

THE Vienna correspondent of the London Standard says respecting the fatal mining riots in Silesia:—"The fearfully destructive effect of the fire of the Mannlicher rifle at close quarters has been clearly shown. In some cases the ball went clean through the body of one person and then had sufficient force to fracture to splinters the bones of a second person standing behind. The wounds are most terrible, and the holes made in the bones are anything but smooth. In the case of a man shot through the thigh the flesh was hanging down in ribbons. The result shows that in the next war with modern weapons, the number of dead and disabled will probably be enormously larger than with the rifles of bigger caliber hitherto in use. •

THE sixth number of the latest accession to the religious journalism of this country "The Message" has been issued in Chicago. The following from its editorial columns indicate its character:—"Our Anglican Church is steadily taking its place as the great, pure, catholic church of the American people, as it is and ever has been the native church of England. It is a debatable question as to whether we should try to proselyte from the Roman community, as they are a branch of the church with a priesthood and sacraments as valid as ours; but we cannot and must not refrain from giving a hearty welcome to all who may believe that they can find a purer and more satisfying life within the Holy American Church." It is curious to turn from this to the account of Bishop Keane's return from Rome in which it is stated that it is the policy of the Pope to form an union of the church with the great democratic powers of the future—that is France and America, and that by a new rescript this is declared to be a Catholic country. •

"Be of Good Cheer."—Jesus.

"In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer (courage); I have overcome the world." How refreshing to read and meditate upon these words. How clearly their union with him is seen. They were to travel the same road as he had travelled. He had tribulation all along the journey and so must they. He was to be made perfect through sufferings, and they must pass through the same ordeal. He had overcome world, and they must do the same; and the fact of his having overcome is the incentive for them to follow on. And it is an assurance also that if they will. How remarkably clear and distinct all his presentations are; nothing is kept back; the tribulation is mentioned before the peace; the cross precedes the crown, poverty comes before the exceeding riches, mourning before the comfort. The joy set before us must enable us to endure the cross and despise the shame just as it did him. The words quoted at the head of this article show the odds will be greatly against the disciples of Jesus. It is the world against but that stern fact must not discourage them. The Head of the Body has been made perfect; he overcame, and is set down with his Father in his throne; and in accents of love he speaks from heaven to say:—"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne."

THEY CAN OVERCOME

THE LITTLE FLOCK,

Observe that tribulation in the world and peace in Christ exist contemporaneously. One offsets the other. Of course the Master's Word has to be taken for it. We must believe what he says about it: we have to take it on credit and and this beautifully illustrates how impossible it is to please God without faith and how vain the hope of realizing what has not been promised. "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer, be courageous, I have overcome the world." As if to say to them:—Do not despond on account of this state of things: the world will not overcome you, but like me you shall overcome the world, if you keep heart and keep up the contest.

It is important to keep in mind that our Lord was addressing those whom he had chosen out of the world,—those who were in him legally, constitutionally; they were in him by faith in him, and obedience to him. They had embraced the message sent to them by God through him,—and in acknowledging all his claims, and placing themselves under his authority, and as their example, had become so intimately connected with him that they were joint heirs with him to the world's dominion. From this point of view it will be seen that the cause of God and Christ was their cause. This means more than that they are interested in the cause of God because Christ is, or because they love him. It is their cause. The whole work of Christ past, present and future, relates to the kingdom of God; and our blessed Lord said to them, "Fear not little flock, it is the

to give you the kingdom," so that while contending with the conflicting elements in this life, they, as a part of the mystic Body of which Christ is the Head, are battling in the interest of their own kingdom by promise.

These words of our Lord exhibit his legacy to all his brethren in this life,—it is tribulation in the world—it is peace in him. They are apprised that they need expect no favors from the world, but that in storms and in calms, in adversity and prosperity, in reproach and honor, in the name of the Lord would be a strong tower in which safety would secure peace. Christ is the believer's peace, then, and no mistake, and who can disturb it? He is the believer's acceptance (Eph. i. 6) and who can question it? The believer's glory comes from Christ (John xvii. 22) and who can cloud it? He is the believer's hope of glory, (Col. i. 27) and who can disappoint it? The believer obtains an inheritance in Christ (Eph. i. 11) and

SICKNESS AND HEALTH,

WHO CAN ALIENATE IT?

The believer's joy comes from Christ (John xv. 11) and who can diminish it? The believer's justification comes through Christ, (Rom. iii. 14) and who can dispute it? Christ is the believer's life (Col. iii. 4) and who can deny it? Christ is the believer's redemption (1 Cor. i. 30) and who can touch it? Christ is the believer's righteousness (1 Cor. i. 30) and who can tarnish it? Christ is the believer's sanctification, (1 Cor. i. 30) and who can assail it? Christ is the believer's wisdom (1 Cor. i. 30) and who can battle it? Christ is all in all to the believer, (Col. iii. 11) and as no one can deny it, is it not easy to believe that will more than balance the tribulation in the world? Indeed, of all conceivable positions for children of men, that of being in Christ is the most exalted. Compared with this all the honor and power and wealth of the world is as nothing. With these one may be on the pinnacle of fame today but food for worms tomorrow. Oh, beloved, to be in Christ is the stepping stone out of the human out of mortality into immortality,—out of corruption into incorruption,—out of trials and vexations and losses, and crosses, and reproaches into glory and honor and immortality.

PEACE IN CHRIST

One of the conditions and tests of being in Christ is that of being a new creature; old things have passed away and all things have become new. All things physically have not become new. A change of the old earthly body for the heavenly is not meant; but a change of heart, of mind, of disposition and affection. It means that a man or woman in Christ has been converted, changed in these respects, changed by the means furnished by God for changing,—changed by from God. Looking at things from this point of view it seems perfectly natural to read, "If any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature." How could he be any thing else? Did he not professedly die to sin, and give up his body to be buried? Well, then, if he really died he was really freed from sin, but the freedom of sin depends entirely upon his dying to sin. This is

A VERY GRAVE MATTER

and of tremendous importance, but simple withal. A person cannot be dead and alive at one time; the old man must be put off before the new man can be put on. He dies, is buried, and rises from the dead a new creature,—new in the sense already pointed out,—mentally, morally, religiously dead to the world, and in these same respects alive to God. Dead to the world implies that the present world is not the source of his joy, nor the spring of his actions, nor the object of his life,—but that having a new hope, new aims, new purposes all centering in God. Yes; it is a tremendous thought, that if any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature; a solemn consideration that every one of us is either a new creature in Christ Jesus or is of the old; and we repeat what we have often urged, the belief of certain life-giving truths and immersion will not constitute one a new creature. If we have obeyed from the heart that form of teaching delivered to us after turning away from sin and are new creatures. God knows who obey from the heart; at first we may not know but when the fruit appears we may know; "by their fruit shall ye know them." The fruits of the flesh are catalogued for us in the 5th chapter of Galatians. It is an infallible detector.

HE LIVES FOR THE FUTURE

WE ARE IN CHRIST,

But what of the imperfections that mark our conduct? Do they say we are not new creatures? We think not. The transformation is one of heart or mind. The renewed mind has called a halt and turned right about,—resolved, come what will, and present consequences be what they may, he will not be governed by the flesh. If he is bent upon being led by the Spirit he enters upon a warfare with his flesh, and keep it up with varying success till the end of the race. This is it is for this he is enjoined to put on the whole armor of God. The renewed mind endeavors to keep the body under,—and though he sometimes fail he is a new creature still, for the newness relates to the mind, the will, the purpose, the intention. If a man NEVER WAVERS IN HIS PURPOSE he will lament his short-comings and confess them and forsake them, and God for Christ's sake will forgive them. In that way we weak mortals can maintain the status of a new creature in Christ Jesus. What a boon to erring mortals is the passage which assures us that "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." He knows how the condition of the body affects the mind,—knows how pain and

TOIL AND SORROW IRRITATE

and disturb in spite of ourselves, and so pities us. If the heart be right he overlooks these failings, and we bless his holy name. There is no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit. But in order to

WALK AFTER THE SPIRIT

we have to be acquainted with, and obedient to the Word of the Spirit. We would give very little for the hope of those who do not get right down to earnest, constant, prayerful examination of God's will. Oh, the obtuseness of the mind, the weakness of the faith, the coldness of the heart, that on the verge of the time when the two dispensations meet, and where the Christian's hope will be realized, will plod listlessly along as if it was of no special interest to them to know about the exceeding riches of God's grace stored up for them that love him. Would to God we could say something or do something that would inspire our readers with such a love for God's grand old Book that they may become saturated with it,—that it may dwell in them richly, so that they would talk about it, and like David, invite us to hear what the Lord had done for their souls. In that way the peace in Christ would far outweigh the tribulation in the world, and they would attain the position of Paul who in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distress for Christ's sake. We are aware that these are heights seldom attained, although attainable, always attainable, for Moses esteemed the reproach for Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt.

May writer and readers more and more appreciate the highness of our calling of God in Christ Jesus: and amid the turmoil and distracting scenes of these last days take Jesus at his Word, and expect him to be with us,—expect him to sustain and bless us while we earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, and expect him to come soon to gather from every kindred and clime those who have chosen to suffer affliction with the people of God, and crown them with unfading glory. Hail happy day! •

OUR CHILDREN.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 1.

A young girl had never read about the sojourn of God's people in Egypt, a great many people never have. She did not know what Jesus meant when he bade his disciples say to such a man in the city, "My time is at hand, I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples." What was the passover? Why was such a feast kept? And why was Jesus called "our passover?" were questions she had never been asked and had never asked herself. But these are things that we ought to know about. We cannot understand as we should the sweet story of salvation, unless we do know about them.

We can never know how great God's love has been and is for us, until we find how he has been working all through the past to save us. He began the work by making promise to Eve, that her seed or child, should bruise the serpent's head.

He meant, that from her descendants, a Savior, should arise, who would be able to rescue her people from death—that awful thing; that had fallen upon them because of her sin. He knew that countless men and women, would choose to believe and follow satan, that they would worship him, under the semblance of false gods, and become ignorant, debased and cruel.

They would forget the great Being who made them, and the beautiful Paradise that had been lost and was to be restored.

He must fence off a people from the wicked nations around. They must have his Word. They must have laws to keep them good and pure, because, from this fenced-off people, would come the Messiah. Their blood must be kept pure, by pure food, and drink, by constant bathing, cleanly clothing and cleanly dwellings.

Seth and Enos and Noah loved God. The flood had come and gone.

Nimrod, the mighty hunter, had begun the kingdom of Babel, and the worship that was to cause so much woe in the world.

The tower of Babel had been started and God had stopped its builders from making it as tall as they had intended, by changing the language in which they talked to one mother, into strange languages that they could not understand.

Noah had three sons who came with him through the flood, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. Nimrod was the grandson of Ham, and the great-grandson of Noah. The wicked Canaanites and Philistines, came from Ham.

Of the children of Japheth, we are not told so much, for God chose Shem and promised to dwell in his tents. He would reveal his will—would give his Word into their custody. The nations of the world, who are best and wisest now are the descendants of Shem.

The earth was divided and each distinct family or tribe received their portion in the lifetime of Peleg,—the great, great, great grandson of Shem. His name means "division." Some heathen nations have a tradition that Jove, their chief god, divided the land, and that the poet being away soaring among the stars, received nothing. It says in Deuteronomy xxxviii. 8, "when the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." So God, did indeed divide the land. But when the division was made there was no Israelitish nation. Other people settled in the land of Canaan the same as in other lands. But God, had his eye on that country. It was the central land of all the earth and glory of all lands. It was the very place to fence off his people from the rest of the world.

Abraham lived east of Palestine, in the land of the Chaldeans. The name of his city was Ur. It was on the west bank of the Euphrates. It is now called Mughier.

The people all around him worshipped idols. After his brother Haran's death, and after his marriage with Sarah, he came with his father Teran, and with his nephew Lot, to Haran in Mesopotamia.

But God had all the while had his eye upon Abraham. He saw that this man would better suit his purpose than any other man in the world. So he bade him get out of his country and away from his kindred and come into a land that he would show him.

He was to be the father of the fenced-off people from whom was to come the Redeemer of all nations.

The promise was given to him as it had been to Eve, of a seed, or child in whom all families of the earth should be blessed. To bruise satan's head, is to destroy those who do his work. It is to take away the thrones and the power of earth's wicked kings. It is to place God's Son upon his holy hill of Zion, and to put into his hands the government of the world.

To bless all families of earth, is to give them a knowledge of their Savior. It is to teach them how to be saved through him, and how they may escape from the blindness, the suffering, the degradation and the oppression, that the idol-worship of Nimrod brings. But my lesson is long enough. Be patient and you shall hear of Israel in Egypt, by and by.

If asked what is the remedy for the deepest sorrows of the human heart—what a man should chiefly look to in his progress through life as a power that is to sustain him under trials and enable him manfully to confront his afflictions—I must point him to something which in a well known hymn, is called "the old, old story," told of in an old, old Book, and taught with an old, old teaching, which is the greatest and best gift ever given to mankind.—Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone.

Selected.

The End of the Age.

To the Bible student and close observer of the occurrence of events, there is something in Christ's Olivet sermon that forces the doctrine of his second coming upon the mind with unmitigated conclusiveness. There has been and is a fanciful theory in the church and among its ministry, that the consummating victory of the church, both in domestic and foreign fields, will be so irresistible in its reformatory work, that the coming of the Son of God would thereby be ushered in, and the thousand years of millennial glory be brought about, as a result of the high state of spirituality that shall obtain at the end of the age. But if this view of the subject be true, Christ said nothing about it by inference, intimation, or otherwise, in his Olivet sermon. On the other hand, he plainly stated things, both by positive utterance and inferential logic, that contradict it.

When asked by his disciples, "What shall be the sign of thy coming?" . . . he answered them by saying: "Take heed that no man deceive you" (Matt. xxiv. 4) about the coming of our Lord. (For we understand that the apostate church would hold unsound views on this great truth.) "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet." Matt. xxiv. 6. There is nothing in this verse that favors the increase of good, but rather foretells of the corruption of the age. Highgrade spirituality does not produce wars, or rumors of wars.

"For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows." Matt. xxiv. 7, 8. What can the "post-millennialists" find in this reading to sustain their fallacy? The revolting of nations, the hostilities of kingdoms, and the scourging of the earth with the judgments mentioned are but the prelude to greater sorrows; not the ending of sorrows, but "the beginning of sorrows," which will increase and intensify proportionately as we approximate the end of the age.

"And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." Matt. xxiv. 12. Here is a prophecy of abounding iniquity during the times of the Gentiles. So momentous and awful is the besom of corruption that shall sweep like a wild, poisonous Euroclydon tempest over the face of the whole earth, with its chilling, blighting and killing power; so fatal is this tornado of hell, that the "love of many shall wax cold." And increasing coldness does not prepare the way for the conversion of the world.

"But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Matt. xxiv. 13. Will the post-millennialist dare say that the endurance spoken of in Matt. xxiv. 13, means the joys of triumph, the glories of victory, and the ecstasies of universal conquest, growing out of the salvation of the race? Surely such ecstatic attitudes of spiritual highness would not stagnate our faith, or quench the glowing fire of love in our hearts, and thereby cause our love to "wax cold."

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." Matt. xxiv. 14. The gospel of the kingdom does not guarantee the salvation of all nations, but it proclaims an invitation to all nations to come to the marriage supper of the Lamb; and witnesses to all nations that the call has been executed in the name of the commission, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations."—The Good Way.

Find Work.

Let us all go to preaching. Send polished Paul up to Athens, and plain Bartholomew down by the fishing smacks by the sea. Do not look so anxiously into your pockets for your diploma from Yale or your license from Presbytery. If the Lord does not send you into the ministry, no canon of the church can shoot you into it. But if he has put his hand on your head, you are ordained, and your working apron shall be the robe, and the anvil your pulpit; and while you are smiting the iron, the hammer of God's truth will break the flinty heart in pieces. Peter was never a sophomore, nor John a freshman. • • • Hundreds of men, grandly useful, were never struck on commencement stage by a bouquet flung from the ladies' gallery. Quick! Let us find work. You preach a sermon; you give a tract; you sing a song; you give a crutch to a lame man; you teach the Sabbath class; you knit a pair of socks for a foundling; you pick a splinter from a child's finger. Do something. Do it now. We will all be dead soon.—T. DeWitt Talmage.

OBITUARY.

Our esteemed Brother A. G. Brookover and family, of Claysville, Huntington Co., Ind. are overwhelmed with grief—death, cruel and relentless death, has snatched from the loving embrace of fond parents and affectionate brothers and sisters, Jessie Inez, the pet of the household band.

The circumstances attending her death make the bereavement doubly painful.

She attended the Christmas entertainment Tuesday evening, Dec. 25th, and spoke with others, a piece beginning:—

"I want to wear a golden chain
Of many virtues rare."

At the close of the poem, she pronounced a blessing on the children. How little her joyous companions dreamed, as they one by one stepped up and hung the jeweled links around her neck that never again in life would they look on Jessie's face again—she who was so kind to them all, so good and helpful to the poor among them, who set such a good example before them by her modest, quiet, retiring ways.

She never had little squabbles with her playmates; wherever Jessie came anger fled away. The wish to wear the golden chain was with her a heart-felt one. She wanted to be "All glorious within" that she might be approved of the Lord.

I shall never forget the serious, trustful look in her eyes, as I talked with her for the last time on matters of faith and obedience. It was some two years ago. "O yes, she understood and believed," she said. "And you want to be a Christian? You want to obey?" I asked. "I do want to and I will" was her reply.

She afterward expressed the same desire to her mother, but—how can I go on? It is too sad—I do not know how to word it,—the opportunity never came—the burned house—the pressure of work—the postponed appointment—tells the story of our bleeding hearts. She "Did wish Bro. Wince or Bro. Conner would come so they could have some good meetings," but it was thought best to wait until some of the burdens could be laid aside, and weary frames be rested.

When will we ever learn that a soldier has no time nor place for rest? and that God's work must ever take precedence of our work? God help us henceforth to remember.

The Christmas entertainment was over. On Wednesday night Jessie complained of feeling tired and somewhat unwell, but would have nothing done lest she would overtax her mother's strength, who had lost much needful rest. In the morning she had to be helped down stairs, and her throat was sore, there seemed to be nothing alarming in her case and no danger was apprehended. Friday, (I think it was,) she said, "Send for the doctor," and seeing a little hesitation in the faces of her friends she repeated the words, "Send for the doctor, you will regret it if you do not, I am worse than you think I am." The doctor came,—it was the dreaded diphtheria, nothing could be done, she died at 3 o'clock P. M. Saturday, Dec. 29th, 1894, aged 15 years, 3 months and 12 days.

The funeral services were conducted by John L. Wince and Elder Kuhn.

We are very sad, we had bright hopes for Jessie's future, when she should be adopted into the family as a child of God. We weep with those who weep and we mourn with those who mourn, we long to have the abiding things, to be—

"Over yonder in that land of wonder."

Advent Hymn.

Shine forth eternal morning!
Glad day of peace, draw nigh,
Hasten thy radiant dawning.
Athwart our darkened sky.
O, may earth's day of groaning
And bondage soon be o'er
The sons of men cease mourning
Like waves upon the shore.

Give joy for time of weeping,
Light for this day of gloom,
Awake the saints now sleeping
Within the silent tomb.
No more let night and sorrow,
And sin triumphant reign,
O, haste the glad to-morrow,
When Christ shall come again.

Our hearts are growing weary,
With watching, waiting long,
The night of time is dreary,
Come, teach us the new song.
O, hasten, Lord, come quickly,
Thy banner be unfurled!
Come thou, and reign supremely
Throughout thy ransomed world.

Peter's Estimate of Christian Character. 2 Pet. 1. 5-8.

"Add to knowledge, temperance."

Temperance is defined by Webster to be the moderate indulgence of the appetites or passions; freedom from excess; a definition which gives a good idea of what the apostle Peter means when he says, add to knowledge, temperance. But to give the reader a more exact idea of the meaning of the word, we would remark that the word here translated temperance is enkraitia, and only occurs in two other places in the New Testament, besides the above; viz. Acts xxiv. 25; Gal. v. 23. The definitions given by the lexicon are —self-control, continuance, temperance. The verb form of the word is enkratuomai, and is found only in 1 Cor. vii. 9; ix. 25; and means, to possess the power of self-control or continence; to practice abstinence. This is derived from enkrates, which occurs in Titus i. 8; and is defined as strong, stout; possessed of mastery; master of self. The radical idea is self-control, or to be master of one's self. By consulting the references given above, in their connection, this will be seen at once.

The word temperance is used so much at the present time in connection with what are called temperance societies or organizations, and applied simply to abstinence from intoxicating drinks, that when the word is found in the Scriptures in the course of reading, the current idea is too apt to be associated with it. The word, however, has a more comprehensive meaning in the Scriptures. While the advocates of modern temperance societies may be right as far as they go, and their efforts to check the wide-spread evil of drunkenness is worthy of all praise,—yet their one idea is far below what New Testament Christianity enjoins upon the members of its organization. It emphatically requires "temperance in all things." And in order to reach this result, it teaches its devotees that they must become possessed of self-control; have power over their appetites; be able to restrain their passions; and to completely subdue or bring into subjection their animal natures. Every Christian is exhorted and expected to pursue this course of action. Paul says, "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts." Gal. v. 24. The flesh is our animal nature or propensity, as manifested through the passions and lusts. This is also called the "old man," which is crucified or put to death with Christ. Also, "the members which are upon the earth," which are to be mortified or put to death. The "works of the flesh" show what is to be subdued, crucified, or put to death. These are enumerated by Paul to be—"adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like." All these are the products of an unrestrained animal nature, and cut off those who practice them from the kingdom of God. Hence we may at once see why it is necessary to add to this knowledge temperance, or self-control, that we may escape "the wrath of God which cometh on the children of disobedience."

In order to more fully comprehend our duty in this respect, let us define what we ought particularly to control, in order to have the mastery over ourselves. And soas to be easily remembered we shall present it under two heads—the heart and the tongue.

1. The heart. The heart is used as a symbol of the affections—anciently understood as the seat of thought, and of the passions. Jesus said to his disciples, "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies; these are the things which defile a man." Matt. xv. 19. 20. These things are what Paul calls "the works of the flesh;" and Jesus shows that the spring-head or fountain from which they emanate is the heart or affections. In its unsanctified state it is represented as "deceitful above all things and desperately wicked;" and Jehovah declares that "the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth." Hence the design of the gospel is to change this "evil heart." It takes right hold of the affections. The "good seed of the kingdom" is sown in the heart, and if it is lodged in "a good and honest heart," it will bring forth fruit. The gospel is to be believed with "the heart unto righteousness," and the form of doctrine which it prescribes is to be "obeyed from the heart." In this way "God purifies the heart by faith." Hence Christians of this order are said to have their "hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and [their bodies washed with pure water"—to have a "pure heart,"—a "true heart," etc., all indicative of a change. This change is a radical one—"a turning from darkness to light," and from the power of Satan to God—a deliverance from "the power of darkness, and a change for the kingdom of God's dear Son." There is a complete change or turn given to the current of the thoughts and affections. No longer "earthly, sensual, devilish," but heavenly, spiritual, and godlike. No longer in darkness, but "sons of light, and children of the day."

This then being the present position of those who are in Christ Jesus, the apostolic exhortations to such to encourage them to remember their high calling and maintain their standing are very appropriate. The apostles did not look upon themselves or those of their brethren to whom they wrote as perfect. They knew that the exceeding deceitfulness of sin, and the attractiveness of the surrounding world, were powerful opponents. They were aware victory could only be obtained by a strenuous effort. Says Paul to the Philippians—"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded." And to the Corinthians he also gives his own example to enforce his precept. Says he, "So run, that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air; but I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means when I have preached to others I myself should be a cast-away." 1 Cor. ix. 24-27. What a solemn thought for every one who has entered upon the Christian race! Where do we see any now so careful and so earnest as Paul? He was afraid of missing the prize—hence his great anxiety. There was one thing of which he was very careful, viz., his conscience, and that was one great means of his success. He says, "Herein I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and men." This was an internal consciousness which he had based upon the Word of God, that he was doing his duty. This is having "a pure heart." It is the same thing as that alluded to by John when he says—"Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God." 1 John iii. 21. The heart or the conscience must be kept pure and undefiled. Here is the fountain of either purity or impurity. Says Solomon "keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." Prov. iv. 23. Then let us cultivate the heart—guard the affections—and have "a conscience void of offence." "Set your affection (mind or heart) on things above, not on the earth;" "for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

2. The tongue. If the heart is right, the tongue will not go far astray; for says the Savior, "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The heart can only be read by the Lord. "The Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance; but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1 Sam. xvi. 7. But when the thoughts of the heart are revealed in action, then man could read them also. From the description given of the tongue and its effects, by the apostle James, in chapter 3rd of his epistle, (which we recommend all to peruse at leisure,) we see a fine opportunity for the exercise of self-control, as recommended by Peter. And mark what James says—"If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." Oh, if Christians had this kind of perfection, how much would their own happiness be increased, the welfare of others promoted, and the Church prospered." It is because of intemperance in speech that brethren are suffering everywhere. "Out of the same mouth proceeds blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be." Remember, "if any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." James i. 26. How is it, that with the knowledge of such plain and positive passages as these, there is such a prevalence of unbridled speech amongst brethren? Why so much tale-bearing, whispering, back-biting, contention? Is it not because the "heart is not right in the sight of God?" or that there is a great want of the virtue of self-control? "An hypocrite with his mouth destroyeth his neighbor;" "a tale bearer revealeth secrets;" and "a whisperer separateth chief friends." How often has this been the experience of God's people! The Psalmist had his bitter scourge in the lying and deceitful tongue. Paul had those of his brethren who opposed him —Hymeneus and Philetus, whose "word did eat as doth a gangrene," and Alexander the coppersmith who did him much evil, and who "greatly withstood his words." And the loving disciple, John, says of Diotrephes, "I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words; and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and casteth them out of the church." And there are many professed disciples of Christ at the present day, of a similar class, whose "religion is vain, because of their unbridled tongue, which "though a little member, boasteth great things." To such the words and advice of David are very appropriate—"Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding; whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle." Psa. xxxii. 9.

Dear brethren, let it be our aim to add temperance, or self-control, to the other Christian graces. Let it be seen in the care we exercise in controling our affections and desires. We have not time or space to specially particularlize them. They are well described by the apostle John as the "lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life." These desires belong to the fleshly-minded—are not of God. "The lust of the flesh" is manifest in seeking after the gratification of the mere animal appetites and passions, and in giving them the supremacy over the intellectual and moral nature. "The lust of the eyes" shows itself in trying to be fashionable in dress, desiring or obtaining rich and splendid trappings and decorations of all sorts. While "the pride of life" is seen in hunting after titles, honors, offices, and boasting of our honorable connections. All these things are of the world, and are passing away with it; and to be a friend of the world, is to be an enemy of God. Take care, then, brethren. Control yourselves in these matters. Subdue your fleshly appetites—conquer bad tempers —overcome irritability—curb selfishness—restrain pride, and bridle the tongue. When a man obtains the mastery over himself he has obtained a great victory. "He that ruleth his spirit, is better than he who taketh a city;" but "he that hath no rule over his own spirit, is like a city that is broken down, and without walls." We have need to pray with David—"Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips. Incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practice wicked works with men that work iniquity; and let me not eat of their dainties." Psa. cxli. 3, 4. And do we wish to obtain life, and dwell on Mount Zion, with Jesus and the redeemed? Then we must have "clean hands, and a pure heart;" "keep our tongue from evil, and our lips from speaking guile;" "walk uprightly, work righteousness, and speak the truth in our heart. Backbite not with the tongue, do no evil to our neighbor, nor take up a reproach against our neighbor."

Then add "to knowledge, temperance," or self-control. Be "temperate in all things," and let your "moderation be known to all men;" and this will be one important auxillary in obtaining an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.—Gospel Banner, 1867.

Extracts from Spurgeon's Sermon.

"Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour; whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world." After this warning comes the consolation—"But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, —O think of it—stablish, strengthen, settle you." "To whom be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen." Here is the climax to our souls—"lost in wonder, love and praise."

The ablest human productions are but tapers lit from this sun—the Bible. Now for one of the brightest tapers. "I was lying upon my couch during this last week, and my spirits were sunken so low that I could weep by the hour like a child, and yet I knew not what I wept for—but a very slight thing will move me to tears just now—and a kind friend was telling me of some poor old soul living near, who was suffering very great pain, and yet she was full of joy and rejoicing. I was so distressed by the hearing of that story, and felt so ashamed of myself, that I did not know what to do; wondering why I should be in such a state as this; while this poor woman, who had a terrible cancer, and was in the most frightful agony, could nevertheless "rejoice with joy unspeakable, and full of glory." And in a moment this text flashed upon my mind, with its real meaning. I am sure it is its real meaning. Read it over and over again, and you will see I am not wrong. "Though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness." It does not say, "Though now for a season ye are suffering pain, though now for a season you are poor; but you are in heaviness;" your spirits are taken away from you; you are made to weep; you can not bear your pain; you are brought to the very dust of death, and wish that you might die. Your faith itself seems as if it would fail you. That is the thing for which there is a needs be. That is what my text declares, that there is an absolute needs be that some times the Christian should not endure his sufferings with a gallant and joyous heart; there is needs be that sometimes the spirits sink within him, and that he should become even as a little child, smitten beneath the hand of God. Ah! beloved, we sometimes talk about the rod, but it is one thing to see the rod, and it is another thing to feel it; and many a time have we said within ourselves, "If I did not feel so low spirited as I now do, I should not mind this affliction;" and what is that but saying, "If I did not feel the rod I should not mind it?" It is just how you feel, that is, after all, the pith and marrow of your affliction. It is that breaking down of the spirit, that pulling down of the strong man, that is the very fester of the soreness of God's scourging—"the blessings of the wound whereby the soul is made better." I think this one idea has been enough to be food for me many a day, and there may be some child of God here to whom it may bring some slight portion of comfort. We will yet again dwell upon it." "Though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations." And here let me for a moment or two try to explain why it is that there is an absolute needs be, not merely for temptations and troubles, but likewise for our being in heaviness under them.

In the first place, if we were not in heaviness during our troubles we should not be like our covenant head—Christ Jesus. It is a rule of the kingdom that all the members must be like the head. They are to be like the head in that day when he shall appear. "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." But we must be like the head also in his humiliation, or else we cannot be like him in his glory. Now, you will observe that our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ very often passed through much of trouble without any heaviness. When he said, "Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." I observe no heaviness. I do not think he sighed over that. And when athirst he sat upon the well, and said, "Give me to drink," there was no heaviness in all his thirst. I believe that through the first years of its ministry, although he might have suffered some heaviness, he usually passed over his troubles like a ship floating over the waves of the sea. But you will remember that at last the waves of swelling grief came into the vessel; at last the Savior himself, though full of patience, was obliged to say, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death;" and one of the evangelists tells us that the Savior "began to be very heavy." What means that but that his spirits began to sink? There is a more terrible meaning yet, which I can not enter into this morning; but still I may say that the surface meaning of it is that all his spirits sank within him. He had no longer his wanted courage, and though he had strength to say, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done;" still the weakness did prevail, when he said, "If it be possible let this cup pass from me." The Savior passed through the brook, but he drank of the brook by the way;" and we who pass through the brook of suffering must drink of it too. He had to bear the burden, not with his shoulders omnipotent, but with shoulders that were bending to the earth beneath a load. And you and I must not always expect a giant faith that can remove mountains: sometimes even to us the grasshopper must be a burden, thus we may in all things be like unto our head." * * Men will never become great in divinity until they become great in suffering. Ah! said Luther, "affliction is the best book in my library;" and let me add, the best leaf in the book of affliction is that blackest of all the leaves, the leaf called heaviness, when the spirit sinks within us, and we can not endure as we could wish. * * "God cannot make ministers—and I speak with reverence of his holy name—he cannot make a Barnabas except in the fire. It is there, and there alone, that he can make his sons of consolation. * * I think I have said enough about this heaviness, except that I must add it is but for a season. A little time, a few hours, a few days, a few months at most, it shall all have passed away; and then comes the "eternal weight of glory, wherein ye greatly rejoice."—Copied by Mrs. E. S. Willard.

Measure not thine advancements by quantity, but frame them by measure; and defer not charity till death; for, certainly, if a man weigh it rightly, he that doth so is liberal of another man's than his own.

The Outward and Inward Man.—2 Cor. iv. 15, 16.

"For all things are for your sake, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God; and for this cause we faint not, for although our outward man perish yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members warring against the law of my mind (inward man) and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin, which is in my members; (outward man.) So then with the mind (inward man) I serve the law of God, but with the flesh (outward man) the law of sin," Rom. vii. 22, 23, 25.

Now unto those who are in Christ, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit there is no condemnation, for if we walk in the Spirit we shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh for the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh. One is contrary to the other, so the natural man cannot do the things that he would. The inward man is begotten by the Spirit, or Word of God, and is called the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the image of him who created him. The old or outward man and his deeds must be put off, overcome as it were, by the new man; then will the body be dead unto sin, while the Spirit will be alive unto righteousness. Then follows the promise that he that raised up Christ from the dead will also quicken our mortal bodies because of his Spirit that dwelleth in us. The indwelling of God's Holy Spirit hallows its dwelling place, if we are led by it, but if not it becomes a savor of death unto death instead of life unto life. Now because Elihu when reproving Job for his self-righteousness, said unto him, "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding," do not add to the Word of God and make it read there is an immortal soul in man which survives the body and goes immediately to heaven or hell and there puts on a body already prepared for it, and is then forever happy, or in eternal torment.

Elihu said nothing of the kind, neither did any of God's messengers. We must remember that it was by the inspiration of God that he had understanding in this matter, and he further declares that he was full of matter or words as the margin reads, and that the spirit within him constrained him, for behold, says he, "I am as wine which has no vent, I will speak that I may be refreshed, (or breathe.")

Dear reader was you ever filled with indignation, either righteous or unrighteous, or both, then you may have some idea how the spirit or soul of Elihu was wrought upon as also was those of Noah and Lot, who being surrounded by ungodly men their souls were vexed from day to day by their unlawful deeds. Now we read in 2 Tim. iii. 16, that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thouroughly furnished unto all good works." And Paul, (for it was he that was writing to Timothy) declares that he (Timothy) from a child had known the Holy Scriptures, which is able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith in Christ Jesus.

We might believe every word of Scripture, but should we as did the Jews reject him whom God has sent even Jesus, we could have no salvation, and again, we might receive Christ Jesus and reject the inspired Word or a portion of it as do many of the Gentiles, and we would fare no better. In rejecting Jesus we reject him who was manifested for the purpose of destroying the works of the devil. 1 Jno. iii. 8.

Now what are the works of the devil?

His first work was to deceive the woman and bring death into the world, as recorded in Gen. iii. From this work all others are but an outgrowth. But Jesus made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of men. Why? That through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil. Through the death of Jesus life and immortality is brought to light through the gospel. The corruptible man must put on incorruption and the mortal man must put on immortality. Then death will be swallowed up in victory and the victor can sing, Oh death, where is sting, oh grave, where is thy victory. The victory is all ascribed to the Lord Jesus Christ, for he is the resurrection and the life, and he that believeth on him though he were dead yet shall he live. In him is life and the life is the light of men. He that hath the Son of God hath life (by faith) while he that hath not the Son shall not see life. In rejecting the Word of God we would not only reject the law by which Christians are governed, but we would reject God himself, for he it is who gave the law, and he is the head of all things, even of Christ our Life Giver.

From the foregoing can we not clearly see what a fearful thing it is to lay claim to having life within ourselves, which every man or woman does who believes that they are by nature immortal. Even in the face of such scriptural testimony as this, "God only hath immortality." Even our Life Giver, the Lord Jesus Christ was dependent upon him for life, but now by virtue of obedience unto him, he hath given him (Christ) to have life in himself, and also to give life unto whomsoever he will, because he hath bought the world of humanity, paying for them with his own blood, but in order to have eternal life they must accept him as their Life Giver.

At a funeral recently, during the sermon the minister said, "I thank God that he has made man immortal." Brethren, are such men true ministers of the Word? I must say I felt a little like Elihu, but, alas I had no chance to refresh myself, not even by a look; for we seem to be known of all men, and rather despised, but may we hold out faithful to the end and ever turn a deaf ear to all of Satan's entreaties although he appears in the garb of a saint.

Your Sister, in hope of eternal life.

R. V. Townsend.

"Well Done, Good and Faithful Servant."

These are the comforting words of the blessed Master, that will fall from his blessed lips in the great day of accounts,—fall upon the ear of the faithful servant, who has been faithful to his trust, and occupied his time and talents not in his own way, or simply doing his own work as the world does, but in doing the Master's will, and imitating this noble example in trying to lead some poor souls to Christ, that they may take his yoke (not that of men) upon them and learn of him, and find that true and lasting rest to their souls or lives. O, my brethren, our dear Savior soon is coming to gather his people home to himself. Are we ready? Are we living and working for him, or for our selfish self? The coming day will soon declare it, and tell which side we are on. He that is not for me is against me, and he that gathers not with me scatters abroad.

Brethren awake, awake, let us not slip as do others, but let us be up and doing, lest we hear the Master say, depart from me ye cursed. Speak often one to one another to cheer the fainting mind. It does my soul good to see the many of my Father's children, and hear their voices speaking to us in the paper, and calling us away from the cares, follies and fashions of this world that is about to pass away and be no more, to that blessed world to come.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, send the paper to all new names received before Jan. 1, 1895, till Jan. 1, 1896 for $1.50. Besides this we will send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

The Palestine Movement among the Jews.

The agitation in favor of a return to the land of their fathers has become a fixed factor and force in the religious thought of modern Judaism. The "Zionites" are more or less organized, and have developed a literature of their own, both in book and pamphlet form and in periodical journalism. To a large extent the rapid increase of the Jewish population of Palestine, in our day and generation, is the result of this movement. No more reliable statistics on this subject are extant than those published by Lic. Dr. Dalman upon whose shoulders the mantle of Delitzsch has so worthily fallen, and who is the editor of the latest edition of Delitzsch's Hebrew New Testament. In a late issue of the Journal of the German Palestine Society, Dr. Dalman reports the entire Jewish population of the country at 43,783. Of these 41,171 are in thirteen cities, while 2,612 are distributed among the twenty-eight Jewish agricultural colonies which, during recent years, largely through the efforts of such men as Sir Moses Montefiore, the Rothschilds and others, have been established and are maintained in various parts of the land. These last figures are, however, incomplete, as no reports of membership are extant from twelve of these colonies. Of those that do report the smallest is Artuf, with ten colonists, an older settlement near Jerusalem. The largest is Zikron Jacob, near Haifa, with a membership of 800. Without any doubt the Jewish population of Palestine is now fully 50,000. The bulk of these are in the cities. The Jewish contingent here is the following, the total population being given in parentheses: Jerusalem, 25,322 (41,335;) Gaza, 85 (10,000;) Jaffa, 2,500 (10,075;) Er-Ramle, 175 (8,561;) Hebron, 1,200 (15,222;) Nablus, 99 (20,000;) Acre, 150 (91,800;) Haifa, 1,640 (3,140;) Sidon, 800 (10,000) El-Buke, 120; She-fa-Amr, 60.

The agitation is being carried on both by Christians and Jews, efforts having been made by representatives of both religions to demonstrate that both by human and divine right, the Israelites are entitled to the possession of Palestine. The movement has received a new impetus from the fact that Palestine now actually contains as many Jews as it did in the days of Ezra and in the period following the wars under Hadrian, fully twenty-five thousand having been added during the ten years, the number rapidly increasing since the Turkish Government, during the summer of 1893, by a firman, revoked the edict prohibiting foreigners from holding property in Palestine and acknowledging the legal rights of the existing Jewish colonies.

The present Jewish exodus and the agitation favoring such an exodus among the Jews of the East particularly, are largely the result of the anti-Jewish policy of Roumania and Russia. Opposition was developed first among the Jews themselves. Their influential Allgemeine Zeitung des Judenthums warned against a colonization project of Palestine. The central committee of the Alliance Israelite in 1885 did the same, altho the leading object of this association is the care of Jews in the East, particularly their educational interests. Strange to say, the Jews of Palestine themselves joined in this opposition, and really became its most pronounced combatants, fearing, no doubt, the decrease in the halaka, or collections annually sent by orthodox Jews throughout the world to the Jews in Jerusalem for their support.

The theoretical discussion of the problem was rapidly followed by practical efforts at its solution. The first Jewish Russian colony was established in 1882 near Jaffa and was called Rishon le Zion, and a beginning was made with the raising of grain, fruits and wine. In fact, these are the leading occupations of all the colonies at present, who have in all now in their possession 32,681 hectars of land. Few of these colonies have become self-sustaining or self-supporting. In most cases the Rothschilds or others have paid for the land, or the improvements, and in some cases in addition yet pay a monthly stipend to the colonists, which in some cases is as high as four dollars a month to each colonist. One of the unique features of these earliest colonization efforts was the appearance, in 1882, of the members of the Society "Bilu," so-called from the initial letters of Is. 2: 5, which constitutes the motto of the organization. This colony consisted of some three hundred young Russian Jews, mostly graduates of universities and technical schools, who came to Palestine to work in the sweat of their brow and to elevate intellectually and otherwise the whole colonization movement to a higher plane, which would make a national movement possible. After receiving large sums from Russia, this colony, established near Jaffa, has managed to attain independence and can support itself, altho it has not proved the heaven it was expected it would be. The colonies find liberal supporters in Russia, Germany, Austria and England, all of which publish journals, whose tone is hopeful and aggressive. Hand in hand with these literary efforts go the associations called the "Sephe Ivreet (Pure Language) Societies," organized for the special purpose of cultivation of the use of a pure language of Moses and the Prophets. The language of the revived nation of Israel is to be the sacred tongue of the Old Covenant; or, in the words of the program of The Peculiar People, the Christian Jewish monthly published by the American Sabbath Tract Society at Alfred Center, N. Y.

"Hebrew is the language to reunite the different portions of the Jewish people, now estranged from one another through their different tongues. This journal, too, advocates Palestine as the country in which to re-establish a Jewish commonwealth."

In Scotland a society has also been organized for "the return of the Jews to Palestine." It is modeled after the Chovevi Zion Association, of London.

As to the eventual outcome of the movement, it must be said that cooler heads, such as Lic. Dr. Dalman, certainly the most intelligent students of this problem, have small hopes that tangible results in the shape of a Jewish commonwealth in Palestine will be the end of the agitation. Only a certain portion of the Israelites, and these not the most intelligent or progressive, are in favor of the project, and even those who push it do so largely from sentimental and not from clearly understood reasons. In the life and fate of modern Palestine the Jewish contingent there now has little or no influence, nor do they understand how to make their presence and influence felt.—The Independent.

It is one of the strangest things that while a Jewish parent will not think of disowning a son or a daughter if they fall away from the God of their fathers into any of the varied forms of skepticism and infidelity, yet as soon as they accept the Lord Jesus Christ as the fulfillment of the prophetic utterances of their own Scriptures, which they sacredly hold to be true, they will immediately banish their loved children from home and friends, to be reckoned henceforth as the offscouring of the earth, or perhaps as dead.

Now that Jerusalem has been so far modernized as to have the daily visits of the iron horse from the west, negotiations are being carried on in earnest looking to the erection of works to supply the Holy City with water. Hitherto the only water available has been that secured from the scanty rainfalls at certain seasons of the year. The Turkish Department of Public Works has already ordered the repair, at a cost of four hundred thousand dollars, of the old aqueducts of Solomon, which were in operation in the time of Christ, and when put in condition for use will give ample supply to the city direct from the Urtas springs about nine miles from Jerusalem.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Here's a Chance to get a Start.

Write at once to Fred'k Abbot, Land Commissioner, Wisconsin Central Lines, Milwaukee, Wis., for a pamphlet which will tell you how and where to get work at good wages, and a chance to get and pay for a farm in ten years.

Patrons of the Vandalia and Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh will be glad to know that an arrangement has been made, taking effect November 1st, by which portions of Mileage Tickets will be detached and accepted in payment of excess baggage charges. Commercial travelers and others will find that Agents of the Pennsylvania and Vandalia Lines at all principal stations have been instructed regarding this concession, which will no doubt become immediately popular.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Poetry.

Unconscious Influence.

It was only a little word, but it
How it cheered a desponding heart:
For the shadowy clouds by its magic broke
And drifted forever apart.
And the giver perhaps will never know
What radiance a little word could bestow.

It was only a simple act, performed
In a quiet unconscious way,
But the heavy burden was lighter made
For a fellow traveler that day.
And the aid that so cheerfully was given
Helped another along the road to heaven.

It was only a loving smile, bestowed
When others would turn away,
That lifted a soul from its deep despair
'Neath an unclean spirit's sway;
And the smile that given and then forgot,
Saved one from the ruin sin might have wrought.

It was only the clasp of a hand, by one
Who had passed through the vale of grief;
But its touch loosed the fountain of sacred tears,
And they flowed to a heart's relief.
And the kindled feeling that not expressed,
Was sweeter than words to that sorrowing breast.

'Tis the little deeds that we all can do,
That help in the hour of need;
Ah! wondrous results in the gathering time
Oft come from the tiniest seed.
And may we so scatter, and naught withhold,
That our harvest day shall return fourfold.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 26.

1. And Agrippas said unto Paulos it is permitted thee to speak for thyself; then Paulos extending his hand made his defense as follows:

2. Concerning all the things of which I am accused by the Joudaians, in thy presence, O king Agrippas, I account myself happy in being about to make my defense today.

3. Especially as thou art familiar with all the customs and questions pertaining to Joudaians. Therefore I pray thee to hear me with forbearance.

4. My manner of life from youth up, which hath been passed from the outset in my nation and in Hierousaluma, all the Joudaains know,

5. They previously having been acquainted with me from that time on, if they are willing to testify, that according to the strictest heresy (or sect) of our religion I lived a Pharisaios;

6. And now for a hope of the promise that occurred by God's agency to our fathers do I stand being judged,

7. Unto which (promise) our twelve-tribe organization serving for hire night and day are constantly hoping to attain; concerning which hope I am called in question by Joudaians.

8. O king, Why is it considered incredible on your part that God doth awaken dead people?

9. I myself forsooth thought it befitting for myself to do many things contrary to the name of Jesous the Nazorsine;

10. Which also I did in Hierosoluma, and I shut up many of the saints in prison, having received the official-power from the chief-priests, and when they were being taken off I brought a vote against them,

11. And throughout the synagogues many times was I punishing them and compelling them to blaspheme, and being exceedingly furious against them I was persecuting them even unto the cities outside.

12. In which acts as I was going my way to Damaskos with official-power and the direction of the chief-priests,

13. At mid-day, along the highway, O king, I saw from the heavens a light above the illumination of the sun shine about me and those who were going their way along with me:

14. And when we had all fallen to the ground, I heard a voice saying unto me in the Hebrew dialect, Saoul, Saoul, why art thou persecuting me? It is hard for thee to kick against a goad.

15. And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesous whom thou art persecuting.

16. "But" arise and stand upon thy feet: for unto this end have I appeared unto thee, namely, because I have preferred thee as a subordinate and a witness of the things which thou hast seen and which I am going to manifest to thee,

17. Taking thee as I do out from among the laity and the nations unto whom I am sending thee,

18. To open their eyes, to turn them from darkness to light, and from the official-power of Satanas unto God, that they may receive remission of sins, and an allotment of those who have been sanctified in the faith that is in me.

19. Whence, O king Agrippas, I did not become disobedient to the heavenly vision,

20. But to those in Damaskos first and in Hierousoluma and unto all the province of Joudaia and unto the nations have I been announcing that they should repent and turn unto God, doing deeds worthy of repentance.

21. On account of these deeds Joudaians seized me in the temple and attempted to make away with me.

22. Obtaining protection then from God unto this day I stand testifying unto both small and great, saying nothing outside of the things which the prophets and Mouses have said were going to take place,

23. Only that the Christ must have suffered, that he first was going to declare by a reaurrection of dead ones light both to the laity and the nations,

24. And as he was saying these things in the way of a defense, Phestos saith with a great voice, Paulos thou art crazy. The many letters are giving thee over to insanity.

25. And Paulos saith; I am not crazy, most excellent Phestos, but am uttering oracular words of truth and sobriety:

26. For the king knoweth well about these things, to whom also I am speaking boldly. For I trust he doth not ignore any of these things. For this hath not been done in a corner.

27. Dost thou trust the prophets, O king Agrippas? I know that thou trustest.

28. Within a little art thou of persuading to make me a Christian.

29. And Paulos, Would to God that not only thou, but all who hear me also today might become both within a little and within a good deal such as I myself am except these bonds.

30. And the king arose and the leader and Bernike and those seated with them;

31. And withdrawing they talked with one another, saying, This man is doing nothing worthy of death or of bonds.

32. And Agrippas said unto Phestos, This man could have been released if he had not appealed unto Kaisar.

COMMENT.

"That occurred" instead of "made" R. V.

"Twelve-tribe organization" instead of "twelve tribes" R. V.

"Constantly" omitted by the R. V. though in the best text.

"Awaken" instead of "raise" R. V.

"Official-power" instead of "authority" R. V.

"Brought" instead of "gave" R. V.

"Compelling them" instead of "strive to make" R. V.

"In which acts" instead of "whereupon" R. V.

"A goad" instead of "the pricks" R. V. and "the goad" R. V.

"Preferred" instead of "appoint" R. V.

"Subordinate" instead of "minister" R. V.

"Taking thee out from among" instead of "delivering thee from" R. V.

"Laity" instead of "people" R. V.

"To turn them" instead of "that they may turn" R. V.

"Official-power of Satan" instead of "power of Satan" R. V. which is a very different thought. Where did Satan get this "official-power?"

"Allotment" instead of "inheritance R. V.

"Have been sanctified" instead of "are sanctified" R. V.

"In the faith that is in me" instead of "by faith in me" R. V. which is also a very different thought and theology as well.

"Become" instead of "was" R. V.

"Protection" instead of "help" R. V.

"Must have suffered" instead of "must suffer" R. V.

"Oracular words" instead of "words" R. V.

"Doth not ignore" instead of "is hidden from" R. V.

"Dost thou trust" instead of "believest thou" R. V.

"Within a little art thou of persuading" instead of "with but little persuasion thou wouldst." Same mistake in next clause made by the R. V.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Old Time Religion.

I recently visited a religious gathering in which I observed a commendable zeal, but was very far from being tempered with knowledge of God's Word. A minister discoursed quite warmly with regard to the necessity of a return to the old time religion where sinners are made to get right down before God, and quake, fear and tremble, and get converted.

The above may be the old time religion of Jonathan Edwards, (his pattern) but is very far from being the old time religion of the Holy Scriptures, in which there is no craven, cowardly, slavish fear. ("There is no fear in love.") On the contrary it begets a spirit of love, of hope, of joyful anticipation. Its recipients can sing, and shout aloud for joy, even while enduring bodily affliction. Remember the case of Paul and Silas, who because they faithfully preached the old time religion of the Bible, were stripped of their clothing, and severely whipped, after which the jailor was strictly charged to keep them safe. He "then thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks." Now, on account of this old time religion of the Bible, these men with flesh lacerated and sore from being beaten, and the feet locked fast in stocks, and confined in the dreary, dark "inner" dungeon, at the "midnight" hour held a devotional service, and "prayed and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them." Yes, dear reader, this religion is pre-eminently a joyful religion, men can sing praises unto God, while enduring bodily torture for the advocacy of this precious, ancient faith. When a person is once "rooted and grounded" in this faith, nothing can separate him from it, because of the principle of love which pervades it; it is a golden cable, which unites the Father, the Son, and all the precious "household of faith," in bonds of affection which never can be severed. "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, for thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter." These things may separate from the old time religion of Jonathan Edwards, but it can never separate those who "continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel." With regard to such, "I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

This love is only in the possession of those who are in harmony with the divine purpose and will of the Eternal Father, which is the old time religion of the Bible.

Those who refuse or neglect to harmonize with his will, he will destroy. We read in 1 Thess. ii. 13, 14: "God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the spirit, and the belief of that truth, whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord. Verse 10, speaks of certain ones who "received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved." Suppose they substitute the old time religion of Jonathan Edwards in place of the sanctification of the spirit, and belief of the truth; whereunto he called you by our gospel," what will happen? See verses 7, 8: "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction," in place of unending torment, as revealed in the Jonathan Edwards old time religion.

The phrases: "Obey not the gospel," and you "shall be punished with everlasting destruction," is equivalent to Christ's words: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel unto every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." The matter is imperative, there is no escaping the consequences if we fail to believe and obey. Knowing the inevitable consequences of a failure to believe, love prompts the advocates of the ancient faith to be fearless in its advocacy, that those who are "alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them," may be enlighted and obey the gospel. To me it is sad to see those whose minds have been enlightened, and yet from some cause "obey not the gospel," because the consequences are terrible. The unalterable decree has gone forth, and is recorded in God's Word in language that cannot be mistaken, that all such "shall be punished with everlasting destruction." There is no deception here, the language is plain enough for the simplest to comprehend, and those who do so neglect, take their own lives in their own hands. In the name of Jesus, I beseech you to be warned before it is too late.

There can be no salvation without obedience. With regard to Jesus, we read: "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Remember this that he never will become "the author of eternal salvation" only to those who do "obey him."

"What shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?" 1 Pet. iv. 17. "Unto them that are contentious and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish." Rom. ii. 8.

But on behalf of those who do "obey the truth," we can joyfully exclaim: "God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine (the gospel of the kingdom and the things which concern the name of the Lord Jesus) which was delivered you (by Jesus and his disciples, Heb. ii. 3). Being then made free from sin, (by being baptized for the remission of sins) ye became the servant of righteousness." Rom. vi. 17.

If deliverance from sin can only be obtained by obeying "from the heart that form of doctrine," how can you expect such a blessed result to flow from obeying the "form of doctrine" delivered you by Jonathan Edwards and other heralds of a bogus faith?

The difference between the old time religion of Jonathan Edwards and that of the Bible, is sharp and distinct. The old time religion of Jonathan Edwards, and the old time faith of the Scriptures, differ as follows. The faith of the former, promises the immortal souls of those who accept of it, a home in a country which they can not exactly locate, but we are told that it is somewhere in the skies beyond the bounds of time or space. The poet says:

"A charge to keep I have -
A God to glorify--
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky."

With regard to the wicked their poet represents the faith of Jonathan Edwards, and those of kindred faith as follows:

"There is a dreadful hell,
And everlasting pains;
There sinners must with devils dwell.
In darkness, fire and chains."

With regard to the old time faith of the Scriptures, those who believe and obey it are promised an interest in the soul-stirring promises which God confirmed with an oath unto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, all such are promised a joint-heirship with Jesus, the Christ, to the restored throne of his father David, they are also promised, if they continue in well-doing the glorious gift of immortality at the appearing and kingdom of our Lord Jesus, the Christ. As to the location of this kingdom, which will be filled with eternal joys, we are not left in doubt like those who adhere to the faith of Jonathan Edwards, but its exact boundaries are given even to detail.

Now, can these two differing faiths be valid? Listen to what the Scriptures say: "There is one body, (one household of faith,) one spirit, (through which the divine will was communicated to man) one hope of your calling: (one hope only is found in our calling by the gospel) one Lord, (not a Lord who reigns in heaven over immortal souls, but the one who will reign on David's throne in Jerusalem) one faith, (the faith of our father Abraham) one baptism, (immersion in water for the remission of sins) one God," (not a trinity of gods).

Oh what a marked contrast is seen between the bogus faith of Jonathan Edwards and company, and the "one faith of God's Word," when the search-light of the Scriptures is turned upon it? How square to the line, and live in harmony with the faith which was once delivered to the saints. Let us also be careful, and not send men out as heralds of the "one faith," who have never themselves become "obedient to the faith," even though they may profess the doctrines of the faith; require of them obedience, before you trust them to carry the message of life to others. A previous obedience to a bogus faith will never be counted as an obedience to "the faith." Let us be in earnest in these last days.

Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

Brothers and sisters of the one faith, as the time has arrived for testimony from those scattered all over this broad land of ours, let me add my mite with the rest. It is cheering to read the letters from those earnestly contending for the faith of the gospel. It seems to me when I look back on the year that is just gone and see my shortcomings and so little that I have done for God's cause, that I am led to cry out, "Lord help me to take a firmer stand for him in the time to come." Aid me by your prayers, that whether temptations, or afflictions, or persecutions assail that I may not be found like the foolish virgins, but the wise, and be ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb. It is interesting and instructive to read the able articles in THE RESTITUTION by Bros. Wilson, Joblin, and others. God bless them in their work.

The paper is about the only preaching we have besides the Bible.

In conclusion let me say, if it should never be my lot to meet you face to face in this life, that we may meet with our Blessed Lord in the New Earth.

Your brother in the faith.

J. E. FOSGITHE.

Editor Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.00 for which send me the paper. I would have sent the full amount but owing to the hard times and scarcity of money this is all I can spare at present, but will send you the balance as soon as possible. I have been deprived of the paper for some time and it has seemed to me as if a near friend had left me. I hope these terms are satisfactory to you, and that you will send me the next issue.

We have an organized church at Ainsworth consisting of over 40 members which are strong advocates of the gospel.

From your brother in the hope of the soon coming kingdom.

F. F. STEPHENS.

Dear Restitution:

Brothers and sisters, in the one hope, I wish you all a Happy New Year. I feel like adding my testimony although in a feeble way. I will say that Jesus is precious to me. It is over thirty years since I started in his cause and I have never felt to turn back, although I have trials and crosses to pass through. He said we would have, but when I look to Jesus, and think what he suffered on the cross for us, I feel that ours is light compared to his, and I feel like going forward to the mark of the high calling, hoping he will forgive my weakness and miss-steps, but he said we would suffer persecution for his sake. He knows that the flesh is weak but the spirit is willing. I am alone here in the faith except my oldest daughter, with whom I have my home. The Bible and RESTITUTION are all the preaching we have, and I would feel ship-wrecked without them and no chart to guide me through. I do not fear for I always feel my Savior near. I hope to be among the number when he comes to make up his jewels. Pray for me that I may meet you all in the kingdom where pain, sickness, and trials will cease.

Yours in hope.

MRS. P. M. SPENCER.

Editor Restitution:

As the time on my paper is nearly run out, you will please find enclosed $1.50 for another year.

Its contents are a great blessing to me in my humble, and isolated circumstances. I am glad to know our letter drawer is wide open again, our golden opportunity for familiar converse. I do prize the letters from our dear brothers and sisters so much. They are the next best thing to a good visit. I have not much public spirit. I wish I had the ability to say a great deal of what is burning in my heart. I realize it is very necessary to put our whole trust in him who doeth all things well. Hope on. The Christian's hope maketh not ashamed. When Jesus comes then will our hope be crowned with salvation. Happy is he who hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God. Is our hope today in that same God that Jacob wrestled with? Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. The hope of the righteous shall be gladness. if our hope be gladness then we must be righteous. The righteous shall never be removed, for we are saved by hope, but with patience we must wait for the realization of our hope. Here is where faith comes to our rescue. We through the spirit must wait for and cherish this hope, and through faith and love admonish one another. Do we realize that we are coming into the midnight hour, when we shall hear the cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh? Let us trim our lamps, and have them burning, our arms full of sheaves, for "to him who overcometh, will I give to eat of the tree of life, and he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death."

Precious promises. Words of Truth. Oh, may we all be firm, and with all the redeemed in the latter days stand upon the earth. These words speak volumes to my heart. My hope, my all.

Trusting for a share in your prayers, in Christain love I remain, your Sister in Christ.

MRS. O. B. CADY.

Dear Restitution:

I wish the editor and all the readers of THE RESTITUTION a Happy New Year. May the God of Israel be with you throughout the coming year, 1895.

Oh how my heart rejoices to know that the time draws near for the coming of our Lord. Another year of our existence has past and gone and we are entering in to another. We know not how soon the Lord may come. What we want to know and be confident of is that we may be found ready, for we have the assurance (in the Word of God) that when he shall come we shall be made supremely happy. A happiness that shall never end, for we shall be made immortal and shall live forever, never to suffer sorrow or persecution, and never to die any more, where we can ever be with our loved ones and Jesus evermore. Dear brother, is not this a happiness well worth striving for? The joy and happiness we have here is of short duration, how soon it can be turned to sorrow. Dear brothers I can say that what sorrows and afflictions I have had are all drowned in the blessed hope I have in the glories that are in store for me in that bright and glorious world to come which is promised to me, and not to me only but to all those who love his appearing, if we hold out faithful until Jesus comes to make up his jewels.

I ask an interest in your prayers that I shall be found ready to meet you all in that world to come.

GEO. HAYNES.

Dear Restitution:

We wish you a Happy New Year. We are all as well as usual. There seems to be no settled plan of salvation with so many. Some say one thing and some another so that it almost discourages one, but I am thankful that Christianity is an individual matter. Yes, there are a few names even in Sardis that had not defiled their garments, and we still trust that there are a few names even here in Nebraska that are still looking for the King of kings, or the only begotten Son of God, to take unto himself his great power and reign. Yes, we do still believe that he was the Son of God, that he was not begotten by the will of the flesh nor of the will of man, but by the will of God, and that we must become sons by adoption if we expect to be saved, or in other words by complying with his Word.

I am as ever yours looking for the coming of the Just One.

JACOB [illegible]

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 16, 1895. NO 3.

The Restitution.

"THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the Tabernacle saints to joint heirs with him in the proposition of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for Kingdom-inheritance.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God- of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

"THE true spouse of Jesus Christ is to be known by her always enjoying the company of her beloved, or mourning after it." •

ETERNAL torment is unscriptural. The punishment of the wicked will be utter destruction. Phil. iii. 19; Rev xxi. 8; Mal. iv. 1.

IMMORTALITY of the body is a gift promised to the righteous only at the return of Christ. 1 Cor. xv. 54; 1 John iii. 2; Phil. iii. 21; and the immortality of the soul is a heathen fable. •

"WE frequently hear it said of some one that 'He is no man's enemy but his own,' but this is a great fallacy. Every bad man is the enemy of his wife, his children, his kindred and his country." •

BAPTISM, that is immersion in water, is the divinely appointed means of united believers to Christ. It is for remission of sins, and hence is essential to salvation. Gal. iii. 27-30; Acts ii. 38; Rom. vi. 3-6; 1 Pet. iii. 21. •

A FEMALE member of a church once said to Richard Cecil, "Sir, have you heard that I am going to turn from the Dissenters to the Church of England?" "Madam," he replied, "you are turning from nothing to nothing." It was he also who said, "What pretenders must be weighty; what pierces must be pointed; what is carried away must be portable." These were hints to public speakers. •

THIS paper, which is intended for those loved ones who have been convinced that there is no life out of Christ, and [illegible] inheritance with [illegible] no converting [illegible] the gospel; no forgiveness [illegible] faith in the gospel, repentance toward God and baptism into the Anointed Jesus; but who linger and hesitate and neglect to secure the great salvation. We plead with you to save yourselves from this untoward generation. Let the love of Christ constrain you to forsake all and follow him. Think of the follies and pleasures of this life with its riches and honors, which are but for a season, as compared with the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory awaiting those who are not ashamed of Jesus' Word. Oh lay hold upon eternal life now lest you have to take up the lament, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved." •

The Peace of God.

We made some remarks last week upon the tribulation in the world, and the peace in Christ; and in opening the Book to find some words of comfort for the Little Flock this week our eye fell upon the words of the Spirit in the 4th chapter of Philippians, "Rejoice in the Lord alway, and again I say, rejoice. Let your gentleness be [illegible] unto [illegible]; the Lord is at hand;

ANXIOUS ABOUT NOTHING

—but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God; and the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and mind through Christ Jesus." This was always a precious passage of Scripture, and as it seemed more precious than usual we concluded to present them to our readers with whatever thoughts they may suggest to us.

The people addressed are in the Lord, as is seen by the first verse. That means that their names are in the Lamb's Book of Life, see 3rd v. and it is not surprising that they are called upon to rejoice in the Lord always. How could they help rejoicing if they lived in full realization of the fact that their names were in the Lamb's Book of Life, and that

THE LORD IS AT HAND?

But the 6th verse contains instructions calculated to assist them in maintaining this happy state of mind. They are enjoined to be anxious about nothing; there is no need of it, because by prayer and supplication and thanksgiving they are privileged to make their requests known to God. If they heed this advice and let God take care of the consequences, they are sure to come out right at last; but while waiting for that is while living this life of faith and hope, the blessed assurance is given that "the peace of God which surpasses all human conception shall keep their hearts and minds through Jesus Christ. We understand this peace of God to mean tranquility of mind, growing out of a new relationship to God through Jesus Christ—they have put him on, and been baptized into him, and through adoption acquired all the rights and immunities of begotten children.

We want our readers to realize that there are no contingencies on God's part. If they comply with the conditions stated God makes the square promise that his peace which passes all conception shall guard their hearts and minds by Christ Jesus.

In Eph. iv. 3, we are informed that the

is the bond of this peace. We have to be at peace among ourselves in order to be in harmony with the Spirit. In Gal. v. 22 we learn that peace is a fruit of the Spirit. In Rom. v. 1, we find the reason why peace follows belief—we are justified by faith, hence the peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

This seems to take us back to the words of our blessed Lord in the 14th of John: "Peace I leave with you: not as the world gives do I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

OH WHAT BALM

these precious words contain: "my peace I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled." This shows where the trouble comes in. The heart gets troubled sometimes before we hardly know it, and worried hearts are all out of sorts, and not in condition to be benefitted by this heavenly medicine. As a disturbed stomach cannot take care of food, a disturbed mind cannot appropriate the medicine of the Great Physician. More and more let us try not to let our hearts be troubled; but try to realize that the promise is sure,— which surpasses conception shall keep our hearts and minds through Jesus Christ; and then from all the storms of earthly sorrow, and the tempest of earthly adversity, and the tumult of earthly strife, and the intoxication of earthly joy, we shall find rest and peace in God through Jesus Christ. Here is our refuge from the storm, our covert from the tempest, "for there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

THE PEACE OF GOD

PRECIOUS RESTING PLACE

of faith—Christ Jesus; all such know the blessedness of those whose iniquities are pardoned and whose sins are covered; but there are heights and depths and breadths and lengths of the love of God that we have never explored. God help us to follow on from one degree of grace to another, till we see the King in his beauty; and if we thus grow our peace will flow like a river, quietly, steadily on. Amen. •

God's Love.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16.

How plainly the sentiment of this text stands out in opposition to the doctrines of Calvin, still promulgated by those who regard the five knotty points of the old Swiss reformer, as the sum and substance of the gospel. Most of the preaching which I heard in my youthful days was shaped after the creed of Calvin. A certain definite number, which could neither be increased nor diminished, was chosen before the foundation of the world and all the rest of mankind were to be passed by as belonging to another definite number ordained to eternal damnation. "Constraining grace" wrought upon the hearts of heaven's favorites, so effectually that they were obliged to become Christians; and "once in grace always in grace" was their doctrinal motto.

In my text the love of God is not so circumscribed as this human theory would have it. No, no! It is as broad as the world of mankind. "God so loved the world." The love was made plain, as a cause, to prompt the giving of his Son. The love took in the world, and therefore any theory limiting it to a very few must be false. The gift of God's Son was made in behalf of a world of sinners; and this same Son when manifested to Israel declared that he came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. John says: "He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for our sins only, but for the sins of the whole world." John ii. 2. That Jesus died for sinners is an inspired proposition so plainly stated to be misunderstood; and that he laid down his life for his sheep will not be questioned. Both statements are true. But why believe the latter, and not the former? The one, logically, is a universal affirmative; the other a particular affirmative. That Jesus died for sinners is by Paul put beyond the possibility of successful contradiction. He says: "Scarcely for a righteous (just) man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die; but God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." The gracious announcement of pardon and of final and complete redemption is made to sinners. The Word of reconciliation is addressed to the unreconciled. Paul styles the gospel the "Word of reconciliation;" and affirms that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." Such is the abounding love of God that he offers to the fallen and undone, peace and pardon, the unspeakable gift of eternal life, and the coming kingdom with all its glory—all these he offers on the conditions of faith and obedience. God never offered to save men unconditionally. He who expects to be finally saved without conforming to God's will counts more on his mercy than what the Scriptures warrant. God is merciful within the bounds of his revealed plan. To reject this is to incur his displeasure, and forfeit eternal life. There is a fearful risk involved in the question of disobedience. Oh sinner, for whom Christ died, do not, I beseech you, neglect the offers of mercy by pleading your want of ability to close in with these offers. "We love him because he first loved us." John iv. 19. This means much, so much that ages on ages will not exhaust its meaning to those who taste and know that the Lord is gracious. The sum of this love is all that God has done and will do for his obedient children. God's love must take shape in eternal realities. To attempt to describe these is to feel our weakness, and to realize how poor is human language when summoned to the task. It is the grand and glorious things of the future kingdom, and "scenes surpassing fable," which are set over against the fleeting and unsatisfying things of the present life. The sum total of God's eternal blessings is a gift of infinite love and mercy. I say mercy, because it is offered to the violators of a holy and just law. These cannot purchase God's favor, nor give an equivalent in value for eternal life. God asks, and reasonably too, for the service of our lives—conformity to his will. This is but little at most and best. He demands faith in his Word, the facts and promises of gospel. In his love and goodness he entreats us to turn to him and live. "Turn ye! turn ye! for why will ye die" rings in the ears of every poor sinner. All that God requires of the sinful is in the fitness of things and circumstances necessary to prepare us for a state of bliss, with him for ever, and holy companionship, and full communion with his Maker. It was sin that severed the pleasant bond of love, and it must be [illegible] that we bring it back to that state of accord which the Omnipotent [illegible] contemplated in its creation. [illegible] must put themselves in harmony with the revealed will of God, or [illegible] themselves excluded, by want of moral fitness, from the society of the redeemed. Incessant then as God requires but little—the poor service of our lives—as conditional to an eternal weight of glory, we ought cheerfully to obey him in all things. To those not of Christ who may chance to read what I have penned in this paper I will say, do not postpone from day to day and from year to year your return to God. Life with its many opportunities for fitting yourselves for the kingdom of God and its pure and refined associations is flitting away. Will you indulge the false hope that admittance will be granted you on the ground alone of God's great mercy, without any effort on your part to prepare for such a pure and holy state? Christian character alone will entitle you to a place in God's eternal kingdom. And this can only be developed by you as free, moral agents acting in conformity with the revealed will of God. Character is not a thing to be put on you by the Lord at the resurrection of the just. You must set yourselves in opposition to the sinful desires of the flesh. In the language of Paul: "Put off concerning the former conversation (conduct) the old man which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts." Col. iv. 22. This means more than moral reformation independent of faith in the gospel. For the Apostle adds: "That ye put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." v. 24. Now will you after all that God and his Son have done in mercy and love in your behalf, after you have heard of the gracious offer of grand and glorious things in the future kingdom, continue to neglect the duties you owe to your Maker and kind Benefactor: spend your lives in serving the flesh, and then dare to indulge the hope that the Great Judge will lavish upon you the riches of the eternal inheritance? Will you?

JOHN L. WISER.

The Old Paths.

"Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, Where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." Jer. vi. 16.

Ages have swept o'er the fragments of human royalty, and thrones of dominion have disappeared in the tomb of oblivion since the beginning of the royal pathway of which the lamenting seer of Israel wrote, and which had grown old in his day. In the early history of man it became the bright incentive which flamed into a living hope that the Seed of the Woman would soon appear to exterminate and crush the serpent's power. As a consequence Eve believed her first born son was to be the coming Deliverer, and her joyful exclamation, "I have gotten a man from the Lord," (Gen. iv. 1.) was soon to be buried in the darkest grief, for the son of her brightest hopes stained the earth with his brother's blood, and instead of approximating nearer to the path of life, one step deeper in crime was taken, and the gulf which separated them from their lost home, widened as the years rolled on. And yet like a thread of gold the highway of life spanned the age, and Enoch the seventh after Adam walked faithfully therein, and so perfect was his character that the world-loving throngs knew him not until they were startled to learn that the places he frequented bore no longer the traces of his footprints, and the murmur of surprise ran from encampment to encampment, Enoch was no more. He was with his God, and the words of his prophecy, "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints to execute judgment upon all, and to convince men of ungodly deeds," (Jude 14, 15), fell on the listless ears of the careless ones of earth. Duration continues with its procession of years, and as the age wings its way to a close only one man is found traversing the pathway of life and upon his brow the pen of six centuries has written the story of truth. The world of mankind has grown desperately wicked and the time of probation is numbered by hours. The storm king marshals his hosts, and the black clouds of evening declare the doom, while the fiery bolt crashing through the agitated air brings the rushing surges of death, the awful morrow reveals a world locked in the weird silence of the grave. Noah and his kindred alone float upon the wide, billowy waste amid the breathless calm. Yet the way of life bridges the ocean tomb, and illumined by the rays of the sun of righteousness serves as a guide to Abraham as he passes with a heavy heart through the groves of Beer-sheba, out on the plains stretching away to Moriah's rugged hills, even the winds from the gates of morning seem to whisper, "Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and offer him for a burnt offering," and as the day wanes to a close and the night veils the landscape with its symbols of death, one by one the stars take their places in burning ranks upon the plains of heaven, reminding him of the divine promise, "As the number of the stars so shall thy seed be." And the third morning finds the altar erected, the wood prepared, and the knife lifted, and the fire of hope burns low as the aged father turns his head aside that he may not see the blood follow the descending blow that would sever the thread on which was suspended the only means of carrying out the divine promise or perpetuating his name. But the angel of deliverance stays the hand with the glad enunciation, "Lay not thine hand upon the lad, for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thine only son from me." Gen. xxii. 10-12. On and on the pathway of life continues its sacred march, and Jacob the grandson of the father of the faithful finds the God of heaven his companion as he journeys o'er the grassy plains of Bethel, and as the shades of night descend from the distant hilltops may be seen the baleful lights of altar fires where the children of men offer their infant babes to Moloch and Baal, and amid this scene of direst depredation, the lonely exile wraps his mantle around him and sinks into silent repose. The hours of night move on and around the pillow of the slumberer the cyclorama of years unroll, and like a great ladder the royal way of Jehovah spans the fields of futurity, and links with a stairway of light the land on which the sleeper reposed with it in its restored condition when he should behold his illustrious seed reigning in beauty o'er the nations of earth, while up and down the shining steps constructed of intervening years, the angels descend and ascend administering to those who are to share the royalty and bear the honors of the divine government. Thus through the dispensations of the past the old pathway of life runs its silent course to [illegible] the "rest that remaineth for the people of God," and with the hope of the fulfilment of this promise thousands have walked therein, and with God as their friend, and with his Word as a lamp to their feet, they have traversed it in light, and yielded up their all on the altar of righteousness, defying the pangs of torture. Bowing down at the fatal stake while the flames of martyrdom rolled up the black vaults of night. But if I mistake not there is in reserve for the present generation a trial by which it shall be manifested who are, and who are not the true servants of God. The way to the kingdom is neither flowery nor easy, it is a "straight gate" and "narrow [illegible]" and "few there be that find it." Soon shall the crowns be given to the faithful saints of the most high God. Soon shall the martyrs and apostles and sleeping saints come forth from their prison houses and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God. Let us also strive to enter in bearing in mind that many are called but few are chosen. Matt. xxii. 14. Yours in hope.

The Old Year Abroad.

The old year abroad has been characterized by political events of importance in Europe and by war in Asia. In England it has been specially signalized by the retirement of Mr. Gladstone from politics on account of ill health and advanced years, and the advancement of Lord Rosebery to the vacant Premiership. In the new arrangement Sir Vernon Harcourt accepted the leadership of the House of Commons, Earl Kimberly took the foreign and Henry Fowler the Indian portfolio. The agitation against the House of Lords, which is now the burning question in English politics, began in March when Labouchere's effort to amend the reply to the Queen's speech by demanding the abolition of the Upper House was defeated and a substitute offered by Harcourt was adopted. Since that time Lord Rosebery in his campaign speeches has given satisfactory assurances that the question will be one of the first to be taken up at the forthcoming meeting of Parliament. Aug. 7th the evicted tenants' bill passed the Commons, but was again defeated in the Upper House, which has intensified the agitation.

France has been in almost continuous excitement owing to the activity of the Anarchists. Feb. 4. Vaillant was executed. A week later a bomb was thrown into a cafe by Breton, injuring several persons. March 19 a bomb was thrown into the Madelaine Church, but it had no other effect than the killing of the thrower. May 20 another anarchist, Emile Henri, was executed. The conspiracies of these wretches culminated in the assassination of President Carnot at Lyons by Cesare Giovanni Santo June 24. His accomplice, Granier, committed suicide, and he himself paid the penalty of the crime Aug. 16. Since that time agitation has apparently ceased owing to the stringent anti-anarchist bills which have been passed. The year was also characterized by the criminal indictment of M. de Lesseps for his participation in the Panama scandals, but since that time he has passed with clouded fame beyond the jurisdiction of earthly courts. May 22 the Casimier-Perier Ministry was defeated owing to its opposition to the passage of a law authorizing railway employes to form unions and a new ministry was formed by M. Dupuy which still remains in power. Casimir-Perier meanwhile was elected President ad interim.

Germany has been the center of political excitement during the whole year. Bismarck and the young Emperor have discovered a modus vivendi. A commercial treaty with Russia has been ratified. The anti-Jesuit laws have been repealed. In October, owing to disagreement in policy, Chancellor von Caprivi resigned and Prince Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst was made Premier in his place. The Reichstag opened Dec. 5. The speech from the throne indicates pacific relations with all the European powers, but Germany itself is confronted with taxation, agrarian, socialistic, and Polish questions, the outcome of which no one can foresee. Austria also has negotiated a commercial treaty with Russia. A new Cabinet was formed for Hungary in June, but it has now resigned owing to different views as to policy. The two most important events of the year in Hungary have been the death of its great hero, Kossuth, and the securing of absolute religious freedom.

Italy has been agitated by the anarchists, whose excesses at last led to the passage of an anti-anarchist bill, by riots in Sicily growing out of excessive taxation and by the Roman bank scandals, which finally involved Premier Crispi, who has prorogued Parliament pending an investigation which he has demanded. Spain also has been the scene of anarchist agitations which were not put down until a stringent law was passed. The Netherlands have been quiet. Belgium has had Cabinet crises on questions of reform. In its first election under the universal suffrage law the Liberals were defeated and the Socialists secured nineteen seats. Belgium has also had its international exposition—a pale reflex of the White City. In Scandinavia has been the old quarrel between Sweden and Norway and it still remains unsettled.

In Russia the principal event of the year has been the death of the Czar Alexander III, and the succession to the throne of his eldest son, Nicholas II., who since the succession has married Princess Alix of Hesse. The policy of the new Czar is purely matter for conjecture beyond the fact, as announced in the proclamation, that he will continue the peaceful policy of his father. In Turkey the event of overshadowing importance is the Kurdish massacres of Armenians, for which the powers are preparing to call the Sublime Porte to account. In Servia the principal event has been the King's recognition of the rights of ex-King Milan and Natalie. The courts declared this recognition unconstitutional, whereupon the King cut the Gordian knot by suspending the Constitution and proclaiming the old Constitution of 1869. The end is not yet.

In Asia the war between Japan and China has occupied the attention of the whole world. It broke out in June as the outcome of a dispute between the two powers as to the rights of suzerainty in Corea. Both landed troops in Corea, but the Chinese were driven out speedily. The war was transferred to Chinese soil, and by a rapid succession of victories on land and sea the Chinese power has been broken and the empire now lies at the mercy of Japan. Negotiations for peace are pending, and Japan has received the congratulations of the world for the skill and valor with which it has overcome its huge enemy. Africa has been in more or less turmoil. The obstreperous young Khedive of Egypt has been brought to his senses by England. The French have occupied Timbuctoo, and have put down rebellion in Madagascar without serious resistance. Growing out of the death of Muley Hassan, Sultan of Morocco, there have been outbreaks in that country, but they have been settled since the recognition of Abdul Aziz by the powers as the new Sultan. In Central Africa, under the Anglo-Belgian agreement, a division of territory has been made between the State, England, and Germany.

Central America as usual has been the theater of almost endless revolutions. The effort to form a union between Gautemala, Nicaragua, Honduras, San Salvador, and Costa Rica, from which so much was hoped, has failed. In South America Brazil has been the center of interest. The rebellion there has been squelched except in some of the outlying provinces. The chiefs of the rebellion are fugitives, and the new President, Mornes, has inaugurated what appears to be a firm and stable government.—Chicago Tribune.

Can the Jews become farmers?—As an answer to this question, so often asked, it is said that in spite of the many discouragements and oppositions met with in the Russian Empire, there are no less than sixty-four thousand Jewish agriculturists in the domains of the Czar, most of whom are successfully tilling the soil. In the district of Vukhuovka, in the province of Kieff, the Jews are nearly all agriculturists, and those who employ them say they do so because they are steadier and work better than the orthodox peasants, and so far they have not been molested by the authorities.

A dispatch to the Chronicle from Moscow says the Czar, in revising the lists of officers for promotion, which list gives the age, religion, etc., of the officers, struck his pen through the column marked religion, decaring that was a question which did not concern him.

The Burden.

To every one on earth
God gives a burden to be carried down
The road that lies between the cross and crown:
No lot is wholly free:
He giveth one to thee.

Some carry it aloft,
Open and visible to all eyes,
And all may see its form and weight and size:
Some hide it in their breast,
And down it there unguessed.

Thy burden is God's gift,
And it will make thee brave and calm and strong.
Yet, lest it press too heavily and long,
He says, "Cast it on Me
And it shall easy be."

And those who heed his voice,
And seek to give it back in trustful prayer,
Have gained a heart that never can despair,
And hope light-winged the way
Upon the darkest day.

Take then thy burden thou
Into thy hands and lay it at His feet,
And whether it be sorrow or defeat,
Or pain or sin or care,
Leave it calmly there.

It is the heavy load
That crushes out the light and life of heaven.
But, borne with Him, the soul restored, forgiven,
Sings out through all the days
His joys and God's high praise.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 2.

Gen. 12 and 13th Chap.

Abraham is now in Canaan. God gives him promise, that his seed shall possess the land forever. It is a prophecy that from some of his decendants there shall come a Savior, who gaining immortality, shall have the earth for an eternal possession.

He is an old man and he has no child, yet God tells him, he will make his seed like the dust of the earth, so that if a man can number the dust of the earth then may his seed also be numbered. It would take a long time to count the dust particles in a bushel of sand. What then would it be to count the atoms that make the world?

The battle of the kings is fought, Abraham, receives a deed from God to the land of Canaan. The sufferings and servitude of his people in the land of Egypt are foretold. Ishmael and Isaac are born.

Through Isaac, it is said, the everlasting covenant is to be established, the Christ is to come of his line and not from that of Ishmael.

To be establish, is to become a fact. The deed will become a fact in the hands of the seed of Isaac.

The sacrifice of Isaac pictures a slain and risen Savior who shall possess and hold the strong places of his enemies, and who shall bless all the nations of earth.

As we read on and on in the pleasant story, we can see the steps in the plan. The repeating of the promises cheer us.

We rejoice in a God of love. Already we can see the lost Eden blooming again, and congregated thousands of immortal ones crowding its fadeless bowers.

We are at the beginning of the fenced-off nation. Isaac was a type or sign of the coming Bridegroom. His wife must be the sought-for-one; a type of the Redeemer's Bride. She was chosen for Isaac by the Lord himself, not from the idol-worshipping Canaanites, but from among Abraham's own people in Mesopotamia. It was a long way, four hundred or more miles. Her name was Rebekah, and she was very fair.

Of the two sons of Rebekah, Jacob was chosen. Again the Lord decreed the choice of a wife. She must come as did his mother from the people of Shem and from the kindred of his fathers.

There is a lesson taught here that it would be well for our young converts to heed.—The companions of a lifetime, who are to travel with us to the land of Canaan are to be chosen from the Father's family. He has separted us from the world in much the same way as he did ancient Israel, and we are to make no partnership with unbelievers. Those who do it fill a cup with wormwood and myrrh, and must drink it to the dregs.

But we must hasten on with our story, hoping that each dear reader will read it chapter by chapter from the blessed Book. We can only give it in outline in these introductory lessons.

We have again reached the land of Mesopotamia.

Leah, the tender-eyed, and Rachel the beautiful, with their maidens Zilpah, and Bilhah become the spouses of Jacob. From the twelve sons of these mothers spring the twelve tribes of Israel.

Laban the fatherinlaw of Jacob, together with his sons are vexed and envious at his rapid increase in wealth, and they show their feelings in their faces. The young men even accuse Jacob of having gotten his riches by taking away that which was their father's.

The time for separation has come, God bids him return to the land of his kindred and promises to be with him. While Laban is off shearing his sheep, Jacob gathers his family and servants together, takes all his goods and his cattle, and flees. Laban overtakes him and the quarrel is settled, and Mizpah, the watch-tower is built as a witness between them of the covenant of peace that has been made. Neither is to pass the heap to do the other harm. Bread is eaten upon the heap and a sacrifice is offered upon it, then Laban kisses his daughters and their children and goes back to his place.

A little farther on and Jacob has a vision, receives the name of Israel, —"A prince of God," and is blessed of the Lord."

He meets and makes peace with Esau, his brother, and at last comes to Shalem—now Jerusalem, in the land of Canaan, where he buys a field, spreads his tent, and sets up an altar.

Leaving this place he goes to Bethel.

All strange gods are put away. The promise that Christ shall come of his descendants is given to him, just as it was to Abraham and to Isaac. While on the way Benjamin, his last son is born, and his beautiful Rachel is laid to rest in the sleep of the grave.

Joseph, the elder-born son of Rachel dreams dreams, that place him above all his family in station and glory. His brothers are very angry. They talk the matter over among themselves. His dreams must never come true. Hate and envy are dreadful things to get into the heart. They make people commit dreadful crimes. Jesus says, "He that hateth his brother, has committed murder already in his heart." If we allow ourselves to hate people, we are pretty sure to wish they were dead, we kill them in our minds.

Joseph's brethren make up their minds to kill him, but Reuben the first-born son of Leah, persuades them to throw him into a pit. He is more tender-hearted than the rest and cannot bear the thought of seeing his fair young half-brother put to death. He intends when the rest are gone to slip back and take him to his father. But a band of merchant Midianites come along and Judah persuades the angry men to sell their brother, to be carried down to Egypt. Unknown to themselves they take the very steps that lead to the fulfillment of his dreams. In Egypt, he becomes the trusted overseer in Potiphar's house. The Lord is with him and he is very prosperous.

But his downfall is sought by Potiphar's wicked wife, he is cast into prison; the prison-house is made the pathway to a place that is next to the throne.

He interprets the dreams of his fellow-prisoners. The wisdom thus displayed leads after a time to his introduction to the king.

Pharaoh's curious visions are solved and the power is carefully attributed to God. Joseph is dressed in royal robes of fine linen, the king's ring is placed on his hand, and a gold chain about his neck. He rides in the second chariot of the king, and all men are commanded to "bow the knee," for the poor slave boy has become ruler over all the land of Egypt.

His father, back in Canaan, is mourning him as dead, but he will meet the dear son again by and by.

Christ's Birthday.

On Christmas morning I was awakened by mamma calling me to breakfast. I arose and was surprised to find so many presents awaiting me, one of which was a large book called "Children's life of Christ."

I dressed hurriedly, went to the dining room, and ate my breakfast. After I had played with my presents until I was tired, I concluded to read to my blind sister from my new book. When I was weary with reading my sister said, "Jessie, do you know why we celebrate Christmas? "No," was my reply. She said. "Eighteen hundred and ninety-four years ago there was a great present sent down to the earth, can you guess what, or who it was?" "Oh yes, I know who it was, 'twas Jesus," I said. She said he was a great king, though very small and born in a stable. She told me of the flight into Egypt to conceal him from the wicked king who was seeking to kill him. The king had slain all the babes of Bethlehem in order to kill Jesus. He lived on earth till he was 33½ years of age when he suffered that agonizing death, so that "whoso ever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Would not all of us like such a gift as eternal life? It is for all of us.

"For you as well as for me,
Salvation is free."

Peter's Estimate of Christian Character. 2 Pet. i. 5-8.

"Add to temperance, patience."

Patience as defined by Webster is, a calm temper; a suffering with calmness or without discontent; perseverance. The words patience, patient, and patiently, are found 44 times in the common version of the New Testament, while the original words from which they are translated occur 74 times; sometimes rendered, endure, long-suffering, long patience, patiently; but not materially differing from the definition given above.

This Christian virtue is strongly and frequently urged by the apostles in their letters to the churches, and Peter here adds it to the list of graces which he deemed necessary for the perfection of Christian character. While temperance or self-control has more particularly a reference to the government of our own springs of action or internal emotions, patience has to deal with external objects. One has to keep guard over the motions of sin within us, to check and to subdue unholy desires, and to conquer self; the other has to meet those things which press upon us from without, —trials, difficulties, afflictions, etc. These outside troubles are to be met with patient endurance, calmness, composure of temper, and perseverance. The radical idea of the word is continued in the Greek words from which it is derived, hupomeno, to bear up under, endure, suffer patiently; and makrothumos, long-suffering, forbearing. Now, if self-control has been added to knowledge, it will have a wonderful and very salutary influence upon the mind, and make it comparatively easy to add patience. We can see a beautiful order and harmony in this arrangement. It would not do to place patience before self-control, or either of them before knowledge. A man who cannot control himself, but gives a loose rein to his appetites and passions, cannot practice patience. All the exhortations of Christ and his apostles to the cultivation of this virtue will be lost upon him. He will be characterized by irritability, fickleness, impatience, murmuring, repining, etc., and consequently will be in danger of becoming "barren and unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." But let him gain the ascendancy over himself—let his moral and spiritual faculties govern his animal nature—then both body and mind will be ready to meet with calmness and resignation the bitter and multiplied ills of life, and particularly those fiery trials arising from a profession of faith in Christ.

The apostle James says, (i. 2-4,) "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations, (trials) knowing that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." Here we find patience is a means for obtaining perfection. As a perfection of character is the end and aim of those who profess Bible religion, in order that they may become qualified for admission into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, we are exhorted to "let patience have her perfect work;" and the exercise of this calm and serene mind, under trial, will have a perfecting and finishing effect upon us. But as there can be no scope for patience or endurance where there are no trials, James says, "count it all joy when ye fall into divers trials, knowing that the trying of your faith works patience." Trials are not to be shunned, then, when they come, but to be endured patiently. This may seem hard doctrine, yet it is Bible teaching. Trials have a chastening effect upon the patient Christian; and while it is true that "no chastening for the present seems to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto the who are exercised thereby." The proof of our sonship is found connected with patience under chastisement or trial. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons" Heb. xii. 6, 7, 11. Therefore Paul could say, "We glory in tribulation also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope," etc. Rom. v. 3, 4. And yet those who were thus exercised by trials, and were enduring "a great fight of afflictions," were exhorted,—"Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Heb. x. 35-37. In this promise is the believer's hope. He is looking for the coming of the Just One, "who will reward every man according to his works." Though persecuted, defamed, oppressed, and at times cast down, yet he feels encouraged when he remembers the exhortation of the apostle James—"Be patient, (or suffer with long patience,) therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." And why thus patiently wait for the Lord? Because he will bring deliverance for those who are thus waiting for him. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to them that love him." And the time for the bestowing that "crown of life" is, when "he, who is our life, shall appear." "Behold," says he, "I come quickly, and my reward is with me." And to encourage his brethren to suffer with long patience, the apostle introduces a good illustration. He says, "Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Are you a disciple of Jesus, and are you suffering on account of your faith? Be encouraged to hold fast—to preserve—to endure to the end. The struggle may be severe—the trial may be great—and the time may seem long,—but the end will come; then "the rest which remains for the people of God" will follow and be secured, and oh! how sweet it will be to the wearied ones! Do you need encouragement? Draw it from the Word. "Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience;" and "be ye not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." Abraham "after he had patiently endured, obtained the promise," in the birth of Isaac, the heir of the promises; and Job was an example of patience in the midst of unparalleled sorrow and affliction, and yet "the end of the Lord" as seen in the closing scenes of Job's life, (Job xlii. 10-17) proved "that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy."

This trait of character—patience—was possessed in an eminent degree by Jesus our Lord. The apostle Peter introduces his example for imitation. He says, "For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently; but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye shall take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." 1 Pet. ii. 20-23. The writer to the Hebrews also introduces Christ's example as one worthy of being copied, and even as necessary for our ultimate success. Under the figure of a racer, laying off superfluous clothing, and striving for the prize, he says, "let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down on the right hand of the throne of God. For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be faint and wearied in your minds." Heb. xii. 1-3. It is impossible to bring forward a better or more glorious example. It is worthy of our attention and imitation. The prophetic description given by Isaiah of Messiah's conduct at his trial, is a graphic picture of his patient endurance, and which we know was exactly fulfilled. "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth."

In conclusion, then, let us carefully cultivate the godlike attribute of patience. Our God "has been long-suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance;" Jesus our Lord has left us an example in this respect of a brilliant character, and we are exhorted to copy it; and the prophets, who have spoken to us in the name of the Lord, are also to be taken as examples of suffering affliction and patience. This virtue is also noticed and highly commended by the Head of the Church, in his messages sent to the congregations at Ephesus, Thyatira, and Philadelphia. See Rev. ii. 2, 3, 19; iii. 10. And let us remember that "whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be like-minded one towards another, according to (or after the example of) Christ Jesus." Rom. xv. 4, 5.—Gospel Banner, 1897.

My Strength.

Be our days many, or be they few, from any burden which God may see fit to lay upon us, our life may gain not only contentment, but grandeur and nobleness. My strength through all my life has been precisely this—that I have no choice. During the last thirty-six years God has twelve times changed my work. I have scarcely done what I myself would have chosen. The support of my life is to know that I am doing what God wishes, and not what I wish myself.

My brethren, the best thing often that could happen to a man is to be thwarted in his favorite hopes. The old song has the hope that in time of old age we may find one face at our fireside whom we loved when we were young; but I would say further than this: "God grant that we may find him there in the home of our darkened life." Then all else will seem to us to be but dross. When a man has nothing more to lose; when his hopes are all beyond the grave; when we listen without terror to the sobbings and flowings of the tide of life and the rush of its storms—then, after the night, to us the day will come back, and after the tempest a great calm.

We know that it is God's work, and that God loves us better than we can love ourselves. We know, then, that all our life is guided by him, so that we find consolation and contentment; and if we have those two things with us—consolation in all sorrows and contentment in any loss—we have the richest blessings which God can give us.—Archdeacon Farrar.

The Inelegance of Hurry.

There is an idea prevalent that to be in a hurry is a sign of importance, of large business and large achievements. It is a serious mistake. An experienced person always mistrusts the man who hurries, for he fails in emergencies. Serenity of mind and leisurely action are necessary to fine work of any kind. It is in leisure the mind assimilates best.

Scipio Africanus declared, "I am never less at leisure than when at leisure." A rare bit of wisdom of which all collective minds know the value. If we admit this as true, the inelegance of a hurried manner has the best of reasons. It is wasteful, inconsistent with the finest action, and is caused by a man losing control of himself, and suggests an uneasy, indecisive mind.

A distinction, however, should be recognized between activity and excited hurry, and between slowness and self-possession. Activity with self-possession is the desirable condition.

The Chinese "Rules of War," as carried out by the imperial armies now in the field against Japan are 3,000 years old. They must be very nice rules if we may judge of them from the specimens given by an English writer who has seen them. Perhaps the nicest of them, for the assailed party, is the one that goes thus: "Spread in the camp of the enemy voluptuous musical airs so as to soften his heart." This military maneuver was held in especial esteem 3,000 years ago by its author, Sun-tse, who is still regarded as the highest authority upon the art of war.—New York Sun.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

OBITUARY.

Died in Sandyville, Ohio, on Dec. 19, 1894, Mary S. Cable, wife of Chas. E. Cable, aged 85 yrs.

Our dear neice, and sister in the one faith and hope, was a sufferer for a year or more from dropsy, and while we knew that her condition was unfavorable to recovery, we hoped, with her that as youth was yet on her side, she might overcome this disease.

But death overcame her, and now she is at rest, awaiting a glorious resurrection when the Master comes. She was a consistent Christian, a faithful wife and mother, and much beloved by all who knew her. She leaves a kind loving husband, two children, sister and an aged grandmother, besides other relatives and friends to mourn her untimely death.

May the Lord soon come, and bring back our loved ones, and until then may the remaining and sorrowing ones work faithfully, so that together they may have a blessed eternity with all God's faithful ones, is the prayer of one of these.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The New-Year number of Babyland is fully capable of entertaining a million babies and their Mothers. It opens with the pretty tale of "The New-Year Bird," and there is also another bit of a story sure to be popular in the nursery, "The Parlor Cow." In Mrs. Pratt's serial, "The House of the Grandmothers," baby Mary Ellen pays New-Year calls on her six Grandmothers. The cunning poem "Little Rose," has a wee lesson, and the "Marching Play" by Grace Burlson, "The Lions," will prove a welcome help to mothers and teachers. The "Nimble Pennies" by Boz, intended as a lead pencil play for little fingers, evolves a very queer and amusing beast. 50 cents a year, 5 cents a number. Specimen (back number) free to interested mothers and teachers. Alpha Publishing Company, Boston.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, send the paper to all new names received before Feb. 1, 1895, till Jan. 1, 1896 for $1.50. Besides this we will send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Evangelizer," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, express money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Evangelizer."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of unpublished articles. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When sending your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your orders will be much more promptly attended to.

Theatricals in Churches.

"Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another," Gal. v. 26.

"Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." I Peter ii. 9.

"Brethren my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved, for I bear them record that they have a zeal of God but not according to knowledge, for they have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." Rom. x. 1-3.

The accompanying clippings from one daily paper, in a town of about twenty thousand people, are submitted in hopes that the Editor may feel that a special introduction to notice, with slight commentary, may afford a warning to some, desirous of leading the higher life but yet blinded in some measure by the mists of worldly thought.

The promoters of these entertainments are mostly the influential people of the town, among them many men and women deserving of our love and respect, having a zeal undoubtedly "not according to knowledge."

The first clipping is of an altogether worldly entertainment in the House of God. The orations are not on Scriptural subjects, the music assertions may be anything. It is a contest for worldly fame. The actors are not recommended for their records as Christians, but for their wit and humor and eloquence or their records as famous football players. Their friends are represented as eagerly backing their favorites, quite possibly with bets. Admission 25 cents.

"Much interest is being manifested concerning the oratorical contest to be held in the Congregational church, next Friday evening. The college students are eagerly waiting for the result, as the speakers seem to have about an equal number of friends who expect their favorite to win the coveted honors. The young men are well known in this city and their friends will be pleased to hear them. All of the orations are well written and each one reflects credit upon the author. The senior, junior and sophomore classes are also represented and they are confident that their respective members will win. Although previous contests have been held in the chapel, it was decided to hold the contest this year in a more central location where the public could attend more conveniently.

The program will be rendered as follows:—

Invocation.

Piano solo	Selected
Oration	Responsibility of Individualism
Oration	American Inspiration
Violin solo	Selected
Oration	War
Oration	Imagination
Violin solo	Selected
Oration	The War President
Cornet solo	Selected

Decision of Judges.

The first speaker, is a member of the junior class and it surely will be well represented. He has a good record as a football player as well as an orator, having played right guard on the team for two years. He deals with his subject in a forcible manner and with his accustomed good delivery will stand a good show for honors.

The class of '97 may justly feel proud of her two orators,——they are well known, the former claiming this as his birthplace. Mr.——has a good oration and can be depended upon to present it to the audience in a faultless manner. His reputation as an orator is well known. Indeed, he is a natural orator and his production is full of native Irish wit and eloquence.

'95, speaks upon "Imagination." In previous contests he has proven his ability as a writer and speaker and many are confident that first honors will fall to him. He will be remembered as being one of the best players in the '93 team, although he did not play during the last season.

F. G. also of '95, is the last speaker, his subject being "The War President." It is hardly necessary to speak of his record as an orator. Has won first honors in previous contests. He was captain of the foot ball team during the last season and to his efforts is attributed in a large degree its success. He is without doubt one of the strongest players on the team. His many friends expect him to take the first honors, and Friday evening they will doubtless have reason to think that their expectations were well grounded. The admission is 25 cents."

The second entertainment (in two different churches) by a "graceful and charming" young artiste, is also given in God's house. One of them seems to have superseded the customary prayer-meeting. It is a "variety entertainment" harmless in itself as such things are estimated in fashionable circles, and would require no comment if given in an opera house, but the sober Christian, at the risk of being considered a fanatic, has a right to question whether God's house of prayer was consecrated for such purposes and whether the recollections of "Sallie Scroggins, Auntie Doleful, Saucy Sue and the Sweet Girl Graduate" would not be apt to intrude themselves on his memory during the subsequent worship of Almighty God on the same edifice. Twenty-five cents admission, and the ungodly are cordially invited to step in, pay their money, hear the applause and be captivated by Miss——and repeatedly encore her.

"An audience that almost completely filled the auditorium of Trinity M. E. church gathered last night to enjoy the excellent program presented by Miss——the elocutionist and impersonator, who was assisted in the entertainment by local talent. Miss——is graceful and charming and completely captivated her auditors, being repeatedly encored. Among her recitations were the Song of the Bobolink, Sally Scroggin's Essay on Spring, Auntie Doleful Consoling a Sick Neighbor, Driven from Home, Saucie Sue and Sweet Girl Graduate, the latter being an amusing caricature.

Miss——executed two guitar solos that were greatly appreciated, and Mr.——gave an admirably rendered selection on the autoharp, and Miss and Mr.——finely executed an instrumental duet on autoharp and guitar. The Harmony quartette was present, rendering three selections. "Hunter's Call, Chimes and Last Night." They were cordially received by the audience and generously applauded.

Miss——elocutionist and impersonator, will give an entertainment in the Christian church next Thursday evening for the benefit of the Christian Sunday school. Admission 25 cents. The public are heartily invited to attend."

The next performance in the 1st Congregational church, was a musical comedy; perhaps as a contrast to the tragedy of the cross.

Nineteen young ladies fantastically attired, carrying pails and stools opened up with a drill. Governor who expresses forcible opinions in regard to all such methods of promoting Christ's cause, was held up to ridicule and every body had a good time.

"Last night the young ladies of the First Congregational church presented a musical comedy entitled "The Interstate Milkmaids' Convention," nineteen milkmaids in red and white costumes participating. The entertainment was opened with a drill, the young ladies having pails on their heads and carrying stools in their hands. The Governor was represented as donating several thousand dollars for founding an asylum for old milkmaids. A large crowd was present, which enjoyed the novel and pleasurable event."

The 2nd Presbyterian church has a "Cantata" in view, "Santa Claus on Time,"—pity Calvin or Knox could not take the part of Santa Claus, it would at least be instructive to hear their reasons for declining the honor. The music is quite "operatic" and no doubt "catchy."

"The Sunday School of the 2nd Presbyterian church have in preparation a cantata for Christmas entitled "Santa Claus on Time." The music is quite operatic and the cantata above the average generally. The school in addition are to have a general good time with a Christmas tree."

At the risk of overdrawing on the editors good nature the accompanying notice of a "Kuffee Klatch" is inserted, much abbreviated.

"If you haven't been there yet you will be interested in knowing what did go on at the place. The interior of the church has been decorated in a handsome manner and neat and artistic booths have been arranged along the walls of the room. As you enter the building and glance to the right your eyes rest upon a veritable reproduction of a country store, at which are displayed for sale beets, turnips hay, chickens, flour, sugar—in fact one needn't tell you what is there. Everyone is acquainted with what ought to be there, and we need but tell you that it is there. In the next booth you can buy the best of home-made candies. The next booth is the Japanese booth, and the articles displayed here for sale are very beautiful indeed. The art booth which comes next, is beyond description—only a lady's pencil is able to write of it. Then there is a flower room, where much beauty can be seen.

The handsomest and most interesting department is the doll house at one end of the room. It is the center of attraction at all times.

The booths containing fancy articles and paper novelties are also of much interest and very beautiful. Quaint and comforter-like display in another booth.

But the place that probably proves more attractive than any other is the department given over to the cooks. This has a fascination for everyone, especially if he is a little bit hungry. Substantial meals are served by the ladies from 12 to 2 o'clock, and from 6 to 8.

In the evening oysters are served. The bill of fare is a good one and the meals are just as excellent.

In the evening an admission fee of ten cents is charged which is refunded to any one making a 50 cent purchase."

"And Jesus went into the temple of God, and cast out all them that bought and sold in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves," and what if you and I had been there, oh Christian brothers and sisters, ye chosen generation, ye royal priesthood and peculiar people.

The desire of the writer is not to be carping, cynical or over-critical, but to warn those seeking God if haply he may be found, to keep themselves unspotted from the world and from temptations insidious as is written "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge, yea in my house I have found their wickedness, saith the Lord, because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee."

Setting aside all sophistries and cleaving only to the Word of God, there is no question that to the servant of God all these things are at least unprofitable, even where not absolutely forbidden. We are not to do evil that good may come. God will not bless money raised by desecrating his house. Whatever you have to spare give to the Lord direct and not with the secret desire in your heart to have a good time on the strength of it, for the Lord knoweth the secrets of all hearts.

"If a man therefore purge himself from these he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use and prepared unto every good work." "If we suffer we shall also reign with him."—Sacrifice yourself.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Look Up! Discouraged Christians.

Come! look up! discouraged Christians,
Have you quite forgotten him?
Let him wipe away the tear-drops
From your eyes which now are dim.

He is ready now to help you,
For he pities you, dear friend;
And he longs to light your pathway,
And go with you to the end.

Can you think the way is dreary,
While the Savior stands to light
Every dark and gloomy pathway
With his presence, pure and bright?

But if shadows sometimes gather
So you cannot see the light,
He is with you in the shadows,
Though his face is hid from sight.

If his face is thus hid from you,
Don't unclasp his blessed hand;
He is leading you most safely
To your home in Canaan's land.

Then look up, discouraged Christians,
Trust in him, and never fear,
And the clouds so thick around you
Quickly then will disappear.

Are You Ashamed of Jesus, and his Word?

"Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my Words, in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." Mark viii. 38.

The word "whosoever" is of universal application, it includes all, male and female, of every nation, high or low, rich or poor, of every class or condition.

Have you ever stopped, and noted the strange interminglings of vivid contrasts in the life of Jesus? An angel was dispatched from the court of heaven to announce to Mary that she should be the mother of him who shall be called the "Son of the Highest," the future occupant of the throne of David, whose kingdom should have "no end." According to the thinking of the flesh, we would naturally expect that the birth of the Son of the Eternal Jehovah, the coming king of Israel, and monarch of all the earth, would be attended with such a magnificent display of grandeur, pomp, glory and royal magnificence, such as was never before beheld by mortal eyes. But no, he was not, he was born as humblest of the humble, in a stable among the cattle. Yet in this humble place wise men from the East fell down and worshipped this "Son of the Highest," and "opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense and myrrh," as unto a king.

"He was despised and rejected of men," yet honored by heaven. "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." He was the Son of him who has riches greater than mortal man can compute, yet he was poor "the birds have nests, and the foxes have holes, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." All through his earthly life, it was a strange scene of an intermingling of opposite contrasts.

Those who listened to his discourses, said: "Never man spake as this man," "what manner of man is this, why even the sea and the waves obey him."

Without being seen or heard his power is today mighty in the earth. He is supreme over all. He stirs and agitates the minds of men all the way from the king upon his throne, to the humble peasant in his cottage. Some tremble at his name, and fall down and piteously plead for his mercy, to others the sound of that holy name is sweet music in their ears, they shout and sing aloud for joy, while others scoff and jeer. Why should this man who passed from earth near two thousand years ago, and has never been seen since, still so mightily agitate the minds and consciences of men?

Without a word from him other than those found in the sacred volume the pens of men are still busy translating his wonderful words of life into foreign tongues, writing eulogies of his wonderful life, essays, and commentaries upon his words, learned expositions, works of art, sermons and marvelous poems, and songs of praise. Why should this be? Was it ever so with any other illustrious personage?

What means this power eminating from such humble beginnings two thousand years ago, still agitating all nations, and all classes of people high or low, rich and poor, with such tremendous effect, at which some are filled with joyous emotion, others with fear, while others curse. It is a marvelous power and influence that can not be laid aside. As century after century passes away, and generation after generation succeeds each other, Jesus and his Word are ever a live topic, that is uppermost in the minds of the people. His Word while an "old, old story," is still new and fresh, and loses none of its interest by advancing age.

Oh, why is it that mortal men, poor worms of the dust, should be ashamed of such a marvelous and wonderful person, whose Word cuts like a double-edged sword? Are not men vain and proud over the recognition of some fellow-mortal who has attained power and distinction for a brief period?,

Are you ashamed of him who has been appointed "heir of all things," "who being the brightness of (God's) glory, and the express image of his person, and upholdings by the Word of his power?" Are you ashamed of him whom God has seen fit to crown with "glory and honor," and set him over all the works of his hand? Has not God sent forth his unchangeable decree that Jesus shall "put down all rule, and all authority, and power," "and that he hath put all things under his feet." And that "the last enemy" —"death," shall fall before this mighty conquering hero?

Are you not aware that he is coming again, clothed with the power of the great Omnipotent Jehovah, all radient with "the glory of his Father, with the holy angels?" Do you want him to recognize you then? If you do, then you must not be ashamed to confess him and his Word now, under all circumstances and conditions. If you are ashamed to so confess him, remember that Jesus says to you, "of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels."

Are you ashamed of his marvelous words recorded in the sermon on the mount, which even command the admiration of skeptics? Are you ashamed of "the Word of the kingdom," which Jesus himself says is the "seed" which yields fruit, from thirty to one hundred fold, when sown in "good ground?" Are you ashamed of the "Word of God," which Peter says is the "incorruptible seed," "and this is the Word, which by the gospel is preached unto you." Can you join with Paul in saying: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation?" If so, you are not ashamed of Jesus' Word, for that is "the Word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace (the gospel of peace) by Jesus Christ." "That Word I say ye know, which was published throughout Judea, and began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached." If you don't know it, see Mark i. 14, and receive unquestioned proof: "Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." In the next verse Jesus says: "Repent ye, and believe the gospel," "the gospel of the kingdom." Jesus further says in the close of the same book: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel (of the kingdom) to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." This saving gospel cannot possibly be any other than the "gospel of the kingdom," because Jesus himself only preached "one gospel" and it is certain he never authorized his disciples to preach two gospels. "He sent them to preach the kingdom of God," and "they departed and went through the towns preaching the gospel." And Paul says: "If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that you have received, (which was the one gospel of the kingdom,) let him be accursed." Now, to be ashamed of this one gospel which Jesus preached, is to be ashamed of his Word, "the Word of the kingdom," the fruitful seed, which is the message of life, when coupled with obedience, and the observance of the sublime moral precepts attached thereto, which constitutes it a valid living faith.

Do men revile you for confessing your love for Jesus and his words; then remember Jesus' Word: "Blessed are you when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you, falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven." "Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be."

If you love Jesus and his words don't be ashamed to confess that you do, and if at any time you should be placed in circumstances that you may feel it would be a cross to do so, let me beseech you to remember the following words of the blessed Master: "Whosoever therefore (that takes in everybody) shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven."

Jesus knows whether you confess him or not, he cannot be deceived. Would it not make you feel very happy to have a realizing sense that he has confessed your name before the blessed Father who is in heaven? then confess him "before men," that means a public acknowledgement.

Personally I confess that Jesus is my supreme joy. He loved me, and I loved him. I love his sublime moral teachings, and I know that the observance of them is fraught with blessed results. I love the "Word of the kingdom," the fruitful seed, the message of life, for which hope's sake the apostle Paul was bound in chains, which also was the burden of the Master's gospel preaching. I love to think of his coming to reign, which will finally culminate in a glorious age of peace, in which "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." This is my heartfelt testimony, what is yours?

"Onward, then, to battle move!
More than conq'rors ye shall prove;
Though opposed by many a foe,
Christian soldiers! onward go!"

W. H. WILSON.

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 27.

1. And when it had been decided that we sail away to Italia, they committed Paulos and certain other prisoners to a centurion, Joulios by name, of the cohort of Sebastos;

2. And embarking in a vessel of Adramuttenos and intending to sail to the places along the coast of Asia, we set sail, Aristarchos a Makedonian of Thessalonike being along with us.

3. And on the following day we were conducted down to Sidon, and Joulios treating Paulos in a philanthropic manner permitted him to go his way to his friends and obtain their attention.

4. And setting sail from there we coasted below Kupros because the winds were adverse;

5. And having sailed through the deep sea along Kilikia and Pamphulia, we went down to Murra of Lukia,

6. And there the centurion finding an Alexandrian vessel sailing to Italia embarked us in it.

7. And in enough days sailing slowly, and with difficulty over against Knidos, the wind not being with us, we sailed below Krete down along Salmone,

8. And with difficulty getting by it, came into a certain place called Good Harbors, nigh to which was a city, Lasaia.

9. And a sufficient time having elapsed, and the sailing being already dangerous for the reason that the fast was already past,

10. Paulos advised them, saying, Men, I behold that with pride of opinion and much loss not only of the cargo and the ship, but also of our souls is the voyage about to be.

11. But the centurion trusted the pilot and the captain more than the words spoken by Paulos;

12. And as the harbor was not commodious for a winter stay the majority counseled to set sail from there if somehow they might be able to reach and winter in Phoinike, a harbor of Krete looking southeast and to land over opposite.

13. And a south wind blowing gently and thinking to accomplish their purpose, they weighed anchor and sailed still closer to Krete.

14. But not long afterward a tempestuous wind, called Eurokludon (wide-waved) beat down against it (it meaning the island of Krete).

15. And the ship being caught away along with it and unable to bear up against the wind, we gave away to it and were borne along,

16. And running below a little island called Kaus (a burning) we with difficulty got strength enough to become masters of the skiff,

17. And hoisting it up they used helps and undergirded the ship, fearing lest they might fall into the sandy shallows, and lowering the tackling in this wise were they borne along,

18. And being exceedingly tossed by the storm, on the following day they made a casting out, and on the third day with their own hands they tore away the tackling of the vessel;

20. And neither sun nor stars appearing for more days and not a little tempest pressing upon us, all hope at last of saving ourselves was taken away.

21. And there being much want of food, then Paulos taking his stand in their midst said, It was befitting that ye had been persuaded by me and not have sailed away from Krete, and gained this contempt and loss as a consequence.

22. And even now I exhort you to be of good courage. For there will be no casting away of a soul of you, but only of the vessel.

23. For there stood by me this night an angel of the God whose I am and whom I serve for hire,

24. Saying, Fear not Paulos, it behoveth thee to stand before Kaisar, and lo, God hath granted to thee as a favor all those who sail with thee.

25. Therefore be of good courage, men, for I trust God that it will be in this way even as hath been told me.

26. But it behoveth us to fall out on a certain island.

27. And when the fourteenth night had arrived, as we were being borne along through in the Adriatic at midnight the sailors conjectured that they were drawing nigh to some country;

28. And when they had sounded they found twenty fathoms; and when they had made a little distance they sounded again also and found fifteen fathoms;

29. And fearing lest somewhere they should fall out on rough places they cast four anchors out from the stern and prayed for it to become day.

30. And as the sailors were seeking to escape from the vessel and were letting down the skiff into the sea, under the pretext of being about to take anchors out from the prow,

31. Paulos said unto the centurion and the soldiers, Unless these remain in the vessel, ye cannot be saved.

32. Then the soldiers cut off the ropes of the skiff and let it fall away,

33. And until it was about to become day Paulos continued to exhort them all to take sustenance, saying, Today is the fourteenth day that ye are continuing to look expectantly without food, having taken nothing;

34. Therefore I exhort you to partake of sustenance, for this is for your salvation. For a hair will not be lost from the head of one of you.

35. And when he had said this and taken a loaf of bread he thanked God in the presence of them all and brake and began to eat,

36. And they all became encouraged and took nourishment,

37. And we all in the vessel were two hundred and seventy-six souls.

38. And when they had become sated with food they engaged in lightening the vessel, casting out the grain into the sea.

39. And when it had become day they did not recognize the land, but observed a certain bay having a sandy shore, into which they counselled if it were possible to thrust the vessel.

40. And taking away the anchors they let go into the sea, at the same time loosing the rudder-bands, and hoisting the top-sail to the wind they held for the sandy shore.

41. But falling around into a place where two seas met they ran the ship aground, and the prow stuck fast and remained immovable, and the stern was being loosened by the violence of the waves;

42. And it became the counsel of the soldiers that they should kill the prisoners, lest any one should escape by swimming.

43. But the centurion desiring to save Paulos prevented their purpose, and directed those who could swim to first cast themselves overboard and go for the land,

54. And the rest, some on planks and some on anything from the ship, and in this wise it came to pass that all escaped safe to land.

"Adriatic" unwooded—probably referring to the coast-line being unwooded.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"The Everlasting Gospel."

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, Saying with a loud voice, Fear God and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come. And worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." Rev. xiv. 6.

What is the meaning of Gospel? All say it is good news, or glad tidings. Well then, the gospel is good news, that is right. Then every nation, and kindred and tongue and people are to hear the age-lasting gospel.

The next question to settle is, When is this everlasting gospel to be preached? Is it during this gospel age?

This age is the gospel of the kingdom age, to take out a people for his name, see Acts xv. 13–17. Amos ix. 11–12.

Then according to James and Amos first take out a people for his name. Then the residue of men and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called. I said in Rev. xiv. 6, "the everlasting gospel is preached after the Lamb stands on the Mount Zion. The Redeemer must come to Mount Zion, Isa. lix. 20. And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, Isa. xxxiii. 20. Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities, Isa. xxiv. 23. When the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously, Isa. xvi. 1–5. Send ye the Lamb to the ruler of the land from Sela to the wilderness, unto the Mount of the daughter of Zion. The 5th verse tells what will be the result. Isaiah and Revelation both say the Lamb will be on Mount Zion, also David in Psa. xlviii. 1, 2. Beautiful for situation is Mount Zion, the joy of the whole earth, verses 11, 12, 13. We learn that the Redeemer is to come to Mount Zion and that the Redeemer is called the Lamb, and he is seen by John on Mount Zion in vision. He has not come but he will come and will not tarry, Heb. x. 37, and when he takes his position on Mount Zion then the proclamation of the age-lasting gospel will be given to the nations, kindred, tribes and tongues, then will commence the blessing of all the nations of the earth, as God promised Abraham, and every soul that will not hear and obey that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people. That will be the age-lasting gospel proclamation, then, gospel is glad tidings.

Read Luke ii. 10–11, And the angel said unto them, Fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. We learn from this Scripture what the glad tidings were. It was good news to the shepherds and all people, see Isa. xlii. 1–5.

The next thing to settle is this: —Does it necessarily follow that all nations will be saved during the age-lasting gospel?

The Bible would say, no. All that hear the present gospel do not obey. There are now two extremes taught, one is that all mankind will be saved, and the other is, that all that accept the present gospel will be saved, and all that reject the present gospel will also be condemned. If this latter position be true then there can be no ruled element in the kingdom, for the ruled are not taken out in this gospel age, but during the age-lasting gospel. The twelve tribes of Israel are not visited yet to take out that [illegible] and that will be the first-fruits to God and the Lamb. Not one of that number are saints, but the ruled are of Israel. Some say, because they are called the first-fruits that they are saints, but if they will read 1 Cor. xv. they will find that Christ is the first-fruits, then they that are Christ's at his coming. Israelites or the twelve tribes of Israel are still in their scattered condition. They will be gathered back to their land and put under a new covenant, the rebels will be purged out and the loyal ones will be the first-fruits unto God and the Lamb. They will have an opportunity in the age-lasting gospel time to form a character, or reject. All that accept will be saved as the ruled element among the Israelites. Let us hear what Peter says in Acts iii. 19 to closing of chapter. Here Peter tells us that this prophet that Moses spoke of was Christ. "And it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear the prophets shall be saved in his everlasting kingdom?" No, no. "And it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." That is Bible. See also 2 Thess. i. 7–10. The truth lies between the two extremes. God will save all the obedient, all the disobedient he will destroy, and yet God according to his Word, will give all men in the ages to come an opportunity to secure life or reject, so reads my Bible. That is God like. Yet, he has said all the wicked will be destroy, Psa. cxlv. 20, "The Lord preserveth all them that love him but the wicked will he destroy." Psa. civ. 35. "Let the sinner be consumed out of the earth and let the wicked be no more. Bless thou the Lord, O my soul, praise ye the Lord." It is easy to see where the truth is, dear ones. Let us not strengthen the hands of sinners by promising them life, see Jer. xxiii. 14; Eph. xiii. 22, 23. "And strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked ways by promising them life." Rev. vi. 12–17. Here we see the destruction upon the ungodly in Rev. vii. after taking out the one hundred and forty and four thousand.

Then John sees an innumerable company that no man can number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people and tongues. Here is a company that has come under his reign, it is the company named in Psa. ii. 1–12; xxii. 25–31; lxxii. 1–19; xxxvii. 9–10, 22, 28, 34; Isa. lxvii. 1–7.

Dear ones let us all be careful what we teach. Let us be kind to each other and speak the truth in love. Be kind to all. Love as brethren, 1 Pet. iii. 3–8. "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one for another. Be pitiful, be courteous, not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing, knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing."

What good advice Paul gives us in Phil. iv. 8, "Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things." O Father in heaven, may we all try our utmost to live those good instructions out in our lives, is my prayer for Christ's sake.

Dear ones remember me in your prayers.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JAN. 23, 1895.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

THERE being five Wednesdays in this month, our next issue will bear date of Feb. 6, 1895.

A RECENT writer on the condition of the religious world made the remark that "the world needs a little religion, in order to heartily enjoy its worldliness."

WHAT shall our motto be through the year? Shall we adopt Paul's motto? "For me to live is Christ," and like him keep to this exalted decision throughout our natural life? •

JOSEPH COOK of Boston says, "Pillow my head on no guess when I am dying." We do not think there would be any danger of that if he did not pillow his own head on guess-work while alive and well. •

IF our life is hid with Christ in God, it is secure. It is like money placed in a bank that cannot break. "When he who is our life shall appear then shall we also appear with him in glory." May he soon appear to our salvation and our joy. •

IT must be that tribulation in the world is as necessary as peace in Jesus, or it would not have been arranged in that way. Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit given to us. •

DR. ARTHUR T. PIERSON says, "Modern criticism, so far as it has obtained a hold upon the popular mind, is proving destructive of faith, and if the present growth of skepticism continues, in the very pulpits where higher criticism is now preached we shall have Deism preached, as was true in the first half of the last century." •

"We all complain of the shortness of time and yet have much more than we know what to do with. Our lives are spent either in doing little or nothing at all, or in doing little or nothing to the purpose, or in doing little or nothing that we ought to. We are always complaining that our days are few, and acting as though there would be no end to them." •

LEARN from the prophet Ezekiel, chap. ix. 4–6, the value God attaches to compassionate sorrow: "Go through the midst of Jerusalem and set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof." And what else? Why, when the avenger goes forth to execute judgment, and to punish iniquity the command is, "Come not near any man upon whom is the mark, saith the Lord." •

WORRY, to a very great extent, is explained by the neglect of the divine assistance proffered. We are apt to forget God and shift for ourselves when little things are troubling us; but when some great things happen it seems natural to look to God for help. This ought not to be so. These little things induce a souring process, and materially affect our minds, and leave their impress upon our character. If we would always heed the gracious invitation to cast our burdens upon the Lord, worry would become almost a forgotten circumstance. •

G. W. WINCKLER writing in the Jan. No. of "The Faith" says the wrong punctuation and divisions into verses of John xvii. 2, 3, 4, are very misleading. On the authority of an old Douay Edition of the Bible in his possession, he suggests the following arrangement:—

V. 2. "As thou hast given him power over all flesh that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him (and), this is life eternal."

V. 3. "And that they might know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent, I

V. 4. Have glorified thee on the earth, I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." •

...e will, when ask for it and take it patiently, be acceptable with God." When a person has reached that point, the truth has done wonders for him. It is easy enough to utter these words, but not so easy to give a practical exposition—or a demonstration in life. Yes; he who is conscious of living by this rule, has made good progress in the divine life, and acts under a healthful stimulus, and is toned up for other conquests; and realizes day by day that the trial of his faith is more precious than gold, though it be tried with fire that it might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ: whom, having not seen he loves,—in whom (though now he sees him not) yet believing, rejoices with joy unspeakable and full of glory. •

THE Paris, France, "Temps" is stirred up because the United States appears to be meddling with the affairs in the Eastern World, and regards it as a new departure and an abandonment of the Monroe doctrine in virtue of which the United States have heretofore declined to interfere in any war on European questions. This paper says as regards China and Japan there are so many interests affecting the Republic, that it can hardly be wondered at; but no such explanation can hold good as to the despatch of a commissioner to Armenia. The Temps regards this as a grave symptom, fraught with momentous consequences; it means that America has become the seventh great European Power." •

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 12.

In closing our 11th article we referred to Neh. ix. 14 to prove that the law of the sabbath was not known to Israel till they had been some six weeks in the wilderness. The 13th verse says, "Thou comest down also upon Mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments and true laws, good statutes and commandments; and madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and commandest them precepts, statutes and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant." If the law of the sabbath had dated from creation there surely was no need to make it known to the Israelites. One would have to believe there was not in that vast company if a law dating from creation was not known. How could it be obeyed if not known? And who would be expected to know it if Moses did not? The form of words in which the sabbath was announced proves it was not previously known to them: "This is that which the Lord hath said." What hath he said? Ans. "Tomorrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the Lord." If the law had been in force from the creation, is it not singular they did not know on what day it was observed from creation until that time? And do not the accompanying instructions about baking their bread and laying up for what remaineth (Ex. xvi. 23) prove most conclusively that hitherto they had not done so, and therefore observed no sabbath? And do not the words of the 26th verse, "Six days ye shall gather it, but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none" prove that up to that time they had kept no sabbath day and yet no offence had been committed? So it seems to us.

ONE GOD-FEARING MAN

It is interesting to note that sabbatarians often refer to the 4th of Deuteronomy respecting the ten commandments instead of to the original account of their delivery in the 20th of Exodus. Can this be because the 4th of Deut. does not give the reason why some of the law was originally spoken

BY GOD HIMSELF,

but not all of it, while in Exodus it is explained that it was solely on account of the timidity of the Hebrews that God spared them the terror of further listening to his voice? It is also worthy of note that they are very neglectful of Ezekiel xx. 12, where God says, "I gave them (the Israelites) my sabbaths to be a sign between me and them." If he had given it to the whole race at creation, the Israelites were born and the record in the 9th of Nehemiah that God came down upon ...[illegible] had made the holy sabbath known to them is not true. Our readers can take their choice.

UNDER THAT LAW,

But a correspondent writes: "The law of the sabbath has existed from creation, and you know it." He must excuse us; but we do not know it. We have no means of knowing it. If there be any testimony to prove that it was ever given before God came down and made it known to Israel; or that it was ever given to, or kept by any other people we have never found it. Then why does he make such an assertion? Does he know what he says we know? He does not. He only thinks he knows. And if called upon for proof of what he thinks he knows he would point to Gen. ii. 2 where it says, "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made; and God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made."

UPON MOUNT SINAI

IT IS TRUE GOD RESTED;

it is true that he blessed and sanctified the seventh day because he rested. To all eternity this will be true. But what of it? Where is there any reference to man? Where is man commanded to observe it as a rest? Does the writer who says we know the sabbath has existed from creation, and deliberately accuses us of writing against what we know to be true—does he first have to ASSUME that to observe it, and then supposing himself to be a first rate assumer, at once proclaim it as God's truth? It looks that way; and our advice to all our readers is "Prove all things," take no man's assumptions or assertions,—hold them down to the law and the testimony and it will stop much of the gospel supplementing.

Sabbath and rest being the same, then, it was Jehovah's rest, and not man's, that we read of in the second chapter of Genesis.

We want our readers to notice that in a series of six consecutive days God created and made all things referred to by the inspired penman. Then we invite attention to another series of six days. On the first of the six days every man gathered an omer of manna, or rather an omer was gathered for every soul (Ex. xvi. 16) this was continued until the sixth day when they gathered twice as much—to their great astonishment—two omers for one man, and all the rulers of the congregation

CAME AND TOLD MOSES,

and he explained to them,—"This is that which the Lord hath said, 'Tomorrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the Lord'.....Six days ye shall gather it, but on the seventh day which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none." We could not have plainer testimony that they knew nothing of any sabbath, nor plainer proof that the first sabbath ever observed was the seventh day from the giving of the manna, not the seventh day of the week dating back to creation. Evidently "the Jewish week was planned on the model of the creation period,— and one day's rest. There is no testimony—not a particle to show that it was thus instituted or heard of until the Jews were six weeks in the wilderness. It is pure assumption to say the law of the sabbath existed from creation. All the evidence goes to show that the sabbath was an unheard-of thing before it was made known to Israel at Sinai. There being no mention of it or when for the second time the populating of the earth devolved upon one family, (Noah's) what folly it is to claim for truth, what is not revealed, but what is positively denied by the Scriptures. Moses in Deut. v. 2, 3 says, "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day. The Lord talked with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire." It was not made with those who were dead, but those alive, and no others. We now commend to our readers the four ...[illegible] reasons for giving his ...[illegible]

SIX DAY'S WORK,

IN ANTEDILUVIAN TIMES,

FACE TO FACE

3. To prove whether they would walk in God's law or not. Ex. xvi. 4, 5.

2. As a sign between God and Israel, Ex. xxxi. 12, 13; xx. 10-12.

3. "Because in six days the Lord made heaven and earth....and rested the seventh day. Ex. xx. 11.

4. Deut. v. 15 shows that it was given as a memorial of their deliverance from Egypt. Three of these four reasons could not apply to Gentiles.

In our next we expect to prove that sabbatarians keep a law of their own enactment,—not the law of God. We are set for the defence of the gospel. •

The Church of England.

The drift of things religious in England is seen by what the Daily News correspondent in Italy wrote, Nov. 12 last. He said:—"It is positively asserted here that a commission of dignitaries of the Anglican church will shortly arrive in Rome to confer with the Pope on a return to religious unity. Such an event occurring immediately after the meetings concerning the Oriental church, is considered of the highest importance."

Cardinal Vaughan speaking of the changes that have come over the English church, says, "The real presence, the sacrifice of the mass offered for the living and the dead—sometimes in Latin—not unfrequent reservation of the Sacrament, regular auricular confession, extreme unction, purgatory, prayers for the dead, devotion to Our Lady, to her immaculate conception, the use of the rosary, and the invocation of saints are doctrines taught and accepted with a growing desire and relish for them in the church of England. A celebate clergy, the institution of monks and nuns under vows, retreats for the clergy, missions for the people, fasting and other penitential exercises, candles, lamps, incense, crucifixes, images of the Blessed Virgin and the saints held in honor, stations of the cross, cassocks, collas, Roman collars, birettas, copes, dalmatics, vestments, mitres, croziers, the adoption of an ornate Catholic ritual, and now recently an elaborate display of the whole ceremonial of the Catholic Pontifical—all this—says the Cardinal—speaks of a change, and a movement towards the church which would have appeared absolutely incredible at the beginning of the century."

From another publication we see that the Church of England recognize the ordination of the Catholic Priesthood, while the ordination of Protestant Dissenters is not recognized at all. We are evidently on the eve of mighty changes in the religious, as well as political world. Only those whose faith rests upon the immutable covenants will be able to withstand the shock. Their Father is at the helm, and will guide them safely home. •

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Eternal City.

"He looked for a city which hath foundations whose Builder and Maker is God." Heb. xi. 10.

History has given us the record of many great and populous cities, filled with a surging mass of human beings bustling to and fro, striving for a name and wealth, as intently as those of modern cities. One by one they have disappeared, their place taken by others, and the busy world has marched on with its changing and ever changing scenes. We have sat in the quiet twilight thinking of the myriads who have lived and died in the past. We see the mighty universe spread out before us, men, women, children, pressing towards the awful vortex in the distance. One by one, as the clocks tick, they fall into the valley of the shadow of death and the place thereof knows them no more. We see kings and princes, peasant and pauper, journeying on for a short, short time, then they confront the black abyss, and disappear. Cities rise in grandeur, and are brought low, often by human pride and passion. Look away in the East yonder—do you see mighty Nineveh—"the City of Streets" to whom the Jewish nation paid tribute, a city of supreme magnificence and opulence. But look at her graven and molten images (Nahum, xvi. 14) with which she led away God's nation, by "the multitude of the whoredoms, she was mistress of witchcrafts." Her sins reached to heaven, and the fiat of the Almighty went forth. "Woe to the bloody city, it is full of lies and robbery." Listen to her doom in prophetic vision. "She is empty and void and waste, the heart melteth, and the knees unite together and much pain is in all loins." "The horseman lifteth up both the bright sword and glittering spear, and there is a multitude of slain and a great number of carcasses and none end of corpses. And it shall come to pass all they that look upon thee shall flee from thee and say, Nineveh is laid waste, who shall bemoan her." Look at her as she has been for ages, where are her mighty captains, her merchants, in number as the stars of heaven, her surging idolatrous population. Ask of the wild animals that tread over her ruins, the bats and bitterns that fly over her desolations.

"Mighty Babylon" once raised her head to the heavens, the people used by God as his instrument to punish his transgressing nation and take them captive for 70 years. What a wonderful city she was, with "mighty walls, and military greatness, of princely pomp and commercial importance and prosperity." She was called "the Lady of Kingdoms." Is. xlvii. 5. She dwelt "upon many waters, abundant in treasures" (Jer. li. 13), but her heart was lifted up, her pride was intolerable. "Is not this great Babylon that I have built.....by the might of power, and for the honor of my majesty (Dan. iv. 30) said one of her rulers (Nebuchadnezzar). No recognition of the Great God and Ruler by whose permission he had led away captive to Babylon the Jewish nation. "I shall be a lady for ever," (Is. xlvii. 7) said she. But God had purposed otherwise, and her overthrow was as sure as the rising of the morning sun. The prophets told of the coming retribution, but they heeded them not. Babylon oppressed and led astray God's nation to their dumb idols. Jeremiah (C. li. 24-25) hears their doom by spirit revelation. I will render unto Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea, all their evil which they have done in Zion. Behold I am against thee, O destroying mountain, saith the Lord. I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks. And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner but thou shalt be desolate for ever, saith the Lord.

How literally has every word been fulfilled—where are her mighty palaces, her broad walls, her pomp, and glory? Gone, gone for ever. "Babylon is fallen, is fallen," and all her graven images he hath broken. Is. xxi. 9.

Need we point to other prosperous and populous cities, Damascus, Tyre, Sidon, Jerusalem, or the once great nations, Egypt, Rome, Persia.—How they have fallen, how unstable, and fleeting, meteors flashing on the horizon for a time then vanishing into space, bubbles floating in symetrical beauty and grandeur, bursting, and the place thereof knowing them no more. "Abraham looked for a city which had foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God." Has that wonderful city yet flourished? Has the Great Eternal yet established the city whose foundations are as durable and stable as the everlasting hills? We have not heard of it. Yet that "great cloud of witnesses" (Heb. xi.) all died in faith, of seeing it, and sharing in its glories. What city is it on which their anxious eyes were concentrated? Did the Spirit point forward to the "great and mighty London" of today, to New York, or the great continental centers? No, no, but to "Jerusalem, the city of the Great King." By faith they have already come to it. Heb. xii. 22. "Ye are come unto Mount Zion, unto the city of the living God, the heavenly (heaven like Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, etc.

Jerusalem, Jerusalem, we hear some say. We have been taught to look to heaven, as the "city having foundations," we know of no future for Jerusalem in Palestine, long trodden under foot by the desolating Turk. We have believed that the river Jordan represented death, which now divides us from the promised land (heaven), like it did literally when the Children of Israel were about to enter it under Joshua, but to think that the down trodden capital of Palestine should be the "city," the old worthies looked for, has never entered our heads. Yes friends, we "have been in the same boat," we have been taught and believed the same things, but the study of God's Word, and the knowledge that he intends to establish a kingdom on earth, has opened our eyes. We have read of the King who is coming. We have read the name, and of the situation of the capital he has chosen, of the work he is to perform when he arrives, of his associates and companions, of the grand realities that will be ushered in with his advent. And Oh, my friends, when we sit down and contemplate "the glories soon to be revealed" on this dark benighted earth, and compare them with shadowy belief of the past we are lost in admiration, and tremble lest we should not be permitted to share in these glories, lest we should hear the judge pronounce the awful word "depart."

But you reasonably ask for proof of what we assert. Well the Bible is full of it from Genesis to Revelation. It shows a vast programme one Great Eternal has been developing down the ages, which will eventuate in Christ coming to the earth in the near future, and reigning as universal King, with the city Jerusalem as the metropolis of the world. Isaiah spake of this time (lxvi. 18-19). "Behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy." They shall call thee "The City of the Lord." I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations. xlix. 14-15. Zechariah sees in prophetic vision the joyful time (xi. 6), and Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem. "Yea many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord in Jerusalem." "All families of the earth shall go up to Jerusalem to worship the King." xiv. 17.

When he reigns there will be peace, age lasting peace. Ps. xlvi. 9. "He maketh wars to cease to the end of the earth." Is. ii. 4. "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Ps. lxxvii. 7. "There shall be abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth."

This glorious city will be stable, immovable, "having foundations" laid by the everlasting God. From it shall be poured forth to the nations of the earth, copious streams of peace and joy, goodwill and blessing. Those who live in the city will be his favored ones. His associates will be the faithful of all ages, who will be "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump," and they will have "power (authority) over the nations" and reign with Christ in his kingdom.

May it be yours and mine to share in the glories soon to be revealed, and to see the King in his beauty when he sits upon his promised throne, and the city now lying in the dust, shall be raised and rebuilt, "the joy of the whole earth."—James Wells, in Glad Tidings.

Cheerful news for the Jews.

A telegram from St. Petersburg states: "By a ukase of the late Emperor Alexander III., a large number of Jews was under orders to quit the Crimea on October 20th last. Many who could not dispose of their business and possessions did not obey the order, and during the last days of the late Emperor his full instructions were not carried out. Thus many Jews remained in the various towns and villages where they had been living. On the conclusion of the marriage festivities the community petitioned the new Czar to allow them to remain in their homes till they could comply with the command. The Czar replied by telegram: "The Jews of the Crimea can stay there as long as they are willing to stop."

Just a week after Alexander III. died, Jews residing in Yalta were also to have been expelled from their homes and driven away to the Pale of Settlement, which has been well described as "the Russian analogue of the Black Hole of Calcutta." Under the circumstances the law was not immediately enforced. This afforded the Jews an opportunity of trying to bring their case before the new sovereign. They journeyed to Livadia and persuaded a well-known minister of religion to secure for them admission to the Audience Chamber of Nicholas II. The minister presented their petition, to which the Czar replied: "The Jews of Yalta will be allowed to reside there in peace."

Another very interesting item of intelligence comes from our mission station, Wilna, where George Friedman and Dr. Frohwein, our devoted missionaries, have been laboring successfully for years, and who are still doing a grand work among the Russian Jews. It is stated by the Yackhod that the authorities in Wilna have "recently received from the minister of the Interior a proposal to stop the expulsion of Jews from the fifty verst zone of the frontier, mentioning therein also another suggestion with regard to cancelling the law of the fifty verst zone altogether. This is most important news for the Russian Jews, and not unlikely to happen under the new reign of the Emperor Nicholas II."—Jewish Missionary Herald.

Mr. Thomas H. Wells of St. Louis owns a Martin Luther Bible which was printed in 1594. It is an octavo volume, three inches thick, of ordinary book size, and has been rebound in pig-skin with buff finish. It is a London print, in the type characteristic of the sixteenth century, and is of the very rare edition of Martin Luther's first translation. It is in a fine state of preservation.

A logical connection exists in the statement that "there are more saloons, more criminals and more insane in California than in any other state in proportion to population. There are 14,000 saloons, one to every 30 of the population, and one saloon to every 19 voters; also 2,700 criminals in the two State prisons, and 4,700 insane in the five state asylums."

The rough seas make the good sailor; and nothing but battles can produce veterans fit for the fiercest fights. An untried man is but half a man. His strength has never been tested. His powers are unrevealed. Only in the deep waters can we know the strong swimmer's skill. Only the fury of the hurricane can show the might of the eagle's wing.

Israel has always in God's purpose stood first and been the channel through which God has blessed the other nations of the earth; and when the Gospel dispensation was instituted it began with individual Jewish believers—the apostles and all the first evangelists were Jews.

Poetry.

Who are You Serving?

Let not pleasure guide your footsteps.
Rather Brother, suffer pain.
No good comes from serving pleasure
Death is her eternal gain.

You can never serve two masters.
One you'll love the other hate.
Only serve the God of heaven,
For his kingdom pay and wait.

Christ is coming, are you ready?
Are your lamps all trimmed and bright?
Is there oil in all your vessels?
Should the Savior come tonight?

Are you looking for his coming?
Are your garments pure and white?
Are you striving for the kingdom?
Are you walking in the light?

A Kingdom of Priests.

"Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel." Exodus xix. 5, 6.

This was all conditional, if they obeyed the Lord's voice and kept the covenant they were to be made a kingdom of priests and a holy nation. Thus we see, they were a kingdom of priests in prospect, all depending on their obedience. The time came when they were put to the final test in so far as that covenant was concerned. The appointed heir to the throne stood in their midst and said, "the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand. Repent and believe the gospel." But they did not obey the Lord's voice, for they did not repent nor did they believe the good news. They knew not the days of their visitation. Time passed and they did not obtain that which they sought after, the kingdom. But they were to be made a kingdom of priests after the order of Aaron and this order was typical of a higher order. Before Jesus made the offer of the kingdom to them he had been anointed after the higher order. Their covenant was a national covenant and it was the officials of the nation that killed Jesus, hence their covenant ended, and now if the kingdom is established it must be upon the basis of the royal order. Kings and priests, a kingdom of royal priests. Aaron was washed in water officially also then anointed with olive oil, then entered upon the appointed service. Jesus was washed in water, then anointed with the Holy Spirit, and clothed with official power and entered upon the official service. Aaron's sons were washed in water, officially clothed and anointed with olive oil, then entered upon their appointed service. The disciples of Jesus were washed in water then anointed with the Holy Spirit and clothed with official power. The anointing of Aaron and the priests of the continued service was to be a perpetual anointing throughout their generations.

Question:—Was the anointing of the royal order to be a perpetual anointing throughout their generations, or until the royal house of Jesus is made up, or, will some be made kings and priests unto God and unto Christ who are not anointed with the Holy Spirit, and with power?

Why not consider these things in the love of the truth? We are not raising questions as to who will be finally saved, but who will be kings and priests and reign with Christ the thousand years?

Who will give us light by answering the above questions?

Tobacco Cure.

Editor Restitution:

As I have been importuned several times since I stopped the use of tobacco, to promulgate the easiest and best way for a bond-servant to stop the use of this most loved, most adored of all weeds.

Now the most sure cure is this,—buy no more of the stuff, and you will find by experience that your neighbor will soon get tired of you as a beggar.

We can say with all candor that this plan will effect a cure so long as you keep the money in your pocket, or if you choose to put your money in circulation, buy a few tracts or papers and send them to the poor, you will smell better and feel better in the end.

I used the vile stuff for twenty years and all the benefit I ever got from it was a parched tongue and yellow teeth, so I thought that God did not intend for me to destroy his handiwork. I also thought if I was to be worthy to be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, that it would be out of order to have tobacco on my person. I also thought if I got into that city with the streets of gold that it would not look nice to see a tobacco cud lying on such metal. I also thought that if I died with the taste of the weed in my mouth I was likely to wake with the same taste, as the thoughts generally start at the point where they cease. So I thought that my house from heaven would not exactly fit a tobacco house, and taking all into consideration I thought I had better get as clean as I could in this age for fear I would not get a chance in the world to come. If a man cannot control his passions do you suppose any trust will be committed to him in the age to come? Nay, verily, none except the overcomers are chosen to be partakers of divine nature at the resurrection. I have made lots of one legged excuses about quitting but the sure way is to—stop.

Please tell Brother Eychaner that I threw away the pipe this time and never looked to see where it lit.

Brethren let us cleanse ourselves before it is too late. I think if the King in his beauty would come now you would not find him using tobacco, and as we are to be like him we had better get like him at once.

Your brother in hope of soon seeing the King in his beauty.

Little Sunbeam.

Little sunbeam woke one morn,
Peeped from out the sky.—
Whispered, "There are hearts forlorn,
Earthward I must fly.
Hopeless eyes that sorrow know
Gladden where I shine:
Weary-burdened hearts below
Need this light of mine.

Little sunbeam hurried not,
Golden winged it flew;
Not one kindness it forgot
On its mission true.
Brook and valley smiled to see,
Blade and leaf rejoiced,
And the birds, in melody,
All their gladness voiced.

Little sunbeam softly crept
Into house of gloom;
Kissed the weary eyes that wept,
Made the dark to bloom;
Woke the heart to grateful prayer,
Drove the frown from sight;
Carried gladness everywhere
With its precious light.

Little sunbeam could not stay—
Sought its home afar.
While, with faint and pearly ray,
Came the twilight star.
Something whispered in my heart,
'Mid the dusk and dew,
"Have you done your daily part,
Like a sunbeam true?"

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 3.

REVIEW LESSON.

Why did you not tell us about Joseph's dreams?

Because I am writing this story in the hope that you will become interested in studying the Bible for yourselves. I expect you to read it chapter by chapter as we go along. A wonderful world will open before you if you are careful painstaking students. Look into your Bible Dictionary as you read, spread out your maps, locate places, study ancient history.

Shall we go back to the dreams? Gen. xxxvii. 5. Perhaps a review might refresh your memories,—let us see. You read the chapter? Well you know then, that Joseph was tending sheep with his half-brothers, Dan, Naphtali, Gad and Asher; the sons of Bilha and Zilpah.

Do you remember that he brought to his father "their evil report?" What does it mean? The Bible does not tell us, but one of the Hebrew words means "a report of infamy," "scandalous information." The Chaldee language says, "their evil accusation."

Bush says, the Hebrew word rendered "evil," added to the other words seems to convey the idea of some enormous act of wickedness. Joseph had been accused, the charge made against him was false.

What could it have been? Perhaps that he was plotting to reach the first and highest place in the family.

Israel loved Joseph more than all his sons, it would be easy to persuade him to give the beloved one the preference in the final settlement of the estate.

But Joseph had no such thoughts. It was wicked in his brothers to say such a thing.

But what about the coat of many colors?

It showed plainly the preference of the father for the first-born son of Rachel. The Hebrew says it was a "coat of pieces," the Chaldee, "a tunic of strips or shreds," Greek, "a parti-colored or variegated coat." Latin Vulgate, "an embroidered coat" while the Syriac, calls it "a fringed tunic."

Such a phrase occurs only once in the Bible, 2 Sam. xiii. 18. Tamar, the daughter of David wore a garment of "pieces," or of divers colors. Unmarried daughters of kings always wore such robes. The prey taken from Sisera, a Canaanitish captain, was "needle-work of divers colors of needle-work on both sides" implying that garments richly embroidered, were worn by the people of the East. You will find a beautiful passage in Psa. xlv. 13, 14. It refers to the saved ones. The church—"the kings daughter, is all glorious within, (pure of heart) her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the King in raiment of needlework." What a lovely dress! Those whom Jesus saves, will wear such robes when they enter "with gladness and rejoicing" into the palace of God's dear Son.

Do you want to be among the redeemed ones? Keep your hearts pure.

Do you remember "the goodly raiment" that was put upon Jacob, when he went to his father to receive the birthright blessing?

The birthright Son, must have a birthright dress,—something to show his rank, and precedence in the family. Jacob may have intended the "coat of many colors" for a birthright robe. This would explain the hatred of his brethren They would say, "Reuben is the eldest, it belongs to him, he shall not be robbed of his rights."

You thought the robe of the saved ones, was white? So it is. The ground-work of Joseph's tunic may have been white, ornamented, or bordered with a frieze of colored pieces. Joseph's coat was dipped in the blood of a kid; the robes spoken in Rev. vii. 14, are "washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

God's first-born ones have a peculiar or distinguishing dress. God gives it just as Jacob gave the coat to his son. It is the robe of righteousness, and we can get it only through the merits of the atoning Savior. No one outside of Christ,—no one who has not had Christ's name named upon him can wear it.

In the very next verse, after Joseph has received the coat, it says, "And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they hated him and could not speak peaceably unto him." They hated him because of this mark of preference, and were all the better prepared to understand the drift of his dreams.

Do you remember how the brethren of Jesus,—of his own tribe Judah, hated him?

But we only have a little more time and space, we must go on.

Joseph thought he was out in the fields as he dreamed. He and his brothers were bringing sheaves, when lo! his sheaf arose and stood upright, and their sheaves stood round about making obeisance to his sheaf.

Then he dreamed another dream,—and there was the sun, the moon and the stars making obeisance to him!

He told the dreams at first to his brethren and then to all the family.

How angry his brothers were? "Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou have dominion over us?" they asked.

His father rebuked him questioning if he and all his family would indeed bow down at Joseph's feet? But he did not forget the dreams,—"and we will not have this man to reign over us,"—that is what men say about Jesus. There are so many things in the life of Joseph that are like the things in the life of Jesus; we must take note of them all as we go along.

A GIFT.

Paul has written, that "the wages of sin is death: but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi. 23. All of the human family have forfeited the life which they now possess by continual disobedience to the laws of God, and in consequence of their sin (which is "the transgression of the law"—1 John iii. 4), are doomed to their original condition—dust of the earth. To whomsoever we yield ourselves servants to obey, his servants we are; and servants always expect, and should always receive wages. Sin, the great master of the human race, has brought all into subjection to itself, and Paul says, the wages of sin—is death. Sooner or later it must come, and we must receive the wages to which as servants of sin we are entitled. The history of this fatal service is summed up by Paul in Rom. v. 12, where he says, "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Generation after generation has passed into the grave, and the present generation will in a few years be gathered to sleep the last long sleep with their ancestors. But God has a purpose with the earth, which requires that it should be inhabited by a race who are freed from the effects of sin, and on whom death can have no power. "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord" (Numbers xiv. 21); and the prophet Habakkuk (chap. ii. 14) declares that "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." The creatures who are to be the means of flooding the earth with God's glory are the sons of Adam, who, although sentenced to death on account of their sin, have a glorious offer of redemption from the grave. Seeing that they were utterly helpless and undone, that we could not purchase our release from the hand of death, God himself pitied us, and his own wisdom planned the means of redemption, and himself provided the sacrifice which was needed to enable us to obtain remission of our sins. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16. That well-beloved Son, Jesus, by obedience to his Father's will, and by the sacrifice of his life, has become the means, and the only means of our obtaining salvation. That which is offered to us as a gift from our Creator is life—everlasting life. We cannot purchase this which God offers; we can never merit it by our own works; it is God's gift, and as a gift we must accept it. Faith in what Christ has done for us, and obedience to his command to be baptized in water, is what God requires of us, to partake of his gift. We invite you to consider this matter, and to think what great things God has done in order that mankind may be released from the grave; think at what a cost the sacrifice was made for us to receive the remission of sins. Then remember that your maker offers you everlasting life as his free gift, by faith in his Son Jesus—will you accept it?—W. A. Brewster.

God Chooseth.

There are men who have strong and laudable desires to serve the Lord, and who fervently pray for his glory; but he does not always seem to hear their prayers. There are various reasons for this. They are not purged from their sins; they are not vessels unto honor, fitted for the Master's use; and so he sets them aside as not adapted to his work. Sometimes men wish to do great things, but find themselves straitened, hindered, limited and circumscribed; sometimes they are reserved for still greater work; in other cases they are rejected of the Lord for reasons well known to him.

Moses longed to lead Israel into Canaan, but he was not permitted to enter the promised land. So David would gladly have built the temple at Jerusalem, but the Lord would not accept that service at his hands. Paul was forbidden by the holy Spirit to preach the gospel in Asia, and though he essayed to go into Bithynia, the Spirit suffered him not. In like manner we may have desires and aspirations for usefulness which will never be gratified. The Lord may see that we could not bear the exultation and the honor which we seek. He knows far better than we do what is for our good, and so he would have us rest contented in his providence, not idle, but diligent; not careless, but watchful; not indifferent, but full of intense, earnest longing to do the will of God; yet patient under restraint, and content to be neglected and forgotten, remembering that "they also serve who only stand and wait," and the Lord in his own well-chosen hour can lead us forth to fulfil his purposes of grace.

David's Throne.

According to the promise made by God unto the Israelitish fathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, he sent his servant Moses to lead his people out of the land of Egypt to the land of promise. Moses, because of disobedience, died in the wilderness, and was not permitted to enter the Holy Land. But Joshua the son of Moses, by the command of God, completed the task that Moses began. He led them into their land, and divided it unto them by lots, and there they did "prosper into a kingdom." Ezekiel xvi. 13. Rejecting God as their king, they had given to them for a king, Saul the son of Kish. But because of his unfaithfulness, God gave the kingdom to David the son of Jesse, a man after his own heart, and to him he promised "thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee; thy throne shall be established for ever." 2 Sam. vii. 16.

Just before his decease we are told, "Now these be the last words of David. David, the son of Jesse, said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet Psalmist of Israel said, the Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, he that ruleth over man must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain." 2 Sam. xxii. 1 to 4.

Again, we have it written that God said: "I have made a covenant with my chosen. I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. . . . Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me. I shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven." Psalm lxxxix. 3-4-35-37.

The prophet Isaiah says: Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with justice henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this." Isaiah ix. 6-7.

The descendants of David sat upon his throne for many generations. To the last one (Zedekiah) God said, "Thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, Thus saith the Lord God. Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ezekiel xxi. 25-27.

It is contended that the promise made by God to King David, in relation to his throne in the passages quoted, was fulfilled in the person of Solomon, but the last two show unmistakably that it was not so. The promise in Isaiah's prophecy was given some centuries after Solomon had passed to the dust; and the one contained in Ezekiel speaks of the overturning of David's throne until the coming of the one to whom it belongs. Hence we must look to another than Solomon to fulfil the promise.

Turning to the New Testament, we find the angel Gabriel announcing the birth of Jesus to his mother Mary, and saying, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32-33. Surely this looks like one who is to fulfil the promise. Again we read, "Therefore (David) being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." Acts ii. 30.

After such evidence as this one would think it scarcely possible that anyone would contend that the promise was fulfilled in Solomon. Yet, strange to say, the majority of those who profess to follow Christ do so. No doubt the reason in many instances is a lack of knowledge of what is written in the Scriptures; while in other instances pre-conceived notions blind the eyes to the truth. Nevertheless this promise is yea and amen in Christ Jesus (as are all the other promises of God,) and in due time the Redeemer shall come out of Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob, building again the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, and raising again the ruins thereof. Of him it is written, "He shall Judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment.....He shall judge the poor of the people; he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor..... he shall come down like rain upon the mown grass, as showers that water the earth" lxxii. 2-4-6. How like these words are the prophetic utterances of the sweet psalmist of Israel, "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun ariseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain." Has not God declared that he will set his king upon his holy hill of Zion, and command him to ask of him, and he will give him the nations for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession? Hence it is written of him when he is enthroned in Zion in fulfillment of the promise made unto his father David that "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." And that "They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him."—P. A. Hutchinson.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

OBITUARY.

William Samples fell asleep in death from the effects of Lagrippe, at Walnut, Kan. at the ripe old age of 72 years, 3 months and 18 days, Jan. 9, 1895.

"Uncle Billy" as all his neighbors call him was born in the State of Kentucky, A. D. 1822, September 27th. From there he moved to Ill. and in that state he enlisted in the war as a Union soldier. At the close of the war with his family he moved to Neosho Co. Kan. In 1872 he along with his wife, daughter, Bro. Geo. Smith and wife, were baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ. There are only two of this number left to fight the battle of life. The first fell under the power of death was Brother Samples daughter, then about one year ago Bro. Smith died, and now Brother Samples is the victim. All these proved true unto death.

Brother Samples leaves an aged wife, four daughters, and two sons.

I spoke from the text of his choice, 2 Tim. iv. 6, 7, 8, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only but to all them that love his appearing." What a text. O that I could only be faithful and be ready to say the same thing.

One man said of Brother Samples, "We have lost the best man in our county," and the concourse of people there with his old gray-headed comrades at the funeral spoke volumes to me.

May we all so live that whether we sleep or whether we wake when Jesus comes that we will be among the number that will not be left out is my prayer.

...brief mention of this precious work:

We thought perhaps some would like to hear from the Church of God at Argos, Ind. We have preaching over two Sundays in each month, and sometimes more than that. We have prayer or social meeting every Thursday evening unless there is preaching. Part of the time we have prayer and social meeting on Sunday evening. We had nine additions to our church last year. On Christmas evening Brother Woodward from Michigan commenced a meeting here and continued over two weeks closing on Tuesday evening the 8th of Jan. 1895. He preached in all 17 able discourses to large and attentive audiences, which resulted in nine persons putting on Christ in baptism. We feel encouraged to see so many letters in THE RESTITUTION from those that look for the soon coming kingdom and reign of our dear Savior. Let us all do what we can to get new subscribers for the paper and spread the good news of the soon coming kingdom in every way that we can, for the prophecies are fulfilling very fast, and the blessed Savior will soon come to reign in his glorious and everlasting kingdom.

Yours in the blessed hope.

Dear Restitution:

I see that my time has expired, and as I cannot think of doing without your welcome visits, I send $1.50 for another year. Oh how I long for that time to come when righteousness shall cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea, where all will beat peace with their neighbor, when the law shall go forth from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

May we be so happy as to have a share in that glorious time.

J. B. LENT

Dear Restitution:

I have spent a few days with the earnest body in the faith near Blair, Nebraska, where Brother Altmus Adams has done evangelist labors during limited periods for a number of years. He and Brother J. T. Prime are holding daily services there at the present time. The interest is good, those out of Christ are found to gain some knowledge of the Word of life, while "the body" is edified and strengthened. It was my privilege and pleasure to hold forth portions of glorious testimony to the loving sister and brother-hood on Saturday evening and Sunday morning. I was highly gratified by the interest shown and was much benefitted by the 'reaction' which was reflected upon myself. May God give the increase.

Never before have I been so fully impressed with the purity of brotherly and sisterly love as I was by its manifestation here. They were indeed kindly affectioned one to another and to us, rejoicing in hope, laboring diligently in the vineyard. The young sisters are doing noble service, and are ably assisted by several young brethren, who have purity and heavenly love prominently written upon their foreheads.

Dear Brother Athen has patiently borne the pains of sickness for a long time and seems now to be gradually failing. He and Sister Athen have lived a life full of faith, hope and love, ever ministering unto the needy. Without children of their own they have cared for twenty-five, mostly orphans, for periods of from one year to nearly twenty, and for many others for a shorter time. Their present satisfaction is but the earnest of the future great reward.

Mercy, love, and peace be multiplied unto the holy brotherhood.

J. G. HAUPT.

Bro. Underwood:

As the year '94 is nearly gone I thought I would write something for THE RESTITUTION. I have been a reader of it for many years, when Brother Newman was editor in the state of N. Y., a long time before the great Chicago fire. I am all alone so far as our faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the restitution of Israel.

I have been on this coast since 1858, and have tried to get some one of our faith to come this way [illegible] the good news of the coming kingdom, but have not succeeded yet. I hope that Bro. Skeels of Isquith will correspond with me about evangelistic work. I want to thank the writers for the paper for their wonderful instruction that has been given from time to time, on the nature of man, kingdom of God, saints inheritance, and kindred doctrines. What a mine of instruction I have received from those good brethren who have gone down to the dark and silent grave, there to await the return of the Master to awake the sleeping ones. Oh how my heart has been made glad by reading the articles written by Brothers Magruder, Simons, Chaplin and others. I often think of those good old writers that have passed away. But what can I say for THE RESTITUTION now with such a staff as Brothers B. Wilson, W. B. Wilson, M. Joblin, Wiley Jones, A. J. Eychaner, J. F. Wagoner, J. W. Niles, J. S. Hatch and many others that I cannot now call to mind with whose correspondence who would not want to take the paper, only $1.50 a year. I intend to take it as long as I can get the money to pay for it.

If any of the brethren wish to enquire of me about the climate, soil, agricultural products, etc., I will answer their letters to the best of my ability. Address me at Mt. Vernon, Oregon.

CHARLES BELSHAW.

Dear Restitution:

To the household of the faith of the gospel of the kingdom of God, Greeting.

I want to say to you that our faith in the promises are as strong as ever. I have taken our beloved paper for 27 years and cannot think of doing without it. I wish to say that Brother Joblin, W. H. Wilson and B Wilson's views are identical with mine on all the articles written by them in our paper for the last year. May God bless all the faithful ones and may their efforts not be in vain in the work of our Master, is my prayer. On account of the drouth here we cannot do as much as we would like to do for the cause. May we meet in the kingdom soon to be set up under the whole heavens.

G. W. SMITH.

Dear brothers and sisters:

A word once more from an aged and feeble pilgrim. I am still plodding along through this desert of sin and foolishness, on my way to the promised land, where the hills, valleys and fountains are ready to give forth milk and honey as of yore, sufficient to supply the longing desire of the returning prodigal, and still be enough left for the elder brother who was mad because his father made a feast for the bad boy. I am glad our Father has the ability and desire to cause the worst of sinners to feel their lost and wretched condition, and return to the only source of life and purity, joy and peace.

While we (my aged and feeble companion and myself) are bountifully supplied with the good things of this life that perish with the using, my constant prayer is that we may be more abundantly fed with that bread that came down from heaven, which prayer is answered every day, as I am permitted to draw copious supplies from the only source from which spirit and life may be obtained which is the Word of God, as revealed through his messengers.

Yours in the one hope.

J. D. SHERMAN.

Editor Restitution:

I just returned home, Dec. 16, 1894, from my Missouri trip. Had good, solid, old-fashioned meetings with good interest. There were no additions. I was not well any of the time. I can see a great difference in my meetings where they take and read THE RESTITUTION, and the places where they depend wholly on the preacher and their political papers.

Let us awake and work and get more to take the paper. It is much easier to preach to that class of people.

JOHN FOOTE.

Dear Restitution:

Please find Money Order for $2.00, $1.50 [illegible] for the paper for another year, and 50 cents to go to the helping fund. I am alone here in regard to truths of the Bible we advocate, so do not know how to get along without THE RESTITUTION to help in Bible Study and Christian duty. I am getting old but try to talk to my neighbors some, but they do not seem to have an ear to hear the truth as it is in Jesus.

Your brother in hope.

G. T. WILSIE.

Dear Restitution:

I enclose six dollars for which you will please renew my subscription to your most excellent paper, and the balance use in sending it to others who are not able to pay for it. Wishing you great success and a happy New Year. May your paper be a joy and comfort to each and every reader, and be the means of bringing others to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

MRS. R. B. COBBS.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 for the renewal of my paper for 95. I find my subscription for 94 is about expired, and I hasten lest I be found among the delinquents. I value the dear old paper next to my Bible, therefore could not think of doing without it nor being in debt for it, and as I read its columns my faith grows stronger and I feel more encouraged to earnestly contend for the faith. We as a little body of about fourteen are expecting by God's grace to stand firm until our Lord and Master comes. Yours in Christian hope.

MRS. F. W. CHAPIN.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. F. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer a premium for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one packet of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application to them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the payment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

The New-Year's Little Men and Women abounds with holiday reading of a good kind for children between seven and eleven, from Mary E. Wilkin's "Jimmy Scarecrow," to "A Pretty New-Year Custom," by Margaret Spencer, describes the dainty fun in which little Washington children indulge on New-Year's day. "New-Year's Wishes" is a skit by Bridgeman in picture and verse; Marian Douglas also has a poem, "The Old Woman's Money." In Mr. Thomson's "Great Cats" series, the story is "Manuel and the Jaguar" with half a dozen vigorous drawings by Hambidge. In Mr. Pratt's gay "Little Peterkin Vandyke," that enterprising youngster rehearses a "Girl Chickadee" in her part for his big "Poetry Party" which comes off next fall. The "tail of a lie" begins to show itself in Sophie Swett's serial, Polly and the other Girl." Mrs. Humphrey's "Tony and the Porridge Dog" is delightful. Elbridge S. Brooks writes of "Children a Century Ago." The "Doll Dressmaking" papers are begun. The music page has a most "catching" children's song, "The Tale of a Tart." $1.00 a year, 10 cents a number. Specimen (back number) free. Alpha Publishing Company, Boston.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

The Morning of Joy.

It is done.
King of kings, the victory's won;
Hallelujahs roll and swell;
Voices loud as mighty thunders,
Cry, "Behold the day of wonders,
Christ has conquered Death and Hell."

In they stand,
Crowned and robed, with harp in hand;
They have heard the trumpet's call:
O'er that sea of light and glory,
Chanting full redemption's story,
While before the throne they fall.

Toil and tears
Was their lot through many years;
Bitter tears that fell like rain.
Nothing now from Christ can sever—
Happy through that long forever.
They shall never weep again.

Oft the foe
Mocked them on their march below;
Tumbled them with jibe and jeer;
Then the path seemed dark and dreary,
Then their feet grew worn and weary,
And their souls were faint with fear.

But the Lord,
Faithful to his sacred Word,
Led them o'er the desert way;
Did with hope their courage nully,
Walked with them through death's dark valley,
Brought them home to endless day.

All is past.
And the King has come at last;
Grief and pain, or fear and woe,
Storm and tempest, plague and anguish,
Blighted hope and sick-bed languish,
They can never feel or know.

On and on,
Through the bright'ning years that dawn
O'er the world that yet shall be;
Where immortal garlands crown them,
Deathless forms throng all around them,
Life is still a shoreless sea.

It is done!
Far and wide beneath the sun,
Speeds a bliss no tongue can tell,
It has come, the day of wonders;
Louder than ten thousand thunders,
Hallelujahs roll and swell.

Acts of Apostles. Chap. 28.

1. And when saved, then we discovered that the island was called Melite (a place of honey).

2. And the barbarians showed us unusual philanthropy, for they kindled a fire and entertained us all because of the present rain and because of the cold.

3. And when Paulos hath collected some considerable kindling and had placed it on the hearth a viper that had come out because of the heat fastened itself upon his hand.

4. And when the barbarians saw the wild-beast hanging from his hand, they said to one another, Surely this man is a murderer, whom though saved from the sea, justice hath not allowed to live.

5. However when he had shaken off the beast into the fire, he suffered no harm,

6. But they were looking expectantly for him to become enflamed or fall down dead suddenly; and after they had been looking for a long time and had observed nothing occur to him extraordinary, changing their talk they said he was a God,

7. And among the districts about that place there was an estate belonging to the chief man of the island, Poplios by name who received and entertained us for three days in a friendly-minded way.

8. And it came to pass that the father of Poplios was lying taken down with fever and dysentery, unto whom Paulos went in, and when he had offered votive-prayer, he laid his hands upon him and healed him,

9. And when this had occurred the rest of those also in the island who had weaknesses came unto him and were healed,

10. And they honored us in many ways, and placed at the disposal of those who were conducting us up the things for their needs.

11. And three months afterwards we were conducted up in a vessel that had wintered in the island, an Alexandrine vessel with an ensign Dioskouroi.

12. And when we had been conducted to Surakousai we remained there three days;

13. And setting sail from there we touched at Hregion and one day afterward a south wind having sprung up the second day we arrived at Potioloi;

14. Where we found brethren and were exhorted to remain seven days with them: and in this wise we came to Hrome,

15. And when the brethren heard of our circumstances they came from there to meet us as far as Appios, Pharios and Treis Tabernai (three taverns) and when Paulos saw them he thanked God and took courage,

16. And when we had come to Hrome it was permitted Paulos to abide by himself along with the soldier who was guarding him.

17. And it came to pass three days afterwards that he called together those who were the chief men of the Joudaions; and when they had come together he said unto them, Men, brethren, I who had done nothing adverse to the laity or the customs of our fathers was delivered up a prisoner from Hierousolumn into the hands of the Hromaioi;

18. Who when they had given me a preliminary examination wished to acquit me, because there was no legal cause of death in me.

19. But the Joudaions denied it and I was compelled to appeal to Kaisar, not because I had anything to accuse my nation of.

20. For this reason I have invited you to see and talk it over with me, for on account of the hope of Israel am I lying with this chain around me,

21. And they said unto him, We have neither received letters from Joudaia about thee, nor hath any one of the brethren come and announced or said anything bad about thee.

22. But we think it proper that we should hear from thee what thou thinkest. For concerning this hereay it is known to us that it is everywhere spoken against.

23. And having set a day for him, many more came unto him as guests; unto whom he expounded the kingdom of God, going through the testimony and persuading them concerning Jesous both from the law of Mouses and the prophets from morning until evening,

24. And some were persuaded by the things said and some distrusted,

25. And as they disagreed with one another they were dismissed, Paulos having spoken one oracular saying, namely, "Well did the sanctified Spirit say through Hesaias the prophet unto your fathers, saying:

26. Go thy way unto this laity and say, With hearing will ye hear and ye shall not understand, and looking ye will look and ye shall not see.

27. For the heart of this laity hath become obtuse, and with their ears they have heard heavily and they have shut their eyes lest perchance they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears and understand with their heart and should return and I should heal them.

28. Be it known unto you therefore that this instrumental salvation of God hath been sent unto the nations and they will hear.

30. And he abode two whole years in his own hired house and received all those who went their way in unto him,

31. Heralding the kingdom of God and teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesous Christos with all boldness and unhindered.

Each has a Mission.

There's never a rose in all the world
But makes some green grove sweeter;
There's never a wind in all the sky
But makes some bird wing fleeter;
There's never a star but brings to heaven
Some silver radiance tender;
And never a rosy cloud but helps
To crown the sunset splendor;
No robin but may thrill some heart
His daylight gladly voicing,
And gives us all some small, sweet way
To set the world rejoicing.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 4.

THE FAMINE AND JOSEPH'S BRETHREN.

In lesson second we left Joseph ruler over all Egypt. Pharaoh has given him Asenath, the daughter of a great prince or priest, for his wife, and has changed his name to Zaphnath-paaneah, which means "the man to whom secrets are revealed." He is thirty years old; it is at the age at which men in these strange countries of the East can be elevated to the priesthood. All the high officers of Egypt were priests. They framed the laws, they surveyed the lands, they wrote the histories of the country; they gave out the medicines, they regulated the labor and the religion of the people. They taught the young men, who after them were to become priests and kings. They understood all curious arts; could perform wonderful tricks, were great astronomers, and pretended to interpret dreams and foretell human events. The life of the king was at their mercy. If they were displeased with him they could say, "the gods were tired waiting for him, and have him put to death. One-third of the real estate in Egypt belonged to the priests.

Joseph was careful while yet in prison to say that "interpretations of dreams belong to God." When Pharaoh has dreams that none can interpret, and Joseph is sent for to tell their meaning, he says "it is not in me; God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace," and again "God hath showed Pharaoh what he is about to do;" "the thing is established by God and he will shortly bring it to pass."

When Pharaoh was about to choose Joseph to take charge of the affairs of his kingdom, he turned to his servants and said, "Can we find such a man as this in whom the spirit of God is?" or as the Chaldee language has it, a man "in whom is the spirit of prophecy from before the Lord?" It was the same as saying, "We cannot there is not another like him in Egypt," there is no one that has in him the Spirit of this God.

To Joseph he said, "Forasmuch as God hath showed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art," ascribing Joseph's wisdom to its true source.

It looks very much as if Pharaoh recognized the God of Joseph as the true God, but he this as it may, he knows that none but a divine being can give such knowledge to Joseph, and as God has honored Joseph by "revealing secrets" to him, and by making him his priest or messenger to Pharaoh it is right that he honor God by appointing him to the priestly and kingly office.

We think that this is so from his choosing a wife for Joseph from the princely priesthood of On. "The vestures of fine linen," given to Joseph, are called in the Greek, "the stole or robe of byssos." It was sometimes made of silk "or of the most beautiful and delicate species of cotton," was "exquisitely white, and worn by priests and kings as a badge of their royal and priestly office."

Joseph then, is not only a ruler of the highest rank, but he is also a priest of the great and true God. He must be a priest to represent Jesus for God has made Jesus "a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." It is just what Joseph's brothers did not want him to be. They understood what belonged to the birth-right, that the first-born was given to God, and would inherit from his father, the offices of priest and ruler. He would be the governor of the family, or kingdom, and the minister in the worship of God. Whoever had this office had the privelge of talking with, and of having visions dreams and revelations from God.

God made his will known to men through his priests. Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, were all priests, God talked with them all, and they all made offerings to him. The lot was now fallen upon Joseph; it is to pass to the tribe of Levi by and by.

It is not at all strange that Joseph's brethren disliked to see a place that would have brought him so near to God, taken from the honored elder brother and given to Joseph, the despised younger.

What wonderful things we are learning, things that we never thought of before. Here is another wonderful thing, the age of Joseph when he began his legal, priestly ministry in Egypt, was the same as that of Jesus when he began his ministry for God upon earth. But we must hurry or our lesson will be too long.

Of course you read and remember Pharaoh's dreams about the fat cattle coming up out of the river, and poor, lean things, the worst looking ones that the king had ever seen, coming up after them and devouring the fat ones? and about the seven rank, and the seven thin ears, or heads of wheat?

AUNTIE WISER.

The Thief's Request—the Savior's Answer.

"Lord remember me when thou comest into (Greek en-in) thy kingdom." Luke xxiii. 42. Jesus responded, "Verily I say unto thee today, shalt thou be with me in Paradise." I have placed the comma after the word "today" instead of before it as in the common version. Punctuating the Scriptures is the work of uninspired men. For hundreds of years after the volume of inspiration was completed no points or marks were used between periods, sentences, parts of sentences, phrases and words. So no objection can be successfully urged against placing the comma after "today," as I have done. I will give the words as they stand construed in harmony with the text in Greek, according to Wilson's interlined translation in Diaglott: Indeed (verily) I say to thee today, with me thou shalt be in the Paradise. Today as an adverb of time qualifies "say" instead of "be." "I say to thee today." To this it will be objected that it was useless, if not silly, for the Savior to qualify "say" when the thief could not help knowing that Jesus was answering his request that day, then and there. If placing the comma after "today" and making it qualify "say" exposes Jesus to the charge of saying a useless and silly thing, then the objector will be forced to say that Moses, the great lawgiver of Israel, spoke foolishly when he said: "All the commandments which I command thee this day (today) shall ye observe to do." Deut. viii. 1. "I denounce unto this day that ye shall surely perish." chap. xxx. 18. And so Zechariah: "Even today do I declare I will render double unto you." chap. ix. 12. What is commanded and denounced is qualified by "today, this day." Is this useless verbiage, seeing that the Israelites knew that these prophets were speaking to them that very day? The same or similar language is used at the present time when we wish to emphasize our message, advice or command.

The penitent thief's request is a serious one and based upon a right understanding of the plan of redemption. He had the message from lips inspired, and had, I doubt not, entertained from early childhood the national hope of Israel, the restoration of the Davidic throne and kingdom, according to God's oath and covenant. John, and Jesus himself, the twelve, and the seventy, had proclaimed the gospel of the kingdom to Jews, and to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. The thief believed that Jesus was the Messiah of the Hebrew prophets, and that at some future day he would found his kingdom on the territory where he was now a bleeding, suffering and dying victim on a Roman cross. Under the terrible gloom overshadowing that day and hour of tragedy, the thief said: "Lord remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom." The dying Savior's answer will meet and fit the request: "Verily I say unto thee today, shalt thou (transposed thou shalt) be with me in (the) Paradise."

If ever a promise needed emphasizing it was then, in that gloomy hour when all the powers of evil had conspired against God's only Son; when Jew and Roman vied with one another in adding insult to most exquisite pain. "Indeed I say unto thee today, when the realization of such a hope seems impossible, thou shalt be with me in the paradise when I come in my kingdom." The language of Jesus as I have paragraphed it, accords with the petition of the thief, and the circumstances under which the promise was made, and harmonizes with all that is taught touching the paradise, the second coming of Christ, the establishment of his kingdom, and the time and place of reward. The word paradise is not Greek but is of Asiatic origin. In Arabic and Persian it signifies a garden, a vineyard. The Septuagent renders Gen. ii. 8 thus: "God planted a paradise in Eden." When our earth was created and fitted for man's abode one spot on it more beautiful than any other part of Eden is called "paradise"—"God planted it" adorned it with trees and shrubs and flowers, taking special pains to make it a most lovely spot. Here he placed the first pair, the father and mother of the human race. Here was made to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil. This is the paradise of primitive man. It was not in hades nor heaven, but on the earth.

When Adam transgressed the law of God by eating of the tree of knowledge of good and evil he was driven from the paradise to occupy a far less desirable spot, to till the ground on which God pronounced the curse, and to eat bread in the sweat of his face. How sad the forfeiture; and ever since the man has been obliged to contend against the forces of evil; and a large part of our race, through all the centuries since the fall, has been forced to toil to the point of utmost endurance for the bread of bare existence.

Revelation has another picture to present to view. God has promised a restitution, and all the prophets since the world began have spoken of the times when the work will be done. Among the many things concerning which a restitution is spoken, is the paradise. Jesus, years after his ascension to heaven, made this glad promise through the seer of Patmos to the churches: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Rev. ii. 7. A portion of the 22nd chapter is descriptive of this same glorious paradise. In this closing vision of things to come John sees the river of life and the tree (wood) of life, on either side, with its twelve kinds of fruit, yielded monthly and its leaves possessing marvelous healing properties, and designed in the purpose of God to subserve a most beneficent end, the healing of the nations.

This vision portrays things and scenes connected with this earth under its changed or new condition, when the old things shall have passed away. It is the new earth now with the brilliantly lighted new heavens above and around it. The scene is laid where the curse had been, where death had reigned, sorrow been experienced and crying heard. The New Jerusalem comes down and God tabernacles with men. chap. xxi. Here is the kingdom of the thief's request and the paradise of the Savior's answer. I know that men imbued with the doctrine of Plato have tried to construct on the words of Christ an entirely different theory; a theory opposed to every plain promise, and every clear statement of doctrine. It contradicts the oft repeated affirmation that Christ made his soul an offering for sin; sets aside the plain fact that man dies, (Job xiv. 10); that he goes to the grave in which there is no work nor device, no knowledge nor wisdom. Eccl. ix. 10. It locates paradise either in hades or heaven, while the Bible locates it on the earth; and places the kingdom far away in some fancied region instead of on the earth and under the whole heavens. Dan. ix. 27. This theory, in fact, is based upon what is imagined to be true, the immortality of the soul, a doctrine borrowed from heathen Socrates and Plato and incorporated with the Christian system. It was believed at first on the strength of human reason and the volume of inspiration was appealed to for proof in its support. Only inference was found to sustain the pernicious dogma. Inference unfairly drawn and set in opposition to plain statements of truth. Theologians reversed the simple and safe rule for explaining God's Word. That inference must yield to plain statement, and obscure passages be interpreted in the light of texts the meaning of which is obvious. Setting this aside the professed Christian world in consequence are woefully ignorant touching God's plans and purposes.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 6, 1895. NO 5.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN. Acts iii. 21. "Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." And means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as preparatory to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for admission.

Troubles Made Beautiful.

Most of the shells of the oyster are pearly in the interior; and as the true pearls are merely morbid growths, they may all produce pearls of various qualities. The formation of pearls is caused by the introduction of irritating substances, such as grains of sand, between the mantle and shell. The irritation causes the animal to cover the obnoxious object with layers of pearl, which generally attach the foreign body to the interior of the shell. The Chinese produce pearls artificially by placing substances in the position just described; and we have seen some shells in the interior of which small metal images were attached by this pearly secretion.

When we look at a pearl, we look at an annoyance which has been ennobled. The oyster by itself is of merely nominal value. But the result of the oyster's own treatment of its irritation—the pearl is something "of great price." Apart from its pecuniary worth this gem has a moral significance. It suggests that troubles may be made beautiful, and reminds us that amongst mankind some martyrs are more remembered for the glory with which they invested their sorrows than for any other portion of their lives. Biography has its moral pearls, which are treasured long after the creators of them have perished, just as material pearls are valued long years after the oysters have been discarded.

ITEMS.

"There is a remedy for every wrong, and a satisfaction for every soul."

Let not a man trust his victory over his nature too far, for nature will lie buried a great time, and yet revive upon the occasion of temptation.

Some people's religion if boiled down would contain only a few notions. Others would not even be found to contain so much as a notion.

A righteous man is one who takes the Word of God for his rule, the grace of God for his strength, the spirit of God for his guide, and the heaven of God for his home.

Blind attachment to an idea constitutes bigotry, and Holmes says "The bigot is like the pupil of the eye,—the more light you put upon it the more it will contract."

Be faithful in little things. Delude not yourself with the idea that you can be uncertain and untrue in trifles, and yet be reliable and trustworthy in great matters. Trifles make up our life, and are the ultimate test of fidelity.

"Be patient." It is hard to overestimate the value of mere dumb patience. There are times in human life when actions become an impossibility and the only course left is to submit with Christian fortitude to inevitable conditions. Happy is the man who is equal to such an emergency.—Christian Witness.

We have been terribly familiar with sin, and we are led to think of it as accidental, as the outcome of "environment," as a misfortune, and as a bad thing toward society. We do not think and speak of it, as we should, as rebellion against God, and its wages death eternal. The spirit of God is needed to convince of sin.—John Hall, D. D.

This is a short world; whether it be filled with joy or sorrow, light or shade it matters little. Here we are to work and wait, but soon all will be over and the eternal day will dawn—the clouds and shades and storms will pass; and O that we, when the morning breaks, may "as children of light" be found watching and waiting, prepared for the bright and everlasting day.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

WE know the many friends of Bro. and Sister Woodward will be rejoiced to learn that they are both much better, and are hard at work in Michigan.

SOME one has said "Humility is the least understood of all virtues. It is not humiliation, but that which saves us from humiliation. It is not weakness; it is that which makes us strong." •

WHEN self-assertion and self-confidence have disappeared, and judgment of others in details has given place to deep judgment of ourselves in principles, then indeed have we learned the true spirit of Christ." •

"MANY of those who consider themselves God's children through faith and obedience complain that they are unable to do anything for the Truth, and consider that there is nothing for them to do. If the prayer of their hearts is, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do," a work will very soon be found, if only they are willing to do it." •

READER, do you wish to know whom to seek? "Seek him that maketh the seven stars and Orion, and turneth the shadow of death into the morning, and maketh the day dark with night; that calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth -JEHOVAH is his name." Amos. v. 8. •

"FUTURE events.—Christ is to come again, Acts i. 2; raise the dead, John vi. 54; and overthrow all the kingdoms of this world, Dan. ii. 44; chap. vii. 13, 14; the saints shall reign with him, Dan. vii. 18; 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3; the kingdom of God will be under heaven, Dan. vii. 27; Israel will be restored to their own land, Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22; Luke viii. 29; the heathen shall come to a knowledge of the Lord in that day, Ezek. xxxix. 21, 29; Rev. xiv. 6, 7; the Babylon that now exists shall fall, Rev. xviii. 1-24; the present state of things, both political and ecclesiastical, shall vanish, and a new heavenly state of things exist, Rev. xxi. 1-4, 10." •

"SALVATION means the opening of the coffin lid; it means restoring to life of the body whose limbs are stiff and cold, whose eyes are glazed and sightless, whose thoughts have perished. It means bringing back from the dust the forms that have mouldered away in the ages that have passed,—and not only this; it is not merely the restoration of life; but the salvation of the Bible means the bestowal of endless and glorious life; it means an *in*corruptible nature,—a nature incapable of decay,—a nature that can die no more. Life, AFE, that is what we want,—endless, painless, joyful life—that is what the salvation of God consists in." •

PAUL was a praying Christian, but his prayers were not always answered in the way he desired. Thrice he besought the Lord to remove the thorn in his flesh; but it was not removed; instead, these words were addressed to him:—"My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness." That was enough; the words that follow prove this: "Most gladly, therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities that the power of Christ may rest upon me, therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distress for Christ's sake; for when I am weak, then am I strong." Paul certainly took the Lord at his Word; and would it not be well for us to consider the words of Jesus addressed to the blind men, as being addressed to us, when he proffers his services and assures us of his sustaining grace? "Believe ye that I am able to do this?" Oh, how can we doubt his Word or his ability? Have we not tested his faithfulness? Was his Word ever known to fail? If not, we can afford to trust him when his favor and strength take the place of what we thought we needed. •

EVERLASTING punishment is the doom of the ungodly, they are punished with a destruction that is final (2 Thess. i. 9) they are cut off, (Prov. ii. 22; Ps. lviii. 8-10,) they are to be destroyed and their name put out for ever and ever. (Ps. viii. 5;) they are to be burned up with unquenchable fire. (Matt. iii. 12.) •

PAUL the apostle was chosen by the ascended Lord to bear his name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel. His labors in the gospel show that the glorious Lord knew what was in him. He had that presence of mind, tenderness and sympathy, conscientiousness, integrity, courage, perseverance, zeal and fortitude,—these, with thanksgiving, prayer, and an unwavering faith in God make up the noble soldier of the cross called Paul. •

"LIFE eternal is the opposite of the destiny of the wicked: the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life; they are both contemporary one with the other, and of equal duration, but neither includes the other; the wicked experience not the life of the righteous, any more than do the righteous suffer the punishment of the wicked, they could not—God cannot break his Word which says, the unbeliever shall not see life. (John iii. 36) when men shall cease to think God less just than themselves, they will understand this solemn truth." •

DR J. Pye Smith says: "Some of our readers may be surprised at our having translated nephesh chayah by living animal. There are good interpreters who have maintained that here is intimated the distinctive pre-eminence of man above the inferior animals. But we should be acting unfaithfully if we were to allow that the doctrine of an immortal spirit is contained in the passage. The two words are frequently joined in Hebrew, and the meaning of the compound phrase will be apparent to the English reader when he knows that our version renders it in Gen. i 20, creature that hath life, or each living creature; and so in the 2nd chapter and 19th verse, and the 9th chapter and verses 12, 15, 16 This expression sets before us the organic life of the animal frame." This is important, coming as it does from a conscientious scholar who, practically, testifies against his own belief. •

THERE can be no conflict between science and the religion of the Bible, because both are true, must be true, because God is the author of both. We hold that all truth is in harmony; but while this is so, we must not forget that science deals with one class of truths and the Bible with another. It is not exact knowledge of nature that comes into conflict with the Book of God, but science falsely so called. From nature we may form grand conceptions of God's power and greatness and beneficence, but we cannot learn from it how we can please God, nor on what conditions we can participate in divine nature of existence. "The entrance of God's Word giveth light" upon these vital themes. Blessed Bible, Book divine, Precious treasure, thou art mine. •

THE Catholic Times says, that "Father Doyle lectured before the students of the Union Theological Seminary (Presbyterian) and was introduced by Dr. Charles Briggs;" and remarks: "This is a good sign. With Father Elliott talking to Protestant laymen and Father Doyle to clerics, a special missionary career opens to the congregation which was instituted for the conversion of the United States." This, in connection with the headway Catholicism is making over the water, and the fact that Papists are not allowed to read Protestant books or hear Protestant preaching, is most significant of the times we live in. The Western Watchman, another Catholic journal says:—"The Methodists are adopting the Anglican communion service, and in one church in Omaha, with the full consent of the local bishop, this service is regularly held instead of the tame little picnic that has been the custom in Methodist churches. It will not be long before they will be saying mass." It also says the Emperor of Germany has asked the Pope to establish a feast of prayer and praise for the Fatherland. •

—ANY one who can tell us the address of J. J. May—late of Hill Top, Ark., will confer a favor.

"LET us never act on anything as if we counted on the stability of the present order of things. Let us count on the coming of Christ."

STOCKTON says, and our poor heart says Amen, Amen, "If amid the conflict of empires, the revolution of kingdoms, the crumbling of republics, and the consequent amazement and alarm of all mankind, we seem to hear a repetition of the promise, "Surely I come quickly," as just about to be realized—let our heart leap within us as we answer, "Even so, come Lord Jesus." •

SAYS Dr. Tischendorf, "Providence has ordained for the New Testament more sources of the greatest antiquity than are possessed by all the old Greek literature put together. No single work of ancient Greek classical literature can command three such original witnesses as the Sinaitic, Vatican and Alexandrine manuscripts to the integrity and accuracy of its text." •

CHRIST.

Christ is the medium of all the light, and glory, and rest, and peace, and joy we have; yes, every ray of joy and gladness, every rivulet of living waters,—every blessing comes to us through him. Blessed Jesus. By divine arrangement we have obtained his name, entered his service, identified ourselves with his cause, become representatives of his religion, and joint-heirs with him to the surpassing wealth of God's favor to be dispensed in the ages to come. What a destiny! Ought we not to follow him fully? Ought we to give him a divided heart? Ought we to give him half-and-half service? Surely not; and surely we shall not, if we think of ourselves as risen with Christ, and let not sin reign in our mortal bodies, and be ever able to say from the heart "for me to live is Christ."

Ah, we talk about following him fully, and since the blessed Lord is ever saying to us, "Follow me," it may be proper to talk about it, but better to do it. But what a pattern to work to! "He walked up and down this wicked world with garments white as snow. His life was one long errand of mercy, and his example taught us how to walk, and to please God. Toward God he manifested confidence, obedience, fidelity. He prayed to the Father and taught us how to pray. He obeyed him and taught us obedience. Toward men he manifested patience, kindness, long-suffering, compassion and grace. For the present he renounced pleasures, splendors, pomps and joys, and became a houseless wanderer, and sacrificed everything to the right, the true, the holy and the good. As to the future, he looked forward to a kingdom, crown and throne of glory, in the day of coming triumph; and with all this in prospect he was led as a lamb to the slaughter." And was it not for our encouragement and comfort it was written that he for the joy set before him endured the cross and despised the shame? Is not the same joy set before us when he whispers back, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne?"

We know, beloved, that we can overcome if we will. He would not address the struggling members of his mystic body thus to tantalize them. Yes; he sets before us the joy that was set before him, and positively promises us seats upon his throne. Blessed Anointed One,—Jesus. May his example and loving message be our beacon light, and he to us what they have been to thousands in the past, "comfort to the sorrowful, strength to the weary, the trust of the tempted, an anchor to the storm-tossed, an antidote for the discouragements and disappointments of time, and a transforming power that shall prepare us for the glories of eternity." Precious Savior, soon come. Amen. •

It is ignorance of God's purpose that breeds contempt for the means he employs, and makes people presumptuous enough to plan and arrange things for him.

Report of Labors.

Nov. 10th. Requests are coming in fast of late, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." We have promised to do what we could, and today asking God's help and blessing on our labor, we grasp our satchels, kiss the loved ones good by, lock our doors and Nov. 10th, at 6 A. M. take to the road, stopping first at Vicksburg to fill the appointments at Prairie Grove and Brady, preaching each eve until the 14th. We leave Vicksburg at 8 A. M., reaching Delta about 3 P. M. when we leave our swift and accommodating helpers in travel and alighting we begin to look at the faces around us which are every one strange. our eyes at last seek out a face which strongly resembles Bro. Geo. Elton's which we so well remember, so we venture to grasp the hand and say, This must be Bro. David Elton, yes; this is Bro. and Sister Woodward. Yes; and we are all well acquainted on the spot, for were we not looking at and talking to a brother of like precious faith? a blessed brotherhood, and the same Father's children. We felt no more strange, but rather that we were getting home, a feeling which was strengthened when, after the four miles pleasant ride we reached his home and saw standing on the porch, Dear Sister Elton and their oldest daughter Mary with their hearty welcome. There in their comfortable, pleasant home we rested and visited that night. The next evening we started for the Union church 3½ miles away. A church built by the community whether Christian or not, and used by any denomination when another was not using it. There we met the genial, earnest ones, Bro. Meriden who had written us to come, and it seemed to us that all the rest were Eltons, but we soon learned each face and name, and found a faithful few who were earnestly contending for the precious faith of the gospel. There we went every evening for fourteen nights, holding up to the audience which seemed much interested the words which would be to them, "The savour of death unto death, or life unto life." Two willing souls put on Christ by baptism, Bro. Wm. Elton and Sister Mattie, Bro. David Elton's youngest daughter. That last meeting on Friday morning at the house of one who though much interested, not fully persuaded, will never be forgotten. There we knelt imploring God's blessing upon the little flock we were soon to leave, there the righthand of fellowship was given, words of thanks, encouragement and cheer were given by several of the loved ones. There we bade them God speed, and parted with the promise to come again (D. V.) as soon as possible. Bro. David started out with us about 10 o'clock that evening for Delta, the darkest night we ever saw, so dark the switch lights a few feet ahead could not be seen. About midnight we heard the conductor say, It is raining and we hope it will continue, for this very dangerous fog and darkness will now lift and pass away. Dangerous it was, indeed, traveling that night, but we had committed ourselves to the keeping of one who was able to see us safely through, and we lay in our seats and slept as well as we could. We reached Rensselaer, our next place of promise, Saturday near night. Brothers Harris and Paris were the first we met at the depot, and to Bro. Harris' were we taken, coming in upon them and Brother Conner somewhat unexpectedly. Bro. Conner showed his usual agility on the spot, his face radiating with joy, after the customary salutations on went his coat and hat, and away he went to notify some of the brethren that we were there, for we had written them we thought we would not reach there before Tuesday. Meeting began Sunday morning with a goodly number present, the congregation increasing at each meeting. Here we found as we always do among our people, a sociable, whole-souled company of people, the longer we stayed the better we liked them, and could not blame Bro. Conner for saying, "The longer he stayed there the longer he wanted to." He is now on his sixth year with increasing interest. We stayed with the church there three weeks. Six dear ones making the confession and joining the church. We can see each face in our mind this morning as we write of them, can hear their words of cheer and God bless you, and it gives us courage to work on if by any means we may strengthen any or be the means of saving some. We were rejoiced at this meeting to see and fellowship once more dear faithful Bro. and Sister Willey. God bless and prosper them. When we reached Monon on our way home there we met them again with their son who kindly invited us to his home to dine and wait the four hours delay of train there. We gladly accepted their kind hospitality, receiving a warm invitation from his father-in-law to visit them again. May God reward them and all the dear ones who have so kindly smoothed the way for us. Yours in Christ.

Looking through the Vail.

I see beyond the sorrow and woe of life, a happy and peaceful home, a realm of love, where the holy ardor of Jonathan, is excelled by the least citizen of the realm; where the glory of John the Baptist is dimmed by the brilliancy of the little ones in robes of white, where the Lamb of priceless price has ascended to the honor and glory of God, and by loving kindness has lifted the fallen saint into the rapture of endless life. I see it with the eye of faith, and my soul is gladdened with a holy love that lifts my raptured thoughts to that lofty summit where nothing but the "Glory Hallelujah" of angels satisfies my longing mind. I pass the pearly gates in the walls of the everlasting Jerusalem. I press my feet upon the streets of gold; I behold a throne and a sea of glass; I see a countless legion waving palms of victory; an angel guides me to the rapturous throng and I grasp the palm and join in their chorus, grand delightful chorus! How it cheers the heart in anticipation! What then will it be to be there in fact? On either side of the golden street are many mansions, gorgeous beyond description; earthland architecture pales and withers and fades away as the vision of beauty is revealed in *glory*land. Proud old Rome, haughty London, wicked New York, pagan cities of the East, sink to insignificance before this Capital from heaven, (made in a foreign land) for the glorification of the earth. There rests the weary saint; there dwells our triumph and our joy. We look upon present glory and behold it fading; we view present pleasures and they pass away; we sing and laugh and shout now, but the shouting laughter is but a transient merriment that welds links of woe to links of desolation! But in the everlasting Jerusalem, we find no fading glory; we enjoy no fleeting pleasures; we discover no sorrow, we reap no woe. There, beyond the curses we see the throne of love exalted above the thrones of earth. Egypt, Babylon, Greece, Rome Byzantine, Persia, India, China, Japan, America, all gathered and garnered in the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. The Holy City descended, the vail lifted, Israel's eyes unblinded, the power of God manifested, the saints triumphant begin their reign. Ah! 'Tis but a little while and this will be; only a few years, perhaps weeks, possibly days, before the saints will shout in the environment of everlasting pleasures and endless perfection, in the royal family of Jehovah. Not that we are to die for sin and then fly away to glory in consequence of our depravity, but because the same Jesus that went away, is coming again to restrain sin, to crush the wounded devil, and bring in everlasting righteousness. Satan is raging, but he is bruised and wounded, he is covered with livid ulcers and running sores, there is no relief or cordial for his malady, his cancer growth cannot be mollified with ointment, he has sown the seeds of death and is reaping its harvest of destruction. But his times are ended, Mene, mene, is written upon all his works, he has had the consumption for 6000 years, and the mould of iniquity has eaten his heart and consumed his vitals, until today his life and kingdom are in the throes of dissolution. His prison is prepared and as he has lived long he will be long in dying, but his end is sure, for Christ died to destroy him that had the power of death which was and is the devil. I see the end, I behold the glory, I discern the times and have the utmost faith that I shall share in the reward and glory of the kingdom to be revealed and given, not at death, but at the resurrection of the just, now nigh at hand.

M. D. PEAVY.

Editor Restitution:

In answer to inquiry from Elizabeth Anthony, Iowa, would say that Matt. xxvii. 52-53 to my mind means just what it says, namely, "And many bodies of the saints who had lain down to sleep were awakened, 53 and when they had come forth from the memorial-tombs after their awakening, they entered into the Sacred City and appeared unto many."

I think the word "bodies" is used so that there should be no question as to whether this was not a "ghostly" resurrection which heathendom has always accepted and believed in. Of course the "bodies" were "spiritual bodies" and not the old bodies of flesh and blood merely that they had when they lay down to sleep, but just as truly organic bodies, not "ghosts." I do not see any contradiction in the three accounts of the three evangelists you refer to. One gives a later fact as an eye-witness testimony than the other two, that is all. No doubt both robbers (not thieves merely) did revile him at first; but one repented later and the other did not.

The "to-day" should be connected with the first clause in reading the passage "Verily I say unto thee today—thou wilt be with me in Paradise." We understand Paradise, if a place, and not a mere beatitude to be a heavenly state somewhere and not one of the compartments of Hades as commonly interpreted; and according to the record. Christ himself was dead and buried at that time he and the robber as well, and not in a conscious state anywhere. On the third day he Christ himself was "awakened" according to the record as well as "raised" and did not ascend to heaven or the Father until forty days afterward. Did the robber go right to heaven even before Christ himself—"the first-fruits" "the first-born of many brethren" "the first-brought from among the dead?"

All the saved will ultimately be in "Paradise" wherever this be, but each one will reach it in his own order," and this is given us specifically, "Christ the first-fruits, after that those who are Christ's at his coming, then the rest." including the balance of the saved. The first "Paradise" was here upon earth and according to the record the second "Paradise" will be.

In reply to inquiry from Chris. Arnold, Los Angeles, Cal. would say that while there is a seeming contradiction in the two accounts given in Acts ix. 7, and Acts xxii. 9. My understanding of it is that those with Paul heard a sound merely and saw "the light" but did not hear a voice, at least that they understood. The word translated "voice" in Acts xxii. 9, and "sound" in Acts ix. 7 means primarily "sound" and derivatively "voice." The word is "phone" which we use in "telephone" and so many other words. In short Paul means they did not hear in the sense of understanding what was being said to him, though they heard a sound of a voice.

CHAS. GARDNER.

To the loved ones of like precious faith:

On the 8th day of November 1894 I passed my 62nd mile-stone of years, and I am still on the battle-field for truth, and the older I get the more I learn how to preach the truth so as not to offend my hearers. I have baptized 33 in the last year and have nine calls now for baptism but have not the money to pay my expenses and the R. R. companies wont let me ride for nothing.

Those that we get are surely educated in the things of the kingdom.

Jesus said in John vi. 44-45, "No man can come to me except the Father which sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets and they shall be all taught of God, Every man therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me."

It is the gospel that draws men to Christ.

Paul in Romans i. 15-16, says, "So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also, for I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek."

I find that God's way to convert people is the best way, as faith comes by hearing.

Preach the gospel to them. What gospel? The gospel that Christ preached, the gospel of the kingdom of God, Mark i. 14.

Luke iv. 43, "And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also, for therefore am I sent."

Brethren I believe the time is short to work, so let us be up and doing. The Savior said, "who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household to give them meat in due season. Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you he shall make him ruler over all his goods."

I want to do more this year for the Master than ever before. It is the Savior's command to stand with helmet and sword and shield with our faces to the foe.

Your brother.

JOHN FOORE.

Editor Restitution:

Have just closed a ten days meeting at Irving. The seed sown will grow. The preaching was of a practical nature. It fell upon four kinds of soil without doubt. Only one kind will bring forth fruit—that which fell upon good ground. We can well say of this meeting that it did much good in strengthening the things that remain. The meetings were well attended throughout and are among the best we have attended at Irving.

A. J. EYCHAER.

Mr. C. G. Montefiore makes in his Hibbert Lectures (p. 551) the following remarkable admission: "Some of the sayings of Jesus have sunk too deep into the human heart, or, shall I say, into the spiritual consciousness of civilized mankind, to make it probable that any religion which ignores or omits them will exercise any considerable influence outside its own borders."

Poetry.

The Christian's Hope.

I am thinking to-night of a better home,
A home unwilling so far away,
A glimmer of the dawning light I see,
The coming of a brighter day
When all who love and serve him here,
Will find a sure and heavenly rest,
Fair Eden arbor with life-giving bowers,
The royal home of the blest.

Oh the rapturous thought of the many joys
That we'll find awaiting us there,
Gives us the peace of a mighty love,
And helps us the struggle of life to bear.
Tis ours now abound in the river's bed,
And many the sin upon us here,
We pray for strength o'er these to win,
That we the glory there may share.

Oh a hope in the rest for time is short,
May our light ne'er shining be,
That we who await the Christian's home
May cherish ever so willingly
A tender thought for all wayward ones,
The Prince of mercy bids them come,
O why not listen to the earnest call
And ever say "Thy will be done."

The dear ones that have gone before
Will all awake to hear his voice,
The visions of the heavenly home
Will make the waiting ones rejoice.
The home over there, that beautiful home,
The city that comes from above
Will brighten the earth in every clime,
'Tis the Savior's home, a home of love.

The Risen Christ.

The doctrine of a risen Christ is the foundation rock upon which the Christian superstructure rests; remove this basic rock and the glorious temple of truth would become a hopeless and worthless ruin.

Read what one of the ancient heralds of the doctrine who was taught by Jesus himself, has to say: Acts xvii. 2-7: "And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath-days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures. Opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ. And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas: and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few. But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people. And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, These that have turned the world upside down, are come hither also; whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying, that there is another king, one Jesus. And they troubled the people, and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things."

The two thoughts with which his masterly mind grappled, and around which all others gathered, were:

First: "That Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead."

Second: "That this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is (the) Christ."

"Christ must needs have suffered," not as a substitute for sinners, but to ratify the covenant. See Heb. ix. 16, 17, (Diaglott): "For where a covenant exists, the death of that which ratified it is necessary to be produced; because a covenant is firm over dead victims, since it is never valid when that which ratifies it is alive." "This is the blood of the covenant." ver. 20, x. 29: "The blood of the covenant by which he was sanctified." Rom. xv. 8: "Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God to confirm the promises made unto the fathers."

Hence "the (covenant) made unto the fathers," has been "confirmed," "ratified," and "sworn" to, and sinners can enter into the covenant, by complying with the terms of the covenant, and be no more "strangers from the covenants of promise" and "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel." Hence, "Christ must needs have suffered," or the covenant would never have been ratified and sealed with his own blood.

A person may have a full knowledge of the "covenants of promise," and still be an "alien," unless he first becomes a naturalized Israelite, by complying with the terms of the covenant, and becomes Abraham's seed, by a union with the risen Christ.

As "Christ must needs have suffered," so likewise, he "must needs" have "risen again from the dead," otherwise God's oath to the covenant Jesus died to ratify, would be invalidated, and consequently the ratification be made of no effect. "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." "And, if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain: ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." If the doctrine of a risen Christ can be stricken from the Christian system, then we are lost every one of us, we "are perished."

As Jesus died, and was placed in the tomb, the hope of his disciples was buried with him. Their heart sank within them as they in sad disappointment said: "We trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel," and they doubtless felt in their heart, that their trust had been misplaced.

The blood-ratified and oath-confirmed covenant could not be invalidated and made of none effect by acts of mortal men. Jesus burst the tomb, and came forth clad in the robes of immortality, as our High Priest, as the victorious seed of Abraham, and as the future occupant of the throne of David, and he will yet show his faithless disciples, that their trust was not misplaced, but that it is he which shall yet "redeem Israel."

The risen Christ approaches two disciples on a journey to Emmaus, and not being known of them, said: 'What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk and are sad?" They then rehearsed the sad occurrences with regard to Jesus, and a report that had just reached their ears that he had risen from the dead. He then chides them for their unbelief, "He said unto them, O fools, slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken! Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses, and all the prophets he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures concerning himself." It was near night-fall as they approached Emmaus, and so they invited him to stay all night, and take supper with them. As he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blest it, and broke it and gave to them. And their eyes were opened and they knew him; and he vanished from their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the Scripture?"

Reader, does "not our heart burn within us," as we review the Scriptures which certify to a glorious, ever-living Christ? The risen Christ is the joy and hope of the world. It is only through the risen Christ that we may expect life from the dead, "if Christ be not raised," "then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

If Christ be not raised, then our joyous anticipation of coming glory is all a delusion. If Christ be not raised our future is a dark oblivion. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." Oh with joyful heart we praise God, for a brief insight into the better life, and the glorious hope assured by the risen Christ. And having tasted of his mighty love in the pardon of sin, through a hearty and obedient belief of the glad news of Messiah's coming to break the proud oppressor's chain, set death's captives free, and rule the world with equity, we should like Peter on the day of Pentecost, send forth the gospel with zeal and earnestness, unveil the lovely character of God's holy Son, declare his greatness among the people and the power of his resurrection, until conviction will cause them to enquire: "Men and brethren what shall we do?" Then like Peter thunder in their ears the heaven-given remedy—"repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." By this means many wanderers in the dark mazes of the apostacy may have cause to sing and shout for joy. "Blessed hope" does not your heart warm up, and kindle with bounding love when you contemplate its blessedness? Does it not light up the altar-fires of many a storm-tossed wanderer? Is it not a welcome visitor in the death-chamber—illuminating it with glorious visions brighter far than the sunbeam? Is it not a beauteous rainbow of hope, which will all be consummated in the coming reign of the risen Christ?

W. H. WILSON.

Report of Labor.

In response to the earnest call for help from the little band in Kentucky I bade my family good by Jan. 3rd taking the L. E. & W. train to Indianapolis where close connection was made with a Big Four train for Louisville, arriving there at 8 P. M. Stayed over night in the city taking the morning train for Brumfield on L. & N. R. R. Arrived at destination at noon Jan. 4, when I was met by Bro. Frank Skeels and conveyed in sleigh about nine miles to place of meeting, where I found the faithful little band anxiously awaiting my arrival. Owing to the strong prejudice against the truth the trustees had refused us the use of the house unless the brethren would agree to stand responsible for the loss of the house in case it should be burned during meetings, this of course the brethren refused to do, and our meetings were held until the following Monday in private houses. In the meantime arrangements had been made for a series of meetings in the town of Perryville where the famous battle was fought during the war. The house engaged was owned by the "Reformers," who by the way we think need reforming badly as the result showed. The meeting began on Monday night with a fair attendance and the best of interest. Being desirous of getting as much truth before them as possible before the house should be attacked with that disease peculiar to orthodox known as "theological titanus" or in common terms "religious lockjaw," we laid the foundation on Monday night on Peter's words, "The Word of prophecy made sure" or confirmed by the attestations of divine approval, not some thing "more sure" than prophecy as our version so bunglingly renders it. This foundation was built upon by copious extracts from the pure prophetic Word, and in six lectures in which Christ's threefold relation to the eternal purpose of God which purposed in Christ Jesus as prophet, priest and king was set forth in the plain simple words of the holy ones of old who spake as the Spirit of God enlightened them, and close and earnest attention was paid throughout, as we tried in kindness and firmness to place beneath these wrongly educated people the firm and solid rock of truth, as little by little the crumbling sands of tradition slipped from them, and our expectations began to grow brighter each night as earnest men and women listened to the glowing words of God's holy prophets, the angels, his Son and the inspired apostles. We had the pleasure of illustrating the priestly office of Christ by the aid of a fine painting of that type the tabernacle, the pattern of which Moses was so particularly instructed to follow. This beautiful picture is the work of our gifted Sister Viola Skeels, who seemed to have caught the inspiration of the impressive scene and transferred it to the canvas in such a realistic manner that the audience seemed to gaze upon the very service of the high priest, and from the type beheld our great high priest standing in the holiest of all, not made with hands, but in the sacred heavenly tabernacle making intercession for us, while the attitude of expectancy shown by the waiting congregation outside the tabernacle until the high priest finished his work and came out to bless the waiting ones, impressed the hearers, we trust, in such a manner that the effects will go with them in coming days. The audience was composed of the best elements, business men, doctors, merchants, and three ministers paid good attention to the Word spoken. But alas for human expectations! On the sixth night we were told that the house would no longer be opened for us, the disease in its most frightful form attacked the house, and with the calm satisfaction that we had fearlessly and kindly set the truth before them, we kindly thanked them for "past favors" and began a series of meetings where we labored last winter, the trustees having relented and gave up the key to our people. On Monday afternoon the brethren cut a way for forty ice in Wilson's Creek, and in the presence of a few witnesses we assisted the wife of Brother J. F. Carpenter to put on Christ in the solemn ceremony of baptism. This scene was duly impressed upon all present as tears of joy and earnest words of congratulation made this burial scene not sad, but bright and joyous. We feel that others were almost persuaded, and hope they may seize the golden opportunity ere it passes forever away. Willing hands will gladly assist any to put on Christ whenever they desire such service. Thus ended a series of meetings that will long remain as a pleasant spot in our labor of love, and may he who only can bless the work grant that good results may yet grow out of our humble effort to plant the truth in good and honest hearts. As ever rejoicing in the truth.

Dear Restitution:

While renewing our subscription to our much esteemed paper we thought we would write a few lines to the dear brothers and sisters scattered throughout this western country, many of whom no doubt remember us in years gone by. We started in the Master's cause at Wildcat church, Ind., in 1859. We are still striving to the best of our ability to make our calling sure. It cheers us on our way to read the many letters written by the loved ones scattered throughout the land. Brothers and sisters, let us hold fast the profession which we have made by an upright walk and a godly conversation throughout the journey of this life. Your brother and sister in the one hope.

JOSEPH & HARRIET FISH.

Dear Restitution:

I take my pencil this beautiful winter morning to write a few lines. There is a small body of the one faith here and we meet every Sunday morning to listen to the glorious gospel as expounded by our beloved Brother Moyer. He is able advocate of the one faith, but there are but few of the world's people who come out to hear. Our doctrine is very unpopular, they go by droves into the churches where they reach for the gospel the serpent's lie, but the people love to have it so. It is a fulfilment of the Apostle prediction, he said they should be turned from the truth unto fables. But we feel like taking courage for our blessed Master said, Fear not little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. It is very evident the Lord could see what the condition of the world would be at his coming, for he said nevertheless will he find faith on the earth when he comes. It looks to us as if there would be but very little of it as compared to the unbelief. There is once in a while one of our faith goes over to the enemy. May God pity them in the day of account giving, for surely they will be held responsible for the way in which they have made use of the Lord's goods. It seems to me that I would suffer the loss of all things before I would give up my faith and hope. We meet from house to house every Thursday evening for prayer and Bible reading, and to encourage each other in well doing. If we are only faithful to the end we shall enter into life eternal. Brethren, think of it, a home with Christ in his kingdom and to share with him in his glory. We are lost in wonder when we contemplate God's love and mercy to all such as will live godly in Christ Jesus in this present world. May we be found so living when the Lord comes is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

A. SEITZ.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed you will find a check for $1.50 to pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to the brother who has said through the paper that his circumstances were such as to deprive him of having the paper unless otherwise provided for, and may the Lord bless him and keep him steadfast in the faith that he may be counted worthy when the Master calls. The signs of the times indicate that we will not have to struggle long with these trials and oppressions—let us all who are favorably situated watch the little flock and lend a helping hand whenever a case is presented to our knowledge. It is our duty as Christians to see after those things, not of this worlds. THE RESTITUTION comes to our home week after week a great help in studying the Scriptures and the source of much encouragement and comfort taken from the words of the brothers and sisters through its columns, and we feel it a great pleasure to say a few words, though not having the ability to write in fine grammatical style we trust it will present to the readers the expression of our willingness and sincerity in the work for heirship in the kingdom.

We have no preaching in this place and we do not know of any brethren living close here. Our time is spent in reading and searching the Scriptures and calling the attention of others to the things concerning the kingdom of God. We believe that the Lord will prosper us no matter where we are if we ask him and believe he is able, and while he is able and willing to bestow his mercies upon us we in turn are in duty bound to work without ceasing. God will see that his children are taken care of and the work before us becomes a pleasure, knowing that the things of this life are overshadowed with the promise of the age to come we look on beyond all things pertaining to the world, and see by faith the glories we shall share if we endure to the end.

W. O. STEFFA.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

It is with heart felt thanks to God who ruleth above, that another year has passed into eternity, and that he has in his kind mercies kept his unprofitable servant alive, for which cause I truly thank him, and if it is his will that I remain until his Son shall come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory to take to himself his great power and commence his righteous reign, I shall be satisfied. Oh, how we need him, and it has been my desire for the last thirty year to live to see his return, especially for the last few years when our hearts are growing sad from the long delay, as it seems to us that are burdened with cares, and I often think of righteous Lot who had his soul vexed every day with the evil conversation of the wicked. Men have become so unrighteous, they have no fear of God before their eyes, but God will not always keep silent. "Hold not thy peace and be not still, Oh God, for thine enemies make a tumult! and they that hate thee hath lifted up their head." Is it not time for those that love thy name to arm themselves with thy Word and battle a little longer for the right. So many have had to lay their armor by and fall victims to the enemy of man, that grim monster death. Some whose pens were once ready to speak for Christ and his cause are silent. Let each one that has taken his name upon them consider the fearful times we are living in and rally to the front, and stand firm for Christ and his Word, that when he comes to redeem us from this present evil world, that our King will approve us, and welcome us to the marriage feast that will be prepared for all them that love his appearing. Dear brothers and sisters scattered abroad that meet together on the first day of the week to worship him in spirit and in truth, our little band has been reduced to a very small number by the enemy death, and some have moved to distant places that they cannot meet with us, but amidst it all we feel that the Lord is merciful to us, and our meetings are greatly appreciated by each one of us, for we know in whom we trust, and in the sweet by and by a vast company shall sing praises to God and the Lamb who has redeemed us with his precious blood.

Sister Wine- go on with your noble work. Sister Young amidst your sorrows your word is still for Christ. Our able brethren, still stand firm, the victory soon will be ours. With love to all, I remain your sister in Christ.

M. E. KNOWLES.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I am glad to read the letters from so many faithful ones, that come to us through the medium of our precious paper. Surely it is a welcome visitor, and I shall try hard to extend its circulation here. We are and it is to be a scattered people here, and I begin to think that God wills it so, for he will have a tried and an overcoming people, those that are able to stand alone, to reign with him by and by. If we could preach and support a popular faith we would have numbers, but our Master did not follow the masses of the Jews, but with his few humble followers stood alone for the work of his Father. If we are to reign with him we must also suffer with him; and surely we have our reward both here and hereafter. And the pure love of the truth eminating from God binds our hearts more firmly, even in our scattered condition than are the members of any of the churches. And is not this a foreshadowing of the oneness of the holy of Christ when he shall come to gather them out from among the world? The apostles were not commanded to settle down in one place and remain there, but to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and we were to be taught to observe all things whatsoever was commanded them. And yet I know that if there was more earnest zeal for following the pure life of Christ, more earnest, trusting, wrestling prayer to go with our zeal for knowledge our numbers would be greatly augmented, and our work would tell everywhere. We are living in trying times, let us keep the armor all on, so if the Master comes and calls for us we may be found awake and at our posts, and there is always work, Christ said, "the poor ye have always with you, and whenever ye will ye may do them good." And now comes the distressing cry for help from the drouth-stricken West, only about three crops in nine years and none for the last two, no feed for stock only what they can pick, so if snow comes they must starve or be killed, as many are doing. No fuel nor money to buy coal, so cold and hunger must go hand in hand. Oh, what if our children were thus suffering, but many of us have friends there and are just bound to help them, but we must not stop there while we have power to work. Again we are met by the false dealing of relief committees, etc., but we are acting in response to a call from Sister Jane White, one of Bro. Almon Adams' congregation for clothing to be distributed among the sufferers. The people here gladly respond to our solicitation and much is being sent. But now she writes me that there will soon be great suffering for food, they have word of several who have died from starvation father north. Only money can buy food, we will try to raise some but crops with us were very short and money hard to get, so I write this as an earnest appeal to our brethren and sisters everywhere who do not have some personal friends there to whom they can intrust their charity to send some money from time to time to Mrs. Jane White, Edison, Furnas Co., Neb., and she will faithfully use it where most needed. We have known her from her girlhood and know she is faithful and true, and any relief sent will be sure to reach the needy ones.

LIZZIE PALMER.

Dear Restitution:

Thinking perhaps some of the dear brothers and sisters will be pleased to hear of the good meetings that have just closed here at Blair, I will send you a short report, as it may help to renew and strengthen some one of you as it has us here to know that the gospel of the kingdom is still being preached and accepted unhindered by the evils of this world that surround us on every hand. Bros. A Adams and Prime were both here, and also J. G. Haupt of Sioux City, Neb., stopped with us over Sunday and delivered two discourses. There were twenty-two discourses preached in all, and five came out and accepted the true gospel of Christ as it was preached with all its purity and love, by Bro. Adams who never seems to tire of the good work before him, regardless of trials and persecutions he has to bear, but ever looking for the great reward which is before him, and seeing others still turning from the way of error, willing to follow their Master, helps to bear him on. Now, dear brothers and sisters, the eyes of your understanding being enlightened, ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe. Let us strive to walk worthy of the vocation in which we are called. Strive to help one another, strengthening our brethren by words of encouragement in meekness and fear, and how much more should we do these things as we see the day approaching, for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. Oh, that we may be able to say like Paul, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. That we may all be found without spot and blameless is my prayer.

ANNA LIPPINCOTT, Sec'y.

Dear Brother Undercoat:

I am sorry to have to tell you that circumstances are no better with me than for the last two or three years. My prospects are no brighter in regard to pecuniary advancement, but like the one writing in the last number of THE RESTITUTION, I have taken the paper so long under its different names and changes of dress that it has become like a dear friend from whom I know not how to be separated. I have been able to pay for it all these years except last year. I do not know to whom I am indebted for the favor but I know I have had the paper free the past year, and I thank you very much for it. I do not know as I shall ever be able to pay for it again, but dear brother, I love the paper, and if I can have it without adding to your personal burdens I shall be glad to have you keep on sending it. I want it till the Lord comes, if I live. We have no preaching here but the printed page and our Bible. There are no brethren near us with whom to assemble and commune. I know that now many are being tried and made white. My prayer is that I may be enabled to endure the trial of my faith which is indeed more precious than gold to me. God bless you.

OBITUARY.

Isaac Shirley died at his home in Nodaway, Mo., on the 9th of Jan. 1895. His health has been feeble for some time and at the last congestion of the brain set in, and he became unconscious and remained so until he passed away. He was buried in Union cemetery, three miles from Savannah, Mo. He leaves a wife lonely and bereaved of her beloved husband. He united with the Disciple church about 40 years ago. He was born in Ind. Dec. 1, 1824. He was 70 years, 1 month and 8 days old, and was married to Miss Emily Adams about forty-six years ago.

WM. R. ADAMS.

William W. Athens died at the age of 71 years 6 months and 18 days. His sufferings which have been for a number of years past were almost beyond human endurance, but so far as known by the writer he never murmured nor complained but with that patience which comes from implicit confidence in Abraham's God, he endured as seeing him who is invisible, believing that what God had promised, he was able to perform.

Among his last words were,

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep."

We have every reason to believe that he now sleeps the sleep that none will ever wake to weep. Having kept the faith surely the crown of life awaits him. "I will raise him up at the last day," says Jesus, the Life Giver. "God's dead men shall live," says the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.

He leaves a wife and other relatives to mourn but not without hope for they believe that Jesus died and rose again, and that those who sleep in him will rise again in the resurrection at the last day, wherefore let us comfort one another with these words.

Sister Athen's father John M. Marsh, recently died. He was past his 89th year. He was strong in the faith.

The writer endeavored to speak words of truth and comfort to a large and attentive audience in the Baptist church in Blair, Neb., from the words of the Savior, John xi. 24, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection, at the last day."

Brother Almon Adams assisted me in the service.

...Woman" Question.

Restitution:

...Joblin's article on the "Woman" question, and Sister Almira Brooks "little say" in THE RESTITUTION, about the same subject have interested me very much.

Why? Because I believe there is a deep spiritual meaning to what Paul means to convey in 1 Cor. xiv. 34 to end of chapter, and 1 Tim. ii. 8 to end of chapter, that our good sister alludes to.

With your permission as advisable, I would like to have my say as coming from a little tract that I have been privileged to read, treating on this very subject, and which I had copied, as it solves, to my mind, the whole mystery; making Paul's meaning so plain that I could not resist the desire to have others read it after the sister said she would like to hear from others, and this is one of my ways as a sister in the church to adduce anything in the cause of truth for the furtherance of the same. Believing the following will explain the subject better than anything I could say.

I am truly your sister for truth.

M. W.

CAN A WOMAN TEACH IN THE CHURCH? WHAT SAYS THE BIBLE?

1 Cor. xiv. 34. "Let your women keep silence in the churches."

This is the verse to which our attention has been been directed, and in order to obtain an understanding as to what Paul is writing about, we must read the entire fourteenth chapter; by so doing we learn that Paul is writing of two things (the gift of tongues and prophecy,) and we know that those who had the gift of the Holy Spirit could speak with tongues, Acts ii. 4, also that all could prophesy, whether they had the gift of tongues or not, 1 Cor. xiv. 31.

Now, we must be very careful to distinguish between the two subjects: 1 Cor. xiv. 2, "For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue (in the church) speaketh not unto men but unto God, (why does he not speak unto men?) for no man understandeth," and why does no man understand? Because he speaks in an unknown tongue, and for this reason Paul declares in the 5th verse, "I would that ye all spake with tongues; but rather that ye prophesy" (the same word means teach.)

Why would he rather have prophesy? (5th verse.)

So that the church may receive edification. All members could not understand foreign tongues, but all could understand the prophets if the (the speakers) taught from the prophets, (Scriptures.) Therefore, Paul writes in the 19th verse, "Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding so that I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue."

Paul places great importance upon teaching (prophesy) in the church, not so much on the gift of tongues.

Why is that? Read the 22nd verse. "Wherefore, tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe (not a sign for the church,) but to them that believe not," and the 27th verse, "If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two or at the most by three, and that by course, and let one interpret, but if there be no interpreter, —let him keep silence in the church."

Now, here we find the same command concerning men, as we had concerning the women:—to "keep silence in the church," but we have read that Paul speaks concerning unknown tongues; "Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak," (speak how?) with unknown tongues, because Paul has not changed his subject, he is still speaking about tongues.

You ask, how do I know he is still speaking about tongues?

Read the 31st verse, "For ye may all (that includes both men and women) prophesy (or teach) one by one, that all may learn and all may be comforted. Paul writes 1 Thess. iv. 18. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

In the early church they were very close to the Word of God. All their prophesy or teaching was taken out of it. As we read in 1st Cor. xiv. 29, "And the spirits of the prophets (teachers) are subject to the prophets."

1 John iv. 1 reads thus, "Believe not every spirit but try the spirits whether they are of God, because many false prophets are gone out into the world."

So according to these testimonies the women were allowed to prophesy or teach, see Acts xxi. 8, 9, providing they were subject to the prophets and taught only those things which they could get out of the prophets or Scriptures.

1 Cor. xvi. 35, "And if they will learn anything let them ask their husbands at home. Learn anything about what? About the unknown tongues.

If it had reference to the Scripture, why all the women in the church would have to be married, or remain in ignorance because they would have no husband to teach them, "For it is a shame for women to speak (in tongues) in the church."

If it were a shame for women to speak out of the Scriptures (prophets) why does Paul say in 31st verse, "that ye may all prophesy." Does not all include the women? Yes; but they must not all speak in unknown tongues.

You may ask, why is it so? Why were not the women permitted to speak in unknown tongues? We can answer that by supplementing another question; why was not one of the gospels written by a woman? Why were not some of the epistles written by a woman?

It appears that all through the Bible, God has chosen men to fill the important positions. All the old prophets were men; all high-priests were men; Christ was a man. God has established a precedent, and is going to have it followed even until the end of the gospel age.

In Eph. v. 21–33, we find another chapter on women in the churches. Also with this chapter read 1 Tim. ii. 8–15, because they are almost parallel in what they teach, and before reading them let us read Eph. v. 32, "This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the church." If you will keep this verse before you you will have no difficulty in understanding, as it is the key to the whole mystery.

Eph. v. 21–33, in connection read 2 Cor. ii. 2 with Eph. v. 26, 27, which makes it plain that the woman is the church, and the man Christ, the second Adam, 1 Cor. xv. 45–47.

1 Tim. ii. 8–15, is the hardest of understanding; the 8th verse, "I will therefore that men speak everywhere." Notice that men is plural.

9th verse, "Also that women dorn themselves in modest apparel." Notice women is plural also.

10th verse, "But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works." Notice the plural here also.

Now Paul makes a change. 11th verse, "Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection." Here you will see the word woman singular, not plural as before, but as one person, one woman.

What is woman the type of?

She is the type of the church. Eph. v. 32.

What is Paul speaking of?

Of Christ and the church.

So then by this we are to understand that the church (woman) must learn in silence with all subjection. Subjection to who?

To Christ, who is the head or husband, 2 Cor. ii. 2.

We all agree that if the church (woman) has anything outside of the teachings of Christ, its head, it is therefore not in subjection to Christ, and she thereby becomes an harlot, Rev. xvii. 1–5, and not the Bride of Christ, Rev. xxi. 9.

These are very plain and important facts, which are worth knowing.

12th verse, "But I suffer not a woman (church) to teach. Why? Because it ought to be in subjection to its head, Christ; not to usurp authority over the man, which is Christ, but to be in silence." Notice the singular here also.

This shows us the position the true church of Christ is in. It must not have any doctrine of its own; it must not do anything of itself, but be in subjection to Christ.

Now, we have not Christ with us, except through the words which he has left us, and through the apostles' writings.

And now, to be in subjection to Christ means to obey his words, and the words of the inspired writers as well.

We begin to see what great importance is connected with obedience: that if we obey not his Word we are none of his, John xv. 3–7 14; xiv. 15.

And if he has commanded that women must not speak (that is testify) in the church, it is not for any man, or body, or people, to say that we can do as we please about it, or to say that women cannot speak, for in the church there is neither male nor female, bond or free, for ye are all one, etc., Gal. iii. 28. Obedience is what Christ requires, and the true church must obey.

But we have learned that women can prophesy in the church, also that they must not speak in tongues.

We find places in the Scriptures where women did prophesy, teach, and minister in the gospel. Acts xxi. 8-9; Phil. iv. 3; Acts xviii. 24-26; Judges iv. 4; v. 1 to 8.

Perhaps it would be well to take up the three remaining verses of 1 Tim. ii.

We find here the reason why Christ should have rule or authority over the church.

13th verse, "For Adam was first formed, then Eve."

1 Cor. xv. 46, "That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual."

47th verse, "The first man (Adam) is of the earth, earthy; the second man (Adam) is the Lord from heaven."

45th verse, "And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit."

We will agree then, that Eve is a type of the church. Gen. iii. 14–15, is never taken to be literal; let us look through the vista of time, discussing the spiritual, and reverence our husband, Christ, Eph. v. 33, but that there should be enmity between the seed (church) and satan. Neither can this be literal, because afterward we have that which is spiritual.

We have had the natural, now we have the spiritual.

13th verse, "For Adam (Christ) was first formed (made immortal,) then Eve (Church,) when this mortal shall have put on immortality, 1 Cor. xv. 53.

14th verse, "And Adam was not deceived." Was not the first Adam deceived? Yes. So then this must be the second Adam, the Lord from heaven. And Adam (Christ) was not deceived, but the woman (church) being in the transgression was deceived.

We know that the church (woman) is made up of those who have come up out of the world, and while in the world were deceived and in transgression.

But Christ, who was in the world and not in transgression, remained pure and spotless, and was not deceived, and is worthy of authority." 1 Tim. ii. 14; Rev. v. 9–12; Heb. ii. 8.

Now my dear brothers and sisters, I feel that you will say with me, that it is a beautiful thought to read in Gen. i. 26–27–28, and discern the mind or purpose of Deity in creating the man, (multitudinous man) Christ and woman, who in mystical child-bearing becomes the bride. All made then, like the man created in the image of God at his appearing, who is to have authority, and rule, and subdue the earth, and have dominion over the whole earth, until all shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-th if pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application to them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that as calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

The New-Year's Little Men and Women abounds with holiday reading of a good kind for children between seven and eleven, from Mary E. Wilkin's "Jimmy Scarecrow," to "A Pretty New-Year Custom," by Margaret Spencer, describes the dainty fun in which little Washington children indulge on New-Year's day. "New-Year's Wishes" is a skit by Bridgeman in picture and verse; Marian Douglas also has a poem, "The Old Woman's Money." In Mr. Thomson's "Great Cats" series, the story is "Manuel and the Jaguar" with half a dozen vigorous drawings by Hambidge. In Mr. Pratt's gay "little Peterkin Vandyke," that enterprising youngster rehearses a "Girl Chickadee" in her part for his big "Poetry Party" which comes off next fall. The "tail of a tie" begins to show itself in Sophie Swett's serial, Polly and the other Girl." Mrs. Humphrey's "Tony and the Porridge Dog" is delightful. Elbridge S. Brooks writes of "Children a Century Ago." The "Doll Dressmaking" papers are begun. The music page has a most "catching" children's song, "The Tale of a Tart." $1.00 a year, 10 cents a number. Specimen (back number) free. Alpha Publishing Company, Boston.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Poetry.

Sometime, Somewhere.

I think to-night of drifted years,
Lying behind in the grave of cares,
Of life's pages, written in tears,
Torn and scattered, sometime, somewhere.

I hear the night-wind's mournful sob,
Like spirit whisp'rings in the air,
And think me, will this heart's wild throb
Cease soon, and rest, sometime, somewhere?

Low murm'rous voices speak to me,
As my thoughts go hither and there
O'er blurr'd past, and wonder if we Shall meet again sometime, somewhere.

Will rough places all be made smooth,
All leveled and even and fair;
All entries and crosses forsooth,
Be banished, sometime, somewhere.

And all the vows, that have betray'd
The ears and hearts of brave and fair,
And all the wrecks, that they have made
Restored again, sometime, somewhere.

And wild humors, of idle hours,
That filled the eye with rarified air,
And painted rainbows, thro' the showers,
Unfold again, sometime, somewhere.

Will broken loves, and severed ties,
That strew dead seas, with wild despair,
In realms of peace, 'neath azure skies—
Be reconciled, sometime, somewhere.

Fair hope inspires; the eye of faith
Invites the wish, and builds the prayer,
Love, there shall rule, instead of wrath,
Sighs change to smiles, sometime, somewhere.

And that far shore of prophetic dreams
With all its mysteries grand and fair,
Will be disclosed, when best it seems,
In God's good will, sometime, somewhere.

—John Lander Kryder.

Christ Returneth.

Christ returneth! How few believe these words, and how few are eagerly awaiting the day of his appearance! The busy multitudes are too intent upon heaping to themselves the world's riches, and are too heedlessly pursuing the fleeting pleasures of the earth to pay any heed to the solemn fact that Christ is soon to appear again. These "scoffers, walking in their own lusts," sceptically inquire, "Where is the promise of his coming?" 2 Peter iii. 3-4. But in spite of the world's unbelief, and although centuries have passed since Jesus left this earth, the glorious news is still true, and the glorious promise still remains to be fulfilled—Christ returneth!

He has a mighty work to accomplish, a work that is unknown to the majority of the world's inhabitants, but which, nevertheless, will affect every one who is alive when Christ appears on the earth. Students of the Old and New Testaments will not be ignorant of the fact that the Lord Jesus Christ is to return from his "journey into a far country," and to consummate the purpose of the great Creator in filling this earth with God's glory. Num. xiv. 21. But, perhaps, some one who reads these lines are not students of the Bible, and only know what their "pastors" and "clergy" teach them. These who rely upon their instructions are in a sad state of ignorance, for how "can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?" Luke vi. 39. Solomon has given good advice to those who desire to know God's purpose as revealed in his Book: "If thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasure, then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." Prov. ii. 3-6. Only those who diligently seek after God will receive his blessing and his reward (Heb. xi. 6), and there is a vast difference between "diligently" seeking God and reading his Word on only one day in the week, and then through the minister's spectacles.

In proof of the statement that the Old and New Testaments plainly foretold the appearing of Christ in glory, a few selections from them will be appropriate.

"When the Lord shall build up Zion he shall appear in his glory." Psalm cii. 16.

"Behold the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots, like a whirlwind to render his anger with fury, and his rebukes with flames of fire." Isaiah lxvi. 15.

"The Lord . . . cometh to judge the earth. He shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth." Psalm xcvi. 13.

"The Lord cometh forth from his place to punish the inhabitants of the world for their iniquity." Isa. xxvi. 21.

"The Lord of hosts shall come down to fight for Mount Zion." Isa. xxxi. 4.

"The same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 11.

"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout." 1 Thess. iv. 16.

"I (Jesus) will come again." John xiv. 3.

These quotations are sufficient to prove that the "same Jesus" who, eighteen centuries ago, was a well-known person in Judea, Samaria and Galilee, will again appear in the same locality, but in a different aspect.

Let us consider what he is coming for, and what our position in his sight will be at that time. The first work which Jesus will perform after his arrival upon the earth will be the judgment of his own household, the bestowal of reward upon those found worthy, and the condemnation of those who have been unfaithful to their Lord and Master. This is illustrated by the parable of the talents, where it is recorded that when the nobleman had returned from the journey into the far country "he commanded these servants to be called to him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading." Luke xix. 15. As Christ himself declared when upon earth, "The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then shall he reward every man according to his works." Matt. xvi. 27. Those who have defiled their garments with the things of the world, or have proved themselves unworthy of the exalted positions of "joint-heirs with Christ," will receive words of condemnation, and be compelled to leave the presence of Christ, and take their lot amongst his enemies to be consumed in the everlasting destruction that is to come upon them. But the faithful followers of Jesus will receive the reward for their tribulation and patience. Their mortal bodies will be changed and made immortal, like the body of their Master; and eternal life—God's gift—will be bestowed upon them amidst the rejoicings of saints and angels. Matt. xxv. 46. The next work which Christ has to accomplish is the setting up of the throne of David, and restoring the children of Israel to their own land as one nation. For centuries the Jews have been a scattered people, in fulfilment of the words recorded in Deut. xxviii. 64, and many other places: "The Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other." But their return is predicted as surely as their dispersion, and the time of their restoration formed the burden of the prophets. "Hear the Word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock." Jer. xxxi. 10. "Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land, and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountain of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all, and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." Ezek. xxxvii. 21-22. The "one king" who is to reign over them is "Jesus of Nazareth, the king of the Jews." (John xix. 19), and when he returns he will ascend the throne of David, as the angel promised when announcing his birth: "He (Jesus) shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 33. This everlasting kingdom is to destroy all other kingdoms, and to extend from "sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." Psalm lxxxii. 8. But the nations who have persecuted the Jews during their dispersion have to receive the punishment reserved for them. The bitter cup of suffering which the poor despised Jews have been compelled to drink is to be filled to the brim, and given to the Gentile nations. The devouring judgments of God will be executed in the earth, and all who "know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, shall be consumed with the fire of his anger, and brought to nothing by the fierceness of his wrath. 2 Thess. i. 8; Mal. iv. 1. "The Lord shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem, and the heavens and the earth shall shake." Joel iii. 16. "The loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. And the idols he shall utterly abolish, and they shall go into the holes of the rocks and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth. Isa. ii. 17-19. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh" (James v. 8); very soon he will come into the earth as a thief in the night, and when least expected. He may come any moment; we know not the day nor the hour. Matt. xxiv. 36.

"It may be at morn when the day is awaking,
When sunlight through darkness and shadow is breaking,
That Jesus will come in the fulness of glory,
To receive from the world "His own."

It may be at midday, it may be at twilight,
It may be, perchance, that the blackness of midnight
Will burst into light in the blaze of His glory,
When Jesus receives "His own."

How will his coming affect you? Will you be amongst those who shall be "caught up" to meet the Lord, and to receive his smile and approbation? Will the coming of the Lord bring peace and joy to your heart? and are you anxiously awaiting the day of his return? To the brethren of Christ, we who have believed his gospel, and been immersed in water for the remission of our sins (Mark xvi. 16) the coming of our Master forms the great hope of our lives. Week by week we celebrate his death and resurrection, and meditate upon his matchless love in laying down his life for us. The prayer of our heart is "Come, Lord Jesus" (Rev. xxii. 20), and in eager anticipation and with longing hearts we look for his return, knowing that it will bring us joy, salvation, and eternal life. Is it any wonder that we long for our Master's return, and daily from the watch tower scan the heavens to catch the first glimpse of his coming glory? We know that while he remains away there is no joy or rest for us, and that only his glorious presence can bring us that rest and that peace which we long to enjoy. Thus we daily pray for his speedy advent, and as we see by the signs of the times that we are very near to that day of blessedness, we lift up our heads and with our hearts full of love to him who has done so much for us we patiently await the hour when angel voices shall whisper to us, "The Master is come, and calleth for thee." John xi. 28.

But to those who are not "in Christ," and who have not accepted God's offer of mercy, the coming of the Lord will bring terror and punishment, "Unto them that look for him shall he appear," bringing salvation (Heb. ix. 28), but to those who are not looking for him, and to those who are his enemies, he will bring the righteous judgments of God. He comes to claim his kingdom, and to establish righteousness and peace in the earth; but before accomplishing that great work sinners must be swept from off the scene. As in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day of Christ's appearing. Carelessness and indifference will be exhibited by the world, and until the storm bursts upon them they will remain perfectly callous to God's truth. For years the ark was being prepared, and the invitation given to all who would enter, but Noah only and his family believed the truth of the coming flood. They entered the haven of security, and the Lord shut them in. Gen. vii. 16. In vain those outside cried for mercy; the flood gates of heaven were opened, and the judgments of God descended and "took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv. 39. Now is the day of God's grace, and the Ark (Christ Jesus) is still open to all who will fly to him for refuge, for it is written that in the day of God's fiery indignation "the Lord will be the harbor (margin) of his people." Joel iii. 16. They will be sheltered from the coming storm, and under the shadow of his presence they will dwell in safety while the thunders of heaven's vengeance are descending upon the earth. Like the angels who warned Lot to leave the wicked city of Sodom, we would entreat you to "escape for thy life." Gen. xix. 17. God, in his infinite mercy and love, has devised the means of salvation. He has provided a sacrifice for sin, and now he invites all who will to believe his gospel, and render obedience to his commands, and so obtain that salvation purchased at such a cost. Is all this nothing to you? Do you spurn the offer of mercy, and turn a deaf ear to that gracious invitation? Has your heart become so cold and so hard that even the marvellous love of God fails to kindle one spark of gratitude? If so, we would urge you to consider one all important question, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" Heb. ii. 3. The time is short, and the night is far spent. Soon will dawn that glorious day when the Sun of Righteousness shall shine forth in all his glory. Before that time the "ark" will be closed, and you are outside! But perhaps the icy hand of death will be laid upon you unexpectedly, and you will be folded in that chilly embrace of the tomb, where, if not "in Christ," you must for ever remain!

Christ returneth! He comes to bring life and everlasting joy to those who are watching for him, and to gather unto himself all those who have been covered with his name. Christ returneth! and his own will go forth to meet him. Will you be amongst that number, or will you be amongst those who are left in the midst of his enemies? While Christ is still tarrying we invite you to "acquaint now thyself with him, and be at peace; thereby good shall come unto thee. Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart." Job xxii. 21-22.—W. A. Brewster.

Strength of the British Army.

The official returns of the strength of the regular British army at the close of 1894 show that there are now rather more than 222,000 officers and men on the regimental rolls, and, including the first-class army reserve of men who have been thoroughly trained within very recent years and who are liable to be called upon for service any time, the full strength of the regular militia forces is about 303,000 men. These, however, include the West Indian Regiment, the Royal Malta Artillery, and a few corps raised in other parts of the world for special local duty, but who, of course, reduce the demands upon the ordinary troops. Of the 222,000 about 106,000 are quartered at home, nearly 73,000 being in England and Wales, 3,800 in Scotland, nearly 26,000 in Ireland, and the remainder in the Channel Islands, a very large proportion of those in England being quartered in the southern parts, and convenient for the prompt mobilization of any army corps at short notice. The colonies and Egypt take the services of nearly 38,000 troops, and 78,000 are in India and Burmah. The Egyptian garrison absorbs quite 5,000 British soldiers of all kinds, besides the many British officers who are attached to the Khedive's forces either to train or command the native levies: and in the Mediterranean, Malta has a garrison of 8,500 and Gibraltar one of nearly 5,000, besides the small force kept in Cyprus. Hongkong has a force of about 3,500; Bermuda and the Straits Settlements have each about 1,500; Canada has only about the same number; South Africa, 3,400; the West Indies, 3,000; Ceylon, 1,700; and the remainder of those troops on colonial duty are spread over the West African settlements, Mauritius, and St. Helena, Australia containing no imperial troops.

Suicides in France and Italy.

According to statistics which have just been published, it appears that in the last four years 20,000 have killed themselves in France, whereas in Italy, with a population almost equal, the number of suicides during the same period was only 8,000. M. Henri Fouquier explains that in Italy the Roman Catholic religion is still strongly rooted in the population, and that it acts as a deterrent against self-destruction. Moreover if Italy is not so rich a country as France, poverty there is less severely felt and more easy to bear than in France, thanks to the Italian sunshine and blue sky. Passing on to examine what may be called the quality of the suicides in the two countries, M. Fouquier points out that in Italy self-destruction is in most cases the result of a love drama, whereas in France, out of an average of 6,500 suicides a year there are not more than about 300 that can be classed as suicides of passion. In France money, or rather the lack of it, is the cause of self-destruction. M. Fouquier considers that about 2,000 suicides a year may be due to insanity; but he points out that it is now demonstrated by the statistics that in France 4,600 persons a year, that is to say, about ten persons a day, hang, drown, or stifle themselves with the fumes of charcoal, or blow out their brains, because they are ruined, because they are prosecuted by their creditors, because they cannot earn enough to procure food, and are dying of starvation.

Pride is emptying our churches in some places. A proud few excel in dress and the proud many, who cannot shine equally as well, refuse to go to church, and teach their children to regard all churchgoers as proud.—Christian Witness.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 5.

THE FAMINE AND JOSEPH'S BRETHREN.

Why did God make the cattle in the dreams of Pharaoh seem to come from the Nile? Because the people of Egypt are dependent upon the river for the fruitfulness of their lands.

After the Astaboras unites with the Nile it runs a distance of twelve hundred miles to the sea, without a tributary stream. Its course is through the highest part of the valley, and on either side are countless canals that draw off its waters for the farms and gardens of the husbandmen. Thousands of buffaloes turn the 50,000 musical water-wheels, or "sakeeahs" that pump the water from the canals into other trenches, and perhaps as many pumpers toil at the counterpoised leathern buckets of the water-engines, that are almost ceaselessly kept going.

The river ebbs and flows. It begins to rise in May and reaches its highest point in August. It then runs over the banks and covers so much of the land that it looks like an archipelago of green islands. The richest kind of earth is brought down with the water, and spread over the land. One man says that if the annual rise of the river is only twelve cubits, a famine will follow, if thirteen, grain and fruits will be scarce, if fourteen or fifteen, there will be enough, and if still higher, there will be a great plenty.

The rise is caused by incessant rains thousands of miles away. It hardly ever rains in Egypt. For seven years following Pharaoh's dreams this annual overflow of the Nile is to be so great that abundant crops will be raised, then the yearly inundations will decrease, and the hot winds dry up vegetation, and a dreadful famine will ensue.

Would you like to see the meadows of Egypt as they looked in Pharaoh's time? They were covered with grasses tall as a man, that was very thick and close on the ground. An ox lying down could eat for a whole day without getting up.

It says the thin ears of wheat were blasted by the east wind? There are scorching winds in eastern countries, much like the hot winds of Nebraska and Kansas.

How productive the wheat must have been. Yes, there is still a kind of wheat in Egypt that bears seven heads on one stalk; and often from three to eighteen stalks spring from a single grain.

Joseph has two sons now, one named Manasseh, or "Forgetting," and the other Ephraim, or "The Fruitful." Both are prophetic names and refer to a period when the children will be multiplied into great nations.

The store-houses have been built, all the surplus grain of the seven years of plenty has been carefully laid away. There is so much that it cannot be counted and the famine has begun. It is in all lands. The storehouses are opened and the Egyptians come and buy. Other people hear the good news, they need not starve to death now, they can get food in Egypt for themselves and for their flocks.

Joseph's brethren do not like to come but there is no other way, they must have bread or die. When they came into Joseph's presence, they bowed down with their faces to the earth, just as he had seen them do in his dreams. He knows them, but they do not recognize him. He makes himself act toward them as a stranger would act, speaks roughly to them and calls them "spies." He makes believe that they have come to see how the land of Egypt can be conquered, now that it is so helpless. In this way he succeeds in drawing from them the story of the dear old father's and the younger brother's welfare. "They are twelve brethren" they say, "all one man's sons," "one is not," "the youngest is with his father in the land of Canaan."

They seem to suppose that Joseph is dead, they have never heard from him. But Joseph remembers his dreams. He wants his brothers to think so. He knows that it will do them good. Wicked, prosperous people cannot see just how their cruel treatment of others looks, until they get into some trouble themselves. Joseph still plays that he is a stranger to his brethren. He tells them it must be proved that they are not spies. One of them must go and fetch their youngest brother, the rest of them must be cast into prison until it is seen whether their words are true or not. He imprisons them all for three days then tells them that he fears God, binds one of them and lets the others return to Canaan. The lesson is effectual, they do think.

They are sure that all this trouble has come upon them because of their guilty conduct in selling their brother. How remorseful they feel as they remember his anguished pleadings!

And Reuben does'nt help the matter any. He says, "I begged of you not to sin against the child, and now, behold, his blood is required?—God has seen it all and he will visit our iniquity upon our heads."

Joseph is sorry for them, but he wants them to see that they have sinned, that true repentance in the sight of God may follow. Just as God feels sorry for us when he leaves us for a time in darkness and trouble, that we may remember and may turn away from our sins.

But Joseph does not mean this to be the end of the lesson; he has their money put with the food in the mouth of every man's sack.—How frightened they are when they find it; they know at once that God has something to do with their trouble.

But they go to their father and tell him what a time they have had, and that Benjamin must go with them on their next journey. The father strongly opposes them even after Judah offers to become surety for the boy, but he is forced to yield when told that food can be procured in no other way. He sends Joseph balm and honey, spices and myrrh, nuts and almonds for a present, and tells his sons to take double money this time, as it might have been an oversight, putting the other money back in their sacks.

They come to Egypt and are brought into Joseph's house. This frightens them more than ever, but their animals are fed, and water is given them to wash their feet, the steward has calmed their fears. They give Joseph the present. He asks about his father, and seeing Benjamin, says, "God be gracious to thee my son." It is hard for him to act the stranger now, he has to go out of the room and cry.

AUNTIE WINGS.

Why were they Re-baptized?

In Acts 19th chapter we have an account of 12 men who were re-baptized by Paul.

1. When were these twelve men baptized, and by whom? Were they baptized in the time of John and by him, or were they baptized by Apolos?

2. Why was their baptism defective, or why did Paul have them re-baptized?

3. If their baptism was defective was the defect primarily in their faith, or in the baptism, either in its form or administration?

This is practical and we desire sincere, Scriptural answers, to help many who are doubting.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION is to restore the final manifestation of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a thorough belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"THE shortest way to prevent heresy is to teach the whole truth, and the surest way to refute it is to meet it by an unreserved declaration of Truth."

MANY people go astray because they build upon something which they assume to be the truth; and others follow one truth to the exclusion of another.

THE Bible teaches that there is no future life without a resurrection of dead ones. Science teaches that immaterial existence is non-existence; it does not recognize conscious existence independent of the body.

THE Deaconesses Hospital at Cleveland was burnt a few days ago; among the lives that were lost was that of Miss Minnie Burner, of Huntingberg, Indiana, who died for or on account of one of her patients, John Allemyer, but he died all the same.

THE Rev. Dr. Lunn of England has come to this country to promote the Federation of Trinitarian Protestant Churches, having found it so far impossible to unite on any other basis. We do not blame them for this last effort to unite, because they cannot unite upon the gospel, being strangers to the covenants of promise.

"IF and why—If eternal judgment is not a process of judging, why is eternal punishment said to be a process of punishing? If eternal redemption is not a process of redeeming, why is eternal death said to be a process of dying? If eternal salvation is not a process of saving, why is eternal destruction said to be a process of destroying."

A TELEGRAM from Constantinople to the London Times states that the ministry of public works has decided to reconstruct the aqueduct which supplied Jerusalem with water in the time of King Solomon. The work will entail an expenditure of about two million francs and will necessitate the making of a tunnel 3,850 yards long."

OF the Christian's hope it has been said that Christ has promised to change our present nature from its present constitution of weakness and corruptibility, and inefficiency and mortality, and to make it like his own—strong, incorruptible in substance, glorious and effectual of faculty, and absolutely immortal; a nature that cannot die; ensuring a life that shall never end. In such a nature enjoyment of being will reach its highest pitch, and be subject to no deterioration from the lapse of time, and enjoyment of being in its highest form, faculty and relations."

"WITH power to possess all, he owned nothing, was true of Jesus. He had no place to be born in but a stable, no closet to prayer in but the wilderness, no place to die but the cross of an enemy, and no grave but one lent by a friend. He had absolutely nothing to bequeath to his mother. He was as free from the mercenary spirit as though he had belonged to a world where the idea of property was unknown. There is nothing like it—nothing that approaches it in the history of universal man. It stands out divinely and perfectly original."

"WILL brother Joblin be kind enough to tell us what he thinks Mark xi. 13 means, and oblige I. C.?" The difficulty is not stated, but we presume the request comes from one who wonders that Christ should look for fruit before the season for it. What we think about it, may, or may not be worth much; but we think our Lord would not curse a tree for not bearing fruit, if the reason was that it was not time for it to bear. The most reasonable explanation of the words ("the time of figs was not yet") we know of is, that it is a parenthesis intended to show that the absence of figs was due entirely to barrenness.

THE Jewish Chronicle says "the establishment of Jewish agricultural colonies in various parts of the Holy Land is, as we have already seen, a very remarkable and significant sign of the times; being as it is a tangible and practical evidence of the fact that the country so long desolate, is starting again into renewed vigor of life, and that the ancient people of God are commencing once more to gain a firm and sure footing upon the sacred soil."

C. J. VAUGHAN speaking of apostolic labors says, "These Galileans speak still. Each one of them being dead, yet speaketh. No philosopher, no poet, no orator ever speaks as they speak. There is no book like it; its enemies themselves being judges. It is a book continually on trial. No other book was ever tested, sifted, racked like this book—tried indeed to the uttermost—yet it lives and God's servants love it. It comes out of every process of interrogation however severe, however malignant, greater, mightier still, and more vital. The Spirit of God touched those lips and therefore it is life or death to listen to it."

WE would be glad to tell our readers who the author of the following lines is if we knew. But it is enough to know, perhaps, that the writer had been with Jesus:—

"If we sit down it set of sun
And count the things that have been done,
And counting find
One selfish thing at one word
That we'd the heart of him who heard:
One glance most kind,
That fell like sun-light where it went
Then sun we count the day well-spent.

But if there is all the livelong day
We've seen a chance by yea or nay:
We've seen it all
We've [illegible] that we can leave,
That helpless [illegible] leave,
Nor turn a hand,
That help'd none and left nothing cost,
Then count that day as worse than lost."

Saved by Law or Gospel Which? No. 13.

According to promise we now proceed to show that the sabbatarians do not keep the law of the Lord concerning the sabbath graven on the tables of stone; but a law of their own enactment,—the same being represented as the law of the fourth commandment. We do not mean that this is done with fraudulent intent, because really they themselves are first defrauded. We hold that the law of the fourth commandment was altogether divine; that if it is not all divine, it is all human; that the God who said "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy," also said, "six days shalt thou labor and do ALL thy work; but the seventh is the sabbath of the Lord." [They had to be told what up to this time they were ignorant of see Neh. ix. 13, 14.] "in it" [The sabbath of the Lord.] "Thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates."

The same God who said "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy," also said, "Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitation."

The same God who said, "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy," also told them they were not to do their own ways, nor find their own pleasure, nor speak their own words, but call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable. Is. lviii. 13.

The God who said, "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy," also said, "The burnt offerings for every sabbath is two lambs of the first year." This was part and parcel of its provisions. The offering could only be made by one priesthood in all the world—the Aaronic; and it could be offered only in one place in the world—Jerusalem.

Moreover the God who said, "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy," also said, "Whosoever doeth work therein, SHALL BE PUT TO DEATH."

This is the penalty for infraction. This is the law of the sabbath of the Lord from the word "Remember at the top to the word death at the bottom. Take away one of its provisions or specifications, or penalties, and then it is only a part of the law of the Lord—a mutilated form of the law. God's law of the sabbath contained various provisions and a penalty. If the law is in force the provisions and penalty are in force. If the provisions and penalty are not in force the law is not in force. There is no sophistry here.

And now as to the sabbatarian law. It begins the same as the other, "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do thy work." They omit "ALL" thy work,—yes; actually change the law of God to suit themselves, presumptuously set aside its provisions, suspend the penalty, and make amendments to suit their convenience, their climate, and their notions. They do not keep the seventh day sabbath of the Lord, but a sabbath of their own; and keep their own sabbath in their own way. They have no right to do as they please with their own sabbath; but when they claim to keep the sabbath of the Lord while violating its provisions and setting aside its penalty they should be shown that they are committing a pious fraud upon themselves, and attempting the same upon others.

Instead of saying, "Thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy sons, nor thy daughters nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates," this is the way—the practical way they put it is, "Thou shalt not do any work, except such as kindling fires, preparing meals, washing dishes, and paying fare and riding to meeting on the street cars, or other vehicles, and no penalty. They doubtless think death is a trifle too severe, and stoning an antiquated, if not a barbarous mode of execution, and so conclude to have no penalty at all. This absence of a penalty proves it an enactment of their own. But of what force is any law without a penalty?

While lecturing on this subject in Cleveland we had two large placards, one on each side of us, that could be read all over the house. One was the law of the Lord and its penalty, death; and the other the law of the sabbatarians without any penalty. And several of them admitted that that was the way they practiced it.

A correspondent thinks it is better to keep the seventh day than the Pope's sabbath. The writer should know by this time that we expect to be saved by gospel, not by law. We keep no Pope's sabbath, nor the sabbath of any other man or woman either. But if sabbatarians can ordain a sabbath to suit themselves, and claim that it is the sabbath of the Lord, what is to prevent the Pope from doing the same? But all the sabbath laws that may be enacted do not ensnare those who hearken to the prophet like unto Moses and observe whatsoever he has commanded,—among his commands is this one: "Let no one therefore rule you in food, or in drink, or in respect to a festival or of a new moon, or of sabbaths, which are a shadow of future things, but the body (casting the shadow) is Christ's. What need of the shadow after the Body is come? No; these human sabbath laws do not interest those who know that Christ has "blotted out what was written by hand in ordinances which was against us, and has removed it from the midst, having nailed it to the cross." Dinglott of Col. ii. 14. Sabbatarians are obliged to read the word "yearly" into this passage in order to make out a case. Where is their authority? And all that has been written concerning "two tables" vanishes into thin air when examined in the light of 2 Cor. iii. 7, "Now if the dispensation of death engraved in letters on stones was attended with glory, so that the sons of Israel were unable to look steadily into the face of Moses because of the brightness of his countenance—which dispensation is passing away, how, rather, shall not the dispensation of the spirit be attended with glory? For if the ministry of condemnation be glory, much more does the ministry of righteousness. ...."For if that is being annulled through glory, far superior is this remaining, in glory?" Positively, then, the ten commands engraven on stones were a dispensation of death when in force; and it is little short of madness, it seems to us, to try to place one's self under what has been annulled, especially when it could not give life before it was annulled. There is no sophistry here.

Our correspondent talks about keeping the seventh day. Dare he say he keeps it holy unto the Lord? Holy means separate, or set apart. Does he DO ANY WORK? if so, he keeps it unholily,—unites it to the six days, does not separate it, and the claim that he keeps it, under those circumstances exhibits his unholiness and presumption. We can show him scores of positive commands of Jesus that would keep him so busy that he would have no time or strength to spend on inferences.

"The Mediator is not of One."

"What the ... was added because of ... the seed should ... been made; ... been ordained through angels by the ... one." Gal. iii. 19, 20. Am. Bible Union.

Perhaps not one person in a thousand understands these two verses. Paul is proving the superiority of the Abrahamic to the Mosaic covenant, and exhibiting Judaizers who wanted to [illegible] the Galatians under Mosaic law. The translation by the A. B. U. throws great light on his meaning if we observe the difference between "a mediator" and "the mediator."

Paul teaches that Moses, being a mere man and servant, was only "a mediator of one" party or of one nation—the Jews mediating for them a temporary law. Heb. iii. 5, 6. "But THE Mediator is not of one;" that is, Christ the Son of God as well as Son of Abraham, is by nature and office the Mediator of "all nations." The "one Mediator between God and men," able to mediate the plan of eternal redemption for all obedient believers, 1 Tim. ii. 5. And "God is one" over all classes, "seeing it is one God which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and the uncircumcision through faith.....for the same lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him." Rom. iii. 29, 30; x. 12. Verse 20 might well be translated, "But the Mediator is not of one; moreover, God is one."

Christ is here shown to be "the Mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises" than the Mosaic. Heb. viii. 6. The greatness or superiority of the Abrahamic as contrasted with the Mosaic is manifest in eight particulars. (1) Moses was mediator of the Mosaic covenant; but Christ the ever-living High-Priest is Mediator of the Abrahamic. Heb. vii. 21 to 25. (2) The Mosaic covenant was dedicated with blood of calves and goats, which can never take away sin; but the Abrahamic by the precious blood of Christ which "cleanseth us from all sin." Heb. ix. 19, 20; 1 Jno. i. 7. (3) The Mosaic covenant could not confer righteousness, eternal life, nor the eternal inheritance; but the Abrahamic confers all these on its heirs, through Christ the Mediator. Gal. iii. 18, 21, 22. (4) The Mosaic covenant was only provisional or temporary, till Christ should come; but the Abrahamic is "an everlasting covenant," Gal. iii. 19; Gen. xvii. 7, 8. (5) The Mosaic covenant bequeathed chiefly to one nation; the Abrahamic promises to bless "all nations," especially the believing portion of them. Gal. iii. 8, 9. (6) "As many as are of the works of the law are under the curse" but "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law," that the blessing of Abraham might come on all that believe. Gal. iii. 13, 14, 22. (7) The Abrahamic covenant in which we stand is older than the Mosaic, and cannot be disannulled by it. Gal. iii. 17. (8) The Mosaic covenant had a priesthood that was instituted without an oath, was changeable, made many offerings, and brought not perfection; but the Abrahamic has the priesthood of Christ who was made Priest with an oath, has an unchangeable priesthood, and "by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." Heb. vii. 11, 20, 21, 24, 28; x. 14.

The Eastern Question.

"The vision of Obadiah," whatever reference it may have had to former times, surely has its final fulfillment in the latter days. "For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen: as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been."

"But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance, and there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions. And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau; for the Lord hath spoken it. . . . And saviors shall come up on mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's."

This consummation is yet future. And it comes in connection with the house of Jacob and the house of Joseph kindling a flame in the stubble field of the house of Esau, so the houses of Jacob, Joseph, and Esau must be in existence at this present time.

They are not known by these names, they must now be called by other names. Now will we find the house of Joseph in Palestine since before Obadiah wrote; yet the house of Joseph shall be a flame, and come in contact with the house of Esau, who are not to be found in their ancient home either. But they must be somewhere, under other names.

Isaac blessing Esau said, "by thy sword shalt thou live" (Gen. xxvii. 40); what people in all the world may be characterized as living by the sword? This describes the Turks. Their history has been one of conquest, subjugation, plunder, robbery. The territory they now rule was got and is kept by the sword. The sultan, or emperor of Turkey has no crown. Other sovereigns are installed by being crowned, but the sultan is girded with a sword, and so invested with the supreme authority over the people that "live by the sword." Is it not wonderful that the sultan has never had a crown, but instead has a sword?

The Turks have an annual feast called Bairam. The sultan then goes in state, attended by the dignitaries of his court, to the mosque, and there offers in sacrifice a ram, in memory of the ram caught in the thicket which was substituted for their father Isaac. For Isaac was the father of Esau, as well as of Jacob; and by this ceremony they assert their identity. Other Mohammedan peoples do not keep the feast of Bairam. It is a Turkish peculiarity, and has been observed by them from time immemorial.

Turkey, then, is the house of Esau, or Edom. Other Scriptures show Edom to be in existence in the last days: "These shall escape out of his hand, even Edom." Dan. xi. 41. "I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel." Ezek. xxv. 14. "They shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab," Isa. xi. 14, at the time of the second return and millennial peace.

Turkey, or Edom, is the present treader-down of the land of Israel. "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke xxi. 24. Jacob, the supplanter, follows close on Esau's heel Gen. xxv. 26; thus the end was shown from the beginning.

"In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David. . . . that they may possess the remnant of Edom. . . . and I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, . . . and they shall no more be plucked up out of their land." Amos. ix. 11-15. Explain it as you please,—we may differ a little in our views of this passage,—but we cannot leave an Edom and an Israel out of the final settlement of the Eastern Question. And there is strong proof that Edom is Turkey.

What then? "Stubble," says the prophet. Worthless; it has served its day, and dried up; it is ready to be removed, it is easily set on fire.

The prophet's "stubble," is as appropriate an image of Turkey as the statesman's "sick man" is. But mark this: it is the House of Jacob that is to be a fire, and the house of Joseph (not the Jews, but the other house of the ten tribes of Israel), that is to be a flame, to kindle the final conflagration in the stubble field of Esau.

And we do not see that Israel is the cause of the present Bulgarian [illegible] Russian [illegible]. It [illegible] very [illegible]. We do not now see the house of Jacob and Joseph may come [illegible] and Israel, [illegible] and [illegible] fire.

The Lord's programme will be carried out, He will by His providence [illegible] the hand of his people, and [illegible] to the [illegible] to search the scriptures for the signs of the times. If we are teachable, and really desirous of light, we will suppose a press through which light may be disseminated. It is [illegible] the way papers which are inclined to ignore our views, and go beyond "the ancient pale" are allowed to struggle along, and at last die for want of support.

God only knows means, and he will hold us responsible for support of the press as well as the preacher. What are we doing to get and give God's light? A. J.

China's Demoralization.

The court at Pekin and the Administrative committee at Tientsin continue to deceive the people, and apparently themselves, about the real state of things. They avenge a defeat by cashiering the few good officers they possess and when their sleepy eyes are opened to the necessities involved by the collapse of their power and resources they first send to Tokio as an envoy a European without authority, and secondly, when they have chosen and properly commissioned a Chinese Ambassador of high rank they unite with him the General of the Black Flags, Shaw-yeu-hoon, who has been governing Formosa and who there stamped himself a barbarian by offering rewards for the butchery of unarmed people. The consequence is that this gentleman also has been found indigible for the peace mission, which was all the more suspected in the Japanese capital because, while China seemed determined at last to sue for peace in a regular and serious manner, its government was really straining every nerve to renew the conflict. We are not sure that Japan can blame Pekin for trying hard to buy up the Chilean navy and seeking to enlist in Germany a few dozen commissioned and non-commissioned officers. The old maxim, "If you wish peace prepare for war," is not entirely without significance at the present moment for the prostrate Middle Kingdom.—London Telegraph.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have [illegible] or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Poetry.

It Matters Not.

It matters not if sun or rain
Fall in my life's short day,
Or strains of joy, or strains of pain,
Burst from my lips alway.

It matters not if gloom surround,
And darkness gathers now,
And even rest with thorns be crown'd
My weary aching brow.

It matters not how rough the road
That I must journey through,
If I but reach the blest abode
Of him who suffered too.

And naught of earth can move my heart,
Its glitter nor its woe,
For Christ has said, I'll give you rest,
Lay your sorrows down.

And ever more I close my heart
To this vain world of sin,
I've chosen now the better part,
And Jesus reigns within.

And when at last life's journey done,
I stand on death's lone shore,
Oh! may I have the blessed one
To gently bear me o'er.

First Epistle to Korinthioi.

Chap. 1.

1. Paulos, an apostle of Jesous Christos, called through God's will, and Sosthenes the brother,

2. Unto the church of God, unto those who have been sanctified in Christos Jesous, the church that is in Korinthos, namely saints who have been called along with all those who invoke the name of our Lord Jesous Christos in every place of theirs and ours:

3. Grace be yours and peace from our Father and from our Lord Jesous Christos.

4. I thank God always for you, for the grace that hath been given you in Christos Jesous,

5 Because in every way have ye been made rich in him, in all word and in all comprehension,

6. Even as the testimony of the Christ hath been assured in you;

7. So that ye are not lacking in any gracious gift, ye who are accepting therefrom the revelation of our Lord Jesous Christos:

8. Who will also assure you ultimately to be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesous Christos.

9. God is faithful, through whom ye have been called into a partnership with his Son Jesous Christos our lord.

10. And I exhort you brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesous Christos, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no schisms among you and that ye be readjusted in the same mind and in the same opinion.

11. For it hath been made known to me by those of Chloe, concerning you, that there are strifes among you.

12. And this I say, namely, That each one of you is saying, I am of Paulos and I of Apollos and I of Kephas and I of Christos.

13. Hath the Christ been distributed? Hath Paulos been crucified for you, or have ye been baptized into the name of Paulos?

14. I am thankful I baptized none of you except Krispos and Gaios,

15. That no one may have said that ye were baptized into my name.

16. And I baptized also the household of Stephanos; as for the rest I know not whether I baptized any other.

17. For Christos sent me not to baptize but to announce the good-tidings, not in wisdom of word, that the cross of the Christ might not be made void.

18. For the word of the cross to those who are being lost is without savor but to those who are being saved, to you namely, is God's ability.

19. For it hath been written, I am going to lose the wisdom of the wise, and the understanding of the understanding ones I am going to set aside.

20. Where is the wise man? Where is the scribe? Where the disputant of this age? Hath not God made savorless the wisdom of the cosmos?

21. For since in the wisdom of God the cosmos did not through its wisdom comprehend God, God became satisfied through the insipidness of the heralding to save those who trust it.

22. Since also Joudaians are asking for signs and Greeks seeking after wisdom,

23. We forsooth are heralding a Christ who hath been crucified, to Joudaians a stumbling-block, and to nations a thing without savor:

24. But to those who have been called both Joudaians and Greeks Christos, God's ability, and God's wisdom.

25. Because God's insipidity is wiser than men: and God's weakness is stronger than men.

26. For look at your calling, brethren, that not many wise according to flesh, not many able, not many well-born are there.

27. But the insipid things of the cosmos hath God chosen out, that he may put to shame the wise men, and the weak things of the cosmos hath God chosen out that he may put to shame the strong things;

28. and (lit. the unborn) the base-born things of the cosmos and the despised things hath God chosen out, the things that are not, that he may abrogate the things that are;

29. That no flesh may boast in the sight of God.

30. But of him are ye in Christos Jesous, and he hath become wisdom for us from God and righteousness and sanctification and redemption (the process).

31. That even as hath been written, The one who boasteth, let him boast in the Lord.

CHAP. 2ND.

1. And I, when I came unto you, came not in the way of a superiority of word or wisdom announcing unto you the instrumental testimony of God.

2. For I decided to see nothing in you, if not Jesous Christos and him crucified.

3. And in weakness and in fear and in much trembling I came to be with you,

4. And my word and my heralding was not in persuasive words of wisdom, but in demonstration of spirit and ability:

5. That your faith might not be in men's wisdom, but in God's ability.

6. But we do talk wisdom among the adults, though a wisdom not of this age nor of the rulers of this age, who are being abrogated.

7. But we talk God's wisdom in a mystery, the wisdom that hath been hidden away, which God predetermined before the ages unto our glory.

8. Which no one of the rulers of this age hath comprehended: for if they had comprehended it, they would not have crucified the Lord of the glory.

9. But even as hath been written, eye hath not seen and ear hath not heard, nor hath there arisen upon the heart of man what sort of things God hath prepared for those who love him;

10. But unto us God hath revealed them through the Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth out all things, even the deep things of God.

11. Moreover what man knoweth the things of the man (human things) except the spirit of the man that is in him? Even so also no one knoweth the things of God except the Spirit of God.

12. And we have not received the spirit of the cosmos, but the spirit that is of God, that we might know the things that have been graciously granted us by God.

13. Things also that we are talking, not in didactic words of human wisdom, but in didactic words of spirit, comparing spiritual things with spiritual things.

14. Moreover a soul-man doth not accept the things of the Spirit of God: for they are insipid to him and he cannot comprehend them, because they are spiritually inquired unto.

15. But the spiritual man inquireth into them all, though he is being examined by no one.

16. For who hath comprehended the mind of the Lord, and who will instruct him? But we have Christ's mind.

CHAP. 3RD.

1. And I brethren have not been able to talk to you as unto spiritual ones but as unto carnal ones, as unto children in Christ.

2. I have given you milk to drink, not adult-food, for not yet were ye able, moreover neither yet are ye able.

3. For are ye still carnal, for whereas there is envy and strife in you, are ye not carnal and walking according to man,

4. For whenever one sayeth, I am of Paulos, and another, I am of Apollos, Are ye not men? (merely)

5. What then is Apollos and what is Paulos? Deacons through whom ye experienced faith, even as the Lord gave to each.

6. I myself planted, Apollos watered, but God caused the growth.

7. So then neither is the one who planteth anything nor the one who watereth, but God who causeth the growth.

8. The one who planteth and the one who watereth are one; but each one will receive his own wages according to his own toil.

9. For we are God's co-workers; ye are God's husbandry, God's edification.

10. According to the grace of God that hath been given unto me, as a wise architect have I laid a foundation, and another is building upon it: but let each one see to it how he buildeth upon it.

11. For no one can lay another foundation than the one that lieth, which is Jesous Christos.

12. And if any one buildeth gold, silver, precious stones, wood, herbage, stubble, upon this foundation,

13. Each one's work will become manifest: for the day will disclose it; because it is being revealed in fire; and the fire will test what sort each one's work is:

14. If any one's work abide which he hath built thereupon he will receive wages:

15. If any one's work be burned down, he will have suffered the loss: but he himself will have been saved though even as through fire.

16. Know ye not that ye are God's inner-sanctuary ("Holy of Holies") and that the Spirit of God is dwelling in you?

17. If any one corrupt God's inner-sanctuary him will God corrupt, for the inner-sanctuary of God is sacred, which ye are (sacred or sanctified).

18. Let no one deceive himself: if any one thinketh that he is wise among you in this age, let him become foolish or insipid that he may become wise.

19. For the wisdom of this cosmos is without savor in the estimation of God, for it hath been written, He it is who graspeth the wise in their subtlety.

20. And again, The Lord comprehendeth the reasonings of the wise, that they are without utility.

21. So then let no one boast in men. For all things are yours;

22. Whether Paulos or Apollos or Kephas, or a cosmos, or life or death, or things present or things destined to be, they all are yours;

23. And ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's.

COMMENT.

In my work of translation so far I have repeated "comments" purposely to fix the point or the correction of the C. V. and R. V. clearly in the mind of the reader and to show that the use of the word or idiom is uniform throughout the writings of the New by the different authors, a unanimity of use which has not been properly recognized by previous translators and which has resulted in great misapprehension to candid inquirers after the truth of revelation. But from now on in my work I shall presume this rudimentary teaching to have been sufficiently emphasized and shall hasten on to a conclusion of my translation. I will say again in answer to many queries as to why I give the proper names in their original form instead of accepting the conventional changes, that there has been such unwarrantable changes of significant names that I have thought best to give all the proper names their original orthographical form so that the reader can at least see what changes have been made and find out if possible the why and wherefore of this tampering not only with the Greek, but even with the King's English. One thing is certain—that the prophetic names are all significant and when translated as they can be the significance is wonderfully suggestive and startling to the earnest enquirer.

"Sosthenes" "One who strikes to save."

"Korinthioi" "Korinthos"—adjective from "Korinthos" the name in heathen mythology of the son of Jupiter, from whom the city was so-called.

"Korinthos" "one who caresses or fondles" like a little maid, a kore namely the city was noted for its effeminacy and harlotry as well as for its wealth and art culture. Harlotry had pervaded even the church and you see why Paul writes as he does in this epistle on this subject and so specifically in regard to the true marriage relation. There was great need of it.

"Of theirs and ours" modifies "place" instead of "Lord" as given in the R. V.

"Word" instead of "utterance" R. V.

"Comprehension" instead of "knowledge" R. V.

"Are accepting" instead of "waiting for" R. V.

"Partnership with" instead of "fellowship of" R. V.

"Readjusted" instead of "perfected" R. V.

"Say" instead of "mean" R. V.

"Word" instead of "words" R. V.

"Understanding" instead of "prudence" R. V.

"Age" instead of "world" R. V.

"Cosmos" instead of "world" also R. V.

"Instrumental testimony" or "testimony" instead of "mystery" R. V. No wonder so much mystery has been made of the gospel unnecessarily.

"Be" instead of "stand" R. V.

"Adults" instead of "perfect" R. V.

"Who are being abrogated" instead of "which are coming to nought" R. V.

"Before the animate ages" instead of "before the world" R. V.

"Cosmos" instead of "world" R. V. in the phrase "spirit of the world."

"Graciously granted" instead of "freely given" R. V.

"Them all" instead of "all things" R. V.

"Children" instead of "babes" R. V.

Bro. Underwood:

The enclosed has been handed me and as it shows much thought, as well as Biblical and Historical research, I send it for the paper thinking perhaps others might be interested in its peculiar statements.

AND WHO ARE YOU?

Introduction.—This question to you, may seem impertinent. It is not so intended. Our object by it is only to arrest your attention till you read these two pages.

1. At the close of Solomon's reign over Israel, when Rehoboam ascended the throne, the kingdom was rent, ten of the tribes revolting and setting up an independent kingdom to the north under Jeroboam.

2. This kingdom remained till it was finally subjugated and carried away to the northeast beyond the Euphrates by the Assyrians, B. C. 712.

3. The house of Israel thus remained in this land till in the days of Darius the Mede, when they escaped as a body through the gates of the Caucassian mountains to the northwest, and from that date, as a people, almost to the world, and themselves, they have ever been lost.

4. From this point they moved westward, leaving their traces upon monuments around the Black Sea and to the west, and marking the rivers and the peoples whither they went, such as the Dan-ube, Dan-iester, Don or Dan, and Den—Denmark, etc.

5. A wave of these people from the vicinity of the Crimean Sea came into England bearing the name of the Kymbri—Kamri, from Omri, one of their kings while yet in Palestine. Another wave, as the Gaels, came into Wales, naming the country for themselves, Gaels or Wales, their name coming from Gael-ile. Another wave came to Scotland as the Scots, their name derived from Scythia, Scychar, Succoth.

6. These people in the east, around the Black Sea, in western Asia and eastern Europe, were called Angles, as the sons of God. Further west, in Denmark, in Germany, and in England, the Saxons — I-sax-ons—I-sac's-sons.

7. These are the people who as the clay—Gaels—Goths entered in and broke up the Roman Empire. These people religiously have ever been protestant and have never submitted to the Latins. Reader, who are you?

THE SCEPTER.

1. "The Scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law Giver from between his feet till Shiloh first come: and unto him Judah shall the gathering of the people be." Gen. xlix. 10.

2. Judah was the father of two sons, by Tamar, who became the heads of families, Pharez and Zarah. The circumstances of their birth and the scarlet thread are brought to view in Gen. xxxviii. and especially in verses 27 30.

3. The rulers of Israel were through the line of Pharez, and run thus: Judah, Pharez, Esrom, Aram, Aminadab, Nashon, Salmon, Boaz, Obed, Jesse, David, Solomon, Rehoboam, Abijah, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Jehoram, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, Amon, Josiah, Zedekiah, Tea Tephi. Thus 21 generations. But in Zedekiah the Scepter departs from view, and Jeremiah carries his great-grand-daughter, Tea Tephi, Zedekiah's daughter, to Egypt and thence to Ireland, where she died at Tarah B. C. 554.

4. The Zarah line, which never appeared in Israel as a house of rulers, and which left the camps of Israel and associated themselves with Duke Amalek's sons who became the Pharoah's of the XIX Dynasty, while Israel was yet in bondage, runs thus: Judah, Zarah, Ethan, Mahol, Calcol, Dadhol, Ezra, Sru, Heber Scot, Bonbain, Aylumhain, Tait, Aghenoin, Iamh Fionn, Heber, Adhnoin, Feidin Glas, Neanmal, Nunghadh, Afeid, Earchadh, Dengfatha, Brathn, Breogan, Bille, Gathan, Herenmon. Thus 23 generations beginning with Judah; one less than the Pharez line. These are a line of kings

The Milesian line. They founded Troy, and Attica in Greece, Carthage, in Africa, conquered and ruled Spain, and in B. C. 567 conquered the Damnans who escaped from Palestine in time of the Assyrian conquest and overran Ireland.

5. B. C. 563 this Heremon or Eochaidh, whose mother Miraim, was of The Damnan Royal line and his father Gathan, or William the conqueror, of Irish history, of the Milesian or Zarah line, and Tea Tephi, Zedekiah's daughter, were by Jeremiah married, and thus the two houses of Pharez and Zarah were united, and Heremon was seated upon Jacob's stone and crowned, and thus Judah's scepter was continued.

6. This Royal family, with Jacob's stone passed into Scotland under Fergus, and from there to England under James I. And thus Queen Victoria is of the House of David through Tea Tephi, and of the House of Judah through both Pharez and Zarah, being the 130th generation from Adam. And thus Judah still wields the scepter over Israel-sons, and will till, and after Jesus returns, who will have David's throne, rule over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

Report of Labor.

Bidding Bro. and Sister Willey, and our new found friends good by, we leave Marion for Valparaiso where we go to spend one night and part of a day with my two dear sons Fred and Chad Austin, who are both studying at that place. There we met Sister Evans and Sister David Foore's son. The visit there which was all too short ended Saturday morning and again we start for Vicksburg to fill the appointments near there. Monday hu-band and I bid each other good by, he to go to Argos, Ind., I to go home to transact a little business and join him at Argos the following Friday, but on reaching father's home in Watson Monday evening, I was taken sick with la Grippe (or a very near relative of it) and did not reach Dutton until Friday evening and was not able for two weeks to do any thing of any account, did not even have ambition to eat, and that means something quite serious for an English woman. While I was sick at home the Elder was also suffering at Argos with a very severe cold which threatened to close his labors there, but the friends took such good care of him that the good work went on, interest increasing until the last. The Lord blessed the words spoken and nine persons embraced the faith and were baptized into the name of Christ. This church is one among the many for active work. Here they have large class of young people and at the frequent social and prayer service, they with the elder ones were always at their post with Bible in hand, ready to testify, or read an appropriate text, and with the earnest prayers and exhortations of all the interest constantly increased. Of the Elder says he attributes the success of that meeting largely to the united work of the church. "For where two or three are agreed as touching one thing it shall be done," and here was the whole church working earnestly together for the upbuilding of the blessed cause of truth. Every week the prayer meeting is held, every Sunday a class of nearly 100 meet for Sunday school. They are striving to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. Here Brothers Wagoner and Hatch speak every four weeks, giving them preaching every two weeks. God bless the dear faithful shepherds of the flocks, and the followers in the fold not only here, but at every point where truth is being promulgated. The elder reached home Jan. 10th, where we rested until Jan. 19th when he went to Vicksburg to remain until Tuesday, then to join me at McBride's where I went on Saturday the 15th to strengthen the things that remain, and sow the seeds of truth waiting God's own good time to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom. Here we stayed only a week, the weather was quite bad all the time, congregations small until the middle of the week, good attention, but no additions. On Saturday Jan. 29th we went to Millbrook, where we are now, holding meetings. We have had very severe weather, almost a blizzard since Saturday last. Today, Monday, is pleasant but very cold, however, there is plenty of wood in this region and with warm rooms, and warm hearts all beating in unison in the good work of presenting God's truth, we have courage to work on, asking divine help and the prayers of our dear brethren everywhere, that we may be strengthened for the work, and souls may be rescued from sin. Yours always working for the cause of truth.

B. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

Law of Adoption.

We do not find our caption in so many words in the Bible, yet we do find its meaning there, or find it there in substance. We all agree that there are certain conditions to be complied with, certain requirements to be observed, and a certain time to be crossed over, before men and women as aliens and strangers can be accounted as children of God. No more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God. These conditions, which mark out the line of demarkation between a foreigner and a citizen, a sinner and a saint, is what we are pleased to call the law of adoption. When this law is obeyed, our relationship is changed, we become children of God by adoption, and may cry Abba Father. The word adoption occurs about five times in the Bible, and is rendered sonship in the Diaglott, which is the same as adoption, implying a change of relationship. This law of adoption which is simply the gospel of Jesus Christ believed and obeyed, is universal in its application, including all nations both Jew and Gentile. There is no difference, all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. So says Paul to the Romans iii. 23. He also says, What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise, for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin." verse 9. While Simon Peter testifies that God put no difference between us and them purifying their hearts by faith. Acts xv. 9. Having now found that the middle wall of partition or separation, between Jew and Gentile, that once made a difference between them, has been broken down, and taken out of the way, so that one and all come on one common level before God,—all accounted as aliens and strangers, instead of fellow citizens and saints. Let us teach and invite one and all to come and be saved by first hearing the gospel, the Word of the kingdom of God, and understanding it, then honestly believe it, or receive it the Word, into good and honest hearts. Then repent or reform by turning square about, the evidence or fruits of which will be, a changed life, a changed conduct and conversation. In short the love and affections and actions must all be changed from that of sin to that of righteousness, from that of the world and Satan to that of God. This would be good evidence of a changed person, a converted person. Then are our past sins forgiven? I answer no, while thousands upon thousands say, yes. Brethren and sisters, we should be very careful here, as this is a very important and critical point, and there is a natural tendency in the human heart to conform to prevailing customs and thus drift away like drift-wood down the stream into the mighty deep. An intelligent faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ which works by love, will purify or change the heart, mind and affections. Then are we not Christians when this is done? No, by no means, as the seed, the truth, the Word of the kingdom is just now taking root and beginning to germinate, unfolding the love of God to fallen man, leading him to repentance which reforms him by changing his character. Then is this not enough? We say no, as our state or relationship before God is not changed, our past life while we were enemies to God by wicked works (Col. i. 21,) stands against us and condemns us to death. Now, what shall we do to have our past sins forgiven, and come into favor with God whom we have offended so often? Let God speak in his Word to man and let us hear and obey—"Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." This is what good old Peter taught and commanded the Jews to do for remission of sins. But is this same God-given "law of adoption applicable to us Gentiles for the remission of sins? We answer yes. And why not, has some one raised another bar of separation between us and them, and must have another plan of salvation? Hark, hear ye him, "Thus it is written and thus it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead, And that repentance and remission of sin should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem. So all nations are sinners, and must repent, and be baptized into his name for remission of sins, as this was preached and enjoined at Jerusalem in fulfillment of the Master's words or stand condemned. There is no way to get away from this conclusion, without revolting against God's law of adoption, the first principles. These terms of pardon, terms of reconciliation, were to be preached to every creature, he that believes and is baptized shall be saved." Who dare say they were saved before they believed and were baptized? Paul tells his Gentile Roman brethren (Rom. vi. 17,) that had been servants of sin, that they had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine (law of adoption) being then made free from sin, become servants of righteousness, servants of God. Having received the adoption of sons." Gal. iv. 5. This is God's law of adoption as I read it, and the platform on which I stand. Who will stand with me?

Power to do good is the true and lawful end of inspiring; for good thoughts, though God accept them, yet towards men are little better than good dreams, except they be put in act; and that cannot be without power and place, as the vantage and commanding ground.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Dear Restitution:

It does not seem but a short time since we sent you pay for the dear old paper, I do not mean it to be dear in price, but dearly beloved, beloved for the truth's sake. We have a great deal of preaching here, but very little gospel as is taught in THE RESTITUTION. It is all the preaching we have here. Oh, how we would love to have some one to come here and hold a meeting who talks THE RESTITUTION doctrine. There are several here who believe in the doctrine of life only in Christ. We could pay expenses. I think this is a good opening for the truth. All the teaching that has been done here has been through THE RESTITUTION and myself. If some brother will come to Bedford, Iowa, and will hold 15 days meeting I will see to it that his expenses are all paid while here and car fare. Will some brother correspond with me at Bedford, Iowa? Dear Brother Underwood find enclosed four dollars to pay my subscription, etc. Your brother in Christ looking for the soon coming kingdom.

L. D. HATFIELD.

Editor Restitution:

Enclosed find money order for $1.50 for which you will please send me the paper another year, as my paid up time is about out. I hope we will have another feast of short letters from our brothers and sisters of the household of faith. We all need encouragement in these truly perilous times. It seems to me the like has never been before, crime in every conceivable form is abroad all over the land, and confidence in mankind is almost a thing of the past, we are still trying to do a little for the Master as opportunity offers. One has obeyed here since we last wrote, and some others are about persuaded, to our Father in heaven be all the praise. We would like to have a few meetings some time this winter if we can get some brother to come and preach some for us. This leaves all well. Yours in the one faith.

J. F. PIERSON.

Dear Restitution:

Suffer me through your columns to send Christian greeting to the scattered ones of the household of faith. We have been permitted by on kind Father above to walk the business of another year and to see its close, while many of our kindred, blood-bought relations have been called to lay down thier labors to sleep in Jesus till he comes and calls them out from among the dead ones, to n glorious incorruptible life, to reign upon the earth with him in the age to come. Our lives have been graciously prolonged for some wise purpose, and we should be thankful to him who doeth all things well and strive to find out if possible what that purpose is. And while seeking to know our Father's will let us not forget to bear the fruit of the spirit, and not be surprised at trials and tribulations, for such is the lot of the Christian in this life. It is through tribulation that we must enter the kingdom of God. The fruit bearers must be purged, more fruit is wanted by the Master. The branch that bears no fruit is cut off and is burned. Chastisement is an evidence of our sonship, because we are sons he sends his spirit into our hearts, by which we are enabled to cry, Our Father who art in heaven, Holy and Reverent be thy name, Thy kingdom come.

The year of the redeemed is coming sure, and it behooves us to repeat the prophet's question, "But who shall abide the day of his coming? And who shall stand when he appeareth?" Those need have no fear who have made their peace, calling and election sure in the probitionary state; who shall have walked uprightly, worked righteousness, spoken the truth in his heart, hath not slandered his neighbor, nor done any evil to his neighbor: who will not receive or endure an evil report against his neighbor; who despises villainy in any form, but who honoreth them that reverence God. He that keepeth the King's commandment, that putteth not his money out to usury, will receive no gift against the innocent, but will be just to all. He that doeth these things shall never be moved. The righteous shall never be moved, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth. Prov. x. 30. While being tried and tempted on all points as we journey through this world of sin and death, let us think on him who for the glory that was set before him endured the cross and despised the shame, even him whom God raised out from among the dead, and remember that is him who says, I am he that was dead, and now having been raised to life again, I live for ever more; and to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcome and am set down in my Father's throne. His promise, I am coming again then will I receive you. He is coming with the voice of the archangel, with God's trumpet whose pealing notes will awaken God's sleeping saints to earth's remotest bounds, which will seem as but the clap of distant thunder to a godless world, but in fact the signal of coming doom.

HENDERSON MURPHY.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I have long been a reader of THE RESTITUTION from which I take much comfort, and get much Bible truth. This is a sad evening, not a despairing one. Three years ago today my dear companion, C. B. Dewey was laid away to rest. My Heavenly Father gave me strength that I needed. I am trusting fully in his promises, looking for the return of his dear Son. I realize his loving kindness every hour of my life. I have so many dear friends, such a good home with my son and daughter, so many blessings to be thankful for. I do not know of any one that takes THE RESTITUTION here except myself. I send some away, distribute somemt home hoping good may result. I want to do what I can for my dear Master.

Your Sister in patient waiting for the coming of the Master.

H. C. DEWEY.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find $2.00 for the paper. We have been here at Crowley, La., for seven years and the only gospel that we have heard was when father was down to see us some years ago. I am well pleased with the country. There are a great many coming here from all parts of the north. The southwest part is the best place I know of. Any one wanting information or maps drop me a line and I will answer.

We would be glad to see any of the brethren that come this way.

Your brother and sister in the faith.

L. S. & M. J. HATCH.

Editor Restitution:

Again we have had good meetings at Silver Creek. D. M. Hudler came the 15th of Jan. and delivered four discourses to large and attentive audiences. His subjects were Daniel's Vision, The Resurrection, and Sinning against the Holy Ghost. A listener asked for the latter and said it was rendered satisfactory but never had been before this time. We wish Brother Hudler could be with us one year. We think much good would be done.

MINA KNODLE.

Dear Restitution:

For many years I have been a silent reader of your valuable pages. They come to me weekly almost as an old friend. I enjoy communications from the brothers and sisters, especially those of my younger days, who are getting fewer as the years go by. They will soon all be sleeping that sleep which shall know no waking, till the trump of God shall sound, and those who have fallen asleep in Jesus, shall come forth to reign with him forevermore. I have left my native state (Iowa) and came to reside in Nebraska in order to be near my children. We have suffered very severely here through the drouth which prevailed all over the state during the past season. Many thanks are due Sister Libbie Palmer of Alden, Iowa, for her untiring efforts in behalf of the famine-stricken people of this section of the country.

We have a church here of about 50 members which is carefully looked after by Elder I. S. Miller, who is a faithful Christian and an ardent worker in the cause of Christ. Please find enclosed subscription for another year.

Yours in the hope of the resurrection.

JULIA A. MYERS.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 for the paper for another year and $3.50 to send papers and tracts to brothers and sisters that are too poor to pay for it themselves. We could not get along without THE RESTITUTION. We have no preaching place nearer than 25 miles. We had not heard any one of our faith preach for about eight years until during the World's Fair when we went to Chicago and heard Brother W. H. Wilson, and then last fall we drove over to Rensselaer to hear Bro. Conner. I love to read the letters of the brothers and sisters telling of their faith in our soon-coming King.

Pray for me brothers and sisters, that I may be found worthy when he comes to make up his jewels.

Your sister in hope of the soon coming kingdom.

EMMA HART.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Fairview, N. C., Jan. 2, 1895, Sister Carrie Whitaker, daughter of Robert & Louisa Whitaker. She was about 21 years of age, and died of consumption after lingering for several months. She was buried at Liberty Church in Henderson Co. N. C.

While in health, though young, she witnessed a good confession, Sept. 6th 1891 by being baptized, believing the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ. She lived an orderly Christian life, and died hoping to receive eternal life in God's everlasting kingdom when Jesus comes. The funeral service was short, conducted by Elder J. M. Lyda who read a part of the 14th chapter of the book of Job, and singing the hymn "Rock of Ages" and prayer.

The readers of THE RESTITUTION will be sorry for Brother and Sister Whitaker and family, when informed that this is the third daughter they have given up in the bloom of life to meet the last enemy, death. There is nothing like being able to point to an empty grave and say he is not here but is risen again, and is now Lord of the living and dead, having brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, being alive forevermore, holding the keys of death and hades, telling us the gates of hades shall not prevail against his church for all power or authority belongs to him, and because I live ye shall live also. Nothing like this to dispel these clouds of darkness and sorrow. Yes; to know that it is God's will that of all that he hath given to Jesus he will raise it up at the last day, and that they will be God's children and can die no more, but shall go into life eternal. This gives hope and comfort while sorrowing, and we cry out, oh, for the time to come when the last enemy shall be destroyed when death shall be swallowed up in victory, when this groaning creation will no longer groan, when the strong one shall be bound, and spoiled, and the captive go free, when the former things shall have passed away and all become new. Even so, come Lord Jesus.

J. M. LYDA.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

TIME.

We stand to-day on the set of Time.
Whence we gaze far out to sea,
Whose waters tenderly lave our feet.
Then dance back laughingly;
But each rippling wave bears from the shore
A grain of the gleaming sand,
And frailer begins our hold on earth.
And narrower grows the strand.

"He Raiseth Up."

"He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory." 1 Sam. ii. 8.

Oh child of God, is your frail bark tempest-tossed, cast to and fro upon the adverse billows of a stormy life? Do you find your fears great, and strength small, when a dark storm cloud overcasts your sky? When you find the contest fierce and strong, and feel faint and weary in your efforts to stem the tide? take courage, and remember that "he raiseth up." Peace be unto you, my brethren, is the sweet benediction of the Prince of Peace. Should darkness and cloud enshroud your life, and the turbulant roaring of the sea of adversity alarm you, then place trust in him who can calm the troubled waters, be still and let your hope and trust center in him who "raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory." Remember this, it is "the poor out "of the dust," and "the beggar from the dunghill" who trust him, that he has concluded to exalt, to be the associates of "princes," and to make them inherit the throne of glory," and not the proud and exalted of this life. "For God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble."

The magnificence of "the throne of glory" exceeds human conception. On a calm still night as the moon peered from behind the cloud, and illuminated the landscape with glory, have not our hearts been lifted up in adoration to the Creator who has thus so beautifully adorned the work of his hands? And yet, this magnificence "shall be confounded," and even the sun, the glorious orb of day, will hide its face in shame, when the "throne of glory" shall be erected in Mount Zion; for then, he whose personal glory outshines the sun in its mid-day strength, "shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." And he who would share with him in the throne, must reach it by or through the pathway of humility. "He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory."

Remember, that it is the Lord who thus "raiseth up," him that "overcometh." If you are only an overcomer, it is of little consequence to him whether you are "the poor out the dust," or the beggar from the dunghill, he will "make you inherit the throne of glory." Listen to his gracious message from heaven while seated upon the throne of his Father, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, ("the throne of glory") even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." The heart that can conceive of the glory, and appreciate the honor, conveyed in the above promise, will certainly thrill with joy, and expand with love, toward him who would thus bless an overcomer, though he may be simply "the poor out of the dust" or "the beggar from the dunghill."

Remember that "he raiseth up." Men love exaltation, distinction and renown, to be lifted up above their fellows, and be considered great men. But alas, what does it amount to? Know ye not that all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of the grass, which today is, and to-morrow is gone for ever? Fleshly men cannot endure longer, or rise higher in glory than the flesh-nature will permit. It is quite circumscribed both as to duration and the degree of honor or renown to which he may attain. Perhaps no man ever had an opportunity of enjoying everything that the fleshly heart could desire equal to King Solomon, and his conclusion of the whole matter rendered after experience and reviewing the frailty of the flesh-nature, was, that it is all "vanity and vexation of spirit." because he saw that "in death man hath no pre-eminence above a beast." In this life he may attain a high degree of eminence above his fellows, but in death he hath no pre-eminence above a beast." "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." But when "he raiseth up the poor out of the dust," they will leave behind them the "dust"-nature, and be equal unto the angels, neither can they die any more. He will then set such "among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory." Of such it will never be said: "Uneasy the head that wears a crown," the occupants of this throne will have nothing to fear, "for the Lamb which is in the midst of the the throne shall feed them and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

If we should canvass the whole range of human aspirations what can be more desirable than to be admitted to "the throne of glory?"

Should our ambition lead us to strive to obtain this unparalelled honor, the first step will be to become an heir by complying with the law, by which you can be made a citizen of the "commonwealth of Israel)," for all "strangers from the covenants of promise," made with regard to that "commonwealth" are considered as "aliens," and no alien can ever reach the throne, no matter how much he may desire it.

The law by which an alien can become a citizen, an heir, is explicitly given in Gal. iii.: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." "As many of you have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

After becoming an heir, a very humble childlike walk in life is necessary not only for admittance to the kingdom, but to a place of honor in that kingdom.

The question as to who should be the greatest in the kingdom, troubled Jesus' disciples, and they accordingly appealed to him, saying, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

The above teaching is of a very decisive character. On another occasion he said: "Whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister: and whosoever will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all."

Fleshly exaltation will cease with the termination of the fleshly life. They who are satisfied with that kind of exaltation, and take pleasure in the pride which accompanies it, will speedily reach the condition in which he will have "no pre-eminence above a beast," and a dead animal at that.

Dear reader, let the Lord exalt you, those who seek self-exaltation will come to naught every time. "He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, (language descriptive of the lowest estate) to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory." This exaltation will never cease. Fleshly pride is but the forerunner of destruction. "All flesh is as grass, and all the glory of (fleshly) man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower (glory of flesh) thereof falleth away."

But all who from the heart receive and obey "the Word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you." The Lord "raiseth up" all such, and by a rigid discipline in the school of humility, are being trained as a "chosen generation," a "royal priesthood," (even the poor out of the dust," and "the beggar from the dunghill,") as an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness (of the surrounding apostasy) into his marvelous light," that he may set you "among princes," and to make you "inherit the throne of glory."

Before the crown is reached, the trial of faith must be endured. The discipline of humility is frequently as severe a trial of faith as many can endure. Says Jesus: "Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted (change the spirit of of pride for humility) and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." And "whosoever will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all." Upon self-examination do we find our faith equal to this trial? God grant "that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, (be set among princes) and glory, (inherit the throne of glory) at the appearing of Jesus Christ."

"Let the brother of low degree rejoice in he that is exalted: (after God's way) but the rich, in he that is made low; because as the flower of the grass he (the rich who trusts in his riches) shall pass away. For as the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth; so also shall the rich man fade in his ways." But the crown of glory, reached by the pathway of faith, obedience and humility, "fadeth not away." This is "the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the Word of the truth of the gospel." "Finally, be all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous; not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise, blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing. For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile."

W. H. WILSON.

First Epistle to Korinthioi. Chap. 4.

1. In this wise let a man account us as it were subservients of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God.

2. As for the rest, here one seeketh among the stewards, that one may be found faithful.

3. And for me it is of least consequence that I am being inquired into by you or by a human day. Moreover I do not even inquire into myself,

4. For I am conscious of nothing by myself. Moreover not in this wise have I been justified: But the one who is inquiring into me is the Lord.

5. Lo then, judge nothing before due time, until the Lord shall have come, and he will illuminate the hidden things of the darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the hearts, and then the praise will occur to each from God,

6. And these things, brethren, I have metaphorically transferred to myself and Apollos for your sakes, that in us ye may have learned that which is not above the things that have been written, that ye may not become puffed up one above another to the disadvantage of the other.

7. For who hath distinguished thee and what hast thou that thou hast not received? And if thou didst, receive it why art thou boasting as though thou didst not receive it?

8. Already are ye made full already have ye been made rich; without us have ye attained kingships; and would forsooth that ye had become kings that we also might be reigning as kings along with you.

9. For I think God hath set forth us the apostles last, condemned to death as it were, that we may have become a spectacle to the cosmos and angels and men.

10. We are without the savor (of wisdom) for Christ's sake but ye are men of thought in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong, ye are renowned but we without honor,

11. Until this very hour even we hunger and thirst and are naked and buffetted and without a stable place,

12. And we toil working with our own hands; scoffed at we bless (invoke a blessing), persecuted we endure it;

13. When defamed we call in aid (the spiritual aid meant); off scourings as it were of the cosmos have we become, a refuse of all things until this very now,

14. Not in the way of admonishing you am I writing these things, but I am fostering you my beloved offspring as it were.

15. For if ye should have myriads of child-leaders in Christ, yet not many fathers will ye have: for in Christ Jesous through the gospel I begot you.

16. I exhort you then, become imitators of me.

17. For this very reason I sent unto you Timotheos who is my beloved offspring and a faithful one in the Lord; and he will remind you of my ways in Christ Jesous, even as everywhere in every church I am teaching,

18. And as I do not come unto you certain ones have become puffed up.

19. But I am going to come speedily unto you, if the Lord will and I'm going to know not the word of those who have become puffed up but their ability.

20. For not in Word is the kingdom of God but in ability.

21. What will ye? That I come unto you with a sceptre or in love and a spirit of meekness?

CHAP. 5TH.

1. It is generally reported that there is fornication among you, and such fornication as there is not even among the nations, as for instance that a certain woman hath her father;

2. And ye have become puffed up and have not the rather sorrowed that he who hath done this thing might be taken away out of your midst.

3. For I though absent in the body but present in the spirit have already judged as though present, the one who hath wrought this out this wise.

4. When ye and my spirit have been gathered together in the name of the Lord Jesous along with the ability ("host" possibly "the angelic host") of our Lord Jesous,

5. That ye surrender such an one to Satanos for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord.

6. Your boast is not good; know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole mixture?

7. Cleanse out the old leaven that ye may have a new mixture even as ye are unleavened: for Christ hath become our paschа.

8. So then let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven, nor with a leaven of evil and wickedness, but with unleavened loaves of sincerity and truth.

9. I have written unto you in the epistle (probably one sent by the hand of Timotheos) not to mix up with fornicators.

10. Not all with the fornicators of this cosmos, nor with the greedy and rapacious nor with idolators; since ye are under obligation forsooth to come out of the cosmos;

11. And now I have written unto you not to mix up with them if any brother be named a fornicator or a greedy person or an idolator or a scoffer or a drunkard or a rapacious person, that ye do not even eat with such an one.

12. For why should it be mine to judge those outside? Are ye not even judging those within?

13. But those without God is judging. Take the wicked one out of your own midst.

CHAP. 6TH.

1. Doth any one of you dare, having a matter with the other to be judged before the unjust, and not at all before the saints?

2. Or know ye not that the saints are going to judge the cosmos? And if the cosmos is being judged in you (in the use of you) are ye unworthy of least judicial-seats?

3. Know ye not that we are going to judge angels? And forsooth not mortal affairs at all?

4. If then ye have mortal judgment-seats, do ye seat those who are despised in the church?

5. I say it to your shame. Is there no one in your midst wise in this way, who can judge discriminatively in behalf of his own brother?

6. But brother is being judged in relation to brother and that too before the unfaithful.

7. Now then it is wholly your weak yielding that ye have judicial conclusions between yourselves. Why do ye not rather suffer wrong? Why do ye not rather suffer deprivation?

8. On the other hand ye do wrong and deprive and that too brethren.

9. Or know ye not that unjust ones will not inherit God's kingdom? Err not. Neither fornicators nor idolators nor adulterers nor incapables (not capable of enduring hardship) nor men who practice sodomy,

10. Nor thieves, nor overreachers, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor the rapacious will inherit God's kingdom.

11. And these some of ye were: but ye have been washed, but ye have been sanctified, yea, ye have been justified in the name of the Lord Jesous and in the spirit of our God.

12. All things are lawful for me but not all are expedient (or profitable or useful): all things are lawful but I will not have yielded subjection to any mere thing.

13. The foods for the belly and the belly for the foods: but God will abrogate both this and those. And the body is not for fornication but for the Lord and the Lord for the body:

14. And God both hath awakened the Lord and will awaken us through his own ability.

15. Know ye not that your bodies are members of Christ? Shall I then take the members of Christ and make them members of a harlot? May it not occur.

16. Or know ye not that the one who cleaveth to the harlot is one body? For, saith he, the two will be for one flesh:

17. And the one who cleaveth to the Lord is one spirit.

18. Flee the fornication. Whatever sin a man may commit is outside the body, but the one who committeth fornication is sinning against his own body.

19. Or know ye not that your body is an inner-sanctuary of the sanctified spirit within you, which ye have from God, and that ye are not your own?

20. For ye have been exchanged (bought) for a price. Also ye have glorified God then in your body.

CHAP. 7TH.

1. Now concerning the things of which ye wrote, it is a good thing for a man not to touch a woman.

2. But because of the fornications let each one have his own wife and each woman have her own husband.

3. Let the husband yield the obligation due to the wife, and likewise also the wife to the husband.

4. The wife doth not exercise official-power over her own body, but the husband. And likewise also the husband doth not exercise official-power over his own body, but the wife.

5. Do not deprive one another except it be by consent somewhat for a season, that ye may devote yourselves to the votive-prayer, and again be together that Satanas may not tempt you because of your incontinence.

6. And this I say by consent not by direction.

7. But I desire all men to be as I myself am, however, each one hath his own gracious gift from God, the one in this wise and the other in that.

8. I say moreover unto the unmarried and the widows, it is a good thing if they remain even as I am.

9. But if they are incontinent, let them marry. For it is better to marry than to burn (or be enflamed with lust he means).

10. But on the married I enjoin, not I but the Lord, that a wife be not separated from a husband: If though one be separated indeed, let her remain unmarried or be restored (this is the word generally translated "reconcile" in so many other passages) to her husband; and that a husband leave not a wife.

12. And unto the rest say I not the Lord, if any brother have an unfaithful wife and she be satisfied to live with him, let him not leave her;

13. And if any wife have an unfaithful husband and he be satisfied to live with her, let her not leave the husband.

14. For the unfaithful husband hath been sanctified in the wife and the unfaithful wife in the brother: since otherwise your offspring are unclean, but now are they sanctified,

15. But if the unfaithful (husband) be separated let him remain separate. The brother or the sister hath not been bound as bondservants in such matters; but God hath called us in peace.

16. For what knowest thou wife, whether thou wilt save thy husband? O what knowest thou husband whether thou wilt save thy wife?

17. If not, let each walk even as the Lord hath distributed to each, as God hath called each; and in this wise am I directing in all the churches.

18. Hath any one who hath been circumcised been called, let him not become as though not circumcised; hath any one been called in uncircumcision, let him not become circumcised.

19. The circumcision is nothing and the uncircumcision is nothing but a watchfulness to keep God's commandments.

20. Let each one remain in the calling in which he hath been called.

21. Hast thou been called as a bond-servant? Do not care: but if thou art able also to become free use it the rather.

22. For the one who hath been called as a bond-servant in the Lord is the Lord's freed-man. Likewise the one who hath been called as a freeman is Christ's bond-servant.

23. Ye have been bought (lit. exchanged for) with a price. Become not bond-servants of men.

24. Let each one, brethren, abide in that in which he hath been called in the estimation of God. ev ᾧ here is just such a phrase as καθὼς καὶ in the passage "And now Father glorify me with the glory I had with thee," etc. Should read "in thy estimation."

25. Now concerning the virgin I have no specific direction of the Lord to give: but I give an opinion as one who hath been mercifully considered by the Lord to be faithful.

26. I suppose then this to be a good thing because of the present necessity, namely for a man to be in this wise is a good thing. (that is to be a virgin).

27. Hast thou been bound to a wife? Do not seek a release. Hast thou been released from a wife? Do not seek a wife.

28. But if thou shalt marry thou hast not sinned: and if the female virgin marry, she hath not sinned. But such will have tribulation in the flesh; and I am sparing of you (the Greek word "virgin" is used both of the male and female).

29. But this I say, brethren, the season hath been shortened. For that which remaineth would that those who have wives might be as though they had not;

30. And those who lament as though they did not lament; and those who rejoice as though they did not rejoice; and those who are dealing in the market as though they did not possess;

31. And those who are using the cosmos as though not abusing the use. For the fashion (or scheme) of this cosmos distracteth;

32. And I would that ye be without undue anxiety. The unmarried man is anxious about the things of the Lord, how he may please the Lord:

33. But the married man is anxious about the things of the cosmos how he may please his wife,

34. And the wife also and the virgin hath become subject to anxieties. The unmarried (virgin is anxious about the Lord's matters that she may be sanctified in body and spirit, but the married woman becomes anxious about the thing of the cosmos, how she may please her husband.

35. And this I am saying for your own advantage, not that I may cast a net over you, but that your good form and diligence for the Lord may be in a way least distracted.

36. If however any one thinketh that he is conducting himself in an unbecoming manner towards his virgin, if he be too forward, and it ought to occur in this wise, let him do what he will he is not sinning. Let them marry,

37. But he who standeth steadfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath qualification concerning his own will, and hath decided this in his own heart namely to watch to keep his own virgin, will do well.

38. So then indeed the one who weddeth his own virgin doeth well: and the one who doth not wed doth better.

39. A wife hath been bound for as long a time as her husband liveth; but if the husband hath fallen down to sleep (died) she is free to be married to whom she will, only in the Lord.

40. She is more blessed though if she remain in this wise in my opinion; and I think I have God's spirit also.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the preservation of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ in many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

If you have lost your first love, find another that is more fervent and constant than the first was.

EVERLASTING life, eternal glory, never-ending joy is promised to the saints. An eternity of joyous being is in front of every saint,—lives there one prepared to come short of it?

THE words of Bro. Foore have the ring of the right metal. He says it is the gospel that draws men to Christ—that it is the converting power; and practically says we have time to dabble with nothing else.

WHEN people get into trouble, and no human help is available, they are inclined to pray for deliverance, Paul and Silas, when they were cast into prison at Philippi, not only prayed but sang praises to God.

THE great aim of the natural man is to get rid of tribulation. The spiritual man will recognize that tribulation is inevitable and his aim will be to see how he can make it a matter of rejoicing and a source of profit.

COULD we always follow the advice given in the following stray lines it would calm many a troubled soul:—

"Leave the future; let it rest
Simply on the Savior's will.
Leave the future; they are blest
Who confiding, hoping still,
Trust his mercy
To provide for every want,
And to save from every ill."

IT is the essence of wisdom to try to draw men to Christ by exhibiting the abounding love of Christ and the gracious mercy of God, rather than by fear of any possible consequences resulting from a rejection of the gracious message of salvation.

DR. KELLOGG says, "An old theory of mine was that the mind of man was a separate, independent essence, principle or entity which during life employed the body as a tenement, an instrument through which to manifest itself and at death separate itself from its material form, acquired perfect freedom and soared away to realms of bliss untrammeled by its earthly clog.... There can be no doubt the theory was the outgrowth of a mistaken notion of the nature of the mind and of its relations to the body."

DR. CUMMINGS says of the words "Woe to the land shaddowing with wings," Is. xviii. 1 that the word "woe is an unhappy rendering. The Hebrew denotes admonition, a call to attention duty or privilege. The very same Hebrew word we find in the beginning of the 55th chapter of Isaiah, thus translated, "Ho, every one that thirsteth come ye to the waters." I do not deny that the Hebrew word Hoi denotes also woe; but in the 55th of Isaiah, at the first verse, and in other passages it denotes Ho; that is a cry, or a compellative, or summon to attention. Therefore this word, as South, Henderson, Gill, and Horsley remark, ought to be translated, "Ho, thou land;" that is, 'Listen to me, thou land."

WHAT a world of meaning there is in the little word love. The question is life worth living would come with much greater force to many were it not for the power of love. Existence would be but a miserable apology for life as regards the teeming millions of humanity apart from the cheering rays and gladdening beams which love in some form or another sheds o'er the lives of such. What a blessing it is that, like the life-giving sunshine and the refreshing rain, the genial influence of love is felt alike by rich and poor, good and bad. As far as life is concerned love is the light, the sunshine, the joy of nearly all the human race. One writer has well and truly said, "Love is the life of living things."

...not forgetting for our confessions, our prayers, our recitals of our faith only; but we are pardoned for Jesus' sake. It is because of his name that we have the benefit of adoption. Whoever thinks that his blood will cleanse them apart from their believing with the heart, and being baptized into him, makes a fatal mistake."

THE Turkish Government has appropriated the sum of two million dollars for the purpose of reconstructing the ancient water conduits that supplied Jerusalem in the time of Solomon. Another item of news marking the march of events in the Holy Land is that of the dedication of a German Evangelical Deaconess Hospital at Jerusalem, which together with the lot, cost three hundred thousand francs. It accomodates between fifty and sixty patients of all religions and nationalities.

DR. BOM in his Handbook of Papacy, p. 21 says that at the installation of Pius VIII. March 31, 1829, the Pyx containing their god was removed, and the Pope sat in its place. Thus he sat in the seat of what is called god by the Papists. In this connection it will be well to read 2 Thess. ii. 4. "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is "a God" Diaglott and Campbell's trans. The words "as God" are omitted by the Sinaitic, Vatican and Alexandrine MSS. The 3rd and 4th verses are rendered in the Syriac as follows: "Let no one deceive you in any way, because [that day will not come] unless there previously come a defection and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who is an opposer, and exalteth himself above all that is called God and worshipped; so that he sitteth in the temple of God, as a god and displayeth himself as if he were God."

What of the Night?

"Watchman what of the night?" The hours fly away, the darkness deepens, but the dawn is nigh at hand. Never did our experiences correspond so closely with the condition of things described by Christ as 'distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth." If the worst has not been reached, we have for some time been having a bitter fortaste. Mr. John Bright, in some respects the greatest English philanthropist of this generation, and who has seen the greatest strides of progress in the annals of time, remarked not long before he died, that Europe seemed to be hastening on to some dreadful calamity. He was doubtless thinking of the ever-increasing military and naval armaments of the continent, and the responsibilities England had undertaken in the East which render it impossible for her to carry out a policy of non-intervention in continental strifes. Hence it is that increase of ironclad, torpedo vessels, machine guns and military reserves of all description goes on, as they pile up means of aggressive and defensive warfare, distrust of man toward man and of nation toward nation keeps pace with it. Nothing could more vividly illustrate this feeling than that which took place in reference to the proposed submarine tunnel across the straits of Dover. A company was formed and tunnelling actually commenced when all at once a panic ensued for fear it should facilitate the invasion of England by France, and the outcry was so great that the government had to step in and forbid the further prosecution of the work.

Besides the military danger there are other factors giving intensity to the foreboding and perplexity. Look where we will we find a terrible depression in business that has thrown hundreds of thousands out of employ, and this raises questions in all large cities which men find very difficult to solve. Some leading politicians begin to realize that it is useless to preach political economy to men who are actually suffering for the necessaries of life, while they see them accumulated to excess in the hands of their neighbors. They have in some cases introduced the thin end of the wedge of socialism. But, this, cautiously as it might be introduced, will only satisfy for a moment and then still greater demands will doubtless be made; so that it looks as if governments will not only have to secure order, but provide labor or food and clothing for all the unemployed. Of course means to do this can only come from those who have it, but how to confiscate the wealth of the rich without seeming to do it, is where the difficulty comes in.

It cannot be denied that in the social strata considerably above the rough element the germs of socialism are deeply imbedded. The contrast between the classes are constantly pointed out by men who want work, and this contains an implied assumption that it must be put an end to, somehow; if not by legislation, then by violence. The authorities both in Europe and America are awaking up to the fact that the question how to remedy existing evils forces itself more and more to the front as the education of the poor advances. That starvation and education cannot long exist together is more evident every year, and adds materially to the perplexity, and well it might, for, in the nature of things there will be no popular contentment without an economic system which will effect a fair distribution of wealth.

But he has lived to little purpose who thinks man can right up the wrongs that afflict humanity. Selfishness reigns supreme, and will continue to sway a cruel sceptre, so that things shall go on from bad to worse until he come by whom the mighty will be cast down, the hungry filled with good things, and the rich sent empty away. Yes; dear readers we have entered a time of trouble with all the signs by which the Scripturaly enlightened can discern that we are in the time of the end; the time when the saints of God should see to their own preparedness and lift up their heads. In view of the realities of the near future they alone can lift up their heads and rejoice. The heavens are radiant with promise of dawning day. They alone are not in darkness. They need not be in tears,—the morning cometh, —the morning without clouds that shall end their sorrow, and pain, and isolation, and persecution, and awaken with its rising glory the loved who sleep in Jesus, and throw the vigor of immortality over them all,—and the swelling anthem of the redeemed from among men shall burst upon their ears, crowns of glory sparkle upon their brow, and palms of triumph wave over them. In view of the surpassing wealth of God's favor awaiting them they can afford to wait patiently for the blessed welcome from Jesus to the Paradise of God will more than repay for the long night of weeping.

Catholics and Protestants.

The Detroit Free Press gives an account of a remarkable movement recently inaugurated in Bay City, Mich., the object of which is, "Christian Unity," not church union. A meeting on the 21st of January was held in the parlors of the 1st Presbyterian Church, and was attended by nine ministers and six Catholic priests. All was harmonious.

Just think of Christian union without a church union! Christian Catholics, and Christain Protestants but members of two different churches! Would not Christ be head of a Christian church? If both the Catholic and Protestant churches are Christian Churches, and yet different, then the One Head has two bodies! A Christian church depends upon Christ for future life in order to inherit the kingdom of God promised to the fathers of the Hebrew nation; and has found pardon and peace and reconciliation and adoption and joint-heirship with him through obedience by baptism into his saving name. If this is not the substance or essence of the truth as it is in Jesus, what is? If this is not the faith and hope of Protestants and Catholics, in the name of truth we ask what right have they to the name of Christian churches? None whatever, unless they can show that another hope has been set before them.

For our part we thank God that those who have apostatized from the faith once delivered to the saints, by claiming to have life independent of Christ, and vainly hope for a home in heaven—yes, we are thankful they are divided just as they are,—if they were united where would our religious liberty come in? If Protestants and Catholics consider each other Christian it shows that they both believe the same gospel and only differ on minor matters. And this goes to show that we can have no more to do with one than with the other. If we have been called according to God's eternal purpose to people this planet with divine inhabitants evolved from the human race through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth, 2 Thess. ii. 13, we have nothing to do with such, except to show them the way of life.

The unrest of the great religious communities shows that they are all at sea, as it were, and losing their hold on the people because they are not able to convert the world as they promised to do. The abounding iniquity appalls them, and like drowning men they catch at straws, while the divine remedy hundreds of times pointed out to them, is utterly neglected.

In many respects Protestantism has been a vast improvement upon Catholicism. The millions of Bibles that have been sown broadcast over the world is in vivid contrast with the system that has, and still makes it a crime in some places, to own and read the Scriptures. But Protestants never protested half enough. They never protested against the papal dogma of immortality which deprived the people of the Key to unlock the Truth of God; after they received it and the consequence is that not one in a thousand in this land of Bibles knows that the revelation from God is on purpose to show mortals how they can become immortal.

This grand delusion is the cornerstone of both systems;—remove it and both would come down with a crash. It is the common belief of inherent immortality that paved the way for ministers and priests to fraternize; and when both Protestants and Catholics believe not the record God has given of his Son, 1 John v. 10-12 it is evidence that the falling away predicted by Paul has taken place. The last days are upon us, and nothing but the powerful presence of the Lord will alter the trend of things mundane.

Of course there is nothing new in all this. Our isolated condition in the world religious tells the whole story. We left the communities fed on tradition because the way of life was not known among them: but after having done this we often allow our sympathy to warp their judgment, and partially obliterate the line which separates them from the world of unbelievers, and so forget that only the truth of God will save. How can we honor God if we hold that something apart from his truth has power to save? And we are distinctly taught in the 15th chapter of 1 Cor. that God's truth even will not save us unless we keep it in memory; the reason is obvious,—if it escapes our memory it can neither direct our conduct nor control our spirit, and we drift with the tide.

Perilous times are upon us, and as predicted, the love of many is waxing cold, and exhortation is in order. All sorts of expedients are resorted to which are calculated to lessen our estimate of the truth of God, and take its place. Let us be watchful, and ever mindful that our Lord was separate from sinners, and his prayer for his disciples, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is truth," makes it clear that we cannot compromise with error.

First Natural, Afterward Spiritual.

We find the following suggestive article in an English paper without the author's name:—

The first Adam "is the figure of him that was to come." "There is a natural body, and a spiritual body. And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a life-giving spirit (R. V.) howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven." Rom. v. 14; 1 Cor. xv. 46-47.

In the generation there was the first man and in the regeneration there is the second man. The first man was the figure or type of the second man. The figure was incomplete and temporary, and the reality is complete and permanent. The first man was natural, and the second man is spiritual. The first man was earthy, and the second man is heavenly. The first man was a living soul and the second man is a life-giving spirit. The first man forfeited the life of the world, and the second man gave himself for the life of the world. The first man was the lord of the earth, and the second man is Lord of both the heavens and the earth. The first at his best was only an imperfect outline of the second man, and in the second man the original outline is completed, perfected, crowned and glorified.

In the generation there was the first woman, and in the regeneration there has to be the second woman. As the first man was the figure of the second man, so the first woman was the figure of the second woman. And as the second man is the first born from the dead, Col. i. 18, so the second woman is the general assembly and church of the first born, Heb. xii. 23. The first woman was a single individual of one sex; the second woman is a community comprising many individuals of both sexes and of many nationalities.

In the Bible, communities are frequently spoken of under the symbol of a "woman," a "virgin," etc. The first woman was of the first man, and the second woman is of the second man. The first woman was of the life and flesh of the first man, and the second woman is of the life and spirit of the second man. 1 Cor. vi. 17. The first woman was formed because it was not good that the first man should remain alone; and the second woman is being formed because it is not good that the second man should remain alone. The first man remained incomplete until the first woman was formed, and the second man remains incomplete until the second woman is formed. Eph. i. 23. The first woman was formed to be a helpmeet for the first man; the second woman is being formed to be a helpmeet for the second man; and together, the second man and the second woman are to accomplish the purpose of God in the regeneration of the world."

For This Thing is from Me.

Some things, which at first sight seem to have but one side and this the human side, unexpectedly present to our astonished gaze the divine side. Some events recorded on the pages of inspired history are of this character, and notably of these is that of rending the kingdom of Solomon into two houses, the house of David, and the house of Israel or Ephraim. Solomon's son, and successor to his throne, viewed the matter from the human standpoint, and accordingly took steps to coerce the rebellious ten tribes by selecting from Judah and Benjamin eighty thousand warriors to carry into execution his declaration of war. 1 Kings xii. 21. Two adversaries, Hadad and Rezon, had wrought mischief against his father, and now a third adversary, the ambitious Jeroboam, who had fled to Egypt for safety from the anger of Solomon, had returned and been made king over all Israel (the ten tribes now) as a rival kingdom to the house of David; its subjects outnumbering many times those of the kingdom of Judah. Rehoboam looked upon this disruption as unfavorable to the perpetuity of the house of David. God's hand was in the history of this critical period, and he speaks to Rehoboam through Shemaiah the prophet forbidding him to go to war with Israel, and reveals to him the fact that the rending of the kingdom was from him. "This thing is from me." 1 Kings xii. 24. The ground for severing the kingdom was the outrageous idolatry of Solomon to which he suffered himself to be tempted through the influence of his many strange wives. v. 8, 11 chap. The union of all the tribes was to continue through his reign, but be broken up in the reign of his son. For David's sake the division was postponed. God was taking steps to chastise Judah for her gross idolatry and other sins by raising up adversaries against her. He threatened to "afflict the house of David but not forever."

Let us go back a little and notice the combination of circumstances that led up to the division of the kingdom. Solomon's introduction and worship of the gods of the surrounding nations, thus provoking the God of heaven to stir up adversaries against him. His death, leaving the throne vacant for the occupancy of his son, and affording also, the opportunity for Jeroboam to return in safety from Egypt, whither he had fled from Solomon. Rehoboam's refusal to hearken to the just and reasonable wishes of Jeroboam and the aggrieved Israelites; having been influenced to this by the council of the young men who had grown up with him. He threatened to add to the burdens and yokes of his father's reign. Solomon chastised with whips, he would chastise with scorpions. On hearing this they answered the king saying, "What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents O Israel. After Jeroboam was made king of ten-tribed Israel—about 975 years B. C.—he took the precaution to guard against the return of his subjects to the house of David; and to this end he made two calves of gold, setting the one in Bethel and the other in Dan, saying to Israel, Behold thy gods which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt; thinking that if the children of Israel went up to the temple at Jerusalem to worship they would be won over to Judah. The separation was complete. The two kingdoms were frequently engaged in war with each other until the Assyrian kings, about the years 721 to 700 B. C., removed the ten tribes from Samaria and placed them in Halah and Habor by the river Gozan and in the cities of the Medes. 2 Kings xviii. 11. The land was repeopled by men brought from Babylon, Cuthah, Ava, Hamath and Sepharvaim. The ten tribes never returned to their own land; and unto this day they have not been united with the tribe of Judah. While the two divisions existed as cotemporanious kingdoms, or down to the 9th year of Hoshea' reign, when the ten tribes were all removed, or their captivity completed, two lines of kings reigned, the one in Judah styled the kings of Judah, the others over the ten tribes styled the kings of Israel. None except the most careless reader will confound the history of the two kingdoms. All is plain, and the distinction is observed by the student of the Bible. But when the date of the return of the Jews (Judah) from the Babylonian captivity is reached, commentators, preachers, writers and the laity, all begin to confound things, and "darken counsel by words without knowledge. The facts of both secular and inspired history are ignored. To some the Jew becomes "all Israel," and others see in the name Israel, as it occurs in prophecy in connection with promised blessings, the Christian church of this and the coming dispensation. The spiritualizing mode of interpretation is resorted to, in the examination of the prophets. Failing to get hold of the key of knowledge, students of the prophecies stagger on in the dark, like men in a forest on a moonless and starless night. They dig for precious ore, but only the dross of error rewards their labor and pains. God in his word has made a distinction between Judah and the ten tribes, and we must read and study his Word in the light of this fact. The rending of the kingdom though seemingly the result of the exercise of human passions, is declared to be of God who "rules in the kingdom of men, and gives it to whomsoever he will." Dan. iv. 25. God who is allwise must have had an ulterior purpose in view, to be carried out by these ten tribes, some mission of blessing not to be entered on by all the tribes united, and dwelling together in fraternal fellowship; an end to be accomplished prior to their confederation with Judah upon the mountains of Israel, (Ezek. xxxvii. 22) as shown by the symbolic sticks in the hands of the prophet. I ask was the only purpose of Jehovah in giving Jeroboam ten tribes simply to vex Judah for the time of one hundred and thirty odd years? and then have no more to do with them until the Messiah gathers them under his standard upon the mountains of Israel? If the ten tribes returned when the Jews were restored from the 70 years of captivity in Babylon, as some contend, how can the predictions of the prophets meet their fulfilment in the future? It is impossible to understand the prophecy of Ezekiel as recorded in chapter 37, to a part of which I have already briefly alluded. This prediction relates to the union of the two houses in the future and this precludes the possibility of their union at any time in the past since the division in the days of Rehoboam and Jeroboam. The prophet notes the distinction the same as when two lines of kings ruled the two houses prior to the reign of Hoshea, the last king of the ten-tribed kingdom. They are contemplated as much apart as the two sticks on which the prophet is directed to write. The union is symbolized by putting the sticks together. Then follows this plain statement. "I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel." v. 22.

In Isaiah 11 chapter is found another prediction touching the subject of the restoration of Israel and Judah. Mark the distinction in v. 12—a distinction in their condition as well as in name. "He shall assemble the outcasts of Israel and gather together the dispersed of Judah." In the 13 v. a similar distinction is made here, using the name Ephraim instead of Israel as in v. 12. "The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim." This is to be brought about when the Lord sets his hand the second time to recover the remnant of his people. There is no prediction teaching the reunion of Judah and the ten tribes when Judah was brought back from the Babylonian captivity. If prophecy does not foreshow such an important event as to take place then, inspired history rightly read and interpreted, will not teach it. Most of the prophets lived before this captivity. Jeremiah predicted the return of the people taken to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar. These were the Jews only. The ten tribes had been removed from their land long before this. It has been said that the ten tribes had as good an opportunity to return as the Jews. The decrees of the Persian kings granting leave of return were addressed to the Jews alone. They alone were God's people at that time. Israel 200 years before this date, had been cast out of their land and called by God "not my people" as we read in Hosea i. 9. The reader will please read the whole chapter. I will close this contention by saying that there are two classes of predictions, the one relating to Israel, the other to the Jews. Keep this in mind.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 6.

THE FAMINE,—JACOB COMES TO EGYPT.

We left Joseph crying. He has washed his face and has come out to have bread set on for his brethren, and for the man of his household. He has a table by himself, the Egyptians are placed at another, and his brethren by themselves, in the order of their ages. He sends them portions from his dishes on his own table, giving Benjamin five times as much as he does the others. He treats them so kindly that they drink and are very merry with him.

But when the time comes for them to go, Joseph takes his steward to one side and commands him to fill the men's sacks with food as much as they can carry, and to put every man's money in his sack's mouth. In the sack of the youngest, he is to place in addition to the money a valuable silver cup.

Joseph not only wants his brothers to think, but he also wants to test their characters. That was his object at the table.

If there was still as much of the spirit of envy in their hearts as in former days, they would be angry at seeing Benjamin more highly honored than themselves; they were not; he is satisfied on that point.

Now the question is,—have they any affection for the young brother? Is he safe in their keeping? Will they try to save him when in danger and trouble? Early in the morning they start on their journey. They are out of the city, the steward is sent after them; the cup must be produced. They deny the theft, "If any one of them has it he shall die, and the rest will be bondsmen to the lord of the land."

The steward makes the penalty lighter, the one with whom the cup is found shall be the servant, the others shall be blameless.

The sacks are searched, the cup is found in Benjamin's. The men are dismayed. To tear one's clothes in eastern countries is to say, "My grief is very great." This is what they do, then they hurriedly throw their sacks on the backs of their animals; they will not run away, they will return to the city and try if possible to save Benjamin.

How they plead with Joseph: Judah is their spokesman. He rehearses what has been said in their first interview, "that their father was an old man, and had a child of his old age, a little one, that his brother was dead and he alone left of his mother, and if he should leave his father, his father would die."

He reminds Joseph of the apparently cruel edict, "that if the child was not brought, they should see his face no more," tells of the father's reluctance to part with his son, and assures him again that if he returns to his father without the lad his father will die.

He is surety for the child, and must bear the blame forever if any misfortune befalls him. He will become a bondsman to Joseph, if the lad can go home with his brethren. "How can he go to his father if the lad be not with him?"

Joseph cannot stand such a plea as that, he sends all the Egyptians out of the room and makes himself known to his brethren. He cries aloud, it is a touching scene. The men are troubled, they cannot answer his questions. He tells them not to be grieved nor angry with themselves because they sold him into Egypt, because God had sent him there to preserve life "to preserve them a posterity in the earth and to save their lives by a great deliverance."

Pharaoh is pleased when he hears the news, and has Joseph give wagons to his brethren that they may go and bring their wives, their little ones and their father down to the land of Egypt. They are to have a home in the land of Goshen "in the best of the land, in the land of Rameses."

Jacob cannot believe until they tell him of the words of Joseph, and he sees the wagons that have been sent, then he says, "It is enough, Joseph my son is yet alive, I will go and see him before I die."

On the journey he stops at Beersheba and offers sacrifices to God. In the night the Lord appears to him in a vision, and says, "I am God, the God of thy father, fear not to go down into Egypt: for I will there make of thee a great nation. I will go down with thee .....and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes."

What a happy man he must have been.

The journey is over, the little nation of seventy souls is in Egypt at last, and are comfortably settled with their flocks and their herds.

But look at the Egyptians;—they give their money, their cattle, their houses, and their flocks to Joseph for bread! When these are gone, they sell themselves and their lands for seed, that they may live and not die and the land be desolate. Joseph bought them and their land for his king. He gave them seed to sow the land—one part of the increase is to be Pharaoh's and four parts their own. Can you see any thing in this that is like Jesus? I can. I remember the texts—"Ye are not your own, ye are bought with a price." "Redemption of the purchased possession," etc. We and our lands have been bought for God, with "the bread of life" Christ gave himself "the true bread," a ransom for us. He died, not in our stead, but that that we through him might live. The lives of the Egyptians were saved through Joseph, our lives are saved through Christ.

How much ought we to give to God?.

Was there any change in the character of Joseph's brethren?

There must have been. It is true that Judah speaks, and he is the one who suggested that they sell Joseph, instead of putting him to death, but as he talks for his brothers, as well as for himself, their hearts must have been full of tenderness and love for "little Benjamin," and of shame and remorse over their conduct in reference to the youthful dreamer. They are better men, and Joseph cannot help seeing it.

But why did Joseph return their money in such a curious way? If he wanted no pay for the food why didn't he say so?

He could not do this while acting as if he were an Egyptian. He wanted to provide for his father and brethren, without pay, just as Jesus provides for us without pay, but they must not know this until the proper time comes, and he had other motives. He wanted to trouble them, that they might feel more pity for Benjamin. He did not care to have them think that the child was really guilty. If they found the money in their sacks, they would know that the same hand that was plotting against the young brother was also working against them.

Selected.

The Promises made to the Fathers.

Not a few of the emotional hymns sung by the members of the various religious denominations have reference to God's promises, and are very beautiful in sentiment, and calculated to raise the spiritual aspirations of those who sing them from the heart. But, alas! the majority of these hymns are based upon a false theology which has its origin in paganism instead of in the Word of God. One of them reads as follows:—

"Precious promise God hath given
To the weary, sorrow-by,
On the way from earth to heaven
I will guide thee with mine eye."

What are the promises which form the basis upon which true believers place their trust? And what are the hopes set before us? Turning to Gen. xii. 7, we find the terms of a promise made by God to Abram (afterwards called Abraham) the father of the Israelitish nation, recorded in these words: "Unto thy seed will I give this land." Again, in Gen. xiii. 14-27, "And the Lord said unto Abram after that Lot was separated from him, lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed for ever." Again in chap. xvii., verses 4, 6 and 8, "As for me, behold my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations . . . and kings shall come out of thee....and I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession: and I will be their God." Again in the 22nd chapter, verses 16 to 18. "By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord . . . that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven . . . and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice."

These promises made to Abraham were confirmed to Isaac and Jacob, for we read in Gen. xxvi. 3, 4: "I will perform the oath that I swore unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." And in Gen. xxviii. 13, 14, we read of God also appearing to Jacob and saying, "the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed . . . and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

These promises contain two important features which should not be overlooked—that God would give to Abraham a land, and a seed who should be the means of blessing all nations. The contention by some that this promise was fulfilled in the occupancy of the land of Canaan by the Jews, under Joshua and their subsequent rulers, is completely refuted by the Apostle Paul in Gal. iii. 18, where he says, "For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise." It is testified also by the writer to the Hebrews in the 11th chapter, at the 13th verse: "These (meaning Abraham and the other worthies) all died in faith not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." And Stephen also says God "gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on." Acts vii. 5. Therefore, as regards Abraham, at least the promise certainly has not yet been fulfilled.

Are these promises, then, to fail? By no means! They cannot. God is not a man that he should lie." The questions therefore remain, who is the seed promised that is to bring about the salvation and blessing of all nations? And where is the land destined to constitute the heritage? Paul satisfactorily answers the question as to who the seed is in Gal. iii. 16. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Thus Christ is the seed promised to Abraham. Paul further tells us (Rom. xv. 8), "that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers." This passage clearly demonstrates that up to Christ's time these promises had not received their fulment, or it would not have been necessary to confirm them.

Christ is also heir to the throne of David. This the angel testified to Mary his mother, as recorded in Luke i. 32, 33: "He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." God promised to establish David's house in perpetuity, and the people of Israel as a kingdom for ever. In Psalm 89, at verses 3 and 4, we read: "I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish for ever and build up thy throne to all generations." And when the people of Israel were cast off for a time the prophet Ezekiel was commanded to say to Zedekiah, "Thus said the Lord God, remove the diadem, and take off the crown, this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high, I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ezek. xxi. 26, 27. Christ's heirship to the throne of David gives him the right to universal sovereignty. This is clear from what is contained in the 2nd Psalm, verses 6 to 8: "Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son: this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Can we imagine a more effectual medium for the accomplishment of the blessing of all nations, than the infallible rule of a divinely appointed king, the characteristics of whose reign shall be righteousness and peace? These qualifications will the reign of Christ possess, and he will shortly be here again to literally ascend the throne of David. He is to take the reins of universal government into his hands and administer the functions of his high position. The further we investigate the promises of God, the more we see the truthfulness of Paul's statement that all the promises of God are centered and have their fulfilment in Christ Jesus. He will take hold of the city and people of David and make them again a name and a praise in the earth, Jerusalem in that day will be the favored city, the chosen of the Lord and the place of his throne.

The land promised to Abraham, which has long been trodden down of the Gentiles, and is at the present time in desolation, shall then burst forth in the glory of more than Edenic beauty and blossom as the rose. The nation of Israel who are now in dispersion throughout the whole earth will then be regathered and planted again in their own land, and constitute the chief nation of that age. This is clear from many Scripture testimonies, but a quotation from the Psalms, together with one from the prophet Isaiah, which are prophetic of that time, will suffice for the present purpose: "Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion: when the Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice and Israel shall be glad." Psa. xiv. 7. "I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: afterwards thou shalt be called, the city of righteousness, the faithful city. Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness." Isa. i. 26, 27.

How, then, is the Gentile to obtain an inheritance in this promise of power and glory in that blessed age? By the beautiful and simple process of adoption. The higher blessings of that covenant do not come of descent, but of faith. "Know ye therefore that they which are of faith the same are the children of Abraham . . . Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ . . . and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 7, 26, 29. Thus all who will may become joint heirs with Christ of his everlasting kingdom—the only necessary qualification being that they shall be found worthy.—Leaflet.

The Second Coming of Christ.

When we speak of the second coming of Christ we necessarily imply that he has already been once. There cannot possibly be a second coming unless there has been a first. For as we cannot have two without one—so also is it impossible to have a second without previously having had a first. This, of course, is a self-evident truth and therefore needs no further demonstration. Few, if any, would be found to deny their belief in the fact of Christ's first appearing. This is generally admitted. But the equally positive and certified Scriptural fact of his second coming, even many professing Christians are slow to believe. Before proceeding, however, to review the many testimonies which clearly teach this truth, let us briefly consider the events connected with his sojourn upon earth nearly nineteen centuries ago. It was not until Christ was thirty years of age that he began his public ministry. He taught that God had sent him with a special mission to call sinners to repentance—he himself setting a crowning example of what human life should be. He proclaimed by word and act God's ways of salvation and testified that he was the only one through whom redemption could be obtained. He unmistakably proved that claim by the many wonderful works which he performed and by his own peerless example of righteousness and true holiness of character. Wherever he went he displayed his sympathy and dispensed his blessings. He raised the dead, gave sight to the blind, and caused the lame to walk and the deaf to hear. As a prophet he foretold his own death and resurrection, and the destruction of Jerusalem. He spake of his departure into heaven, of his second advent and of his kingdom then to be established upon earth. Now, we may note in passing that his life and death occurred here in this world of ours, and we ask, therefore, would it not be strange indeed if, after spending his days of probation in setting forth the divine standard of righteousness for the benefit of mankind by his holy and spotless life, his promised and future glory should not be manifested in the same place. It is only reasonable to expect that such would be the case. Where the suffering was, there doubtless will be the glory. Nothing short of this can be satisfactory or in any wise meet the necessity of the case. For if it be true, as popularly believed, that some other sphere is to enjoy the covenanted blessings, how is it possible for the world to be benefitted by it? Furthermore it is contended by many that the second coming of Christ takes place at the death of believers, but if this be true the two simple and intelligible comings of Christ are substituted by a multitude of comings which no man can number. And, moreover, such a view receives no support whatever from the sacred pages. The Scriptures truly have much to say upon this great event, but their teaching is directly opposed to the views commonly held and believed. One feature is common to all the holy writings, they all speak of the earth as the place where Christ will rule. This they declare in clear and unmistakable language which "he who runs may read."

We have Christ's own testimony to his coming, given both in parable and plain teaching. He spoke of himself as a nobleman going into a far country to receive a kingdom and to return; he promised his disciples that if he went away he would come again. And after his ascension into heaven he sent a message to his servants through the apostle John in which he said, "Behold I come as a thief" (Rev. xvi. 15); "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me" (Rev. xxii. 11); "He which testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly." Rev. xxii. 20.

In the first chapter of the Acts of the Apostles and at the eleventh verse it is recorded, that the angels who were present at Christ's ascension into heaven, spake to his astonished disciples on the Mount of Olives in these words, "Ye men of Galilee why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." It is scarcely possible for testimony to be clearer than this. The departure of Christ into heaven was in a real, bodily form as all will admit who believe the testimony. How then can there be a question as to the nature of his return in view of his angelic assurance that he is to come in like manner as he went.

And in strict harmony with this statement agree all the Apostles. They believed that Jesus would come again as is abundantly set forth in their writings. Indeed, it was this conviction for which they labored and preached, and that enabled them to endure the hardships and privations through which they had to pass. The second coming of Christ was the theme of their writings and their only hope.

In the 3rd chapter of Acts at verses 20 and 21 we have recorded a declaration by Peter,—"And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you, whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things." Now, it is necessary to call attention to the fact that this was spoken subsequent to Christ's departure from the earth. Hence it follows that this promise has yet to be fulfilled, which can only be done by God sending Jesus again. In 1st Peter, 1st chapter, 7th verse, we read "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." Again at the 13th verse of this same chapter we read, "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

Then Paul, the chief apostle to the Gentiles, speaks with no uncertain sound upon this matter. In Philippians iii. 20, 21, he says, "For our conversation is in heaven from whence we look for the Lord Jesus Christ;" also in the Epistle to Titus, 2nd chapter, 13th verse, he speaks of some who were "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ."

To the Colossians he wrote (Col. iii. 4), "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." He besought the Corinthians to "judge nothing before the time until the Lord come." Cor. iv. 5. And he especially commended the Thessalonians for having turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven." 1 Thess. i. 9, 10.

Now these passages have a direct bearing upon the subject under consideration and should not be hastily passed by. They call for careful thought and prayerful examination by all who are anxiously seeking to understand the Scriptures aright, and whose endeavor is to be filled with the wisdom which cometh from above and to have a thorough grasp of the Spirit's teaching.

What, then, is the object for which Christ is coming? It is twofold. He will first raise and judge the dead, awarding to the faithful eternal life; and will then establish the kingdom of God upon the earth.

When on earth before he preached of his kingdom, when he comes again he will establish it. He proclaimed the way of life eternal when he was here before; he will reveal his saving power when he comes again. Many there are today who scoff at the idea of Christ coming to the earth again; but the apostle Peter anticipated this, and in the third chapter of his second epistle declared that, despite all unbelief, "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." He will come as a thief to those who are not looking for him. But to those who love his appearing, who are looking and waiting for him, he shall appear unto salvation.—"Lamp of Truth" Leaflets, No. 3.

Shipbuilding in England.

Shipbuilding in the United Kingdom during 1894 showed an increase of nearly 200,000 tons over 1893, although it does not attain the average of the years preceding. Steamers were built aggregating 900,210 tons, and sailing vessels 109,384 tons; this represents 703 vessels in all. The proportion of steamers to sailing vessels, which is steadily increasing every year, is now 90.18 per cent. During the year marine engines were built with a total of 972,816 horse-power. The marked feature of construction was the effort to obtain enormous capacity for a limited gross tonnage, with a nine-knot speed on a minimum coal consumption. This economy, Engineering thinks has been carried beyond the danger point, as such engines are unable to hold a fully laden ship up to a gale.

Fatalities of Lightning.

Damage by lightning is unmistakably increasing, according to the director of the Statistical Office of Berlin. Various causes are assigned, such as the employment of electricity in various industries, the continual change of form of the earth's surface by deforestation, drainage, etc., and the impurities introduced into the atmosphere by the growing consumption of coal. Prof. Von Bezold some time ago showed that for Bavaria the fires due to lightning increased from a yearly average of thirty-two in 1833 to 1842 to 132 in 1880 to 1882; while the number of persons struck by lightning and of those killed rose from 134 and seventy-three, respectively, in 1855 to 186 and 101 in 1885. An interesting fact noted is that persons struck generally perceive neither lightning nor thunder, but receive the impression of being enveloped by fire.—Public Opinion.

Birds for Women's Hats.

It is said to require the lives of 5,000,000 song birds annually to keep the hats of the American women in proper feather. The swamps and marshes of Florida have already been depopulated of their egrets and herons to supply the demands of fashion. As for the English women they have been sending hunters to scour the wilds of Africa for feathered ornaments. Our own section of the country is made to pay tribute to this whim of vanity fair abroad as well as at home. In a single season 40,000 tern have been killed on Cape Cod for exportation.—Boston Globe.

...r Brothers and sisters:

I have never written for THE RESTITUTION, and I thought perhaps you would like to hear from the little assembly of brothers and sisters in Christ, at Blair, Neb.

Brother J. T. Prime has been with us and was assisted by Bro. Almus Adams in preaching the glad tidings of the coming kingdom of God.

Brother Haupt of South Sioux City, hearing of our meeting by accident was with us for awhile, but duties called and he was unable to remain longer.

Those of us who were already in the faith were refreshed and strengthened by hearing the gospel message. Our meetings closed Jan. 9, and we rejoice that all this work has not been in vain, for the Word of God still has power. Six accepted the truth but we are sorry to say that only four of them were baptized by Brother Adams into the name of our Savior Jesus Christ.

Let us who have started out in the Christian course be faithful, and let our light so shine out to others that they may see our good works, and be led to glorify our Father in heaven.

Hoping to meet all the brothers and sisters in the kingdom of God, I remain your sister in Christ.

ALICE MERGENS.

Dear Restitution:

And the many patient waiting ones of the faith of Abraham, and the blessed hope of the coming victory and glory that is to follow, to you I come, greeting you as brethren in love and patience of our Lord Jesus Christ. Weeping may endure for a season but joy cometh in the morning, of resurrection. Surely, the time draweth nigh. The end of Gentile times, as decreed by Jehovah, when the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and our Christ. When it will be said, the Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice, let the nations be glad and sing for joy. Oh lap your hands all ye people, shout unto God with voice of triumph, for the Lord Most High is King over all the earth. Sing unto the Lord a new song, for his right hand and his holy arm hath gotten him the victory. Thus the long and bloody Gentile drama closes upon a magnificent scene and Jerusalem, the eternal City of the great King the joy of the whole earth, becomes the radiating centre of the most magnificent empire the sun ever shone upon. The glorious majesty of his kingdom extending to the ends of the earth, the nations like unto a sea of glass reflecting right-eousness and goodness. Have not I written to thee excellent things in council, and knowledge, that I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth that thou mightest answer the words of truth to them that send unto thee. Prov. xxi. 20, 21. We should always be ready to give an answer to every one that asketh a reason of the hope that is in us, with meekness and fear. The Book of God like the book of nature is full of beauty and contains an endless variety of thought that would engage the study of a lifetime, it is "like a rich landscape, beautifully varied with woods, hills, meadows, and rivers, and men of reason and sober judgment cannot but conceive that the Divine Architect, who with a Master hand has put this immense creation in perfection, has some definite plan in relation to the inhabitants thereof, but owing to the teachings of modern theology, the religious world are not looking in the right direction for the divine solution of all civil, ecclesiastical and social evils, which is plainly inscribed in the Book of Books, the Bible! In it is revealed a grand political economy in the future, affecting the welfare of the nations, by the establishment of the kingdom of God under the Messianic order of things. Isa. xxxii. 1. The divine scheme regulating the affairs of the world, is the long looked for golden age of universal peace finally resulting in the abolition of death, and its attendant evils. When this visible theocracy shall have accomplished its great purpose, the mystery of God will be finished as he has declared by his servants, the prophets. Rev. x. 7.

Therefore, in view of the certainty of the coming reality, brethren, gird up the loins of your minds, be sober, watch unto the end for the grace of God that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

In all sincerity and brotherly love, I am your co-laborer in the vineyard of the Master.

D. M. RUDELL.

Dear Restitution:

I have been reading the letters from the brothers and sisters in the faith, and thought I would write a letter also.

I was baptized last May by Bro. Hatch, and am trying to live a Christian life.

We have much to fight against if we would be true Christians; oh the cares, trials and temptations that cross our path; they are like thorns and nettles to our feet. Even the strongest sometimes stumble. Paul says, "Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

But God will help us to overcome if we will only trust him. 1 Cor. x. 13, says: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

Let us put on the whole armor of God that we may be able to stand firm, and may we all be able to say as did Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the Righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 1 Tim. iv. 7, 8.

Pray for me and I may be faithful and meet you all in the kingdom of God.

Your Sister in hope.

MARTA RATSBACK.

Dear Restitution:

As I have started in the faith of Christ, I thought I would write a few lines of encouragement to some of our younger brothers and sisters. I have read many good pieces in THE RESTITUTION from different brothers and sisters.

The Bible is a very good book for us to follow.

We all have our trials in this world, but in the world to come our trials and sorrows will all vanish away, for as it reads in 1 Cor. xv. 51 to 55, "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

Therefore know ye that your labor is not in vain in the cause of the Lord. I hope to be among the number when he comes to make up his jewels. Pray for me that I may meet you all who are faithful, in the kingdom where sickness, pain and trials will cease.

Yours in hope.

MARTA BOASS.

Dear Restitution:

I have been thinking for some time that I would write a few lines for our excellent paper. I am quite young in the blessed cause of our dear Master, but thought perhaps I might say some words of encouragement to others that are just starting in the good cause.

I with six others of our Sunday School scholars embraced the blessed truths which we had been hearing preached and taught in our Sunday School.

I was baptized in May, 1894 with two more of my young friends, and since then I have been trying to live as a Christian should. I hope that I may press onward and do more for my Master every day, that I may teach others the blessed truths.

I ask an interest in all your prayers that I may never turn back for there are so many beautiful promises given to those who overcome.

I remain your Sister, striving to gain a home in the soon coming kingdom.

CHARLOTTE GIBSON.

Editor Restitution:

As another New Year begins we quite naturally look back over the past to see what it has brought to us.

To many it has brought sorrow and disappointments, to some achievements in the divine life, success and a triumph over sin.

Some have advanced, entered into the work with their whole heart and have received the blessings and approval of the Great Author of all things. A few perhaps, have failed to conquer sin in the flesh, they have preferred the pleasures of the world and worldly associations rather than the association of the children of God.

Do we each and every one realize that the time is close at hand that will test every man's work of whatever sort it is?

It is not necessary for one to say, I am each day overcoming self and the world: I am working for the Master with my whole heart! His every action will prove it, his countenance will fairly beam with a radiance of God's love and he will be ready and willing for every good word and work.

On the other hand, if one has failed in his duty (he so well knows) or has said unkind words of a brother or sister, it will be depicted upon his countenance with equal forcibility.

How few there are who are willing to renounce the world with all its pleasures, deny himself, take up his cross daily, and follow Christ.

How few there are, who, when called upon to take part in this or that of a worldly nature, have the moral courage to say, No! The language of James is soon forgotten, which says, "Whosoever therefore, will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God." We should serve God from a higher standpoint than that of which the world does or he will never receive us into the Holy City.

Our acceptance of him as the Body and Bride of Christ is hinged on the fact that we come out from among them, "And be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you."

It seems to me that if we are watching, waiting, yea, and even longing as we should for the appearing of the Son from heaven, we will not fail to keep those Scriptures constantly before our minds. If we are to be kings and priests and reign with Christ over the nations we must first learn to govern ourselves, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

Yours, waiting for the consummation of the promise to Israel.

J. J. CADY.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single-time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.
